Anno 1778.

PHILLIPS·ACADEMY

OLIVER·WENDELL·HOLMES

LIBRARY

Per ampliora ad altiora.

Gift of Lester S. Morse, Jr. in honor of
Thomas T. Lyons

CASES ARGUED AND DECIDED

IN THE

SUPREME COURT

OF THE

UNITED STATES

199, 200, 201, 202 U. S.

BOOK 50,

LAWYERS' EDITION.

CITED "LAW. ED."

COMPLETE WITH HEAD LINES, HEAD NOTES, STATEMENTS OF CASES, POINTS AND AUTHORITIES OF COUNSEL, FOOT NOTES AND PARALLEL REFERENCES.

BY

THE PUBLISHERS' EDITORIAL STAFF

THE LAWYERS CO-OPERATIVE PUBLISHING COMPANY, ROCHESTER, NEW YORK.
1926.

Copyright © 1905 by
THE LAWYERS CO-OPERATIVE PUBLISHING CO.

R
348.73
Un3
v. 199-202

JUSTICES

OF THE

SUPREME COURT OF THE UNITED STATES

DURING THE TIME OF THESE REPORTS.

CHIEF JUSTICE,

HON. MELVILLE WESTON FULLER.

ASSOCIATE JUSTICES,

HON. JOHN MARSHALL HARLAN,
HON. DAVID JOSIAH BREWER,
HON. HENRY BILLINGS BROWN,*
HON. EDWARD DOUGLASS WHITE,
HON. RUFUS W. PECKHAM,
HON. JOSEPH MCKENNA,
HON. OLIVER WENDELL HOLMES,
HON. WILLIAM R. DAY.

ATTORNEY GENERAL,

HON. WILLIAM HENRY MOODY.

SOLICITOR GENERAL,

HON. HENRY M. HOYT.

CLERK,

JAMES HALL MCKENNEY, ESQ.

REPORTER,

HON. CHARLES HENRY BUTLER.

MARSHAL,

JOHN MONTGOMERY WRIGHT, ESQ.

*Retired May 28, 1906.

126052

JUSTICES OF THE SUPREME COURT OF THE UNITED STATES

March 9, 1903.

TOGETHER WITH THE DATES OF THEIR COMMISSIONS AND COMMENCEMENT OF SERVICE, RESPECTIVELY.

For Order of Court Making Allotment, see 47 L. ed., Appendix IX. p. 1201.†

Names of Justices, and Whence Appointed.	By Whom Appointed.	Circuits. 1902–1903.	Commissioned.	Sworn in.
Associate Justice OLIVER WENDELL HOLMES, Massachusetts.	President Roosevelt.	First. Me., N. H., Mass., R. I.	1902. (Dec. 4.)	1902. (Dec. 8.)
Associate Justice RUFUS W. PECKHAM, New York.	President Cleveland.	Second. Vermont, Conn., New York.	1895. (Dec. 9.)	1896. (Jan. 6.)
Associate Justice HENRY B. BROWN, Michigan.	President Harrison.	Third. New Jersey, Pa., Del.	1890. (Dec. 29.)	1891. (Jan. 6.)
Chief Justice MELVILLE W. FULLER, Illinois.	President Cleveland.	Fourth. Md., Va., N. C., W. Va., S. C.	1888. (July 20.)	1888. (Oct. 8.)
Associate Justice EDWARD D. WHITE, Louisiana.	President Cleveland.	Fifth. Ga., Ala., Fla., Miss., La., Tex.	1894. (Feb. 19.)	1894. (Mar. 12.)
Associate Justice JOHN M. HARLAN, Kentucky.	President Hayes.	Sixth. Ky., Tenn., Ohio, Mich.	1877. (Nov. 29.)	1877. (Dec. 10.)
Associate Justice WILLIAM R. DAY, Ohio.	President Roosevelt.	Seventh. Ind., Ill., Wis.	1903. (Feb. 23.)	1903. (Mar. 2.)
Associate Justice DAVID J. BREWER, Kansas.	President Harrison.	Eighth. Minn., Iowa, Mo., Kan., Ark., Neb., Colo., N. D., S. D., Utah, Wyo., New Mex.,* Okla.*	1889. (Dec. 18.)	1890. (Jan. 6.)
Associate Justice JOSEPH McKENNA, California.	President McKinley.	Ninth. Cal., Or., Nev., Mont., Wash., Idaho, Alaska,* Arizona,* Hawaii.*	1898. (Jan. 21.)	1898. (Jan. 26.)

*Territories assigned to circuits by order of the Supreme Court.

†For Change of Allotment, made May 29, 1906, see Appendix VI., post, p. 1180.

GENERAL TABLE OF CASES REPORTED IN THIS BOOK.

VOLUMES 199, 200, 201, 202.

A.

Acker, McCalla v. (Mem.) 620
A. C. McElroy Mfg. Co., United States v. (Mem.) 334
Adler, Ninth Nat. Bank v. (Mem.) .. 904
Ætna Indemnity Co. v. Haverhill (Mem.) (201 U. S. 643) .. 902
v. Ladd (Mem.) (199 U. S. 606) 330
Ætna L. Ins. Co., Whitfield v. (Mem.) 1173
A. Harvey's Sons Mfg. Co., Iroquois Transp. Co. v. (Mem.) 621
Ah Sou v. United States (Mem.) (200 U. S. 611) 619
Ainsworth, De Arnaud v. (Mem.) 335
A. Klipstein & Co. v. Grant (Mem.) (201 U. S. 647) 904
Alabama G. S. R. Co. v. Thompson (200 U. S. 206) 441
Albright v. New Mexico ex rel. Sandoval (200 U. S. 9) 346
A. Leschen & Sons Rope Co. v. Broderick & B. Rope Co. (201 U. S. 166) 710
Alexander v. Crollott (199 U. S. 580) 317
v. Tacoma (Mem.) (199 U. S. 615) 335
v. United States (201 U. S. 117) 686
Allen v. Field (Mem.) (201 U. S. 649) 905
Altgelt, San Antonio Traction Co. v... 491
Amadeo v. Northern Assur. Co. (201 U. S. 194) 722
v. Royal Ins. Co. (201 U. S. 194) 722
American Mail S. S. Co., Consolidation Coal Co. v. (Mem.) 905
American Nat. Bank, Watkins v. (Mem.) 327
American Sewage Disposal Co. v. Pawtucket (Mem.) (199 U. S. 609) 332
American Sugar Ref. Co., United States v. 1149
American Surety Co. v. Campbell & Z. Co. (Mem.) (199 U. S. 607) 331
United States use of Hill v.... 437
Anderson, Drake & S. Co. v. (Mem.) .. 625
Illinois ex rel., v. Vredenburgh (Mem.) (199 U. S. 600) .. 327
Arkansas, Darden v. (Mem.) 621
Armour Packing Co. v. Lacy (200 U. S. 226) 451
Arnaudet, Corkran Oil & Development Co. v. 143
Atchison, T. & S. F. R. Co. v. Interstate Commerce Commission (200 U. S. 536) 585
New Mexico v. 651
Atlantic Coast Line R. Co., Gunter v.. 477
Atty. Gen. ex rel. Kies v. Lowrey (199 U. S. 233) 167
Automatic Switch Co., Ex parte (201 U. S. 166) 710
Ayer & L. Tie Co. v. Kentucky (202 U. S. 409) 1082

B.

Bailey v. Willeford (Mem.) (199 U. S. 606) 330
Ballmann v. Fagin (200 U. S. 186) .. 433
v. United States (200 U. S. 186) 433
Baltimore, Dyer v. (Mem.) 905
Bancroft, Wicomico County v. (Mem.) 623
Bank, American Nat., Watkins v. (Mem.) 327
Bank, Citizen's Nat., v. Kentucky use of Boyle County (Mem.) (199 U. S. 603) 329
Bank, Commercial Nat., Rector v.... 533
Delta Nat., v. Easterbrook (Mem.) (200 U. S. 620) .. 624
First Nat., v. Converse (200 U. S. 425) 537
First Nat., v. Staake (202 U. S. 141) 967
Merchants' Nat., v. Wehrmann (202 U. S. 295) 1036
Miners & M., v. Snyder (Mem.) (200 U. S. 624) 626
National German-American, Shaw v. (Mem.) 328
Ninth Nat., v. Adler (Mem.) (201 U. S. 647) 904

Bank of America, Waggoner v. (Mem.) 1176
People's Nat., v. Saville (Mem.) (201 U. S. 641) 901
Third Nat., Morris v. (Mem.) .. 905
Union, Oxford & C. L. R. Co. v. (Mem.) 1173
Union County Nat., Ozan Lumber Co. v. (Mem.) 1176
Barber v. Guinan (Mem.) (202 U. S. 618) 1173
v. Kilfoyle (Mem.) (202 U. S. 618) 1173
Barnes v. Turner (Mem.) (199 U. S. 611) 333
Barnsdall v. Waltemeyer (Mem.) (201 U. S. 643) 902
Barton, Rankin v..... 163
Bay, Cincinnati, P. B. S. & P. Packet Co. v..... 428
Behn, M. & Co. v. Campbell (Mem.) (200 U. S. 611) 619
Berrios, Bird v. (Mem.) 335
Berry, Donovan v. (Mem.) 333
Bierce, Re (Mem.) (199 U. S. 603) .. 329
Big Six Development Co. v. Mitchell (Mem.) (199 U. S. 606) .. 330
Birch, Mutual Reserve L. Ins. Co. v. (Mem.) 620
Bird v. Berrios (Mem.) (199 U. S. 615) 335
Bisso v. Quinette (Mem.) (199 U. S. 606) 330
Bitterman v. Louisville & N. R. Co. (Mem.) (202 U. S. 623) ... 1176
Bitter Root Development Co., United States v..... 550
Black Hills & N. W. R. Co., Tacoma Mill Co. v. (Mem.) 332
Blair v. Chicago (201 U. S. 400) 801
Chicago W. D. R. Co. v..... 801
North Chicago City R. Co. v... 801
Blount, McGuire v..... 125
Bohon, Cincinnati, N. O. & T. P. R. Co. v..... 448
Boquillas Land & Cattle Co., Herrick v..... 388
Bossard v. United States (201 U. S. 92) 673
Bowden v. San Francisco (Mem.) (199 U. S. 600) 328
Bowers, Ex parte (Mem.) (201 U. S. 651) 906
Boyle County, Kentucky use of, Citizen's Nat. Bank v. (Mem.) 329
Bramblet, Davis v. (Mem.) 903
Breslin v. Carroll (Mem.) (201 U. S. 651) 906
Brinckerhoff, Roosevelt v. (Mem.) 624
Broderick & B. Rope Co., A. Leschen & Sons Rope Co. v..... 710
Brooklyn City R. Co., New York ex rel., v. State Bd. of Tax Comrs. (199 U. S. 48) 79
Brown, Cella v. (Mem.) 1174
v. Gurney (201 U. S. 184) 717
v. Small (201 U. S. 184) 717
Small v..... 717
v. United States (Mem.) (202 U. S. 620) 1174
Browne v. United States (Mem.) (200 U. S. 618) 623
Bunker Hill & S. Min. & Concentrating Co., Empire State–Idaho Min. & Developing Co. v. (Mem.) 620
Empire State–Idaho Min. & Development Co. v. (Mem.) .. 622
Last Chance Min. Co. v. (Mem.) 622
Burdick v. Dillon (Mem.) 1176
Burnes v. Burnes (Mem.) (199 U. S. 605) 330
Burns, Cooper v. (Mem.) 904
v. Hayes (Mem.) (201 U. S. 650) 905
Burton v. United States (202 U. S. 344) 1057
Bush v. Elliott (202 U. S. 477) 1114
v. Elliott Car Co. (202 U. S. 477) 1114
Butterfield Lumber Co., Hartman v.. 217

C.

Caldwell, Carfer v..... 488
California, Campbell v..... 382
California Reduction Co. v. Sanitary Reduction Works (199 U. S. 306) 204
Campbell, Behn, M. & Co. v. (Mem.) .. 619
v. California (200 U. S. 87) 382
& Z. Co., American Surety Co. v. (Mem.) 331
Cantwell v. Missouri (Mem.) (199 U. S. 602) 329
Carfer v. Caldwell (200 U. S. 293) .. 488
Carroll, Breslin v. (Mem.) 906
v. Greenwich Ins. Co. (199 U. S. 401) 246
Carter v. Hawaii (200 U. S. 255) 470
Carter Oil Co., Sweeney v..... 178
Carter, W. & Co. v. United States (Mem.) (202 U. S. 617) .. 1173
Cassell, York Mfg. Co. v..... 782
Cedar Rapids, Cedar Rapids Water Co. v. (Mem.) 327
Cedar Rapids Water Co. v. Cedar Rapids (Mem.) (199 U. S. 600) 327
Cella v. Brown (Mem.) (202 U. S. 620) 1174
Central Crosstown R. Co., New York ex rel., v. State Bd. of Tax Comrs. (199 U. S. 53) 85
Central R. Co., Pendleton v. (Mem.) .. 1172
Chaves, Esquibel v. (Mem.) 625
Cheniere Land & Lumber Co. v. Sugar Bros. Co. (Mem.) (202 U. S. 620) 1174

Cherokee Nation, Eastern Cherokees v. 949
v. United States (202 U. S. 101) 949
United States v. 949
Cheronea S. S. Co., W. K. Niver Coal Co. v. (Mem.) 904
Chesapeake & O. R. Co., Interstate Commerce Commission v. 515
Chesapeake Beach R. Co. v. Washington, P. & C. R. Co. (199 U. S. 247) 175
Cheung Him Nim v. United States (Mem.) (199 U. S. 609) 332
Cheung Pang v. United States (Mem.) (199 U. S. 609) 332
Chew Hing v. United States (Mem.) (199 U. S. 609) 332
Chicago, Blair v. 801
v. Fetzer (201 U. S. 400) 801
Hulbert v. 1026
Chicago & E. I. R. Co., Grand Trunk W. R. Co. v. (Mem.) 903
Chicago & E. R. Co. v. Jacoby (Mem.) (199 U. S. 612) 333
Chicago, B. & Q. R. Co. v. Illinois ex rel. Grimwood (200 U. S. 561) 596
Chicago, Illinois ex rel., West Chicago Street R. Co. v. 845
Chicago Title & T. Co., Re (Mem.) (200 U. S. 613) 620
Chicago W. D. R. Co. v. Blair (201 U. S. 400) 801
Chin Chew Fong v. United States (Mem.) (199 U. S. 609) 332
Chipman v. McDonald (Mem.) (200 U. S. 618) 623
Choctaw & M. R. Co., Newton v. (Mem.) 1174
Chouteau v. Klapmeyer (Mem.) (201 U. S. 651) 906
Christopher v. Norvell (201 U. S. 216) 732
Cincinnati, N. O. & T. P. R. Co. v. Bohon (200 U. S. 221) 448
Cincinnati, P. B. S. & P. Packet Co. v. Bay (200 U. S. 179) 428
Citizen's Nat. Bank v. Kentucky use of Boyle County (Mem.) (199 U. S. 603) 329
City Deposit Bank Co., Rector v. 527
City of Birmingham, The, Ross v. (Mem.) 331
Clark v. Roller (199 U. S. 541) 300
Roller v. 300
United States v. 613
Cleveland v. Cleveland Electric R. Co. (201 U. S. 529) 854
Cleveland Electric R. Co., Cleveland v. 854
Cobre Grande Copper Co., Hallenborg v. 458
Cochran v. Montgomery County (199 U. S. 260) 182
Colbert, Speer v. 403
Columbia George, Ex parte (Mem.) (201 U. S. 641 901
Columbian Correspondence College v. Cortelyou (Mem.) (200 U. S. 615) 621
Columbia Wire Co., Kokomo Steel & Wire Co. v. (Mem.) 624
Commercial Nat. Bank, Rector v. 533
Coney Island & B. R. Co., New York ex rel., v. State Bd. of Tax Comrs. (199 U. S. 53) 85
Congdon v. Michigan (Mem.) (200 U. S. 612) 619
Consolidated Gas Co., New York ex rel., v. State Bd. of Tax Comrs. (199 U. S. 53) 85
Consolidation Coal Co. v. American Mail S. S. Co. (Mem.) (201 U. S. 648) 905
Continental Ins. Co. v. Vredenburgh (Mem.) (199 U. S. 600) 327
Converse, First Nat. Bank v. 537
Cooper v. Burns (Mem.) (201 U. S. 648) 904
Copland v. Waldron (Mem.) (200 U. S. 622) 625
Copper River Min. Co. v. McClellan (Mem.) (200 U. S. 616) 622
Corkran Oil & Development Co. v. Arnaudet (199 U. S. 182) 143
Cornell S. B. Co., United States v. 987
Correa y Rodriguez, Ubarri v. (Mem.) 333
Cortelyou, Columbian Correspondence College v. (Mem.) 621
v. Johnson (Mem.) (202 U. S. 622) 1175
v. United States ex rel. Romero (Mem.) (201 U. S. 649) 905
Cote Blanche Co., Scannell v. (Mem.) 1176
Cox v. Texas (202 U. S. 446) 1099
v. Thompson (202 U. S. 446) 1099
Creelman, Tyson v. (Mem.) 1171
Crollott, Alexander v. 317
Cumulative Credit Co. v. Flint (Mem.) (199 U. S. 614) 334
Curran, New Mexico ex rel., Gutierrez v. (Mem.) 1171

D.

Dairymen's Mfg. Co., Ironclad Mfg. Co. v. (Mem.) 1175
Dalton, Moore v. (Mem.) 623
Dancel, Goodyear Shoe Machinery Co. v. (Mem.) 1174
Dang Ming v. United States (Mem.) (201 U. S. 643) 902
Darden v. Arkansas (Mem.) (200 U. S. 615) 621
Darlington v. Turner (202 U. S. 195) 992
Davis v. Bramblet (Mem.) (201 U. S. 645) 903
v. Jones (Mem.) (200 U. S. 617) 622

Davis v. Living (Mem.) (199 U. S. 613) 334
Dawson v. Waggaman (Mem.) (199 U. S. 613) 334
De Arnaud v. Ainsworth (Mem.) (199 U. S. 616) 335
Deer, Louisville & N. R. Co. v. 426
Delahanty v. Pitkin (Mem.) (199 U. S. 602) 328
DeLamar v. Utah–Nevada Co. (Mem.) (199 U. S. 605) 330
De La Rama v. De La Rama (201 U. S. 303) 765
Delta Nat. Bank v. Easterbrook (Mem.) (200 U. S. 620) .. 624
Dene Steamshipping Co. v. Tweedie Trading Co. (Mem.) (202 U. S. 622) 1175
Dennison Mfg. Co. v. Schärf Tag, L. & B. Co. (Mem.) (201 U. S. 648) 904
Denver & R. G. R. Co., Norgate v. (Mem.) 1172
Derobert v. Stranahan (Mem.) (199 U. S. 614) 334
Deslions v. La Compagnie Generale Transatlantique (Mem.) (202 U. S. 622) 1175
Detroit, G. H. & M. R. Co., Powers v. . 860
Detroit Timber & Lumber Co., United States v. 499
De Vignier v. New Orleans (Mem.) (200 U. S. 617) 622
Devine v. Los Angeles (202 U. S. 313) 1046
Dewey, McDonald v. 1128
v. McDonald (202 U. S. 510) ... 1128
Dick, Whitney v. 963
Dieckerhoff, United States v. 1041
Dillon, Burdick v. (Mem.) 1176
Dimond v. Shine (199 U. S. 88) 99
Dodd v. Samel (Mem.) (201 U. S. 646) 903
Dodge v. Woodville White Lime Co. (Mem.) (202 U. S. 621) .. 1175
Dones v. Urrutia (Mem.) (202 U. S. 614) 1172
Donovan v. Berry (Mem.) (199 U. S. 612) 333
v. Pennsylvania Co. (199 U. S. 279) 192
Drake & S. Co. v. Anderson (Mem.) (200 U. S. 624) 625
v. Manwaring (Mem.) (202 U. S. 624) 1176
v. Senese (Mem.) (200 U. S. 624) 625
Dreschel, Sjoli v. 311
Dresser, Whitney v. 584
Drury, United States ex rel., v. Lewis (200 U. S. 1) 343
Duncan Electric Mfg. Co. v. Siemens–Halske Electric Co. (Mem.) (200 U. S. 622) 624
Dunn v. Erlanger (Mem.) (200 U. S. 620) 623
Dyer v. Baltimore (Mem.) (201 U. S. 650) 905

E.

Eagle Point, The, Liverpool, B. & R. P. Steam Nav. Co. v. (Mem.) 902
Easterbrook, Delta Nat. Bank v. (Mem.) 624
Eastern Cherokees v. Cherokee Nation (202 U. S. 101) 949
East Riverside Irrig. Dist., Wright v. (Mem.) 623
East Tennessee Teleph. Co., New Amsterdam Casualty Co. v. (Mem.) 903
Eclipse Bicycle Co. v. Farrow (199 U. S. 581) 317
Edwin S. Hartwell Lumber Co. v. United States (Mem.) (201 U. S. 644) 903
Eidman v. Tilghman (Mem.) (200 U. S. 620) 624
Eliza Lines, The (199 U. S. 119) 115
Elliott, Bush v. 1114
Harris v. (Mem.) 335
Elliott Car Co., Bush v. 1114
Ellis v. Williams (Mem.) (200 U. S. 623) 625
Ellison v. United States (Mem.) (202 U. S. 615) 1172
Empire State–Idaho Min. & Developing Co. v. Bunker Hill & S. Min. & Concentrating Co. (Mem.) (200 U. S. 613) .. 620
Empire State–Idaho Min. & Development Co. v. Bunker Hill & S. Min. & Concentrating Co. (Mem.) (200 U. S. 617) .. 622
English, New York L. Ins. Co. v. (Mem.) 332
Equitable Life Assur. Soc., Farrior v. (Mem.) 1172
Erie & W. Transp. Co., Erie R. Co. v. (Mem.) 331
Erie R. Co. v. Erie & W. Transp. Co. (Mem.) (199 U. S. 607) .. 331
v. Minor (Mem.) (199 U. S. 613) 333
v. Pennsylvania R. Co. (Mem.) (202 U. S. 622) 1175
Erlanger, Dunn v. (Mem.) 623
Esbri, Serralles v. 391
Esquibel v. Chaves (Mem.) (200 U. S. 624) 625
Essex County Park Commission, Stephens v. (Mem.) 904
Essig, McCune v. 237
Estes v. Timmons (199 U. S. 391) 241

Ex parte Automatic Switch Co. (201 U. S. 166) 710
Bowers (Mem.) (201 U. S. 651) 906
Columbia George (Mem.) (201 U. S. 641) 901
Imboden (Mem.) (200 U. S. 614) 621
Kentucky (201 U. S. 1) 633
Lawson (Mem.) (199 U. S. 599) 327
National Enameling & Stamping Co. (201 U. S. 156) ... 707
Watt (Mem.) (200 U. S. 614) 620

F.

Faber, Von Faber-Castell v. (Mem.) .. 331
Fagin, Ballmann v 433
Falk, Pope v. (Mem.) 906
United States v. (Mem.) 1174
Farmers' Loan & T. Co. v. Sioux Falls (Mem.) (199 U. S. 601) ... 328
Farrior v. Equitable Life Assur. Soc. (Mem.) (202 U. S. 615) .. 1172
Farrow, Eclipse Bicycle Co. v 317
F. E. Creelman Lumber Co., Petri v .. 281
Felts v. Murphy (201 U. S. 123) 689
Fernandez v. Lugo (Mem.) (199 U. S. 614) 334
Fernandez y Perez v. Perez y Fernandez (202 U. S. 80) 942
Fetzer, Chicago v 801
Field, Allen v. (Mem.) 905
First Nat. Bank v. Converse (200 U. S. 425) 537
v. Staake (202 U. S. 141) 967
Fisher, Guardian Trust & D. Co. v 367
Fletcher v. Hickman (Mem.) (201 U. S. 644) 902
Flint, Cumulative Credit Co. v. (Mem.) 334
Folsom, Graham v 464
Foppiano v. Speed (199 U. S. 501) ... 288
Force v. Sawyer-Boss Mfg. Co. (Mem.) (202 U. S. 621) 1175
Forsyth, Garlock v. (Mem.) 1173
Francis v. Francis (Mem.) (199 U. S. 616) 335
Franklin Sugar Ref. Co. v. United States (202 U. S. 580) 1153
French v. Taylor (199 U. S. 274) 189
Frenzer v. Wallace (201 U. S. 244) .. 742

G.

Galbraith v. Illinois Steel Co. (Mem.) (201 U. S. 643) 902
Gardner v. Michigan (199 U. S. 325) .. 212
Garlock v. Forsyth (Mem.) (202 U. S. 617) 1173
Geigel, La Compania De Los Ferrocarriles v. (Mem.) 335
General Fire Extinguisher Co. v. Lamar (Mem.) (201 U. S. 647) 904
General Paper Co. v. United States (201 U. S. 117) 686
George Riggs & Co., United States v. (Mem.) 622
Georgetown & T. R. Co. v. Smith (Mem.) (202 U. S. 624) .. 1176
Georgia, Rawlins v 899
Seale v. (Mem.) 902
German Sav. & L. Soc. v. Tull (Mem.) (200 U. S. 621) 624
Gibbs v. McDougall (Mem.) (199 U. S. 602) 329
Gila Bend Reservoir & Irrig. Co. v. Gila Water Co. (202 U. S. 270) 1023
Gila Water Co., Gila Bend Reservoir & Irrig. Co. v 1023
Gilman v. Hinson (Mem.) (200 U. S. 620) 624
Gleason v. White (199 U. S. 54) 87
Glover, White v. (Mem.) 328
Goat & Sheep Skin Import Co. v. United States (Mem.) (202 U. S. 618) 1173
Goodyear Shoe Machinery Co. v. Dancel (Mem.) (202 U. S. 619) 1174
Gore v. United States (Mem.) (199 U. S. 604) 329
Goshorn v. Royal Trust Co. (Mem.) (200 U. S. 620) 623
Graham v. Folsom (200 U. S. 248) ... 464
Grand Trunk W. R. Co. v. Chicago & E. I. R. Co. (Mem.) (201 U. S. 645) 903
Grant, A. Klipstein & Co. v. (Mem.) .. 904
Grayson, Talbott v 470
Warner v 470
Wood v 470
Great Western Natural Gas & O. Co. v. Oppenheimer (Mem.) (202 U. S. 621) 1175
Green, J. B. Orcutt Co. v. (Mem.) 330
v. MacDougall (Mem.) (199 U. S. 601) 328
v. Stewart (Mem.) (199 U. S. 611) 333
Greenwich Ins. Co., Carroll v 246
v. N. & M. Freidman Co. (Mem.) (200 U. S. 621) .. 624
Grimwood, Illinois ex rel., Chicago, B. & Q. R. Co. v 596
Gross, Hafemann v 220
Guardian Trust & D. Co. v. Fisher (200 U. S. 57) 367
Guinan, Barber v. (Mem.) 1173
Gunter v. Atlantic Coast Line R. Co. (200 U. S. 273) 477
Gurney, Brown v 717
Guss v. Nelson (200 U. S. 298) 489
Guthrie v. Harkness (199 U. S. 148) .. 130
Gutierrez v. New Mexico ex rel. Curran (Mem.) (202 U. S. 614) 1171

H.

Haddock v. Haddock (201 U. S. 562) .. 867
Hafemann v. Gross (199 U. S. 342) ... 220
Hale v. Henkel (201 U. S. 43) 652
Hall, North Pacific Coast R. Co. v. (Mem.) 623
Hallenborg v. Cobre Grande Copper Co. (200 U. S. 239) 458
Halsell v. Renfrow (202 U. S. 287) ... 1032
Hansen, Pressed Steel Car Co. v. (Mem.) 331
Harkness, Guthrie v..... 130
Harmon v. United States (201 U. S. 117) 686
Harper v. Rankin (Mem.) (200 U. S. 621) 624
Harris v. Elliott (Mem.) (199 U. S. 615) 335
Nixon v. (Mem.)..... 903
Harrison v. Remington Paper Co. (Mem.) (199 U. S. 607)... 331
Hartman v. Butterfield Lumber Co. (199 U. S. 335)..... 217
Harway Dyewood & Extract Mfg. Co. v. Hemolin Co. (Mem.) (199 U. S. 608)..... 331
Hastings v. Southern R. Co. (Mem.) (201 U. S. 649)..... 905
Haverhill, Ætna Indemnity Co. v. (Mem.) 902
Hawaii, Carter v..... 470
Hayes, Burns v. (Mem.)..... 905
Hayes Young Tie Plate Co. v. St. Louis Transit Co. (Mem.) (199 U. S. 609)..... 332
Hazelton v. Sheckels (202 U. S. 71).. 939
Hemolin Co., Harway Dyewood & Extract Mfg. Co. v. (Mem.).. 331
Hendrix, Wabash R. Co. v. (Mem.).. 1176
Henkel, Hale v..... 652
McAlister v..... 671
Henry E. Frankenberg Co. v. United States (Mem.) (202 U. S. 619) 1174
Herrick v. Boquillas Land & Cattle Co. (200 U. S. 96)..... 388
Hibernia Sav. & L. Soc. v. San Francisco (200 U. S. 310)..... 495
Hickman, Fletcher v. (Mem.)..... 902
Missouri ex rel., Preferred Tontine M. Co. v. (Mem.) 334
Highland Boy Gold Min. Co., Strickley v..... 581
Hill, United States use of, v. American Surety Co. (200 U. S. 197)..... 437
Hinson, Gilman v. (Mem.)..... 624
Hiscock v. Mertens (Mem.) (201 U. S. 642)..... 901
Hitchcock, Naganab v..... 1113
Oregon v..... 935
Wisconsin v..... 727
Hitchcock County v. Platt (Mem.) (201 U. S. 646)..... 903
Hoadley, Kolze v..... 377
Hoffman, Wilson v. (Mem.)..... 623
Holmes, Santa Fe P. R. Co. v..... 1094
Hong Wing v. United States (Mem.) (201 U. S. 643)..... 902
Houston & T. C. R. Co. v. Mayes (201 U. S. 321)..... 772
Howard v. Kentucky (200 U. S. 164) 421
v. Perrin (200 U. S. 71)..... 374
Huber v. Jennings-Heywood Oil Syndicate (Mem.) (201 U. S. 641) 901
Hulbert v. Chicago (202 U. S. 275)... 1026
Hyde v. Shine (199 U. S. 62)..... 90

I.

Illinois, Iowa v..... 934
Missouri v..... 572
Missouri v..... 1160
Illinois ex rel. Grimwood, Chicago, B. & Q. R. Co. v..... 596
Anderson v. Vredenburgh (Mem.) (199 U. S. 600).. 327
Chicago, West Chicago Street R. Co. v..... 845
Illinois Steel Co., Galbraith v. (Mem.) 902
Imboden, Ex parte (Mem.) (200 U. S. 614) 621
Ingraham, National Salt Co. v. (Mem.) 902
Insurance Co., Ætna L., Whitfield v. (Mem.) 1173
Continental, v. Vredenburgh (Mem.) (199 U. S. 600).. 327
Greenwich, Carroll v..... 246
Greenwich, v. N. & M. Freidman Co. (Mem.) (200 U. S. 621) 624
Metropolitan L., v. Talbott (Mem.) (202 U. S. 619).. 1174
Mutual Reserve L., v. Birch (Mem.) (200 U. S. 612)... 620
Mutual Reserve L., v. Woodward (Mem.) (200 U. S. 623).. 625
Nederland L., v. Meinert (199 U. S. 171)..... 139
New York L., v. English (Mem.) (199 U. S. 610)..... 332
Royal, Amadeo v..... 722
Royal, v. Miller (199 U. S. 353) 226
Security Mut. L., v. Prewitt (200 U. S. 446)..... 545
Security Mut. L., v. Prewitt (202 U. S. 246)..... 1013
Standard M., Nome Beach Lighterage & Transp. Co. v. (Mem.) 622
Travelers, v. Prewitt (200 U. S. 450) 549
Travelers, v. Prewitt (202 U. S. 246) 1013

Interstate Commerce Commission, Atchison, T. & S. F. R. Co. v. 585
v. Chesapeake & O. R. Co. (200 U. S. 361) 515
v. Lake Shore & M. C. R. Co. (Mem.) (202 U. S. 613) .. 1171
New York, N. H. & H. R. Co. v 515
Santa Fe P. R. Co. v. 585
Southern California R. Co. v. .. 585
Southern P. Co. v. 585
Iowa v. Illinois (202 U. S. 59) 934
Ironclad Mfg. Co. v. Dairymen's Mfg. (Mem.) (202 U. S. 623) .. 1175
v. Orange County Milk Asso. (Mem.) (202 U. S. 623) .. 1175
Iroquois Transp. Co. v. A. Harvey's Sons Mfg. Co. (Mem.) (200 U. S. 616) 621

J.

Jack v. Kansas (199 U. S. 372) 234
Jacoby, Chicago & E. R. Co. v. (Mem.) 333
James v. United States (202 U. S. 401) 1079
Jamison, Wimbish v. (Mem.) 327
J. B. Orcutt Co. v. Green (Mem.) (199 U. S. 606) 330
Jennings-Heywood Oil Syndicate, Huber v. (Mem.) 901
Johnson, Cortelyou v. (Mem.) .. 1175
John Spry Lumber Co. v. United States (Mem.) (201 U. S. 644) 903
Jones, Davis v. (Mem.) 622
v. Southern P. Co. (Mem.) (202 U. S. 620) 1174
v. Vane (Mem.) (200 U. S. 614) 621
W. K. Niver Coal Co. v. (Mem.) 904
Joy v. St. Louis (201 U. S. 332) 776
Jutte v. Monongahela River Consol. Coal & Coke Co. (Mem.) (199 U. S. 612) 333

K.

Kansas, Jack v. 234
Kansas City, M. & B. R. Co., Wiygul v. (Mem.) 335
Kawananakoa v. Polyblank (Mem.) (200 U. S. 625) 626
Keen v. Keen (201 U. S. 319) 772
Kell, Trenchard v. (Mem.) 1171
Kelsey, New York ex rel. New York C. & H. R. R. Co. v. 1155
Kenilworth, The, Krelly v. (Mem.) .. 1173
Kentucky, Ex parte (201 U. S. 1) 633
Ayer & L. Tie Co. v. 1082
Howard v. 421
v. Powers (201 U. S. 1) 633
Union Refrigerator Transit Co. v. 150
Kentucky use of Boyle County, Citizen's Nat. Bank v. (Mem.) 329
Kies, Atty. Gen. ex rel., v. Lowrey (199 U. S. 233) 167
Kilfoyle, Barber v. (Mem.) 1173
Kirk, United States v. (Mem.) 331
Klapmeyer, Chouteau v. (Mem.) 906
Kline, Minnesota Iron Co. v. 322
Knoll v. United States (Mem.) (201 U. S. 643) 902
Knoxville, Knoxville Water Co. v. 353
Knoxville Water Co. v. Knoxville (200 U. S. 22) 353
Knut, Nutt v. 348
Kokomo Steel & Wire Co. v. Columbia Wire Co. (Mem.) (200 U. S. 621) 624
Kolze v. Hoadley (200 U. S. 76) 377
Krelly v. The Kenilworth (Mem.) (202 U. S. 617) 1173
Kriete v. New York & H. R. Co. (Mem.) (200 U. S. 615) .. 621

L.

La Compagnie Generale Transatlantique, Deslions v. (Mem.) .. 1175
La Compania De Los Ferrocarriles v. Geigel (Mem.) (199 U. S. 615) 335
Lacy, Armour Packing Co. v. 451
Ladd, Ætna Indemnity Co. v. (Mem.) 330
Lake Erie Provision Co. v. Wessells (Mem.) (200 U. S. 625) .. 626
Lake Shore & M. C. R. Co., Interstate Commerce Commission v. (Mem.) 1171
Lamar, General Fire Extinguisher Co. v. (Mem.) 904
Lam Loy v. United States (Mem.) (201 U. S. 643) 902
Lara, Ortega v. 1055
Last Chance Min. Co. v. Bunker Hill & S. Min. & Concentrating Co. (Mem.) (200 U. S. 617) 622
Lawrence Bros. Co., Soper v. 788
Lawson, Ex parte (Mem.) (199 U. S. 599) 327
v. United States Min. Co. (Mem.) (199 U. S. 605) .. 329
Leeds, Lockhart v. (Mem.) 334
Lee Si Kum, United States v. (Mem.) 334
Lee Yue v. United States (Mem.) (199 U. S. 609) 332
Lewis, Re (Mem.) (202 U. S. 614) .. 1172
United States ex rel. Drury v. 343
Lieberman, New York ex rel., v. Van De Carr (199 U. S. 552) .. 305
Lincoln, Re (202 U. S. 178) 984
v. United States (202 U. S. 484) 1117
Liverpool, B. & R. P. Steam Nav. Co. v. The Eagle Point (Mem.) (201 U. S. 644) 902
Living, Davis v. (Mem.) 334

Lockhart v. Leeds (Mem.) (199 U. S. 614) 334
Loeb, Wabash R. Co. v. (Mem.) 625
Looney v. Metropolitan R. Co. (200 U. S. 480) 564
Los Angeles, Devine v. 1046
Louisiana v. Mississippi (202 U. S. 1) 913
Louisiana & M. River R. Co. v. Markey (Mem.) (200 U. S. 622) .. 625
Louisville & N. R. Co., Bitterman v. (Mem.) 1176
v. Deer (200 U. S. 176) 426
Lowrey, Atty. Gen. ex rel. Kies v. .. 167
Ludlow Mfg. Co., Otis Co. v. 696
Lugo, Fernandez v. (Mem.) 334

M.

McAlister v. Henkel (201 U. S. 90) 671
McCalla v. Acker (Mem.) (200 U. S. 613) 620
McClellan, Copper River Min. Co. v. (Mem.) 622
v. Wallace (201 U. S. 244) 742
McCue, North Shore R. Co. v. (Mem.) 623
McCune v. Essig (199 U. S. 382) 237
McDermott v. Severe (202 U. S. 600) 1162
McDonald, Chipman v. (Mem.) 623
Dewey v. 1128
v. Dewey (202 U. S. 510) 1128
McDougall, Gibbs v. (Mem.)..... 329
Green v. (Mem.) 328
Macfarland v. Walter (Mem.) (202 U. S. 621) 1175
McGregor Creamery Asso., Tryber v. (Mem.) 335
McGuire v. Blount (199 U. S. 142) .. 125
McHarg v. Staake (202 U. S. 150) .. 971
McNair v. United States (201 U. S. 92) 673
McNeill v. Southern R. Co. (202 U. S. 543) 1142
Southern R. Co. v. 1142
Mah Quong Kay, United States v. (Mem.) 334
Mallet Land & Cattle Co., Slaughter v. (Mem.) 903
Mandeville, Mayer v. (Mem.) 1172
Manigault v. Springs (199 U. S. 473) 274
Manwaring, Drake & S. Co. v. (Mem.) 1176
Markey, Louisiana & M. River R. Co. v. (Mem.) 625
Marmo v. Nicoll (Mem.) (199 U. S. 610) 332
v. Sommer (Mem.) (200 U. S. 623) 625
Martin, National Acci. Soc. v. (Mem.) 333
v. New Trinidad Lake Asphalt Co. (Mem.) (200 U. S. 622) 625
v. Texas (200 U. S. 316) 497
Martin-Alexander Lumber Co. v. United States (200 U. S. 321) 499
Marvin v. Trout (199 U. S. 212) 157
Maryland Casualty Co., St. Louis Dressed Beef & Provision Co. v. 712
Mason City & Ft. D. R. Co., Union P. R. Co. v. 134
Mathew, Wabash R. Co. v. (Mem.) .. 329
Mayer v. Mandeville Mem.) (202 U. S. 615) 1172
Mayes, Houston & T. C. R. Co. v. ... 772
Mead v. Portland (200 U. S. 148) .. 413
Meinert, Nederland L. Ins. Co. v.... 139
Mercer, Valentina v. 693
Merchants' Nat. Bank v. Wehrmann (202 U. S. 295) 1036
Mertens, Hiscock v. (Mem.) 901
Metropolitan L. Ins. Co. v. Talbott (Mem.) (202 U. S. 619) 1174
Metropolitan R. Co., Looney v. 564
Metropolitan Street R. Co., New York ex rel., v. State Bd. of Tax Comrs. (199 U. S. 1) 65
Michigan, Congdon v. (Mem.) 619
Gardner v. 212
Michigan C. R. Co. v. Powers (201 U. S. 245) 744
Millard v. Roberts (202 U. S. 429) .. 1090
Miller, New York ex rel. New York C. & H. R. R. Co. v. 1155
Royal Ins. Co. v. 226
Milliken Imprinting Co., United States v. 980
Miners & M. Bank v. Snyder (Mem.) (200 U. S. 624) 626
Minnesota Iron Co. v. Kline (199 U. S. 593)..... 322
Minor, Erie R. Co. v. (Mem.) 333
Mississippi, Louisiana v. 913
Missoula County, Montana Catholic Missions v. 398
Missouri, Cantwell v. (Mem.) 329
v. Illinois (200 U. S. 496) .. 57?
v. Illinois (202 U. S. 598) .. 1160
Missouri ex rel. Hickman, Preferred Tontine Mercantile Co. v. (Mem.) 334
Missouri, K. & T. R. Co., United States v. (Mem.) 333
Missouri River Power Co. v. Stadler (Mem.) (200 U. S. 621) .. 624
Mitchell, Big Six Development Co. v. (Mem.) 330
v. United States (Mem.) (199 U. S. 616) 335
Mobile, Mobile Transp. Co. v. (Mem.) 330
Mobile Transp. Co. v. Mobile (Mem.) (199 U. S. 604) 330
Monongahela River Consol. Coal & Coke Co., Jutte v. (Mem.) 333
Montana Catholic Missions v. Missoula County (200 U. S. 118) 398
Montgomery County, Cochran v. ... 182
Montilla y Valdespino v. Van Syckel (Mem.) (200 U. S. 624) .. 626

Moore v. Dalton (Mem.) (200 U. S. 619) 623
Morgan City Improv. Co., Western Assur. Co. v. (Mem.) 1174
Morris v. Third Nat. Bank (Mem.) (201 U. S. 649) 905
Morsman v. Wallace (201 U. S. 244) 742
Mugg, Texas & P. R. Co. v. 1011
Murphy, Felts v. 689
Mutual Reserve L. Ins. Co. v. Birch (Mem.) (200 U. S. 612) .. 620
v. Woodward (Mem.) (200 U. S. 623) 625

N.

Naganab v. Hitchcock (202 U. S. 473) 1113
N. & M. Freidman Co., Greenwich Ins. Co. v. (Mem.) 624
National Acci. Soc. v. Martin (Mem.) (199 U. S. 611) 333
National Contracting Co., New Orleans Sewerage & Water Board v. (Mem.) 332
National Enameling & Stamping Co., Ex parte (201 U. S. 156). 707
National German-American Bank, Shaw v. (Mem.) 328
National Salt Co. v. Ingraham (Mem.) (201 U. S. 644) 902
Nederland L. Ins. Co. v. Meinert (199 U. S. 171) 139
Nelson, Guss v. 489
v. United States (201 U. S. 92). 673
New Amsterdam Casualty Co. v. East Tennessee Teleph. Co. (Mem.) (201 U. S. 646) .. 903
New Amsterdam Gas Co., New York ex rel., v. State Bd. of Tax Comrs. (199 U. S. 53) 85
New Mexico v. Atchison, T. & S. F. R. Co. (201 U. S. 41) 651
New Mexico ex rel. Sandoval, Albright v. 346
Curran, Gutierrez v. (Mem.) ... 1171
New Orleans, De Vignier v. (Mem.) .. 622
New Orleans Sewerage & Water Board v. National Contracting Co. (Mem.) (199 U. S. 609) .. 332
New Ruperra S. S. Co., W. K. Niver Coal Co. v. (Mem.) 904
Newton v. Choctaw & M. R. Co. (Mem.) (202 U. S. 620) 1174
New Trinidad Lake Asphalt Co., Martin v. (Mem.) 625
New York, St. John v. 896
New York ex rel. New York C. & H. R. R. Co. v. Kelsey (202 U. S. 584) 1155
New York C. & H. R. R. Co. v. Miller (202 U. S. 584) 1155
Brooklyn City R. Co. v. State Bd. of Tax Comrs. (199 U. S. 48) 79
New York ex rel. Central Crosstown R. Co. v. State Bd. of Tax Comrs. (199 U. S. 53) 85
Coney Island & B. R. Co. v. State Bd. of Tax Comrs. (199 U. S. 53) 85
Consolidated Gas Co. v. State Bd. of Tax Comrs. (199 U. S. 53) 85
Metropolitan Street R. Co. v. State Bd. of Tax Comrs. (199 U. S. 1) 65
New Amsterdam Gas Co. v. State Bd. of Tax Comrs. (199 U. S. 53) 85
Twenty-Third Street R. Co. v. State Bd. of Tax Comrs. (199 U. S. 53) 85
Lieberman v. Van De Carr (199 U. S. 552) 305
New York Air Brake Co., Westinghouse v. (Mem.) 904
New York & C. Mail S. S. Co., United States v. 569
New York & H. R. Co., Kriete v. (Mem.) 621
Niewenhous v. (Mem.) 905
O'Neil v. (Mem.) 621
Scholz v. (Mem.) 621
Siegel v. (Mem.) 621
New York C. & H. R. R. Co., New York ex rel., v. Kelsey (202 U. S. 584) 1155
New York ex rel., v. Miller (202 U. S. 584) 1155
New York L. Ins. Co. v. English (Mem.) (199 U. S. 610) ... 332
New York, N. H. & H. R. Co. v. Interstate Commerce Commission (200 U. S. 361) 515
Nicoll, Marmo v. (Mem.) 332
Niewenhous v. New York & H. R. Co. (Mem.) (201 U. S. 650) .. 905
Ninety-Nine Diamonds, United States v. (Mem.) 903
Ninth Nat. Bank v. Adler (Mem.) (201 U. S. 647) 904
Nixon v. Harris (Mem.) (201 U. S. 645) 903
Nome Beach Lighterage & Transp. Co. v. Standard M. Ins. Co. (Mem.) (200 U. S. 616) .. 622
Norgate v. Denver & R. G. R. Co. (Mem.) (202 U. S. 616) .. 1172
North Chicago City R. Co. v. Blair (201 U. S. 400) 801
Northern Assur. Co., Amadeo v. 722
Western Woolen Mill Co. v. (Mem.) 331
Northern Securities Co., Washington v. (Mem.) 906
North Pacific Coast R. Co. v. Hall (Mem.) (200 U. S. 619) .. 623

North Shore R. Co. v. McCue (Mem.) (200 U. S. 619) 623
Norvell, Christopher v. 732
Nutt v. Knut (200 U. S. 12) 348

O.

O'Brien, O'Callaghan v. 101
O'Callaghan v. O'Brien (199 U. S. 89) 101
O'Conor v. Texas (202 U. S. 501) 1120
O'Neil v. New York & H. R. Co. (Mem.) (200 U. S. 615) .. 621
Oppenheimer, Great Western Natural Gas & O. Co. v. (Mem.) ... 1175
Orange County Milk Asso., Ironclad Mfg. Co. v. (Mem.) 1175
Oregon v. Hitchcock (202 U. S. 60) ... 935
Ortega v. Lara (202 U. S. 339) 1055
Otis Co. v. Ludlow Mfg. Co. (201 U. S. 140) 696
Owensboro, Owensboro Waterworks Co. v. 361
Owensboro Waterworks Co. v. Owensboro (200 U. S. 38) 361
Oxford & C. L. R. Co. v. Union Bank (Mem.) (202 U. S. 618) .. 1173
Ozan Lumber Co. v. Union County Nat. Bank (Mem.) (202 U. S. 623) 1176

P.

Pawtucket, American Sewage Disposal Co. v. (Mem.) 332
Pearson v. Williams (202 U. S. 281) .. 1029
Peck, Rogers v. 256
Pendleton v. Central R. Co. (Mem.) (202 U. S. 616) 1172
Pennsylvania Co., Donovan v. 192
Pennsylvania R. Co., Erie R. Co. v. (Mem.) 1175
People's Nat. Bank v. Saville (Mem.) (201 U. S. 641) 901
Peoria, Peoria Gas & Electric Co. v... 365
Peoria Gas & Electric Co. v. Peoria (200 U. S. 48) 365
Perez y Fernandez, Fernandez y Perez v 942
Perrin, Howard v. 374
Petri v. F. E. Creelman Lumber Co. (199 U. S. 487) 281
Philadelphia & R. R. Co. v. Welch (Mem.) (202 U. S. 616) ... 1172
Pitkin, Delahanty v. (Mem.) 328
Platt, Hitchcock County v. (Mem.) .. 903
Polyblank, Kawananakoa v. (Mem.) .. 626
Pope v. Falk (Mem.) (201 U. S. 651) 906
Poppleton v. Wallace (201 U. S. 245) . 743
Portland, Mead v. 413
Powers v. Detroit, G. H. & M. R. Co. (201 U. S. 543) 860
Kentucky v. 633
Michigan C. R. Co. v. 744
Preferred Tontine Mercantile Co. v. Missouri ex rel. Hickman (Mem.) (199 U. S. 313) .. 334
Pressed Steel Car Co. v. Hansen (Mem.) (199 U. S. 608) .. 331
Prewitt, Security Mut. L. Ins. Co. v. 545
Security Mut. L. Ins. Co. v. 1013
Travelers Ins. Co. v. 549
Travelers Ins. Co. v. 1013
Provident Life & T. Co., Thomas v. (Mem.) 622
Wickham v. (Mem.) 622

Q.

Quinette, Bisso v. (Mem.) 330

R.

Railroad Co., Atlantic Coast Line, Gunter v. 477
Brooklyn City, New York ex rel., v. State Bd. of Tax Comrs. (199 U. S. 48) 79
Central, Pendleton v. (Mem.) .. 1172
Central Crosstown, New York ex rel., v. State Bd. of Tax Comrs. (199 U. S. 53) 85
Chicago & E., v. Jacoby (Mem.) (199 U. S. 612) . 333
Chicago & E. I., Grand Trunk W. R. Co. v. (Mem.) 903
Choctaw & M., Newton v. (Mem.) 1174
Coney Island & B., New York ex rel., v. State Bd. of Tax Comrs. (199 U. S. 53) 85
Denver & R. G., Norgate v. (Mem.) 1172
Erie, v. Erie & W. Transp. Co. (Mem.) (199 U. S. 607) .. 331
Erie, v. Minor (Mem.) (199 U. S. 613) 333
Erie, v. Pennsylvania R. Co. (Mem.) (202 U. S. 622) ... 1175
Houston & T. C., v. Mayes (201 U. S. 321) 772
Kansas City, M. & B., Wiygul v. (Mem.) 335
Louisiana & M. River, v. Markey (Mem.) (200 U. S. 622) .. 625
Louisville & N., Bitterman v. (Mem.) 1176
Louisville & N., v. Deer (200 U. S. 176) 426
Mason City & Ft. D., Union P. R. Co. v. 134
Metropolitan, Looney v. 564
Michigan C., v. Powers (201 U. S. 245) 744
New York & H., Kriete v. (Mem.) 621
New York & H., Niewenhous v. (Mem.) 905

Railroad Co., New York & H., O'Neil v. (Mem.) 621
New York & H., Scholz v. (Mem.) 621
New York & H., Siegel v. (Mem.) 621
New York C. & H. R., New York ex rel., v. Kelsey (202 U. S. 584) 1155
New York C. & H. R., New York ex rel., v. Miller (202 U. S. 584) 1155
New York, N. H. & H., v. Interstate Commerce Commission (200 U. S. 361) 515
North Pacific Coast, v. Hall (Mem.) (200 U. S. 619)... 623
North Shore, v. McCue (Mem.) (200 U. S. 619) 623
Oxford & C. L., v. Union Bank (Mem.) (202 U. S. 618)... 1173
Pennsylvania, Erie R. Co. v. (Mem.) 1175
Santa Fe, P., v. Holmes (202 U. S. 438) 1094
Santa Fe P., v. Interstate Commerce Commission (200 U. S. 536) 585
Southern P., v. United States (200 U. S. 341)..... 507
Southern P., v. United States (200 U. S. 354)..... 512
Union P., v. Mason City & Ft. D. R. Co. (199 U. S. 160).. 134
Wabash, v. Hendrix (Mem.)... 1176
Wabash, v. Loeb (Mem.) (200 U. S. 623)..... 625
Wabash v. Mathew (Mem.) (199 U. S. 605)..... 329
Wabash, v. Rice (Mem.)..... 1176
Wabash, v. Sloop (Mem.) (199 U. S. 612)..... 333
Wabash, v. Summers (Mem.) (199 U. S. 610)..... 332
Washington, P. & C., Chesapeake Beach R. Co. v. 175
West Chicago Street, v. Illinois ex rel. Chicago (201 U. S. 506) 845
Railway Co., Alabama G. S., v. Thompson (200 U. S. 206)..... 441
Atchison, T. & S. F., v. Interstate Commerce Commission (200 U. S. 536)..... 585
Atchison, T. & S. F., New Mexico v..... 651
Black Hills & N. W., Tacoma Mill Co. v. (Mem.)..... 332
Chesapeake & O., Interstate Commerce Commission v... 515
Chesapeake Beach, v. Washington, P. & C. R. Co. (199 U. S. 247)..... 175
Railway Co., Chicago, B. & Q., v. Illinois ex rel. Grimwood (200 U. S. 561) 596
Chicago W. D., v. Blair (201 U. S. 400)..... 801
Cincinnati, N. O. & T. P., v. Bohon (200 U. S. 221).... 448
Cleveland Electric, Cleveland v. 854
Detroit, G. H. & M., Powers v.. 860
Georgetown & T., v. Smith (Mem.) (202 U. S. 624)... 1176
Grand Trunk W., v. Chicago & E. I. R. Co. (Mem.) (201 U. S. 645) 903
Lake Shore & M. C., Interstate Commerce Commission v. (Mem.) 1171
Metropolitan Street, New York ex rel., v. State Bd. of Tax Comrs. (199 U. S. 1)..... 65
Missouri, K. & T., United States v. (Mem.)..... 333
North Chicago City, v. Blair (201 U. S. 400)..... 801
Philadelphia & R., v. Welch (Mem.) (202 U. S. 616).. 1172
Southern, Hastings v. (Mem.).. 905
Southern, v. McNeill (202 U. S. 543) 1142
Southern, McNeill v..... 1142
Southern California, v. Interstate Commerce Commission (200 U. S. 536)..... 585
Texas & P., v. Mugg (202 U. S. 242) 1011
Twenty-Third Street, New York ex rel., v. State Bd. of Tax Comrs. (199 U. S. 53).... 85
Rankin v. Barton (199 U. S. 228).... 163
Harper v. (Mem.)..... 624
Rawlins v. Georgia (201 U. S. 638).. 899
Raymond v. United States (Mem.) (200 U. S. 619)..... 623
Re Bierce (Mem.) (199 U. S. 603)... 329
Chicago Title & T. Co. (Mem.) (200 U. S. 613)..... 620
Lewis (Mem.) (202 U. S. 614). 1172
Lincoln (202 U. S. 178)..... 984
Robinson (Mem.) (200 U. S. 611) 619
Rector v. City Deposit Bank Co. (200 U. S. 405) 527
v. Commercial Nat. Bank (200 U. S. 420) 533
Remington Paper Co., Harrison v. (Mem.) 331
Renfrow, Halsell v. 1032
R. F. Downing & Co., United States v. 786
Rice, Wabash R. Co. v. (Mem.)..... 1176
Riggins v. United States (199 U. S. 547) 303
Riggs, Wren v. (Mem.) 905
Rivera v. Urrutia (Mem.) (202 U. S. 624) 1176

Roberts, Millard v. 1090
Robinson, Re (Mem.) (200 U. S. 611) 619
Rodriguez v. Vivoni (201 U. S. 371) .. 792
Rogers v. Peck (199 U. S. 425) 256
Roller v. Clark (199 U. S. 541) 300
Clark v. 300
Romero, United States ex rel. Cortelyou v. (Mem.) 905
Roosevelt v. Brinckerhoff (Mem.) (200 U. S. 622) 624
Ross v. The City of Birmingham (Mem.) (199 U. S. 607) ... 331
Royal Ins. Co., Amadeo v. 722
v. Miller (199 U. S. 353) 226
Royal Packing Co. v. United States (199 U. S. 579) 316
Royal Trust Co., Goshorn v. (Mem.) .. 623
Russell v. Russell (Mem.) (200 U. S. 613) 620
Russian-American Packing Co. v. United States (199 U. S. 570) 314

S.

St. John v. New York (201 U. S. 633) 896
St. Louis, Joy v. 776
St. Louis Dressed Beef & Provision Co. v. Maryland Casualty Co. (201 U. S. 173) 712
St. Louis Transit Co., Hayes Young Tie Plate Co. v. (Mem.) .. 332
Samel, Dodd v. (Mem.) 903
San Antonio Traction Co. v. Altgelt (200 U. S. 304) 491
Sandoval, New Mexico ex rel., Albright v. 346
San Francisco, Bowden v. (Mem.) ... 328
Hibernia Sav. & L. Soc. v. 495
Sanitary Reduction Works, California Reduction Co. v. 204
Santa Fe P. R. Co. v. Holmes (202 U. S. 438) 1094
v. Interstate Commerce Commission (200 U. S. 536) 585
Savage v. Savage (Mem.) (201 U. S. 646) 904
Saville, People's Nat. Bank v. (Mem.) 901
Sawyer v. United States (202 U. S. 150) 972
Sawyer-Boss Mfg. Co., Force v. (Mem.) 1175
Scannell v. Cote Blanche Co. (Mem.) (202 U. S. 624) 1176
Scharf Tag, L. & B. Co., Dennison Mfg. Co. v. (Mem.) 904
Schmitz v. United States (Mem.) (202 U. S. 616) 1172
Scholz v. New York & H. R. Co. (Mem.) (200 U. S. 615) ... 621
Seale v. Georgia (Mem.) (201 U. S. 642) 902
Security Mut. L. Ins. Co. v. Prewitt (200 U. S. 446) 545
Security Mut. L. Ins. Co. v. Prewitt (202 U. S. 246) 1013
Semet-Solvay Co. v. Wilcox (Mem.) (202 U. S. 617) 1173
Senese, Drake & S. Co. v. (Mem.) 625
Serralles v. Esbri (200 U. S. 103) 391
Severe, McDermott v. 1162
Shaw v. National German-American Bank (Mem.) (199 U. S. 603) 328
Sheckels, Hazelton v. 939
Shine, Dimond v. 99
Hyde v. 90
Siegel v. New York & H. R. Co. (Mem.) (200 U. S. 615) 621
Siemens-Halske Electric Co., Duncan Electric Mfg. Co. v. (Mem.) 624
Simpson v. United States (199 U. S. 397) 245
Sioux Falls, Farmers' Loan & T. Co. v. (Mem.) 328
Sjoli v. Dreschel (199 U. S. 564) 311
Skaneateles Paper Co. v. Syracuse (Mem.) (201 U. S. 642) ... 901
Slaughter v. Mallet Land & Cattle Co. (Mem.) (201 U. S. 646) ... 903
Sloop, Wabash R. Co. v. (Mem.) 333
Small, Brown v. 717
v. Brown (201 U. S. 184) 717
Smith v. Georgetown & T. R. Co. v. (Mem.) 1176
Snyder, Miners & M. Bank v. (Mem.) . 626
Sommer, Marmo v. (Mem.) 625
Soper v. Lawrence Bros. Co. (201 U. S. 359) 788
South Carolina v. United States (199 U. S. 437) 261
Southern California R. Co. v. Interstate Commerce Commission (200 U. S. 536) 585
Southern P. Co. v. Interstate Commerce Commission (200 U. S. 536) 585
Jones v. (Mem.) 1174
Southern P. R. Co. v. United States (200 U. S. 341) 507
v. United States (200 U. S. 354) 512
Southern R. Co., Hastings v. (Mem.) 905
v. McNeill (202 U. S. 543) 1142
McNeill v. 1142
Speed, Foppiano v. 288
Speer v. Colbert (200 U. S. 130) 403
Springs, Manigault v. 274
Staake, First Nat. Bank v. 967
McHarg v. 971
Stadler, Missouri River Power Co. v. (Mem.) 624
Standard M. Ins. Co., Nome Beach Lighterage & Transp. Co. v. (Mem.) 622
State Bd. of Tax Comrs., New York ex rel. Brooklyn City R. Co. v. 79

State Bd. of Tax Comrs., New York ex rel. Central Crosstown R. Co. v. 85
New York ex rel. Coney Island & B. R. Co. v. 85
New York ex rel. Consolidated Gas Co. v. 85
New York ex rel. Metropolitan Street R. Co. v. 65
New York ex rel. New Amsterdam Gas Co. v. 85
New York ex rel. Twenty-Third Street R. Co. v. 85
Stephens v. Essex County Park Commission (Mem.) (201 U. S. 648) 904
Stewart, Green v. (Mem.) 333
Stranahan, Derobert v. (Mem.) 334
Strickley v. Highland Boy Gold Min. Co. (200 U. S. 527) 581
Stuart v. United States (201 U. S. 117) 686
Sugar Bros. Co., Cheniere Land & Lumber Co. v. (Mem.) 1174
Summers, Wabash R. Co. v. (Mem.) .. 332
Sweeney v. Carter Oil Co. (199 U. S. 252) 178
Syracuse, Skaneateles Paper Co. v. (Mem.) 901

T.

Tacoma, Alexander v. (Mem.) 335
Tacoma Mill Co. v. Black Hills & N. W. R. Co. (Mem.) (199 U. S. 610) 332
Talbott v. Grayson (200 U. S. 257) ... 470
Metropolitan L. Ins. Co. v. (Mem.) 1174
Tampa, Tampa Waterworks Co. v. 170
Tampa Waterworks Co. v. Tampa (199 U. S. 241) 170
Taylor, French v. 189
Texas, Cox v. 1099
Martin v. 497
O'Conor v. 1120
Texas & P. R. Co. v. Mugg (202 U. S. 242) 1011
The Eliza Lines (199 U. S. 119) 115
Theurer v. United States (Mem.) (199 U. S. 615) 335
Third Nat. Bank, Morris v. (Mem.) .. 905
Thissell v. U. S. Bobbin & Shuttle Co. (Mem.) (199 U. S. 608) .. 331
Thomas v. Provident Life & T. Co. (Mem.) (200 U. S. 618) .. 622
Thompson, Alabama G. S. R. Co. v. 441
Cox v. 1099
Tilghman, Eidman v. (Mem.) 624
Timmons, Estes v. 241
Travelers Ins. Co. v. Prewitt (200 U. S. 450) 549
v. Prewitt (202 U. S. 246) 1013
Trenchard v. Kell (Mem.) (202 U. S. 613) 1171
Trono v. United States (199 U. S. 521) 292
Trout, Marvin v. 157
Tryber v. McGregor Creamery Asso. (Mem.) (199 U. S. 617) ... 335
Tull, German Sav. & L. Soc. v. (Mem.) 624
Turner, Barnes v. (Mem.) 333
Darlington v. 992
Tweedie Trading Co., Dene Steamshipping Co. v. (Mem.) 1175
Twenty-Third Street R. Co., New York ex rel., v. State Bd. of Tax Comrs. (199 U. S. 53) 85
Tyson v. Creelman (Mem.) (202 U. S. 615) 1171

U.

Ubarri v. Correa y Rodriguez (Mem.) (199 U. S. 611) 333
Union Bank, Oxford & C. L. R. Co. v. (Mem.) 1173
Union County Nat. Bank, Ozan Lumber Co. v. (Mem.) 1176
Union P. R. Co. v. Mason City & Ft. D. R. Co. (199 U. S. 160) 134
Union Refrigerator Transit Co. v. Kentucky (199 U. S. 194) 150
United Box Board & Paper Co., Van Epps v. (Mem.) 1173
United States v. A. C. McElroy Mfg. Co. (Mem.) (199 U. S. 613) 334
Ah Sou v. (Mem.) 619
Alexander v. 686
v. American Sugar Ref. Co. (202 U. S. 563) 1149
Ballmann v. 433
v. Bitter Root Development Co. (200 U. S. 451) 550
Bossard v. 673
Brown v. (Mem.) 1174
Browne v. (Mem.) 623
Burton v. 1057
Carter, W. & Co. v. (Mem.) 1173
v. Cherokee Nation (202 U. S. 101) 949
Cherokee Nation v. 949
Cheung Him Nim v. (Mem.) 332
Cheung Pang v. (Mem.) 332
Chew Hing v. (Mem.) 332
Chin Chew Fong v. (Mem.) 332
v. Clark (200 U. S. 601) 613
v. Cornell S. B. Co. (202 U. S. 184) 987
Dang Ming v. (Mem.) 902
v. Detroit Timber & Lumber Co. (200 U. S. 321) 499
v. Dieckerhoff (202 U. S. 302) .. 1041
Edwin S. Hartwell Lumber Co. v. (Mem.) 903
Ellison v. (Mem.) 1172
v. Falk (Mem.) (202 U. S. 619) 1174

United States, Franklin Sugar Ref. Co. v. 1153
General Paper Co. v..... 686
v. George Riggs & Co. (Mem.) (200 U. S. 616)..... 622
Goat & Sheep Skin Import. Co. v. (Mem.)..... 1173
Gore v. (Mem.)..... 329
Harmon v..... 686
Henry E. Frankenberg Co. v. (Mem.) 1174
Hong Wing v. (Mem.)..... 902
James v..... 1079
John Spry Lumber Co. v. (Mem.) 903
v. Kirk (Mem.) (199 U. S. 607) 331
Knoll v. (Mem.)..... 902
Lam Loy v. (Mem.)..... 902
v. Lee Si Kum (Mem.) (199 U. S. 614)..... 334
Lee Yue v. (Mem.)..... 332
Lincoln v..... 1117
McNair v..... 673
v. Mah Quong Kay (Mem.) (199 U. S. 614)..... 334
Martin–Alexander Lumber Co. v. 499
v. Milliken Imprinting Co. (202 U. S. 168)..... 980
v. Missouri, K. & T. R. Co. (Mem.) (199 U. S. 612)... 333
Mitchell v. (Mem.)..... 335
Nelson v..... 673
v. New York & C. Mail S. S. Co. (200 U. S. 488)..... 569
v. Ninety-Nine Diamonds (Mem.) (201 U. S. 645).. 903
Raymond v. (Mem.)..... 623
v. R. F. Downing & Co. (201 U. S. 354)..... 786
Riggins v..... 303
Royal Packing Co. v..... 316
Russian–American Packing Co. v. 314
Sawyer v..... 972
Schmitz v. (Mem.) 1172
Simpson v..... 245
South Carolina v..... 261
Southern P. R. Co. v..... 512
Southern P. R. Co. v..... 507
Stuart v..... 686
Theurer v. (Mem.)..... 335
Trono v..... 292
v. Utah, N. & C. Stage Co. (199 U. S. 414)..... 251
Utah, N. & C. Stage Co. v..... 251
Warner, B. & Co. v..... 1117
Whiting v..... 686
v. Wickersham (201 U. S. 390) 798
Wishkah Boom Co. v. (Mem.).. 1171
Wong Ding Chong v. (Mem.).. 902
Wong Wah v. (Mem.)..... 902
United States ex rel. Romero, Cortelyou v. (Mem.)..... 905
Drury v. Lewis (200 U. S. 1).. 343
United States use of Hill v. American Surety Co. (200 U. S. 197) 437
U. S. Bobbin & Shuttle Co., Thissell v. (Mem.)..... 331
United States Min. Co., Lawson v. (Mem.) 329
Urrutia, Dones v. (Mem.)..... 1172
Rivera v. (Mem.)..... 1176
Ursula Bright S. S. Co., W. K. Niver Coal Co. v. (Mem.)..... 904
Utah, N. & C. Stage Co. v. United States (199 U. S. 414).... 251
United States v..... 251
Utah–Nevada Co., DeLamar v. (Mem.) 330

V.

Valentina v. Mercer (201 U. S. 131).. 693
Van De Carr, New York ex rel. Lieberman v..... 305
Vane, Jones v. (Mem.)..... 621
Van Epps v. United Box Board & Paper Co. (Mem.) (202 U. S. 617) 1173
Van Syckel, Montilla y Valdespino v. (Mem.) 626
Vicksburg v. Vicksburg Waterworks Co. (202 U. S. 453)..... 1102
Vicksburg Waterworks Co., Vicksburg v. 1102
Vivoni, Rodriguez v..... 792
Von Faver–Castell v. Faber (Mem.) (199 U. S. 609)..... 331
Vredenburgh, Continental Ins. Co. v. (Mem.) 327
Illinois ex rel. Anderson v. (Mem.) 327

W.

Wabash R. Co. v. Hendrix (Mem.)... 1176
v. Loeb (Mem.) (200 U. S. 623) 625
v. Mathew (Mem.) (199 U. S. 605) 329
v. Rice (Mem.)..... 1176
v. Sloop (Mem.) (199 U. S. 612) 333
v. Summers (Mem.) (199 U. S. 610) 332
Waggaman, Dawson v. (Mem.)..... 334
Waggoner v. Bank of America (Mem.) (202 U. S. 623)..... 1176
Walbridge v. Walker (Mem.) (199 U. S. 605)..... 330
Waldron, Copland v. (Mem.)..... 625
Walker, Walbridge v. (Mem.)..... 330
Wallace, Frenzer v..... 742
McClellan v..... 742
Morsman v..... 742
Poppleton v..... 743
Wyman v..... 738
Waltemeyer, Barnsdall v. (Mem.).... 902
Walter, Macfarland v. (Mem.)..... 1175

Warner v. Grayson (200 U. S. 257) ... 470
Warner, B. & Co. v. United States (202 U. S. 484) 1117
Washington v. Northern Securities Co. (Mem.) (201 U. S. 651) .. 906
Washington, P. & C. R. Co., Chesapeake Beach R. Co v..... 175
Watkins v. American Nat. Bank (Mem.) (199 U. S. 599) ... 327
Watt, Ex parte (Mem.) (200 U. S. 614) 620
Wehrmann, Merchants' Nat. Bank v.. 1036
Welch, Philadelphia & R. R. Co. v. (Mem.) 1172
Wessells, Lake Erie Provision Co. v. (Mem.) 626
West Chicago Street R. Co. v. Illinois ex rel. Chicago (201 U. S. 506)..... 845
Western Assur. Co. v. Morgan City Improv. Co. (Mem.) (202 U. S. 621)..... 1174
Western Woolen Mill Co. v. Northern Assur. Co. (Mem.) (199 U. S. 608)..... 331
Westinghouse v. New York Air Brake Co. (Mem.) (201 U. S. 648) 904
White, Gleason v..... 87
v. Glover (Mem.) (199 U. S. 602) 328
Whitfield v. Ætna L. Ins. Co. (Mem.) (202 U. S. 618)..... 1173
Whiting v. United States (201 U. S. 117) 686
Whitney v. Dick (202 U. S. 132)..... 963
v. Dresser (200 U. S. 532)..... 584
Wickersham, United States v..... 798
Wickham v. Provident Life & T. Co. (Mem.) (200 U. S. 618)... 622
Wicomico County v. Bancroft (Mem.) (200 U. S. 618)..... 623
Wilcox, Semet-Solvay Co. v. (Mem.).. 1173
Wildcroft, The, W. J. McCahan Sugar Ref. Co. v..... 794
Willeford, Bailey v. (Mem.)..... 330
Williams, Ellis v. (Mem.)..... 625
Pearson v..... 1029
Wilson v. Hoffman (Mem.) (200 U. S. 619) 623
Wimbish v. Jamison (Mem.) (199 U. S. 599)..... 327
Wisconsin v. Hitchcock (201 U. S. 202) 727
Wishkah Boom Co. v. United States (Mem.) (202 U. S. 613).. 1171
Wiygul v. Kansas City, M. & B. R. Co. (Mem.) (199 U. S. 616)... 335
W. J. McCahan Sugar Ref. Co. v. The Wildcroft (201 U. S. 378) 794
W. K. Niver Coal Co. v. Cheronea S. S. Co. (Mem.) (201 U. S. 647) 904
v. Jones (Mem.) (201 U. S. 647) 904
v. New Ruperra S. S. Co. (Mem.) (201 U. S. 647)... 904
v. Ursula Bright S. S. Co. (Mem.) (201 U. S. 647).. 904
Wong Ding Chong v. United States (Mem.) (201 U. S. 643).. 902
Wong Wah v. United States (Mem.) (201 U. S. 643)..... 902
Wood v. Grayson (200 U. S. 257).... 470
Woodville White Lime Co., Dodge v. (Mem.) 1175
Woodward, Mutual Reserve L. Ins. Co. v. (Mem.)..... 625
Wren v. Riggs (Mem.) (201 U. S. 650) 905
Wright v. East Riverside Irrig. Dist. Mem.) (200 U. S. 619).... 623
Wyman v. Wallace (201 U. S. 230).. 738

Y.

York Mfg. Co. v. Cassell (201 U. S. 344) 782

CASES

ARGUED AND DECIDED

IN THE

SUPREME COURT

OF THE

UNITED STATES

AT

OCTOBER TERMS, 1904, 1905.

Vol. 199.

REFERENCE TABLE

OF SUCH CASES

DECIDED IN U. S. SUPREME COURT,

OCTOBER TERMS, 1904, 1905,

AND REPORTED HEREIN,

VOLUME 199,

AS ALSO APPEAR IN

OFFICIAL REPORTER'S EDITION.

Off. Rep. 199 U. S.	Title.	Here In.
1–2	New York ex rel. Metropolitan Street R. Co. v. New York State Bd. of Tax Comrs.	65
2–4	" " "	66
4–7	" " "	67
7–9	" " "	68
35–36	" " "	74
36–38	" " "	75
38–41	" " "	76
41–43	" " "	77
43–45	" " "	78
45–47	" " "	79
48	New York ex rel. Brooklyn City R. Co. v. New York State Bd. of Tax Comrs.	79
48–49	" " "	80
50–51	" " "	84
51–52	" " "	85
53	New York ex rel. Twenty-Third St. R. Co. v. New York State Bd. of Tax Comrs. New York ex rel. Central Crosstown R. Co. v. Same New York ex rel. Consolidated Gas Co. v. Same New York ex rel. New Amsterdam Gas Co. v. Same New York ex rel. Coney Island & B. R. Co. v. Same	85
53–54	" " "	87
54	Gleason v. White	87
54–60	" " "	88
60–61	" " "	89
61–62	" " "	90
62	Hyde v. Shine	90
63–64	" " "	91
75–77	" " "	94
77–80	" " "	95
80–82	" " "	96
82–85	" " "	97
85–87	" " "	98
87–88	" " "	99
88	Dimond v. Shine	99
88	" "	100

Off. Rep. 199 U. S.	Title.	Here In.
89–90	Farrell v. O'Brien (O'Callahan v. O'Brien)	101
90–93	" "	102
93	" "	103
99–102	" "	107
102–104	" "	108
104–107	" "	109
107–109	" "	110
109–112	" "	111
112–114	" "	112
114–117	" "	113
117–119	" "	114
119	Eliza Lines, The	115
125–127	"	118
127–129	"	119
130–132	"	120
132–134	"	121
134–136	"	122
137–139	"	123
139–141	"	124
142	McGuire v. Blount	125
143–144	" "	128
145–147	" "	129
147–148	" "	130
148	Guthrie v. Harkness	130
149–153	" "	131
153–155	" "	132
155–158	" "	133
158–159	" "	134
160	Union P. R. Co. v. Mason City & F. D. R. Co.	134
160–161	" "	135
164–166	" "	137
166–169	" "	138
169–171	" "	139
171	Nederland Life Insurance Co. v. Meinert	139
172–174	" "	140
174–178	" "	141
178–180	" "	142
180–182	" "	143
182	Corkran Oil & Development Co. v. Arnaudet	143
182–184	" "	144

Off. Rep. 199 U. S.	Title.	Here in.
184–187	Corkran Oil & Development Co. v. Arnaudet	145
187–189	" "	146
189–190	" "	147
192–193	" "	149
193–194	" "	150
194	Union Refrigerator Transit Co. v. Kentucky.	150
195	" "	150
195–196	" "	151
201–202	" "	152
202–204	" "	153
204–206	" "	154
206–209	" "	155
209–211	" "	156
211	" "	157
212–213	Marvin v. Trout	157
213–215	" "	158
215–218	" "	159
222–224	" "	161
224–226	" "	162
227–228	" "	163
228	Rankin v. Barton	163
230–232	" "	166
232	" "	167
233	Atty. Gen. ex rel. Kies v. Lowrey	167
237–238	" "	169
238–240	" "	170
241	Tampa Waterworks Co. v. Tampa	170
241–242	" "	172
242–244	" "	173
244–246	" "	174
246–247	" "	175
247	Chesapeake Beach R. Co. v. Washington P. & C. R. Co.	175
248–250	" "	177
250–252	" "	178
252	Sweeney v. Carter Oil Co.	178
252–255	" "	179
255–257	" "	180
257–259	" "	181
260–261	Cochran v. Montgomery County Same v. Same.	182
261–263	" "	183
267–269	" "	186
269–271	" "	187
271–274	" "	188
274	" "	189
274–275	French v. Taylor	189
276–277	" "	191
277–279	" "	192
279	Donovon v. Pennsylvania Co.	192
280–281	" "	196
281–284	" "	197
284–292	" "	198
292–295	" "	199
295–297	" "	200
297–300	" "	201
299–302	" "	202
302–304	" "	203
304–305	" "	204
306	California Reduction Co. v. Sanitary Reduction Works.	204
306–309	" "	207
309–316	" "	208
316–318	" "	209
318–320	" "	210

Off. Rep. 199 U. S.	Title.	Here in.
320–323	California Reduction Co. v. Sanitary Reduction Works	211
323–325	" "	212
325	Gardner v. Michigan	212
326–327	" "	214
327–330	" "	215
330–332	" "	216
332–335	" "	217
335	Hartman v. Butterfield Lumber Co.	217
335–337	" "	218
337–340	" "	219
340–341	" "	220
342	Hafemann v. Gross	220
342–343	" "	221
343–345	" "	223
345–348	" "	224
348 350	" "	225
350–352	" "	226
353	Royal Ins. Co. v. Miller	226
354	" "	227
354–357	" "	228
357–359	" "	229
359–362	" "	230
362–364	" "	231
364–367	" "	232
367–369	" "	233
369–371	" "	234
372	Jack v. Kansas	234
372–374	" "	235
374–381	" "	236
381–382	" "	237
382	McCune v. Essig	237
386–387	" "	239
387–389	" "	240
389–390	" "	241
391	Estes v. Timmons	241
392–394	" "	243
394–396	" "	244
397–399	Simpson v. United States	245
399–400	" "	246
401	Carroll v. Greenwich Ins. Co.	246
407	" "	248
407–409	" "	249
410–412	" "	250
412–414	" "	251
414	United States v. Utah, N. & C. Stage Co. Utah, N. & C. Stage Co. v. United States	251
415–417	" "	252
417–419	" "	253
419–422	" "	254
422–424	" "	255
424–425	" "	256
425	Rogers v. Peck	256
426	" "	258
426–433	" "	259
433–435	" "	260
435–437	" "	261
437–438	South Carolina v. United States	261
438–439	" "	262
447–449	" "	264
449–451	" "	265
451–454	" "	266
454–456	" "	267
456–459	" "	268
459–461	" "	269
461–468	" "	270
468–466	" "	271

Off. Rep. 199 U. S.	Title.	Here in.
466–468	South Carolina v. United States	272
468–470	" "	273
470–472	" "	274
473	Manigault v. Springs	274
473–474	" "	275
474	" "	276
477–478	" "	277
478–480	" "	278
480–483	" "	279
483–485	" "	280
485–487	" "	281
487	Petri v. F. E. Creelman Lumber Co.	281
488–489	" "	282
492	" "	284
492–494	" "	285
494–497	" "	286
497–499	" "	287
499–501	" "	288
501	Foppiano v. Speed	288
501–504	" "	289
504–516	" "	290
516–519	" "	291
519–520	" "	292
521	Trono v. United States	292
521–522	" "	293
528	" "	294
528–531	" "	295
531–533	" "	296
533–535	" "	297
535–538	" "	298
538–540	" "	299
540–541	" "	300
541	Clark v. Roller Roller v. Clark	300
542–543	Clark v. Roller Roller v. Clark	301
543–546	" "	302
546	" "	303
547–548	Riggins v. United States	303
548–550	" "	304
550–551	" "	305
552	New York ex rel. Lieberman v. Van De Carr	305
557	" "	308
557–559	" "	309
559–562	" "	310
562–564	" "	311
564	Sjoli v. Dreschel	311
565–566	" "	312
566–569	" "	313
569	" "	314
570–571	Russian-American Packing Co. v. United States	314
571–577	" "	315
577–579	" "	316
579	Royal Packing Co. v. United States	316
580–581	Alexander v. Crollott	317
581	Eclipse Bicycle Co. v. Farrow	317
582–583	" "	318
583–586	" "	319
586–588	" "	320
588–590	" "	321
590–592	" "	322
593	Minnesota Iron Co. v. Kline	322
596–598	" "	325
599–617	Memorandum Cases	327–335

THE DECISIONS

OF THE

Supreme Court of the United States

AT

OCTOBER TERM, 1904.

[1]*PEOPLE OF THE STATE OF NEW YORK ex rel. METROPOLITAN STREET RAILWAY COMPANY, Plff. in Err.,

v.

STATE BOARD OF TAX COMMISSIONERS.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 1-47.)

1. Contracts—impairment of obligation—tax on special franchises.—The special franchise tax imposed by N. Y. Laws 1899, chap. 712, does not impair the obligation of the contracts by which the state or municipality granted the right to construct, operate, and maintain street railways in the city of New York in consideration of the payment of a gross sum or of the annual payment of a fixed amount or fixed percentage of earnings, where such payments are nowhere declared to be in lieu of, or as the equivalent or substitute for, taxes.

2. Constitutional law—due process of law—equal protection of the laws—tax on special franchises.—The reduction, on account of annual payments "in the nature of a tax" covered by existing agreements, which is made by N. Y. Laws 1899, chap. 712, from the amount of the special franchise tax provided for by that statute, does not render the statute invalid either as denying the equal protection of the laws to street railway companies who agreed to pay a lump sum for their franchises, or as depriving such companies of their property without due process of law.

3. Constitutional law—equal protection of the laws—tax on special franchises—exemptions.—The exemption of the subsurface street railway in New York city from the operation of the special franchise tax authorized by N. Y. Laws 1899, chap. 712, does not make that statute invalid, as denying the owners of the surface street railways in that city the equal protection of the laws, or as depriving them of their property without due process of law.

[No. 74.]

Argued April 17, 18, 19, 1905. Decided May 29, 1905.

IN ERROR to the Supreme Court of the State of New York to review a judgment sustaining an assessment of a street railway franchise, entered pursuant to the mandate of the Court of Appeals of that state, which had reversed a judgment of the Appellate Division of the Supreme Court for the Third Department, which had in turn reversed the judgment of the Supreme Court entered at a special term held in and for the county of Albany on a writ of certiorari to review the action of the state board of tax commissioners. Affirmed.

See same case below in Appellate Division of Supreme Court, 79 App. Div. 183, 80 N. Y. Supp. 85; in Court of Appeals, 174 N. Y. 417, 63 L. R. A. 884, 67 N. E. 69.

Statement by Mr. Justice Brewer:

On May 26, 1899, the legislature of New

NOTE—On taxation of corporate franchises in the United States—see note to Louisville Tobacco Warehouse Co. v. Com. 57 L.R.A. 33.

As to corporate taxation in United States as affected by the contract clause in the Federal Constitution—see note to Adams v. Yazoo & M. Valley R. Co. 60 L.R.A. 33.

On constitutional equality in the United States in relation to corporate taxation—see note to Bacon v. State Tax Comrs. 60 L.R.A. 321.

As to what constitutes due process of law—see Kuntz, v. Sumption, 2 L.R.A. 655, and note; and Re Gannon, 5 L.R.A. 359, and note; Ulman v. Baltimore, 11 L.R.A. 224, and note; and Gilman v. Tucker, 13 L. R. A. 304, and note. And see notes to People v. O'Brien, 2 L.R.A. 255; Pearson v. Yewdall, 24 L. ed. U. S. 436; and Wilson v. North Carolina, 42 L. ed. U. S. 865.

As to the validity of class legislation—see State v. Goodwill, 6 L.R.A. 621, and note; and State v. Loomis, 21 L.R.A. 789, and note.

As to constitutional equality of privileges, immunities, and protection—see Louisville Safety Vault & T. Co. v. Louisville & N. R. Co. 14 L.R.A. 579, and note.

York passed an act amending the tax law of the state. N. Y. Laws 1899, chap. 712, p. 1589. The first section reads:

"Section 1. Subdivision 3 of § 2 of the tax law is hereby amended to read as follows:

"3. The terms 'land,' 'real estate,' and 'real property,' as used in this chapter, include the land itself above and under water, all buildings and other articles and structures, substructures and superstructures, erected upon, under, or above, or affixed to the same; all wharves and piers, including the value of the right to collect wharfage, cranage, or dockage thereon; all bridges, all telegraph lines, wires, poles, and appurtenances; all supports and inclosures for electrical conductors and other appurtenances upon. above, and under ground; all surface, underground, or elevated railroads, including the value of all franchises, rights, or permission to construct, maintain, or operate the same in, under, above, on, or through streets, highways, or public places; all railroad structures, substructures and superstructures, tracks and the iron thereon; branches, switches, and other fixtures permitted or authorized to be made, laid, or placed in, upon, above, or under any public or private road, street, or ground; all mains, pipes, and tanks laid or placed in, upon, above, or under any public or private street or place for conducting [3] steam, heat, water, oil, electricity, *or any property, substance, or product capable of transportation or conveyance therein or that is protected thereby, including the value of all franchises, rights, authority, or permission to construct, maintain, or operate, in, under, above, upon, or through any streets, highways, or public places, any mains, pipes, tanks, conduits, or wires, with their appurtenances, for conducting water, steam, heat, light, power, gas, oil, or other, substance, or electricity for telegraphic, telephonic, or other purposes; all trees and underwood growing upon land, and all mines, minerals, quarries, and fossils in and under the same, except mines belonging to the state. A franchise, right, authority, or permission specified in this subdivision shall, for the purpose of taxation, be known as a 'special franchise.' A special franchise shall be deemed to include the value of the tangible property of a person, copartnership, association, or corporation situated in, upon, under, or above any street, highway, public place, or public waters in connection with the special franchise. The tangible property so included shall be taxed as a part of the special franchise. No property of a municipal corporation shall be subject to a special franchise tax."

The portions in italics are the new matter introduced by the amendment. Other sections were added to the tax law, of which § 46 is as follows:

"§ 46. Deduction from special franchise tax for local purposes.—If, when the tax assessed on any special franchise is due and payable under the provisions of law applicable to the city, town, or village in which the tangible property is located, it shall appear that the person, copartnership, association, or corporation affected has paid to such city, town, or village for its exclusive use within the next preceding year, under any agreement therefor, or under any statute requiring the same, any sum based upon a percentage of gross earnings, or any other income, or any license fee, or any sum of money on account of such special franchise, granted to or possessed by such person, copartnership, association, or corporation, which payment was in the nature of a tax, all amounts so paid for *the exclusive use [4] of such city, town, or village, except money paid or expended for paving or repairing of pavement of any street, highway, or public place, shall be deducted from any tax based on the assessment made by the state board of tax commissioners for city, town, or village purposes, but not otherwise; and the remainder shall be the tax on such special franchise payable for city, town, or village purposes. The chamberlain or treasurer of a city, the treasurer of a village, the supervisor of a town, or other officer to whom any sum is paid for which a person, copartnership, association, or corporation is entitled to credit as provided in this section, shall, not less than five nor more than twenty days before a tax on a special franchise is payable, make and deliver to the collector or receiver of taxes or other officer authorized to receive taxes for such city, town, or village, his certificate showing the several amounts which have been paid during the year ending on the day of the date of the certificate. On the receipt of such certificate the collector, receiver, or other officer shall immediately credit on the tax roll to the person, copartnership, association, or corporation affected the amount stated in such certificate, on any tax levied against any person, copartnership, association, or corporation on an assessment of a special franchise for city, town, or village purposes only, but no credit shall be given on account of such payment or certificate in any other year, nor for a greater sum than the amount of the special franchise tax for city, town, or village purposes, for the current year; and he shall collect and receive the balance, if any, of such tax, as required by law."

Other sections provide the machinery for assessment. This assessment was to be made by the state board of tax commissioners, and one section authorized certiorari to review their proceedings.

Under this law an assessment was made of the franchises belonging to the plaintiff in error, a corporation created by the consolidation of several corporations, having franchises for the maintenance and opera-
[5] tion of street railroads in the city *of New York. A certiorari to review this assessment was finally decided by the court of appeals of the state, which, on April 28, 1903 (174 N. Y. 417, 63 L. R. A. 884, 67 N. E. 69), sustained the assessment, and remanded the case to the special term of the supreme court, by which court a final judgment was entered, June 22, 1903. Thereupon this writ of error was sued out. Plaintiff in error makes three assignments of error:

"I. Error in declining to hold that the act of the legislature of the state of New York, approved May 26th, 1899 (chap. 712, Laws 1899), entitled 'An Act to Amend the Tax Law in Relation to the Taxation of Public Franchises as Real Property,' in so far as it authorizes the assessment imposed by the state board of tax commissioners on March 20, 1900, upon the franchises of the [plaintiff in error] relator above named, deprives said relator of its property without due process of law, in contravention of the 14th Amendment of the Constitution of the United States.

"II. Error in declining to hold that said legislative enactment, in so far as it authorizes the said assessment denies to said relator the equal protection of the laws, in contravention of the 14th Amendment to the Constitution of the United States.

"III. Error in declining to hold that said legislative enactment, in so far as it authorizes the said assessment, impairs the obligations of contracts, in contravention of § 10, article 1, of the Constitution of the United States."

Prior to 1874 the legislature of New York made direct grants of franchises, rights, or privileges to use the streets of the city of New York. In that year the following amendment to the Constitution was adopted (Constitution 1846, as amended, art. 3, § 18):

"The legislature shall not pass a private or local bill in any of the following cases: . . .

"Granting to any corporation, association, or individual the right to lay down railroad tracks. . . .

"But no law shall authorize the construc-[6] tion or operation *of a street railroad except upon the condition that the consent of the owners of one half in value of the property bounded on, and the consent also of the local authorities having the control of, that portion of a street or highway upon which it is proposed to construct or operate such railroad, be first obtained, or, in case the consent of such property owners cannot be obtained, the general term of the supreme court, in the district in which it is proposed to be constructed, may, upon application, appoint three commissioners, who shall determine, after a hearing of all parties interested, whether such railroad ought to be constructed or operated, and their determination, confirmed by the court, may be taken in lieu of the consent of the property owners."

In 1884 an act was passed (Laws 1884, chap. 252, p. 309) giving to the local authorities power to grant franchises for street railroads. This act provided:

"Sec. 7. The local authorities of any incorporated city or village to whom application, under the provisions of this act, may be made for consent to the construction, maintenance, use, operation, or extension of a street surface railroad upon any street, road, avenue, or highway, may, at their option, provide for the sale of and sell at public auction the franchise, subject to all the provisions of this act, to so construct, maintain, use, operate, or extend such street surface railway. . . .

"Sec. 8. Every corporation incorporated under, or constructing or operating a railroad constructed or extended under, the provisions of this act, within the cities of the state having a population of two hundred and fifty thousand or more, as aforesaid, shall, for and during the first five years after the commencement of the operation of any portion of its railroad, annually, on the 1st day of November, pay into the treasury of said respective cities in which its road is located to the credit of the sinking fund thereof, 3 per cent of its gross receipts for and during the year ending the next preceding 30th day of September, and after the expiration of *said five [7] years make a like annual payment into the treasury of said respective cities for the credit of said sinking funds, of 5 per cent instead of 3 per cent of said gross receipts: Provided, however, That every corporation now existing and operating a street-surface railroad which shall extend its tracks or construct branches therefrom, and operate such extensions or branches under the provisions of this act, or the corporation operating such branches or extensions, shall pay such percentages as aforesaid only upon such portions of its gross receipts as shall bear the same proportion to the whole value thereof as the length of such extension and branches shall bear to the entire length of its tracks."

"Sec. 4. The consent of the local authorities shall, in all cases, be applied for in writing, and when granted shall be upon the express condition that the provisions of this act pertinent thereto shall be complied with, and shall be filed in the office of the county clerk of the county in which said railroad is located."

In 1886 an act amending a prior act of the same year was passed (Laws 1886, chap. 642, p. 919), which contained the following terms:

"Sec. 1. The local authorities of any incorporated city or village, to whom application may be made for consent to the construction, maintenance, use, operation, or extension of a street railroad, or a railroad or railway for the transportation of passengers, mails, or freight, over, upon, under, or through any of the streets, roads, avenues, parks, or public places in such city or village, must provide, as a condition of the said consent to the use of said street, road, avenue, park, or public place, that the right, franchise, and privilege of using the said street, road, avenue, park, or public place shall be sold at public auction to the bidder who will agree to give the largest percentage per annum of the gross receipts of said company or corporation, with adequate security, as hereinafter provided, for the fulfilment of said agreement, and for the commencement and completion of such [8] road according to the *plan or plans, and on the route or routes, fixed for its construction, within the time or times hereinafter designated and prescribed therefor; but this agreement shall not release any such road from the percentages required to be paid by chapter 252 of the Laws of 1884. The legislature expressly reserves the right to regulate and reduce the rate of fare on such railroad or railway. . . .

"And in the event of the failure or refusal of the party or corporation operating or using the railroad to be constructed as aforesaid, to pay the rental or percentage of gross earnings agreed upon, then, upon notice to the said party or corporation,—of not less than sixty days,—the said consent and right to operate such railroad may be declared forfeited, and the same may be resold to the highest bidder in the manner above provided."

The special acts passed before the amendment of 1874, which are claimed to constitute contracts, the obligations of which are impaired by this tax legislation, are found, first, in chap. 625 of the Laws of 1868, which granted to certain persons the right to construct, maintain, and operate and use a street railroad, with a provision that "the said persons, or their assigns, shall pay to the sinking fund commissioners of the city of New York the sum of $1,000 per annum, to be applied by them in the same manner as moneys received on account of rentals and leases;" second, in chap. 19 of the Laws of 1871, which, granting the privilege of occupying certain streets with street railroad tracks, provided that the company should "make compensation to the mayor, aldermen, and commonalty of said city of New York for the value of the rights and privileges herein granted or authorized," and also prescribed the mode of ascertaining that compensation by three commissioners, whose decision should be final and conclusive as to the company and the mayor, aldermen, and commonalty of said city, adding "the amount so fixed and determined shall *be paid to the commissioners of the [9] sinking fund of said city, by the said company, within thirty days after the same becomes payable, according to the decision aforesaid, and applied to the reduction of the debt of said city;" third, in chap. 508 of the Laws of 1874, which granted the right to "construct, operate, maintain, and use railways" in certain streets in the city of New York, and provided that "the said persons, or their assigns, shall annually, on the first day of November, pay into the treasury of the city of New York 1 per cent of the gross receipts of the road herein provided for, the amount of which gross receipts shall be determined by the sworn statement of the president and treasurer of said railway, but subject to the inspection of its books by the comptroller of the city of New York."

Subsequent to the law of 1884, above referred to, fifteen other franchises now belonging to the relator were granted by the common council of the city of New York. Most of them provided for annual payment to the city of New York of either a fixed amount or a fixed percentage, varying from 2 to 8 per cent of the gross earnings.

Mr. William D. Guthrie argued the cause and filed a brief for plaintiff in error:

There is now presented to the court for interpretation a long series of contracts entered into by the city of New York with the plaintiffs in error or their predecessors, under direct authority of the legislature, which specifically fix the amount to be annually paid for the special franchises now sought to be further taxed, and which contracts have been fully performed by the railway companies. Under the settled law of the state, these contracts constitute irrevocable agreements, which the legislature itself cannot annul, even under the reserved power to alter or amend charters.

People v. O'Brien, 111 N. Y. 1, 2 L. R. A. 255, 7 Am. St. Rep. 684, 18 N. E. 692.

And it has also long been the settled law of the state, in the light of which the agreements clearly were made, that an ordinance duly accepted constitutes a contract, and that, if it provides for a fixed tax, such as a license fee, the amount thereof cannot be increased by the city without impairing the obligation of the contract, although the ordinance may not have stipulated that the particular tax provided for should not be increased.

New York v. Second Ave. R. Co. 32 N. Y. 261; New York v. Third Ave. R. Co. 33 N. Y. 42.

These two cases established the doctrine in New York that a city could not exact additional compensation or payments by subsequent ordinance beyond what was reserved or stipulated for at the time, without violating the contract rights of the grantee of a franchise; and in this respect the cases have not been overruled in that state, and have been frequently cited in other jurisdictions.

Stein v. Mobile, 49 Ala. 362, 20 Am. Rep. 283; Los Angeles v. Los Angeles City Water Co. 61 Cal. 65.

If the legislature had itself granted the franchise by a statute providing that the grant was upon condition that the grantee should pay a fixed amount per annum or a fixed percentage in consideration of the grant, and had required the express acceptance by the grantee of such terms and conditions, no one for a moment would think of suggesting that the statute did not evidence and constitute a valid and binding contract as between the grantee and the state, or that the contract was not protected against impairment, by the Constitution of the United States.

Langdon v. New York, 93 N. Y. 129.

It is, of course, elementary that what is implied is as much a part of a contract or statute as what is expressed; and therefore that whatever by correct legal reasoning is fairly contemplated by the parties, and fairly within the obligation assumed on the one side or the other, is as binding and effectual as if stated in express language.

United States v. Babbit, 1 Black, 55, 61, 17 L. ed. 94; Jones v. Kent, 80 N. Y. 585.

Indeed, it is a cardinal rule, in drafting contracts and statutes, not to express what is implied in law. Expressio eorum quæ tacite insunt nihil operatur.

Broom, Legal Maxims, 8th Am. ed. p. 669.

The expression of what is implied in law is denominated by Lord Bacon clausula inutilis.

See also 2 Parsons, Contr. 9th ed. *514.

The general rule undoubtedly is that contracts with states or municipalities are so to be construed that an exemption from future taxation or regulation of rates is not to be implied unless in reason necessary to give effect to the agreement, or, as it has been authoritatively stated, "unless within the express letter or the necessary scope of the exempting clause."

Ford v. Delta & P. Land Co. 164 U. S. 662, 666, 41 L. ed. 590, 592, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 230.

But if a contract specifically provides for a fixed tax or rate, is it not implied in law that such express stipulation is exclusive and covers the present and future as fully as if the contract expressly so recited? Has it ever been seriously intimated that, where a particular tax has been the subject-matter of a valid contract fixing it, such tax could be increased without impairing the contract? Has it ever been held that, where a charter provides for the right to collect an agreed and fixed amount of toll or rate, the legislature or city could modify that provision at will, and change the toll or rate?

The rule as to strict construction of charters arose in connection with grants, which were donations "flowing from the bounty of the Crown." But when the grant is upon valuable consideration, imposing pecuniary and other obligations upon the grantee, to which he is bound by a valid contract, good sense and justice require that the grant should be construed according to the rules of legal reasoning which govern all contracts, and which the experience and wisdom of generations have shown to be just as between man and man.

Charles River Bridge v. Warren Bridge, 11 Pet. 420, 597, 611, 9 L. ed. 773, 844, 849, dissenting opinion; Hyman v. Read, 13 Cal. 444; Richmond, F. & P. R. Co. v. Louisa R. Co. 13 How. 71, 86, 14 L. ed. 55, 62; Thompson v. People, 23 Wend. 537; Langdon v. New York, 93 N. Y. 129; Huidekoper v. Douglass, 3 Cranch, 1, 70, 71, 2 L. ed. 347, 369; Davis v. Gray, 16 Wall. 203, 232, 21 L. ed. 447, 457.

The mere fact that the original statute or contract does not call a fixed annual payment or exaction a tax can make no difference. The substance, and not the nomenclature, determines the legal nature of the payment to be made. If the statute in the present case had called the obligation a tax, it would not have constituted it such had its nature been otherwise. The name, in a word, is wholly immaterial.

People ex rel. Western U. Teleg. Co. v. Dolan, 126 N. Y. 166, 12 L. R. A. 251, 27 N. E. 269.

Nor does the fact that a specific sum or percentage is payable into the sinking fund of a city change its nature as a tax.

Pacific R. Co. v. Maguire, 20 Wall. 36, 44, 22 L. ed. 282, 286.

There can be no reasonable doubt that, according to common understanding, an annual sum paid or exacted for a franchise, right, or privilege, such as the right to use the streets of a city or the highways of a town, is essentially a tax, and that this is particularly true in the state of New York.

Heerwagen v. Crosstown Street R. Co. 179 N. Y. 99, 71 N. E. 729, 90 App. Div. 275, 86 N. Y. Supp. 218. See also State ex rel. Wyatt v. Ashbrook, 154 Mo. 375, 48 L. R. A. 265, 77 Am. St. Rep. 765, 55 S. W. 627.

The primary definition of a "toll" by Webster is:—"A tax paid for some liberty or privilege, particularly for the privilege of passing over a bridge or on a highway, or for that of vending goods in a fair, market, or the like."

This definition was quoted with approval by the New York court of appeals in the case of Pennsylvania Coal Co. v. Delaware & H. Canal Co. 3 Abb. App. Dec. 470.

So also in the Century Dictionary the primary meaning of "toll" is stated as "a tax paid, or duty imposed, for some use or privilege or other reasonable consideration."

See also Cooley, Taxn. 3d ed. pp. 110, 111; Cooley, Const. Lim. 7th ed. p. 713.

The payment imposed upon corporations, of a fixed annual percentage on their gross or net receipts or earnings, for the privilege of exercising franchises, is essentially a tax.

Maine v. Grand Trunk R. Co. 142 U. S. 217, 227, 35 L. ed. 994, 995, 3 Inters. Com. Rep. 807, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 121, 163; Union Bank v. State, 9 Yerg. 490; Atty. Gen. v. Bank of Charlotte, 57 N. C. (4 Jones, Eq.) 287.

The word "rental" appears for the first time in N. Y. Laws 1886, chap. 642, and is then used in the phrase, "rental or percentage of gross earnings agreed upon." Although, taken by itself, this phrase might indicate that the legislature was expressing alternative and equivalent senses of the same thing, nevertheless, the different terms undoubtedly referred to different things, in view of the fact that they had been treated as such in all the legislation, and are still treated as distinct and separate. "Or" in such a case frequently means "and."

United States v. Fisk, 3 Wall. 445, 447, 18 L. ed. 243, 244; People ex rel. Municipal Gas Co. v. Rice, 138 N. Y. 151, 33 N. E. 846.

The contemporaneous and subsequent practical interpretation by the executive department of the state, from Governor Cleveland in 1884 to Governor Roosevelt in 1899, by the legislature itself in the present statute, and by the highest court of the state in the Heerwagen Case, 179 N. Y. 99, 71 N. E. 729, most persuasively shows that it was the intent of the legislature to provide a tax, and nothing else, and that the payments are in fact existing taxes, as Governors Cleveland and Roosevelt called them, or "in the nature of a tax," as the legislature itself denominated them.

As to the force of the legislative characterization of such payments as "in the nature of a tax" see—

Alexander v. Alexandria, 5 Cranch, 1, 8, 3 L. ed. 19, 21; United States v. Freeman, 3 How. 556, 564, 11 L. ed. 724, 727; Stockdale v. Atlantic Ins. Co. 20 Wall. 323, 331, 22 L. ed. 348, 351; Cope v. Cope, 137 U. S. 682, 688, 34 L. ed. 832, 834, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 222; People ex rel. Buckley v. Benton, 29 N. Y. 534; Smith v. People, 47 N. Y. 330; People ex rel. Westchester F. Ins. Co. v. Davenport, 91 N. Y. 574.

The contemporaneous, practical interpretation by Governor Cleveland in 1884, in the light of which the contracts were made, supplemented, as it is, by the declarations of Governor Roosevelt in 1899, is likewise entitled to almost the force of law.

Citizens' Bank v. Parker, 192 U. S. 73, 81, 48 L. ed. 346, 354, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 181; Potter v. Hall, 189 U. S. 292, 298, 300, 47 L. ed. 817, 820, 821, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 545; Southern P. R. Co. v. Bell, 183 U. S. 675, 682, 685, 46 L. ed. 383, 387, 388, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 232; Hewitt v. Schultz, 180 U. S. 139, 156, 157, 45 L. ed. 463, 472, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 309; United States v. Pugh, 99 U. S. 265, 269, 25 L. ed. 322, 323. See also Easton v. Pickersgill, 55 N. Y. 310; People ex rel. Williams v. Dayton, 55 N. Y. 367; Power v. Athens, 99 N. Y. 592, 2 N. E. 609; Re Washington Street Asylum R. Co. 115 N. Y. 442, 22 N. E. 356; Jennings v. Van Schaick, 108 N. Y. 530, 2 Am. St. Rep. 459, 15 N. E. 424; Babbage v. Powers, 130 N. Y. 281, 14 L. R. A. 398, 29 N. E. 132; Lewis's Sutherland Stat. Constr. § 474.

The true inquiry in all such cases as those at bar is whether the language used would justify the opinion that the power of taxation was in the view of either of the parties, and that an exemption of it was intended, though not expressed.

New Jersey v. Yard, 95 U. S. 104, 115, 116, 24 L. ed. 352, 354, 355; Providence Bank v. Billings, 4 Pet. 514, 560, 7 L. ed. 939, 955.

A franchise from the legislature cannot subsequently be taxed if a price has been paid for it, which the legislature has accepted.

Gordon v. Appeal Tax Court, 3 How. 133, 11 L. ed. 529.

Although this case has been distinguished and limited, it has never been criticized upon the points now involved.

West River Bridge Co. v. Dix, 6 How. 507, 542, 12 L. ed. 535, 549; Planters' Bank v. Sharp, 6 How. 301, 332, 12 L. ed. 447, 460;

Ohio L. Ins. & T. Co. v. Debolt, 16 How. 416, 429, 14 L. ed. 997, 1002; Home of the Friendless v. Rouse, 8 Wall. 430, 438, 19 L. ed. 495, 498; East Saginaw Salt Mfg. Co. v. East Saginaw, 13 Wall. 373, 376, 20 L. ed. 611, 613; Erie R. Co. v. Pennsylvania, 21 Wall. 492, 498, 22 L. ed. 595, 598; New Orleans Gaslight Co. v. Louisiana Light & H. P. Mfg. Co. 115 U. S. 650, 664, 665, 29 L. ed. 516, 521, 522, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 252; Freeport Water Co. v. Freeport, 180 U. S. 587, 608, 45 L. ed. 679, 692, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 493, dissenting opinion; Shelby County v. Union & Planters' Bank, 161 U. S. 149, 159, 40 L. ed. 650, 655, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 558; Pearsall v. Great Northern R. Co. 161 U. S. 646, 662, 40 L. ed. 838, 843, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 705; Citizens' Bank v. Parker, 192 U. S. 73, 90, 48 L. ed. 346, 358, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 181, dissenting opinion; Grand Lodge, F. & A. M. v. New Orleans, 166 U. S. 143, 146, 41 L. ed. 951, 952, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 523.

Where a fixed and specific tax has been stipulated for and agreed upon, that particular tax may not be increased by subsequent legislation, although such particular tax does not prevent the imposition of other taxes.

Union Bank v. State, 9 Yerg. 490. See also Atty. Gen. v. Bank of Charlotte, 57 N. C. (4 Jones, Eq.) 287; New Orleans v. Southern Bank, 11 La. Ann. 41; State v. Southern Bank, 23 La. Ann. 271; New Orleans v. People's Bank, 32 La. Ann. 82; Penrose v. Chaffraix, 106 La. 250, 30 So. 718; Detroit Citizens' Street R. Co. v. Detroit, 125 Mich. 673, 84 Am. St. Rep. 589, 85 N. W. 96, 86 N. W. 809; Los Angeles v. Los Angeles City Water Co. 61 Cal. 65, 177 U. S. 558, 577, 578, 44 L. ed. 886, 895, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 736; St. Louis v. Western U. Teleg. Co. 63 Fed. 68; Los Angeles v. Southern P. R. Co. 67 Cal. 433, 7 Pac. 819; Sebastian v. Covington & C. Bridge Co. 21 Ohio St. 451; Covington & C. Bridge Co. v. Mayer, 31 Ohio St. 317.

The closest analogy exists between the two governmental powers or functions of taxation and regulation of rates and tolls. The reasoning and rules of construction and the principles of law and public policy which should be applied have been declared to be the same. In both cases nothing is to be presumed in limitation or restriction of legislative power, except what is expressed or implied.

Stanislaus County v. San Joaquin & K. River Canal & Irrig. Co. 192 U. S. 201, 211, 48 L. ed. 406, 412, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 241; Covington & L. Turnp. Road Co. v. Sandford, 164 U. S. 578, 587, 41 L. ed. 560, 563, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 198; Stone v. Farmers' Loan & T. Co. 116 U. S. 307, 325, 29 L. ed. 636, 642, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 334, 388, 1191; Charles River Bridge v. Warren Bridge, 11 Pet. 420, 548, 9 L. ed. 773, 824.

But in both cases the elementary rule of legal reasoning, that what is implied is as much a part of a contract or statute as what is actually expressed, has never been disregarded.

Wilson County v. Third Nat. Bank, 103 U. S. 770, 778, 26 L. ed. 488, 491; Wood County v. Lackawana Iron & Coal Co. 93 U. S. 619, 624, 23 L. ed. 989, 991; First Nat. Bank v. Graham, 100 U. S. 699, 703, 25 L. ed. 750, 752; Pine Grove Twp. v. Talcott, 19 Wall. 666, 676, 22 L. ed. 227, 233; Western U. Teleg. Co. v. Eyser, 19 Wall. 419, 427, 22 L. ed. 43, 44; Davis v. Gray, 16 Wall. 203, 223, 21 L. ed. 447, 454; Lynde v. Winnebago County, 16 Wall. 6, 13, 21 L. ed. 272, 274; United States v. Hodson, 10 Wall. 395, 406, 19 L. ed. 937, 939; Butz v. Muscatine (United States ex rel. Butz v. Muscatine) 8 Wall. 575, 581, 19 L. ed. 490, 493; Croxall v. Shererd (Doe ex dem. Croxall v. Sherrerd) 5 Wall. 268, 283, 18 L. ed. 572, 578; United States v. Babbit, 1 Black, 55, 61, 17 L. ed. 94, 96; Rogers v. Kneeland, 10 Wend. 219.

Thus it is settled by the adjudications of this court that a grant of power to a corporation to fix or collect tolls or rates does not of itself imply any exclusion of the power of the legislature thereafter to declare what shall be prima facie reasonable compensation for the services to be rendered; but it has never been intimated by this court that, where the charter of a corporation, or the agreement between a corporation and the state or a municipality, has expressly provided for a fixed rate of toll or charge, such rate could be varied by the legislature or municipality without impairing the obligation of the contract.

See Reagan v. Farmers' Loan & T. Co. 154 U. S. 362, 393, 38 L. ed. 1014, 1022, 4 Inters. Com. Rep. 560, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1047; Detroit v. Detroit Citizens' Street R. Co. 184 U. S. 368, 46 L. ed. 592, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 410; Cleveland v. Cleveland City R. Co. 194 U. S. 517, 526, 48 L. ed. 1102, 1104, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 756; Cleveland v. Cleveland Electric R. Co. 194 U. S. 538, 48 L. ed. 1109, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 764; Chicago v. Sheldon, 9 Wall. 50, 19 L. ed. 594. To the same effect see Western Paving & Supply Co. v. Citizens' Street R. Co. 128 Ind. 525, 10 L. R. A. 770, 25 Am. St. Rep. 462, 26 N. E. 188, 28 N. E. 88; State ex rel. Kansas v. Corrigan Consol. Street R. Co. 85 Mo. 263, 55 Am. Rep. 361; Billings v. Chicago, 167 Ill. 340, 47 N. E. 731; West Chicago Street R. Co. v. Chicago, 178 Ill. 344, 53 N. E. 112; Coast Line R. Co. v. Savannah, 30 Fed. 646; Pensacola v. Northrup, 14 C. C. A. 59, 30 U. S. App. 762, 66 Fed. 689.

The legislature cannot in one breath insist that the terms of its grant shall be performed by the grantee according to the letter, and in another breath say that it may, under the reserved power, release itself from any reciprocal duty, and impose an additional tax while holding to the contract.

Stearns v. Minnesota, 179 U. S. 223, 45 L. ed. 162, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 73.

This court will determine for itself the scope and effect and true meaning of any contract the legislature has seen fit to make in consideration of the grant of rights and privileges.

Douglas v. Kentucky, 168 U. S. 488, 500, 501, 42 L. ed. 553, 557, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 199; Jefferson Branch Bank v. Skelly, 1 Black, 436, 443, 17 L. ed. 173, 177; Maine C. R. Co. v. Maine, 96 U. S. 499, 510, 511, 24 L. ed. 836, 840, 841; New Jersey v. Yard, 95 U. S. 104, 111, 113, 24 L. ed. 352, 353, 354; McCullough v. Virginia, 172 U. S. 102, 109, 43 L. ed. 382, 384, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 134; Shelby County v. Union & Planters' Bank, 161 U. S. 149, 151, 40 L. ed. 650, 652, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 558; Houston & T. C. R. Co. v. Texas, 177 U. S. 66, 67, 44 L. ed. 673, 674, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 545.

The reserved power to alter, amend, or repeal does not permit or sanction the destruction of vested property rights.

People v. O'Brien, 111 N. Y. 1, 36, 2 L. R. A. 255, 7 Am. St. Rep. 684, 18 N. E. 692; Sinking Fund Cases, 99 U. S. 700, 25 L. ed. 496; Woodward v. Central Vermont R. Co. 180 Mass. 599, 62 N. E. 1051; Com. v. Essex Co. 13 Gray, 239; New York v. Twenty-third Street R. Co. 113 N. Y. 311, 21 N. E. 60.

The present statute seeks to add to the obligations assumed in the various contracts, and at the same time expressly to preserve all the burdens of those contracts. As upheld by the court below, the act is nothing but an arbitrary exercise of power, and comes within the reasoning and the condemnation of the case of Stearns v. Minnesota, 179 U. S. 223, 45 L. ed. 162, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 73.

And see Duluth & I. R. R. Co. v. St. Louis County, 179 U. S. 302, 305, 45 L. ed. 201, 203, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 124; San Mateo County v. Southern P. R. Co. 7 Sawy. 517, 13 Fed. 145; Railroad Tax Case, 8 Sawy. 238, 13 Fed. 722; Santa Clara County v. Southern P. R. Co. 9 Sawy. 165, 18 Fed. 385; San Mateo County v. Southern P. R. Co. 116 U. S. 138, 29 L. ed. 589, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 317; Santa Clara County v. Southern P. R. Co. 118 U. S. 394, 30 L. ed. 118, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1132. See also, to the same effect, Russell v. Croy, 164 Mo. 69, 63 S. W. 849; State v. Mitchell, 97 Me. 66, 94 Am. St. Rep. 481, 53 Atl. 887; State v. Shedroi, 75 Vt. 277, 63 L. R. A. 179, 98 Am. St. Rep. 825, 54 Atl. 1081; State v. Hoyt, 71 Vt. 59, 42 Atl. 973; Dundee Mortg. Trust Invest. Co. v. School Dist. No. 1, 19 Fed. 359; Fraser v. McConway & T. Co. 82 Fed. 257; Railroad & Teleph. Cos. v. Board of Equalizers, 85 Fed. 302; Taylor v. Louisville & N. R. Co. 31 C. C. A. 537, 60 U. S. App. 166, 88 Fed. 350, 172 U. S. 647, 43 L. ed. 1182, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 887; Nashville, C. & St. L. R. Co. v. Taylor, 86 Fed. 168; Taylor v. Nashville, C. & St. L. R. Co. 44 L. ed. 1219; Louisville Trust Co. v. Stone, 46 C. C. A. 299, 107 Fed. 305.

If it should be argued that it is proper to deduct the amount of these contract obligations from the tax laid upon the value of the contract rights, for reasons which would sustain deductions of mortgage indebtedness from assessments of real estate for taxation, the answer is obvious. The present deductions are not made from the assessments; on the contrary, under the scheme provided by the present statute, the franchise is to be assessed as real estate; that is to say, not subject to diminution for charges thereon (Heerwagen v. Crosstown Street R. Co. 179 N. Y. 99, 71 N. E. 729); and, further, under the laws of New York, such obligations are deductible from the personal assessment (People ex rel. Cornell S. B. Co. v. Dederick, 161 N. Y. 195, 55 N. E. 927; People ex rel. Manhattan R. Co. v. Barker, 165 N. Y. 305, 59 N. E. 151).

It would be a strange doctrine, if the mere manner or method in which legislation reaches a party could avoid the constitutional guaranty against the impairment of the obligation of contracts, which the Constitution intends shall not be impaired in any form or degree or manner, upon any pretext whatever.

Brown v. Maryland, 12 Wheat. 419, 444, 6 L. ed. 678, 687.

When the highest court of a state has adjudicated upon the validity and legal scope and effect of a contract, particularly that of a municipality, and subsequent contracts are made on the faith of, and enormous sums are invested in reliance upon, such judicial interpretation, every principle of fairness and justice requires that the contracts shall be construed and given legal effect according to the law as it was authoritatively declared to be at the time the contracts were entered into.

Olcott v. Fond du Lac County, 16 Wall. 678, 690, 21 L. ed. 382, 386; Gelpcke v. Dubuque, 1 Wall. 175, 206, 17 L. ed. 520, 525; Taylor v. Ypsilanti, 105 U. S. 60, 71, 26 L. ed. 1008, 1012; Douglass v. Pike County, 101 U. S. 677, 686, 25 L. ed. 968, 971; New Buffalo Twp. v. Cambria Iron Co. 105 U. S. 73, 75, 26 L. ed. 1024, 1025; Stanly County

v. Coler, 190 U. S. 437, 445, 47 L. ed. 1126, 1132, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 811; Burgess v. Seligman, 107 U. S. 20, 33, 27 L. ed. 359, 365, 2 Sup. Ct. Rep. 10; Warburton v. White, 176 U. S. 484, 495, 44 L. ed. 555, 559, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 404; Los Angeles v. Los Angeles City Water Co. 177 U. S. 558, 575, 44 L. ed. 886, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 736; Muhlker v. New York & H. R. Co. 197 U. S. 544, 49 L. ed. 872, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 522; Lyon v. Richmond, 2 Johns. Ch. 51.

When we speak of obligations or covenants implied in fact, such as the obligation in the cases at bar not to increase the fixed or agreed franchise payments, we are not reading into the contract something that the parties did not contemplate and intend, nor are we adding to the understanding of the parties.

15 Am. & Eng. Enc. Law, 2d ed. 1078; Ogden v. Saunders, 12 Wheat. 213, 341, 342, 6 L. ed. 606, 650.

The exaction of a percentage of the gross receipts was a tax, and nothing else; that is, an imposition or exaction for the supply of the public treasury,—"a charge, a pecuniary burden, for the support of government."

United States v. Baltimore & O. R. Co. 17 Wall. 322, 326, 21 L. ed. 597, 599.

The mere fact that the words "compensation" and "rental" were used by the legislature in any of the acts in question does not in any way tend to change the nature of the payment.

People ex rel. Manhattan F. Ins. Co. v. Tax & A. Comrs. 76 N. Y. 64; 2 Tiedeman, State & Federal Control of Persons and Property, p. 619.

Under the reserved power to amend, alter, or repeal a charter, the legislature cannot nullify or impair the obligation of a contract between a corporation and a municipality or other third person.

People v. O'Brien, 111 N. Y. 1, 2 L. R. A. 255, 7 Am. St. Rep. 684, 18 N. E. 692; Lake Shore & M. S. R. Co. v. Smith, 173 U. S. 684, 690, 43 L. ed. 858, 861, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 565.

The legislature could not impose any new obligation on the owners of franchises granted by the city, without impairing the obligations of the several contracts.

Planters' Bank v. Sharp, 6 How. 301, 327, 12 L. ed. 447, 458.

It is difficult to perceive any reason why grants of franchises by the state should be governed by any different rules than grants by a municipality, for in each case every element of contract fully exists.

City R. Co. v. Citizens' Street R. Co. 166 U. S. 557, 567, 41 L. ed. 1114, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 653.

The reasons which protect the grantee in the one case equally apply to the grantee in the other. The character of the obligation assumed and of the consideration to be paid is the same. The idea that the grants of a state are revocable has long since been exploded.

Fletcher v. Peck, 6 Cranch, 87, 3 L. ed. 162; Langdon v. New York, 93 N. Y. 129.

It is further argued by defendant that, if there be the slightest doubt as to an exemption from taxation, or as to the validity of a contract for a fixed amount of tax, the case is at once to be resolved against the grantees of these franchises. The old idea seems again presented that, because the state court has overruled the contention of the plaintiffs in error as to the legal effect of the contract, this court must surrender its judgment, abide by the view of the state court, and decide against the grantee. That no such abdication of judicial duty is permissible has been often recognized.

Citizens' Bank v. Parker, 192 U. S. 73, 85, 48 L. ed. 346, 356, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 181; Freeport Water Co. v. Freeport, 180 U. S. 587, 610, 45 L. ed. 679, 693, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 493.

There is also to be found in defendant's argument the familiar plea as to the necessity of preserving the taxing power, etc., etc., as if there were any danger to the taxing power in the cases at bar, where the plaintiffs in error and those similarly situated are now paying hundreds of thousands of dollars annually in taxes, not only on their franchises, but on everything else.

Murray v. Charleston, 96 U. S. 432, 444, 448, 449, 24 L. ed. 760, 762, 764.

Whatever propriety and justice there may have been in drawing under the general tax laws of the state the numerous franchises which had been granted for no consideration, and the owners of which had never contributed to the taxes of the state, it was fundamentally unfair and unjust to disregard the contract rights of those who had for years been paying enormous taxes on their franchises, and, while preserving to the letter the burden assumed, refuse to recognize any reciprocal obligation to abide by contracts entered into upon the plighted faith of the city and state.

Stearns v. Minnesota, 179 U. S. 223, 261, 45 L. ed. 162, 180, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 73; Duluth & I. R. R. Co. v. St. Louis County, 179 U. S. 302, 305, 45 L. ed. 201, 203, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 124.

Mr. Elihu Root also argued the cause for plaintiff in error. For his contentions see his brief as reported in New York ex rel. Twenty-third Street R. Co. v. State Bd. of Tax Comrs. post, 85.

Messrs. Julius M. Mayer and Louis Marshall argued the cause and filed a brief for defendant in error:

Nothing was more remote from the intention of the legislature and of the municipality than to confer immunity from taxation on the grantees of the several franchises upon which the relator has been assessed with respect to the property and property rights granted.

The payments which were required of the grantees were not in the nature of taxation in any sense of the word. They were compensation for the rights conferred, and nothing more. In some of the statutes the payment is referred to as in the nature of a payment of a rental; in others as "compensation;" and while the acts appearing as appendices, under which a large number of the franchises are derived, do not denominate the annual payments required to be made, it is evident that the payment is required as a consideration for the franchise acquired through the action of the local authorities, or purchased at public auction by the successful bidder.

Re New York, 11 Johns. 80; Roosevelt Hospital v. New York, 84 N. Y. 112; Citizens' Sav. & L. Asso. v. Topeka, 20 Wall. 664, 22 L. ed. 461; Lane County v. Oregon, 7 Wall. 80, 19 L. ed. 105; St. Louis v. Western U. Telcg. Co. 148 U. S. 92, 37 L. ed. 380, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 485.

It is clear that the legislature did not intend to deal with the subject of taxation, or of exemption from taxation. At all events it cannot be said that an intention to deal with those subjects existed beyond question, and unless the case is thus clear, there can be no implication of a contract.

Providence Bank v. Billings, 4 Pet. 514, 7 L. ed. 939; Farrington v. Tennessee, 95 U. S. 686, 24 L. ed. 560; Vicksburg R. Co. v. Dennis, 116 U. S. 668, 29 L. ed. 771, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 625; Stone v. Farmers Loan & T. Co. 116 U. S. 328, 29 L. ed. 643, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 334, 388, 1191; Wells v. Savannah, 181 U. S. 539, 45 L. ed. 991, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 697; Skaneateles Water Works Co. v. Skaneateles, 184 U. S. 363, 46 L. ed. 590, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 400; Knoxville Water Co. v. Knoxville, 189 U. S. 436, 47 L. ed. 890, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 531.

The amount of tax which the relators are required to pay on their special franchises is reduced by the amount of payments made by them in the nature of a tax. It does not, therefore, lie with them to attack for inequality a statute under which they derive a benefit.

Tyler v. Registration Judges, 179 U. S. 405, 45 L. ed. 252, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 206; Greenwood v. Union Freight R. Co. 105 U. S. 23, 26 L. ed. 965.

The statute creates no inequality. On the contrary, it seeks to place the owners of special franchises on an equal footing. Those who have made no payments in the nature of a tax are required to pay a tax based on the full amount of their assessment. Those who have made such payments receive credit therefor. In other words, there is an equitable classification of the persons or corporations who are subjected to the special franchise tax, similar to that which was recognized as valid in Magoun v. Illinois Trust & Sav. Bank, 170 U. S. 283, 42 L. ed. 1037, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 594; Orr v. Gilman, 183 U. S. 278, 46 L. ed. 196, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 213.

In Bell's Gap R. Co. v. Pennsylvania, 134 U. S. 232, 33 L. ed. 892, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 533, Mr. Justice Bradley recognized the right to allow deductions for indebtedness, as within the range of the state's power to regulate taxation.

Mr. Justice Brewer delivered the opinion of the court:

The decision of the court of appeals settles that there is nothing in the law or the proceedings in this case in conflict with the Constitution of that state. It is not contended by the plaintiff in error that there is any constitutional objection to the taxation of franchises. The right to subject them to a share in the burden of supporting the government is conceded.

The main contention is that this tax legislation impairs the obligation of contracts. It must be borne in mind that presumptively all property within the territorial limits of a state is subject to its taxing power. Whoever insists that any particular property is not so subject has the burden of proof, and must make it entirely clear that, by contract or otherwise, the *property is [36] beyond its reach. In Providence Bank v. Billings, 4 Pet. 514, 7 L. ed. 939, Mr. Chief Justice Marshall, in delivering the opinion of the court, said (p. 561, L. ed. p. 955):

"That the taxing power is of vital importance, that it is essential to the existence of government, are truths which it cannot be necessary to reaffirm. They are acknowledged and asserted by all. It would seem that the relinquishment of such a power is never to be assumed. We will not say that a state may not relinquish it, that a consideration sufficiently valuable to induce a partial release of it may not exist; but, as the whole community is interested in retaining it undiminished, that community has a right to insist that its abandonment ought not to be presumed in a case in which the deliberate purpose of the state to abandon it does not appear."

In Vicksburg, S. & P. R. Co. v. Dennis,

116 U. S. 665, 29 L. ed. 770, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 625, Mr. Justice Gray cited many authorities, quoting the different phraseology in which, by the several writers of the opinions, the same rule was announced. In Wells v. Savannah, 181 U. S. 531, 45 L. ed. 986, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 697, the law was thus stated by Mr. Justice Peckham (p. 539, L. ed. p. 991, Sup. Ct. Rep. p. 700):

"The payment of taxes on account of property otherwise liable to taxation can only be avoided by clear proof of a valid contract of exemption from such payment; and the validity of such contract presupposes a good consideration therefor. If the property be, in its nature, taxable, the contract exempting it from taxation must, as we have said, be clearly proved. It will not be inferred from facts which do not lead irresistibly and necessarily to the existence of the contract. The facts proved must show either a contract expressed in terms, or else it must be implied from facts which leave no room for doubt that such was the intention of the parties, and that a valid consideration existed for the contract. If there be any doubt on these matters, the contract has not been proven, and the exemption does not exist."

In Chicago Theological Seminary v. Illinois, 188 U. S. 662, 47 L. ed. 641, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 386, the same Justice declared (p. 672, L. ed. p. 648, Sup. Ct. Rep. p. 387):

"The rule is that, in claims for exemp-[37] tion from taxation *under legislative authority, the exemption must be plainly and unmistakably granted; it cannot exist by implication only; a doubt is fatal to the claim."

See also Erie R. Co. v. Pennsylvania, 21 Wall. 492, 22 L. ed. 595; Wilmington & W. R. Co. v. Alsbrook, 146 U. S. 279, 36 L. ed. 972, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 72; Ford v. Delta & P. Land Co. 164 U. S. 662, 41 L. ed. 590, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 230.

This rule is akin to, if not part of, the broad proposition, now universally accepted, that in grants from the public nothing passes by implication. As said by Mr. Chief Justice Taney, in Charles River Bridge v. Warren Bridge, 11 Pet. 420, 549, 9 L. ed. 773, 824:

"The inquiry, then, is, Does the charter contain such a contract on the part of the state? Is there any such stipulation to be found in that instrument? It must be admitted on all hands that there is none,—no words that even relate to another bridge, or to the diminution of their tolls, or to the line of travel. If a contract on that subject can be gathered from the charter, it must be by implication, and cannot be found in the words used. Can such an agreement be implied? The rule of construction before stated is an answer to the question. In charters of this description no rights are taken from the public or given to the corporation beyond those which the words of the charter, by their natural and proper construction, purport to convey. There are no words which import such a contract as the plaintiffs in error contend for, and none can be implied."

Applying these well-established rules to the several contracts, it will be perceived that there was no express relinquishment of the right of taxation. The plaintiff in error must rely upon some implication, and not upon any direct stipulation. In each contract there was a grant of privileges, but the grant was specifically of privileges in respect to the construction, operation, and maintenance of a street railroad. These were all that, in terms, were granted. As consideration for this grant the grantees were to pay something, and such payment is nowhere said to be in lieu of or as an equivalent or substitute for taxes. All that can be extracted from the language used was a grant *of privileges and a pay-[38] ment therefor. Other words must be written into the contract before there can be found any relinquishment of the power of taxation.

In the well-considered opinion of the court of appeals in this case it was stated by Mr. Justice Vann:

"The franchises are grants which usually contain contracts, executed by the municipality, but executory as to the owner. They contain various conditions and stipulations to be observed by the holders of the privilege, such as payment of a license fee, of a gross sum down, of a specific sum each year, or a certain percentage of receipts, as a consideration, or 'in full satisfaction for the use of the streets.' There is no provision that the special franchise, or the property created by the grant, shall be exempt from taxation. . . .

"The condition upon which a franchise is granted is the purchase price of the grant, the payment of which in money, or by agreement to bear some burden, brought the property into existence, which thereupon became taxable at the will of the legislature, the same as land granted or leased by the state. There is no implied covenant that property sold by the state cannot be taxed by the state, which can even tax its own bonds, given to borrow money for its own use, unless they contain an express stipulation of exemption. The rule of strict construction applies to state grants, and unless there is an express stipulation not to tax, the right is reserved as an attribute of sovereignty. Special franchises were not taxed until, by the act of 1899, amending the tax law, they were added to the other taxable property of the state. This is all that the statute does, so far as the question now under consideration is concerned. No part of the grant is changed, no stipulation altered, no payment increased, and nothing exacted from the owner of the franchise that is not exacted from the owners of property generally. No blow is struck at the franchise, as such, for it remains with every right conferred in full force; but, as it is property, it is required to contribute its [39] ratable share, dependent *only upon value, toward the support of government."

It would not be doubted that, if a grant was of specific tangible property, like a tract of land, and the payment therefor was a gross sum, no implication of an exemption from taxation would arise. Whether the amount paid was large or small, greater or less than the real value, if the payment was distinctly the consideration of a grant, that which was granted would pass into the bulk of private property, and, like all other such property, be subject to taxation. Nor would this result be altered by the fact that the payment for the thing granted was to be made annually instead of by a single sum in gross. If it was real estate it would be equivalent to the conveyance of the tract subject to ground rent, and the grantee taking the title would hold it liable to taxation upon its value. If this be true in reference to a grant of tangible property, it is equally true in respect to a grant of a franchise, for a franchise, though intangible, is none the less property, and oftentimes property of great value. Indeed, growing out of the conditions of modern business, a large proportion of valuable property is to be found in intangible things like franchises. We had occasion to review this subject in Adams Exp. Co. v. Ohio, 166 U. S. 185, 41 L. ed. 965, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 604, where we said (pp. 218, 219, L. ed. pp. 976, 977, Sup. Ct. Rep. p. 605):

"In the complex civilization of to-day a large portion of the wealth of a community consists in intangible property, and there is nothing in the nature of things or in the limitations of the Federal Constitution which restrains a state from taxing at its real value such intangible property. . . . It matters not in what this intangible property consists,—whether privileges, corporate franchises, contracts, or obligations. It is enough that it is property which, though intangible, exists, which has value, produces income, and passes current in the markets of the world. To ignore this intangible property, or to hold that it is not subject to taxation at its accepted value, is to eliminate from the reach of the taxing power a large portion of the wealth of the country."

*In State Railroad Tax Cases, 92 U. S. [40] 575, 603, 23 L. ed. 663, 669, is this language by Mr. Justice Miller, speaking for the court:

"That the franchise, capital stock, business, and profits of all corporations are liable to taxation in the place where they do business, and by the state which creates them, admits of no dispute at this day. 'Nothing can be more certain in legal decisions,' says this court in Society for Savings v. Coite, 6 Wall. 607, 18 L. ed. 903, 'than that the privileges and franchises of a private corporation, and all trades and avocations by which the citizens acquire a livelihood, may be taxed by a state for the support of a state government.' State Freight Tax Case (Philadelphia & R. R. Co. v. Pennsylvania), 15 Wall. 232, 21 L. ed. 146; State Tax on Gross Receipts (Philadelphia & R. R. Co. v. Pennsylvania), 15 Wall. 284, 21 L. ed. 164."

It is urged that when the public grants a privilege on condition of the payment of an annual sum the contract implies that the public shall exact no larger amount for that privilege, that to impose a tax is simply increasing the price which the grantee is called upon to pay for the privilege, and Gordon v. Appeal Tax Court, 3 How. 133, 11 L. ed. 529, is relied upon as authority. It is true, in the opinion of the court, announced by Mr. Justice Wayne, is this language (p. 145, L. ed. p. 535):

"Such a contract is a limitation upon the taxing power of the legislature making it, and upon succeeding legislatures, to impose any further tax upon the franchise. But why, when bought, as it becomes property, may it not be taxed as land is taxed which has been bought from the state? was repeatedly asked in the course of the argument. The reason is, that everyone buys land, subject, in his own apprehension, to the great law of necessity, that we must contribute from it and all of our property something to maintain the state. But a franchise for banking, when bought, the price is paid for the use of the privilege whilst it lasts, and any tax upon it would substantially be an addition to the price."

But there was in that case an express exemption from taxation, in these words:

"'And be it enacted, that, upon any of the aforesaid banks accepting and complying with the terms and conditions of *this [41] act, the faith of the state is hereby pledged not to impose any further tax or burden upon them during the continuance of their charters under this act.'"

There being thus an express stipulation on the part of a state not to impose any further tax or burden, the question decided was really the extent of the exemption, and it was held to apply not merely to the franchise, but to the property of the bank. The statements of Mr. Justice Wayne were only by way of argument to support the conclusion that the exemption went beyond the franchise alone. Furthermore, that case has been repeatedly qualified and limited by subsequent decisions. In New Orleans City & Lake R. Co. v. New Orleans, 143 U. S. 192, 36 L. ed. 121, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 406, Mr. Justice Gray, speaking for the court, said (p. 195, L. ed. p. 122, Sup. Ct. Rep. p. 406):

"Exemption from taxation is never to be presumed. The legislature itself cannot be held to have intended to surrender the taxing power, unless its intention to do so has been declared in clear and unmistakable words. Vicksburg, S. & P. R. Co. v. Dennis, 116 U. S. 665, 29 L. ed. 770, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 625, and cases cited. Assuming, without deciding, that the city of New Orleans was authorized to exempt the New Orleans City Railroad Company from taxation under general laws of the state, the contract between them affords no evidence of an intention to do so. The franchise to build and run a street railway was as much subject to taxation as any other property. In Gordon v. Appeal Tax Court, 3 How. 133, 11 L. ed. 529, upon which the plaintiff in error much relied, the only point decided was that an act of the legislature continuing the charter of a bank, upon condition that the corporation should pay certain sums annually for public purposes, and declaring that, upon its accepting and complying with the provisions of the act, the faith of the state was pledged not to impose any further tax or burden upon the corporation during the continuance of the charter, exempted the stockholders from taxation on their stock; and so much of the opinion as might, taken by itself, seem to support this writ of error, has been often explained or disapproved. Piqua Branch of State Bank v. Knoop, 16 How. 369, 386, [42] 401, *402, 14 L. ed. 977, 984, 990, 991; New York v. Tax & A. Comrs. 4 Wall. 244, 259, 18 L. ed. 344, 350; Jefferson Branch Bank v. Skelly, 1 Black, 436, 446, 17 L. ed. 173, 178; Farrington v. Tennessee, 95 U. S. 679, 690, 694, 24 L. ed. 558, 561, 562; Stone v. Farmers' Loan & Trust Co. 116 U. S. 307, 328, 29 L. ed. 636, 643, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 334, 388, 1191. The case at bar cannot be distinguished from that of Memphis Gaslight Co. v. Taxing Dist., in which this court upheld a license tax upon a corporation which had acquired by its charter the privilege of erecting gas works and making and selling gas for fifty years; and, speaking by Mr. Justice Miller, said: 'The argument of counsel is that if no express contract against taxation can be found here it must be implied, because to permit the state to tax this company by a license tax for the privilege granted by its charter is to destroy that privilege. But the answer is that the company took their charter subject to the same right of taxation in the state that applies to all other privileges and to all other property. If they wished or intended to have an exemption of any kind from taxation, or felt that it was necessary to the profitable working of their business, they should have required a provision to that effect in their charter. The Constitution of the United States does not profess in all cases to protect property from unjust and oppressive taxation by the states. That is left to the state Constitutions and state laws.' 109 U. S. 398, 400, 27 L. ed. 976, 977, 3 Sup. Ct. Rep. 205, 206."

Murray v. Charleston, 96 U. S. 432, 24 L. ed. 760, is not in point. The city of Charleston, having issued bonds, subsequently passed an ordinance assessing a tax upon all real and personal property in the city, and directed the treasurer to retain out of the interest due on those bonds the amount of the tax. Murray was a resident of Germany, and resisted the reduction of interest, and it was held that the city could not, by way of a tax, reduce the amount of the interest which it had promised to pay to this nonresident holder, the court saying in its opinion (p. 440, L. ed. p. 761): "A nonresident creditor cannot be said to be, in virtue of a debt due to him, a holder of property within the city; and the city council was authorized to make assessments only upon *the inhabit- [43] ants of Charleston, or those holding taxable property within the same."

Chicago v. Sheldon, 9 Wall. 50, 19 L. ed. 594, is also not in point. An ordinance was passed by the city council of Chicago prescribing the amount of work which a street railway company must do in the grading, paving, etc., of the streets on which its railway was authorized to be constructed. The company, having accepted, and complied with the terms of this ordinance, the city attempted by assessments for special improvements to compel the railway company to pay for further work of the nature required by the original ordinance, and it was held that the obligations assumed by the railway company in respect to street improvements, as provided by the ordinance, could not be increased by special assessments for further improvements. But this involved no question of liability to general taxation, and only held void the effort of the city, under the guise of special assessments, to increase the obligations specifically assumed by the railway company under the original ordinance.

In New Jersey v. Yard, 95 U. S. 104, 24 L. ed. 352, there was a contract that a certain tax should "be in lieu and satisfaction of all other taxation or imposition whatsoever, by or under the authority of this state, or any law thereof," and the decision simply upheld that exemption specifically contracted for.

It is further contended that there has been a recognition and practical construction in respect to the grants of these franchises, and on these grounds: First, no attempt has been made to legislate in respect to their taxation until 1899, although some of them had been in existence for many years; second, Governor Cleveland, in one of his messages, called the amount required to be paid by the contract a tax, and Governor Roosevelt also spoke of existing "taxes;" third, § 46 of the legislation authorizing the tax upon these franchises provided that "any sum based upon a percentage of gross earnings, or any other income, or any license fee, or any sum of money on account of such special franchise, granted to or possessed by such person, copartnership, as-[44] sociation, or *corporation, which payment was in the nature of a tax, all amounts so paid for the exclusive use of such city, town, or village, except money paid or expended for paving or repairing of pavement of any street, highway, or public place, shall be deducted from any tax based on the assessment made by the state board of tax commissioners for city, town, or village purposes, but not otherwise; and the remainder shall be the tax on such special franchise payable for city, town, or village purposes;" fourth, the court of appeals of New York in Heerwagen v. Crosstown Street R. Co. 179 N. Y. 99, 104, 71 N. E. 729, 730, said:

"In the first place, both in statutes and in judicial decisions, the term 'tax' is frequently used in a much more comprehensive sense than that which we have stated to be its accurate meaning. It is not used so broadly as to include the revenue from private property which the state or one of its political divisions may hold for emolument, the same as other owners; but it certainly is used to comprehend exactions for the privilege of exercising franchise rights, which latter are often, especially in the case of foreign corporations, merely the consideration received for privileges which the state is at liberty to grant or to withhold at pleasure."

We are not disposed to undervalue the force of these suggestions, but it would be giving them undue significance to hold that they are potent to displace the power of the state to subject to the burdens of taxation property within its limits. The word "tax" is not infrequently used in a general sense as denoting a burden or charge, and not in the strict legal sense of the charge or burden imposed by the state for the purposes of revenue for its support. Undoubtedly the payment for the franchise of an annual sum was a burden, and in that sense it might not unnaturally have been spoken of as a tax. Being recognized as a burden, it may also well be that when the franchise itself was of comparatively little value the legislature did not see fit to subject it to the burdens of ordinary taxation. But the omission of one legislature or a dozen legislatures does *not destroy the power of the state. The [45] language quoted from § 46 indicates the desire of the legislature to deal equitably with the corporations holding these franchises. Surely the manifestation of this desire cannot be construed into a repudiation of power. These annual charges are not called taxes, but are spoken of as in the nature of a tax; and the legislature, recognizing the equitable force of the claim based thereon, provided that the corporation be given credit for sums thus payable. In this connection it is well to recall that in § 1 of the act of 1886, supra, these annual charges are called "rental or percentage of gross earnings."

The quotation from the court of appeals must be interpreted in the light of the question presented. That was whether the appellee company was entitled to avail itself of the provision of § 46 just quoted, it having been required by its charter to pay a certain percentage of its gross receipts. It was held that it was so entitled, and the argument was to show that the words "in the nature of a tax" were used in a broad and comprehensive sense to include a payment made on account of the privilege granted. No question was made or considered as to the liability of the company to the tax on its franchise. Its only claim was to the deduction on account of the percentage of its receipts already paid. The court, in addition to the language quoted, said (p. 106, N. E. p. 731):

"The statute in question was enacted at a special session of the legislature convened by the governor for that purpose. In his message to the legislature he recommended that 'it should be provided that from the sum assessed by the state authorities as the tax which a corporation must pay because of its local franchise there shall be deducted the amount already annually paid by it to the locality for such franchise. In no other way is it possible to tax these corporations with uniformity and equity.' It may be that this view is erroneous, and that the more accurate and equitable way would be to determine the value of the franchise, not as free and clear, but as burdened by the charges to which it might be subject. Never-[46] theless, *it is plain that this view was accepted by the legislature, for under the scheme provided by the present statute the franchise is to be assessed as real estate; that is to say, not subject to diminution for charges thereon, and the allowance for such charges is made only by deducting them from the tax."

We are of opinion that no contract right of the relator was impaired by the legislation in question.

It is further insisted that the special franchise tax law denies the relator the equal protection of the laws and due process in three separate and distinct aspects, "namely: (1) in that it adds to the obligations of their various contracts while preserving all the burdens of those contracts; (2) in that it provides for the deduction of annual payments covered by existing contracts from the amount of tax levied, by reason of which deduction those who agreed to pay for their franchises lump sums or annual amounts less than the new tax are discriminated against; and (3) in that it discriminates against them and subjects them to taxation, while their competitors, operating under the surfaces of many of the same streets, are to be exempted."

The first specification is answered by the conclusion that we have reached in respect to the claim of an impairment of contract obligations; for if there was no such impairment, the fact that the companies have escaped the burden for these many years is their good fortune, and in no manner discharges them from the ordinary burdens of taxation which the present law imposes.

With respect to the second, it may be observed that the lump sum is so obviously a payment for the franchise that it cannot be considered in any just sense as possessing the nature of a tax. It is not even rental. It is like money paid for a tract of land,—part of the purchase price. It does not, like a percentage of the gross receipts, vary with the changes of business, has no resemblance to a continuing discharge of the obligation which property is under for contribution to the support of the government. Further, this whole matter of allowing a reduction on account of that which is spoken of as "in [47] the nature of *a tax," is a matter of grace on the part of the legislature. The franchises granted were, as we have held, subject to taxation, and the fact that, upon equitable considerations, the state has consented that a certain reduction shall, in some cases, be made, does not entitle every holder of a franchise to a like reduction. It is akin to an exemption, and there is nothing in the Federal Constitution to prevent a state from granting exemptions from taxation. Bell's Gap R. Co. v. Pennsylvania, 134 U. S. 232, 33 L. ed. 892, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 533.

With regard to the third contention, it may be said that there is a difference between surface and subsurface street railroads sufficient to justify a diversity in the mode and extent of taxation. In Savannah, T. & I. of H. R. Co. v. Savannah, 198 U. S. 392, 49 L. ed. 1097, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 690, just decided, taxation of a street railroad was challenged on the ground that a steam railroad which ran into the city and along its streets, and there did some of the same kind of work as the ordinary street railroad, was not subject to the same tax, and, referring to this contention, is this declaration by Mr. Justice Holmes: "The difference between the two railroads is obvious, and warrants the diversity in the mode of taxation." Further, the condition of the title to the only subsurface road in the city of New York clearly puts it in a class by itself.

These are all the questions we deem it important to consider. We find no error in the decision of the Supreme Court of New York, and it is affirmed.

---

*PEOPLE OF THE STATE OF NEW YORK ex rel. BROOKLYN CITY RAILROAD COMPANY, Plff. in Err., [48]

v.

STATE BOARD OF TAX COMMISSIONERS.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 48-52.)

1. Contracts—exemption from taxation—validity of tax on special franchises.—The contract arrangement for the payment to a municipality of a license fee on each street car, modified as to the amount of such fees under the authority of a statute accepted by the street railway company, stating that such fees should be taken "in full satisfaction for the use of the streets or avenues," does not exempt the company from the tax imposed, under N. Y. Laws 1899, chap. 712, on its franchise.

NOTE.—On taxation of corporate franchises in the United States—see note to Louisville Tobacco Warehouse Co. v. Com. 57 L.R.A. 33.

As to corporate taxation in United States as affected by the contract clause in the Federal

2. Constitutional law—tax on special franchises—due process of law in valuation.—A street railway company cannot claim to have been denied due process of law in the valuation of its franchise for the purpose of the special franchise tax imposed by N. Y. Laws 1899, chap. 712, on the theory that it was ascertained by speculation and guesswork, where such valuation is required to be made by the state board of tax commissioners, to which the owner of the franchise is required to furnish a written report, and notice and hearing are accorded such owner, and a review of the assessment by certiorari is afforded.

[No. 79.]

Argued April 17, 18, 19, 1905. Decided May 29, 1905.

IN ERROR to the Supreme Court of the State of New York to review a judgment sustaining an assessment of a street railway franchise, entered pursuant to the mandate of the Court of Appeals of that state, which had reversed a judgment of the Appellate Division of the Supreme Court for the Third Department, which had, in turn, reversed the judgment of the Supreme Court entered at a special term held in and for the county of Albany on a writ of certiorari to review the action of the state board of tax commissioners. Affirmed.

See same case below in Appellate Division of Supreme Court, 79 App. Div. 183, 80 N. Y. Supp. 85; in Court of Appeals, 174 N. Y. 417, 63 L. R. A. 884, 67 N. E. 69.

Statement by Mr. Justice Brewer:

This case, like the preceding, involves the special franchise tax law of New York. The facts are these: On December 22, 1853, the relator was authorized by the city of Brooklyn to construct, maintain, and operate street surface railroads upon specified streets, and required to enter into a good and sufficient bond conditioned for the faithful performance of all the terms and stipulations in the resolutions granting the authority. On December 30 of that year a bond in the sum of $200,000 was duly executed by the relator, and has ever since been kept in force. The terms and stipulations as to the construction and operation of the railroad need not be mentioned. The resolutions contained these further provisions:

"The rates of fare for each passenger and the license fee for *each car to be paid [49] annually into the city treasury shall be on the respective lines above mentioned:

"1. Furnam street route, fare not to exceed 5 cents, license fee, $50. 2. Court street route, fare not to exceed 4 cents, license fee, $20. 3. Powers street route, fare not to exceed 5 cents, license fee, $20. 4. Flatbush avenue route, fare not to exceed 5 cents, license fee, $20. 5. Fulton avenue route, fare not to exceed 4 cents, license fee, $20. 6. Myrtle avenue route, fare not to exceed 4 cents, license fee, $20. 7. Sands street route, fare not to exceed 5 cents, license fee, $10. 8. Front street route, fare not to exceed 5 cents, license fee, $10."

This action of the city of Brooklyn was validated by the state legislature. Other contracts were made by the city of Brooklyn with other companies. Those companies were subsequently consolidated with the relator, which, on the 1st of January, 1900, held forty-five similar contracts with the municipalities for the construction, maintenance, and operation of street surface railroads in the present boroughs of Brooklyn and Queens. Some of these contracts required the annual payment of a certain percentage of the gross receipts. Subsequently, under due legislative authority, the contract arrangements between the relator and the city were modified in respect to the amount of the annual license fee. The statute authorizing the modification contains this clause:

"The said license fees shall be taken in full satisfaction for the use of the streets or avenues, but the same shall not release said company from any obligations required by law to keep such streets or avenues, or any part thereof, in repair, which said obligations and the contracts, laws, or ordinances creating and enforcing the same, are hereby continued in full force and operation."

Mr. Charles A. Collin argued the cause, and, with Mr. William F. Sheehan, filed a brief for plaintiff in error:

Two propositions are well established and well settled:

(1) A duly authorized municipal ordinance or resolution assenting to the construction, maintenance, and operation, by a street railroad corporation, of its railroads on the streets of a municipality, when accepted by the railroad corporation, becomes a contract which neither the state nor the municipality can afterward modify without the consent of the railroad corporation.

Constitution—see note to Adams v. Yazoo & M. Valley R. Co. 60 L. R. A. 33.

As to what constitutes due process of law—see Kuntz v. Sumption, 2 L. R. A. 655, and note; Re Gannon, 5 L. R. A. 359, and note; Ulman v. Baltimore, 11 L. R. A. 224, and note; and Gilman v. Tucker, 13 L. R. A. 304, and note. And see notes to People v. O'Brien, 2 L. R. A. 255; Pearson v. Yewdall, 24 L. ed. U. S. 436; and Wilson v. North Carolina, 42 L. ed. U. S. 865.

On notice and hearing required to constitute due process of law—see notes to Kuntz v. Sumption, 2 L. R. A. 657; Chauvin v. Valiton, 3 L. R. A. 194; and Ulman v. Baltimore, 11 L. R. A. 225.

(2) The terms of such contract regulate the whole subject of matters properly involved in and being a part of the contract; and as to such matters all additional provisions made by state legislation or municipal ordinance, to the detriment of the railroad company and without its consent, are void as impairing the obligation of the contract.

Chicago v. Sheldon, 9 Wall. 50, 19 L. ed. 594; Coast-Line R. Co. v. Savannah, 30 Fed. 646; Cleveland v. Cleveland City R. Co. 194 U. S. 517, 48 L. ed. 1102, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 756, 94 Fed. 385; Cleveland v. Cleveland Electric R. Co. 194 U. S. 538, 48 L. ed. 1109, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 764, 94 Fed. 385; Detroit v. Detroit Citizens' Street R. Co. 184 U. S. 368, 46 L. ed. 592, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 410; Los Angeles v. Los Angeles City Water Co. 177 U. S. 558, 44 L. ed. 886, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 736; Rochester v. Rochester R. Co. 98 App. Div. 521, 91 N. Y. Supp. 87; Worcester v. Worcester Consol. Street R. Co. 196 U. S. 539, 49 L. ed. 591, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 327; Walla Walla v. Walla Walla Water Co. 172 U. S. 1, 43 L. ed. 341, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 77.

The so-called license fees which the Brooklyn City Railroad Company agreed to pay, in and by its franchise contract of 1853, as well as the increased license fees which the city and company afterward, in pursuance of the amendment of 1880, agreed should be paid in lieu thereof, were not license fees properly so called, but were taxes; and both the original and subsequent agreements to pay such license fees were agreements to pay taxes. It is also clear that the provisions of other franchise contracts of the Brooklyn City Railroad Company, requiring payment of percentages of gross receipts, were, in like manner, agreements to pay taxes.

New York v. Second Ave. R. Co. 32 N. Y. 261, 34 Barb. 41; New York v. Third Ave. R. Co. 33 N. Y. 42.

The franchise contracts in question fixed, and therefore necessarily limited, the amount of burdens in the nature of taxes which the Brooklyn City Railroad Company could thereafter be compelled to pay on account of its property consisting of the intangible rights created by such franchise contracts.

Ibid.; Stein v. Mobile, 49 Ala. 362, 20 Am. Rep. 283; Los Angeles v. Los Angeles City Water Co. 61 Cal. 65, 177 U. S. 558, 44 L. ed. 886, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 736; New York v. Broadway & S. Ave. R. Co. 97 N. Y. 275; New York v. Twenty-third Street R. Co. 113 N. Y. 311, 21 N. E. 60; People ex rel. Cayadutta Pl. Road Co. v. Cummings, 166 N. Y. 110, 59 N. E. 703; Re Delaware Railroad Tax, 18 Wall. 206, 21 L. ed. 888; New Orleans City & Lake R. Co. v. New Orleans, 143 U. S. 192, 36 L. ed. 121, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 406, 40 La. Ann. 587, 4 So. 512; Detroit v. Citizens' Street R. Co. 184 U. S. 368, 46 L. ed. 592, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 410.

The failure of the special franchise tax law to indicate any principle or method for ascertaining the value of the intangible property included in the special franchise; the failure of the state board to attempt any separate valuation of the intangible property; and its failure to adopt or proceed upon any principle or method of valuing the totality of intangible and tangible property together constituting the special franchise; and, necessarily, the substitution therefor of speculation and guesswork in place of judgment in making such valuation,—amounted to such an absence of quasi judicial action as to constitute the taking of property without due process of law, and so far as the statute contemplates such a procedure, the statute itself is unconstitutional for the same reason.

People v. San Francisco Sav. Union, 31 Cal. 132.

Messrs. Julius M. Mayer and Louis Marshall argued the cause and filed a brief for defendant in error:

The decision of the court of appeals of New York, which sustains the act under review, is conclusive in this court as to any question of conflict between it and the state Constitution.

Merchants' & M. Bank v. Pennsylvania, 167 U. S. 462, 42 L. ed. 236, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 829; West River Bridge Co. v. Dix, 6 How. 507, 12 L. ed. 535; Spencer v. Merchant, 125 U. S. 352, 31 L. ed. 766, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 921; Bucher v. Cheshire R. Co. 125 U. S. 555, 582, 31 L. ed. 795, 798, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 974; Bell's Gap R. Co. v. Pennsylvania, 134 U. S. 232, 33 L. ed. 892, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 533; Lewis v. Monson, 151 U. S. 545, 38 L. ed. 265, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 424; Adams Exp. Co. v. Ohio State Auditor, 165 U. S. 194, 41 L. ed. 683, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 305; Long Island Water Supply Co. v. Brooklyn, 166 U. S. 685, 41 L. ed. 1165, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 718; Hodge v. Muscatine County, 196 U. S. 276, 49 L. ed. 477, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 237; Re Tyler, 149 U. S. 187, 37 L. ed. 696, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 785.

It follows from these authorities that this court will not interfere with the construction given by the state courts to the laws regulating the taxation of property within the state, or review findings of fact or the conclusions of assessing officers as to the value of property sought to be assessed. In other words, decisions based on local laws, not involving a Federal constitutional question, or resting on pure questions of fact, are not reviewable.

Hibben v. Smith, 191 U. S. 310, 48 L. ed. 195, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 88; Seneca Nation v. Christy, 162 U. S. 283, 40 L. ed. 970, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 828; Tripp v. Santa Rosa Street R. Co. 144 U. S. 126, 36 L. ed. 371, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 655; Iowa C. R. Co. v. Iowa, 160 U. S. 389, 40 L. ed. 467, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 344; Lewis v. Campau, 3 Wall. 106, 18 L. ed. 211; Dower v. Richards, 151 U. S. 659, 38 L. ed. 306, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 452; Leffingwell v. Warren, 2 Black, 599, 17 L. ed. 261; Kelly v. Pittsburgh, 104 U. S. 78, 26 L. ed. 658; Missouri, K. & T. R. Co. v. Haber, 169 U. S. 613, 639, 42 L. ed. 878, 887, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 488; Smiley v. Kansas, 196 U. S. 447, 49 L. ed. 546, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 289.

A special franchise, as defined in the act, is properly subject to taxation.

People ex rel. Metropolitan Street R. Co. v. State Tax Comrs. 174 N. Y. 435, 63 L. R. A. 884, 67 N. E. 69; People v. O'Brien, 111 N. Y. 1, 2 L. R. A. 255, 7 Am. St. Rep. 684, 18 N. E. 692; Detroit v. Detroit Citizens' Street R. Co. 184 U. S. 398, 46 L. ed. 610, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 410; Syracuse Water Co. v. Syracuse, 116 N. Y. 167, 5 L. R. A. 546, 22 N. E. 381; People ex rel. Woodhaven Gaslight Co. v. Deehan, 153 N. Y. 528, 47 N. E. 787; Ingersoll v. Nassau Electric R. Co. 157 N. Y. 453, 43 L. R. A. 236, 52 N. E. 545; Ghee v. Northern Union Gas Co. 158 N. Y. 510, 53 N. E. 692; Wilmington & W. R. Co. v. Reid, 13 Wall. 264, 20 L. ed. 568; Monongahela Nav. Co. v. United States, 148 U. S. 312, 328, 329, 37 L. ed. 463, 468, 469, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 622; Adams Exp. Co. v. Ohio State Auditor, 166 U. S. 219, 41 L. ed. 977, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 604; Henderson Bridge Co. v. Kentucky, 166 U. S. 150, 41 L. ed. 953, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 532; New Mexico v. United States Trust Co. 172 U. S. 171, 43 L. ed. 407, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 128.

The authority of every state to tax all property, real and personal, within its jurisdiction, is unquestionable.

Western U. Teleg. Co. v. Taggart, 163 U. S. 14, 41 L. ed. 54, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1054; M'Culloch v. Maryland, 4 Wheat. 316, 429, 4 L. ed. 579, 607.

The state may from time to time bring within the purview of its taxing power new subjects which had not been covered by previous legislation,—as, for example, mortgages owned by citizens of other states on property within the state (Savings & Loan Soc. v. Multnomah County, 169 U. S. 421, 42 L. ed. 803, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 392); the right of succession to the property of one dying (Magoun v. Illinois Trust & Sav. Bank, 170 U. S. 283, 42 L. ed. 1037, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 594); debts owing by a resident debtor to a nonresident creditor (Blackstone v. Miller, 188 U. S. 189, 47 L. ed. 439, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 277); the right given to a foreign corporation to carry on business within the state (Horn Silver Min. Co. v. New York, 143 U. S. 305, 36 L. ed. 164, 4 Inters. Com. Rep. 57, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 403); the amount of capital employed by a foreign corporation within the state (New York v. Roberts, 171 U. S. 658, 43 L. ed. 323, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 58).

Hence, if the franchises of a public service corporation are property, they may likewise become the subject of taxation,—especially when united with tangible property designed to utilize such franchises.

Henderson Bridge Co. v. Kentucky, 166 U. S. 150, 41 L. ed. 953, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 532; State ex rel. Milwaukee Street R. Co. v. Anderson, 90 Wis. 550, 63 N. W. 746; Detroit Citizens' Street R. Co. v. Detroit, 125 Mich. 673, 84 Am. St. Rep. 589, 85 N. W. 96, 88 N. W. 809; State Railroad Tax Cases, 92 U. S. 575, 23 L. ed. 663; Central P. R. Co. v. California, 162 U. S. 126, 40 L. ed. 915, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 766.

The power to tax being essential to the very existence of the state, there can be no presumption that it has been either abandoned or restricted; and whoever claims that it has been must show that the intent to grant immunity was conferred in express and unambiguous terms, which will not be extended by implication beyond their fair import. Exemption from taxation will not be wrested from unwilling words.

Cooley, Taxn. 3d ed. 112; Providence Bank v. Billings, 4 Pet. 514, 7 L. ed. 939; Philadelphia, W. & B. R. Co. v. Maryland, 10 How. 376, 13 L. ed. 461; Erie R. Co. v. Pennsylvania, 21 Wall. 497, 22 L. ed. 598; Farrington v. Tennessee, 95 U. S. 686, 24 L. ed. 560; Memphis Gaslight Co. v. Taxing District, 109 U. S. 399, 27 L. ed. 976, 3 Sup. Ct. Rep. 205; New Orleans City & Lake R. Co. v. New Orleans, 143 U. S. 192, 36 L. ed. 121, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 406; Stone v. Bank of Commerce, 174 U. S. 412, 43 L. ed. 1028, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 747; People ex rel. Cunningham v. Roper, 35 N. Y. 629; People ex rel. Westchester v. Davenport, 91 N. Y. 574; Wilmington & W. R. Co. v. Alsbrook, 146 U. S. 294, 36 L. ed. 978, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 72; Ford v. Delta & P. Land Co. 164 U. S. 666, 41 L. ed. 592, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 230.

In the absence of any express statutory authority the state alone cannot grant exemption from taxation; and an attempt on the part of a municipality to confer such immunity would be ultra vires and ineffectual.

Minturn v. Larue, 23 How. 435, 16 L. ed.

574; Syracuse Water Co. v. Syracuse, 116 N. Y. 181, 5 L. R. A. 546, 22 N. E. 381; Water Comrs. v. Westchester County Waterworks Co. 176 N. Y. 239, 68 N. E. 348; Richmond County Gaslight Co. v. Middletown, 59 N. Y. 228; Norwich Gaslight Co. v. Norwich City Gas Co. 25 Conn. 19; Detroit Citizens' Street R. Co. v. Detroit R. Co. 171 U. S. 48, 43 L. ed. 67, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 732.

Even where the state undertakes to restrict its power of taxation, the rule applicable to the interpretation of public grants applies; namely, that the instrument by which restriction is claimed to have been created must be so strictly construed as to operate as a surrender of the sovereign power no further than is expressly declared by the terms of the grant, the grantee taking nothing in that respect by inference.

Charles River Bridge v. Warren Bridge, 11 Pet. 420, 9 L. ed. 773; Lehigh Water Co. v. Easton, 121 U. S. 391, 30 L. ed. 1060, 7 Sup. Ct. Rep. 916; Syracuse Water Co. v. Syracuse, 116 N. Y. 167, 5 L. R. A. 546, 22 N. E. 381; Tennessee v. Whitworth, 117 U. S. 148, 149, 29 L. ed. 836, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 649; Phoenix F. & M. Ins. Co. v. Tennessee, 161 U. S. 174, 40 L. ed. 660, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 471; Skaneateles Waterworks Co. v. Skaneateles, 184 U. S. 362, 46 L. ed. 590, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 400; Chicago Theological Seminary v. Illinois, 188 U. S. 672, 47 L. ed. 648, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 386; Providence Bank v. Billings, 4 Pet. 514, 7 L. ed. 939; United States v. Arredondo, 6 Pet. 736, 8 L. ed. 564; Perrine v. Chesapeake & D. Canal Co. 9 How. 192, 13 L. ed. 100; Richmond F. & P. R. Co. v. Louisa R. Co. 13 How. 71, 14 L. ed. 55; Pennock v. Coe, 23 How. 117, 16 L. ed. 436; People ex rel. Westchester F. Ins. Co. v. Davenport, 91 N. Y. 586; Tucker v. Ferguson, 22 Wall. 575, 22 L. ed. 816; Northwestern Fertilizing Co. v. Hyde Park, 97 U. S. 659, 666, 24 L. ed. 1036, 1038; 1 Morawetz, Priv. Corp. 2d ed. § 323.

This court should follow the decision of the state court when the question is one of doubt and uncertainty. Especial respect should be had to such decisions when the dispute arises out of general laws of a state, regulating its exercise of the taxing power, or relating to the state's disposition of its public lands.

Wilson v. Standefer, 184 U. S. 411, 412, 46 L. ed. 617, 618, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 384.

Assuming that a contract of exemption from general taxation can be implied from the language of the ordinance; that the city had the power to grant such exemption, and that it intended to do so; that there was a consideration for the contract, which is essential, but which nowhere appears (Grand Lodge, F. & A. M. v. New Orleans, 166 U. S. 143, 41 L. ed. 951, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 523),—nevertheless the right to tax the relator's special franchises was properly exercised under the power reserved to the legislature by the Constitution and statutes of New York.

Miller v. New York, 15 Wall. 478, 21 L. ed. 98; New York ex rel. Schurz v. Cook, 148 U. S. 397, 410, 37 L. ed. 498, 503, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 645; Holyoke Water-Power Co. v. Lyman, 15 Wall. 500, 21 L. ed. 133; Tomlinson v. Jessup, 15 Wall. 454, 21 L. ed. 204; Sherman v. Smith, 1 Black, 587, 17 L. ed. 163; Maine C. R. Co. v. Maine, 96 U. S. 499, 24 L. ed. 836; Louisville Water Co. v. Clark, 143 U. S. 1, 36 L. ed. 55, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 346; Covington v. Kentucky, 173 U. S. 231, 43 L. ed. 679, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 383; Citizens' Sav. Bank v. Owensboro, 173 U. S. 636, 43 L. ed. 840, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 530; Atlantic & G. R. Co. v. Georgia, 98 U. S. 359, 365, 25 L. ed. 185, 187; Hodge v. Richmond & D. R. Co. 99 U. S. 348, 353, 25 L. ed. 303, 304; Sinking Fund Cases, 99 U. S. 700, 720, 25 L. ed. 496, 501; Greenwood v. Union Freight R. Co. 105 U. S. 13, 21, 26 L. ed. 961, 965; Close v. Glenwood Cemetery, 107 U. S. 466, 476, 27 L. ed. 408, 412, 2 Sup. Ct. Rep. 267; Spring Valley Waterworks Co. v. Schottler, 110 U. S. 347, 28 L. ed. 173, 4 Sup. Ct. Rep. 48; Gibbs v. Consolidated Gas Co. 130 U. S. 396, 400, 32 L. ed. 979, 9 Sup. Ct. Rep. 553; Sioux City Street R. Co. v. Sioux City, 138 U. S. 98, 108, 34 L. ed. 898, 902, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 226; Hamilton Gaslight & Coke Co. v. Hamilton, 146 U. S. 258, 270, 36 L. ed. 963, 968, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 90; Looker v. Maynard, 179 U. S. 46, 45 L. ed. 79, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 21; Corry v. Baltimore, 196 U. S. 466, 49 L. ed. 556, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 297; Adirondack R. Co. v. New York, 176 U. S. 345, 44 L. ed. 498, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 460.

This court is not concerned with the correctness of the valuation of the relator's special franchises, or with the soundness of the rules of evidence or of the opinions adopted by the tax commissioners, the referee, or the several state courts which sat in review of the assessment. When the parties to a controversy—and especially those whose property has been assessed for purposes of taxation—have been fully heard in the regular course of judicial proceedings, an erroneous decision of a state court cannot be said to deprive the unsuccessful litigant of his property without due process of law.

Walker v. Sauvinet, 92 U. S. 90, 23 L. ed. 678; Head v. Amoskeag Mfg. Co. 113 U. S. 9, 28 L. ed. 889, 5 Sup. Ct. Rep. 441; Arrowsmith v. Harmoning, 118 U. S. 194, 30 L. ed. 243, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1023; Yick Wo. v. Hopkins, 118 U. S. 356, 369, 30 L. ed. 220, 226, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1064; Morley v. Lake Shore & M. S. R. Co. 146 U. S. 162, 36 L. ed. 925, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 54; Bergemann v. Backer, 157 U. S. 655, 39 L. ed. 845, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 727; Central Land Co. v. Laidley, 159 U. S. 103, 40 L. ed. 91, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 80; McMillen v. Anderson, 95 U. S. 37, 24 L. ed. 335; Hagar v. Reclamation District No. 108, 111 U. S. 701, 28 L. ed. 569, 4 Sup. Ct. Rep. 663; Palmer v. McMahon, 133 U. S. 660, 33 L. ed. 772, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 324; Pittsburgh, C. C. & St. L. R. Co. v. Backus, 154 U. S. 421, 38 L. ed. 1031, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1114; Kentucky Railroad Tax Cases, 115 U. S. 321, 29 L. ed. 414, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 57; Fallbrook Irrig. District v. Bradley, 164 U. S. 112, 41 L. ed. 369, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 56; Merchants' & M. Bank v. Pennsylvania, 167 U. S. 461, 42 L. ed. 236, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 829; Bauman v. Ross, 167 U. S. 590, 42 L. ed. 288, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 966; King v. Mullins, 171 U. S. 404, 43 L. ed. 214, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 925; Bellingham Bay & B. C. R. Co. v. New Whatcom, 172 U. S. 314, 43 L. ed. 460, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 205; Turpin v. Lemon, 187 U. S. 51, 47 L. ed. 70, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 20; Glidden v. Harrington, 189 U. S. 255, 47 L. ed. 798, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 574; Hibben v. Smith, 191 U. S. 310, 48 L. ed. 195, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 88; Corry v. Baltimore, 196 U. S. 466, 49 L. ed. 556, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 297; Hodge v. Muscatine County, 196 U. S. 276, 49 L. ed. 477, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 237.

Equally unfounded is the claim that this legislation deprives the relator of the equal protection of the laws.

Kentucky Railroad Tax Cases, 115 U. S. 321, 29 L. ed. 414, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 57; Pittsburgh, C. C. & St. L. R. Co. v. Backus, 154 U. S. 421, 38 L. ed. 1031, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 114; Pacific Exp. Co. v. Seibert, 142 U. S. 354, 35 L. ed. 1040, 3 Inters. Com. Rep. 810, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 250; Adams Exp. Co. v. Ohio State Auditor, 165 U. S. 228, 41 L. ed. 697, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 305; Magoun v. Illinois Trust & Sav. Bank, 170 U. S. 293, 42 L. ed. 1042, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 594; Cook v. Marshall County, 196 U. S. 261, 49 L. ed. 471, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 233; Kehrer v. Stewart, 197 U. S. 60, 49 L. ed. 663, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 403; Coulter v. Louisville & N. R. Co. 196 U. S. 608, 49 L. ed. 617, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 342; California v. California P. R. Co. 127 U. S. 1, 32 L. ed. 150, 2 Inters. Com. Rep. 153, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1073.

If there were even a doubt as to the constitutionality of the legislation now attacked, it should be determined in favor of the validity of such legislation, since it affects the revenues of a sovereign state, and is designed to promote a just distribution of the burdens of taxation among its citizens.

King v. Mullins, 171 U. S. 436, 43 L. ed. 226, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 925.

Mr. Justice Brewer delivered the opinion of the court:

Do these license fees stand as an equivalent for property taxes so that a stipulation in respect to them relieves the property from liability to ordinary taxation? This certainly would not be the general rule. A license fee is understood to be a charge for the privilege of carrying on a business or occupation, and is not the equivalent or in lieu of a property tax. Take the vast volume of occupations which are subject to licenses from either the nation or the states. Who supposes that, in the absence of some express stipulation, the fees charged for those licenses operate to relieve the property employed in the business from the ordinary burdens of property taxation? The precise question as to the effect of an ordinance imposing a license fee for cars used on a street railroad was before the court of appeals in New York v. Broadway & S. Ave. R. Co. 97 N. Y. 275, in which, on page 282, the court said:

"The contract of the defendant arises from the provisions of its charter by which it agrees to pay a certain sum reserved therein in consideration of the privileges conferred thereby. It is neither a tax nor is it a penalty; and hence the technical rules as to penal actions or suits to recover a tax which are invoked by the appellant have no application."

Further, in the statute modifying the license fees, which was accepted by the relator, it was expressly stated that they should "be taken in full satisfaction for the use of the streets or avenues." Clearly, therefore, the fees being imposed for a specific purpose, they cannot exempt the relator's property from the tax imposed by the special franchise tax law.

It is further objected that there was a failure of due process of law in that the special franchise tax law did not indicate *any principle or method for ascertaining[51] the value of the intangible property included in the special franchise, and that the state board did not make any separate valuation of the tangible property, and did not adopt or proceed upon any principle or method in valuing the totality of the tangible and intangible property, but necessarily indulged in mere speculation and guesswork instead of exercising judgment in making the valuation.

We are of opinion that this objection is without merit. The sections relating to the taxation of special franchises were enacted as amendments to and part of the general tax law of the state, and are to be construed accordingly. By one section the valuation is to be determined by the state board of tax commissioners. By another the owner of every such franchise is required to make a written report to the state board, containing a full description of the franchise, a copy of the special grant, ordinance, or contract under which it is held, or, if possessed or enjoyed under a general law, a reference to such law, a statement of any condition, obligation or burden imposed upon the franchise, together with such other information as the state board may require; and that board is authorized to require, from time to time, further reports containing information upon such matters as it may specify. Not only that; after making the valuation the state board is required to give notice in writing to the owner of the franchise, stating the valuation, and that on a day specified, not less than twenty nor more than thirty days thereafter, it will meet to hear and determine any complaint against such assessment, and this notice must be served at least ten days before the day fixed for the hearing. At the hearing the owner may file a statement under oath, specifying the respect in which the valuation is incorrect; testimony may be taken and a full investigation had. Another section provides for a review of the assessment by writ of certiorari. These provisions were all complied with. Notice was given to the relator, and on the day fixed for the hearing it appeared and filed [52] its objections. *Thereafter it took out a writ of certiorari to review the proceedings of the tax board. Surely by this due process of law was secured. It will not do to say that the valuation of a piece of property is mere guesswork. True, it is often largely a matter of opinion, and mathematical exactness is not always possible. Various elements enter into and affect an opinion respecting the value of a given piece of property, and all that can be required is that the assessing board exercise an honest judgment, based upon the information it possesses or is able to acquire. That valuation is of the property as a totality, and it is unnecessary in making an assessment to disintegrate the various elements which enter into it, and ascribe to each its separate fraction of value. Oftentimes the combination itself is no inconsiderable factor in creating the value. We are of the opinion that the relator was not denied due process of law in the valuation and assessment of its franchise.

We see nothing else in the record calling for notice, and the judgment of the Supreme Court of New York is affirmed.

*PEOPLE OF THE STATE OF NEW [53]
YORK ex rel. TWENTY-THIRD STREET RAILWAY COMPANY, Plff. in Err.,

v.

STATE BOARD OF TAX COMMISSIONERS. (No. 75.)

PEOPLE OF THE STATE OF NEW YORK ex rel. CENTRAL CROSSTOWN RAILROAD COMPANY, Plff. in Err.,

v.

STATE BOARD OF TAX COMMISSIONERS. (No. 76.)

PEOPLE OF THE STATE OF NEW YORK ex rel. CONSOLIDATED GAS COMPANY, Plff. in Err.,

v.

STATE BOARD OF TAX COMMISSIONERS. (No. 77.)

PEOPLE OF THE STATE OF NEW YORK ex rel. NEW AMSTERDAM GAS COMPANY, Plff. in Err.,

v.

STATE BOARD OF TAX COMMISSIONERS. (No. 78.)

PEOPLE OF THE STATE OF NEW YORK ex rel. CONEY ISLAND & BROOKLYN RAILROAD COMPANY, Plff. in Err.,

v.

STATE BOARD OF TAX COMMISSIONERS. (No. 80.)

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 53, 54.)

These cases are governed by the decisions in New York ex rel. Metropolitan Street R. Co. v. State Board of Tax Comrs. and New York ex rel. Brooklyn City R. Co. v. State Board of Tax Comrs. ante, 65, 79.

[Nos. 75, 76, 77, 78, 80.]

Argued April 17, 18, 19, 1905. Decided May 29, 1905.

IN ERROR to the Supreme Court of the State of New York to review a judgment sustaining assessments of special franchises entered pursuant to the mandate of the Court of Appeals of that state, which had reversed a judgment of the Appellate Division of the Supreme Court for the Third Department, which had, in turn, reversed the judgment of the Supreme Court entered at a special term held in and for the county of Albany on a writ of certiorari to review the action of the state board of tax commissioners. Affirmed.

See same cases below in Appellate Division of Supreme Court, 79 App. Div. 183, 80 N. Y. Supp. 85; and in Court of Appeals, 174 N. Y. 417, 63 L. R. A. 884, 67 N. E. 69.

Mr. Elihu Root argued the cause, and, with Mr. Frank H. Platt, filed a brief for plaintiffs in error in Nos. 77, 78:

A legislative enactment which requires or authorizes the taxation of a certain class of property upon the basis of a sum arbitrarily fixed by the assessing officers, without reference to the value of the property, constitutes a deprivation of property without due process of law, and a denial of the equal protection of the laws.

New York v. Weaver, 100 U. S. 539, 544, 546, 25 L. ed. 705, 706, 707; Cooley, Const. Lim. 7th ed. p. 705; 1 Cooley, Taxn. 3d ed. p. 419; Santa Clara County v. Southern P. R. Co. 9 Sawy. 165, 18 Fed. 385; Turpin v. Lemon, 187 U. S. 51, 57, 47 L. ed. 70, 73, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 20; Re Kemmler, 136 U. S. 436, 448, 34 L. ed. 519, 524, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 930; Hodgson v. Vermont, 168 U. S. 262, 273, 42 L. ed. 461, 464, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 80; Yick Wo v. Hopkins, 118 U. S. 356, 369, 30 L. ed. 220, 226, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1064; Pollock v. Farmers' Loan & T. Co. 157 U. S. 599, 39 L. ed. 825, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 673; McMillen v. Anderson, 95 U. S. 37, 41, 24 L. ed. 335, 336; Stuart v. Palmer, 74 N. Y. 183, 30 Am. Rep. 289; People ex rel. Edison Electric Illuminating Co. v. Barker, 139 N. Y. 55, 34 N. E. 722; People v. Equitable Trust Co. 96 N. Y. 387; Nehasane Park Asso. v. Lloyd, 167 N. Y. 431, 60 N. E. 741; People ex rel. Griffin v. Brooklyn, 4 N. Y. 419, 55 Am. Dec. 266; Ryerson v. Utley, 16 Mich. 269; Taylor v. Chandler, 9 Heisk. 349, 24 Am. Rep. 308; Chicago, B. & Q. R. Co. v. Cole, 75 Ill. 591; Merrill v. Humphrey, 24 Mich. 170; People ex rel. Detroit & H. R. Co. v. Salem Twp. 20 Mich. 452, 4 Am. Rep. 400; San Mateo County v. Southern P. R. Co. 8 Sawy. 238, 13 Fed. 722; Santa Clara County v. Southern P. R. Co. 9 Sawy. 165, 18 Fed. 385; Russell v. Croy, 164 Mo. 69, 63 S. W. 849; Chicago Union Traction Co. v. State Board, 114 Fed. 557; Railroad & Teleph. Cos. v. Board of Equalizers, 85 Fed. 302; Albany City Nat. Bank v. Maher, 20 Blatchf. 341, 9 Fed. 884; Woodbridge v. Detroit, 8 Mich. 274; Board of Assessment v. Alabama C. R. Co. 59 Ala. 551; Marsh v. Clark County, 42 Wis. 502; State ex rel. White House Dist. No. 7 v. Readington Twp. 36 N. J. L. 66; Nashville, C. & St. L. R. Co. v. Taylor, 86 Fed. 168, 31 C. C. A. 537, 60 U. S. App. 166, 88 Fed. 350.

The market value of share stock is not relevant as showing the value of the corporate property.

People ex rel. Union Trust Co. v. Coleman, 126 N. Y. 433, 12 L. R. A. 762, 27 N. E. 818; People ex rel. Bank of Commonwealth v. Tax & A. Comrs. 23 N. Y. 192.

Taxable assets of a corporation cannot be determined by the amount of outstanding mortgage bonds.

People ex rel. Manhattan R. Co. v. Barker, 146 N. Y. 304, 40 N. E. 996.

It cannot be argued that a deduction from the aggregate market value of the corporate securities as representing the total value of the corporate property, of the value of the real estate, securities of other companies, equipment, and all other tangible property, will give the value of the special franchise. Such a method would be clearly untenable. Even if the market price of securities were a true measure of actual value, the deduction of the value of all the tangible property would leave a remainder which must represent numerous items of intangible property; namely, contracts with customers, patents, good will, and the general franchises of the corporation. There is no method or rule by which this remainder can be apportioned to the different items of intangible property. Any attempt to do so would necessarily be pure guesswork and imagination. And under the laws of the state the general franchises and good will are not taxable for local purposes.

People ex rel. Union Trust Co. v. Coleman, 126 N. Y. 437, 12 L. R. A. 762, 27 N. E. 818; People ex rel. Cornell S. B. Co. v. Dederick, 25 Misc. 539, 55 N. Y. Supp. 40, 161 N. Y. 195, 55 N. E. 927; People ex rel. Manhattan R. Co. v. Barker, 165 N. Y. 305, 59 N. E. 151; People ex rel. National Surety Co. v. Feitner, 166 N. Y. 129, 59 N. E. 731.

A valuation of a single item of corporate property by a consideration of the earnings of the whole corporate property has been universally condemned by the courts of the state of New York.

People ex rel. Delaware, L. & W. R. Co. v. Clapp, 152 N. Y. 490, 39 L. R. A. 237, 46 N. E. 842; People ex rel. Western U. Teleg. Co. v. Dolan, 126 N. Y. 166, 12 L. R. A. 251, 27 N. E. 269; People ex rel. Panama R. Co. v. Tax Comrs. 104 N. Y. 240, 10 N. E. 437; People ex rel. Delaware & H. Canal Co. v. Ganley, 29 N. Y. S. R. 130, 8 N. Y. Supp. 563; Re Gilroy, 26 App. Div. 314, 49 N. Y. Supp. 798; Syracuse v. Stacey, 45 App. Div. 249, 61 N. Y. Supp. 165.

The allegation of the return that there was investigation by the board's agents, who formed opinions as to the value, if it could have any effect whatever, would be equivalent to an allegation that the state tax commissioners had delegated their quasi judicial powers to others, and that these unnamed agents, and not the commissioners themselves, had determined the assessment. Such an assessment would be void.

Lee v. Parry, 4 Denio, 125; Doughty v. Hope, 3 Denio, 594; Powell v. Tuttle, 3 N. Y. 396; People ex rel. Mygatt v. Chenango County, 11 N. Y. 563; Middletown v. Berlin, 18 Conn. 189; Woodman v. Auditor General, 52 Mich. 28, 17 N. W. 227; People v. Hastings, 29 Cal. 449.

The taxing officers cannot sustain an erroneous assessment by alleging that there was other evidence which it does not produce.

People ex rel. Edison Electric Illuminating Co. v. Barker, 139 N. Y. 55, 34 N. E. 722.

There was no fact before the state board, upon its own admission, or before the referee, which had the slightest tendency to prove the value of a special franchise, or from which such a value could possibly be ascertained. This question the court can undoubtedly examine.

Dower v. Richards, 151 U. S. 658, 667, 38 L. ed. 305, 308, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 452; Merchants' Mut. Ins. Co. v. Allen, 121 U. S. 67, 71, 30 L. ed. 858, 859, 7 Sup. Ct. Rep. 821; The Francis Wright (Duncan v. The Francis Wright) 105 U. S. 381, 387, 26 L. ed. 1100, 1101; The City of New York, 147 U. S. 72, 77, 37 L. ed. 84, 87, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 211; Dooley v. Pease, 180 U. S. 126, 132, 45 L. ed. 457, 460, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 308; Runkle v. Burnham, 153 U. S. 216, 225, 38 L. ed. 694, 697, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 837; Hathaway v. First Nat. Bank, 134 U. S. 494, 33 L. ed. 1004, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 608.

A presumption exists at the outset in favor of the correctness of an assessment, but that presumption is destroyed, either by proof of the true value of the property, or by showing that some erroneous method has been adopted, or arbitrary assumptions made, or improper elements of valuation taken into account.

People ex rel. New York C. & H. R. R. Co. v. Morgan, 168 N. Y. 1, 60 N. E. 1041; People ex rel. Edison Electric Illuminating Co. v. Barker, 139 N. Y. 55, 34 N. E. 722; People ex rel. Union Trust Co. v. Coleman, 126 N. Y. 433; 12 L. R. A. 762, 27 N. E. 818; People ex rel. Manhattan R. Co. v. Barker, 146 N. Y. 304, 40 N. E. 996; People ex rel. Cornell S. B. Co. v. Dederick, 161 N. Y. 195, 55 N. E. 927; People ex rel. Delaware, L. & W. R. Co. v. Clapp, 152 N. Y. 490, 39 L. R. A. 237, 46 N. E. 842.

The provision imposing the tax of 3 per cent of gross earnings per annum, as one of the terms on which the East River Gas Company of Long Island City accepted its charter and invested its capital in a plant for public service, when accepted, constituted a contract.

Gordon v. Appeal Tax Court, 3 How. 133, 11 L. ed. 529; Union Bank v. State, 9 Yerg. 490; Farrington v. Tennessee, 95 U. S. 679, 689, 24 L. ed. 558, 561; Atty. Gen. v. Bank of Charlotte, 57 N. C. (4 Jones, Eq.) 287; Detroit v. Detroit Citizens' Street R. Co. 184 U. S. 368, 46 L. ed. 592, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 410.

Mr. William D. Guthrie argued the cause and filed a brief for plaintiffs in error in Nos. 75 and 76. For his contentions see his brief as reported in New York ex rel. Metropolitan Street R. Co. v. State Tax Comrs. ante, 65.

Messrs. Julius M. Mayer and Louis Marshall argued the cause and filed a brief for defendants in error. For their contentions see their briefs as reported in New York ex rel. Metropolitan Street R. Co. v. State Tax Comrs. ante, 65, and New York ex rel. Brooklyn City Railroad Co. v. State Board Tax Comrs. ante, 79.

Mr. Justice Brewer delivered the opinion of the court:

While these cases differ in some details from the two preceding, *in which opinions[54] have just been announced, there are no such differences as put them outside the scope of the reasoning of those opinions. Therefore, the judgments in them are affirmed.

WILLIAM H. H. GLEASON, Plff. in Err.,
v.
EDWARD L. WHITE.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 54–62.)

1. Error to state court—review of conflicting testimony.—A judgment of a state court will be affirmed by the United States Supreme Court on a writ of error if there is evidence sufficient to sustain it, although there may be other conflicting testimony, where no special findings of fact were made, and the proceedings in the trial court were approved by the highest state court without an opinion.

2. Public lands—right of patentee to profit by mistake of Land Department.—A patentee of a part of a fractional section whose patent, through the carelessness of the Land Department in relying on the description in his homestead entry, refers, for the description of the land conveyed, to the orig-

NOTE.—On the general subject of writs of error from United States Supreme Court to state courts—see notes to Hamblin v. Western Land Co. 37 L. ed. U. S. 267; Kipley v. Illinois, 42 L. ed. U. S. 998; Re Buchanan, 39 L. ed. U. S. 884.

On what adjudications of state courts can be inal survey, which calls for a water boundary on the east, although a resurvey had then been made at his instance, cannot recover from a subsequent patentee under the second survey any land lying east of the meander line as shown on the earlier survey, since otherwise he would profit by a mistake of the government of which he must have been cognizant.

[No. 188.]

Argued and submitted March 16, 17, 1905. Decided May 29, 1905.

IN ERROR to the Supreme Court of the State of Florida to review a judgment which affirmed a judgment of the Circuit Court of the Seventh Judicial Circuit in and for Dade County, in that state, in favor of defendant in an action to recover a parcel of land claimed under a patent from the United States. Affirmed.

Statement by Mr. Justice Brewer:

In 1845 fractional township 53 south, range 42 west, in Dade county, Florida, was surveyed and a plat thereof was approved and filed in the office of the surveyor general in Florida, and also in the office of the Land Department of Washington. By this survey fractional section 19 was divided into two lots, numbered 1 and 2, containing 164.84 acres. In 1875 a resurvey was made of the township, plats of which were also duly approved and filed in the office of the [55]*surveyor general in Florida, and with the Land Department at Washington. By this new survey, said section 19 was divided into 7 lots, containing, in the aggregate, 337.76 acres. The difference between the two surveys of section 19 is shown in the following plats. (See opposite page.)

On June 24, 1878, a patent was issued to William H. Gleason, on a homestead application, for a tract described as lots 1 and 2 of section 19 containing 164.84 acres, according to the official plat of the survey of 1845. Plaintiff in error, who was plaintiff below, claims by deed from the patentee. On May 4, 1885, lot 5 of section 19, according to the survey in 1875, was patented by the United States to Florida as swamp land, and thereafter deeded by the state to the defendant. In 1898 this *action to recover a [56] part of lot 5 was commenced in the circuit court of the seventh judicial circuit of Florida, in and for Dade county. The case was tried by the court without a jury; a judgment rendered for the defendant was affirmed by the supreme court of the state, and thereafter brought to this court on writ of error. Included in the action was lot 1 of section 19, as shown by the plat of 1875, but, as judgment was rendered for the plaintiff in respect to that tract, it is unnecessary to further refer to it. There was a stipulation as to certain facts, with a provision that testimony of further facts might be received, and that the court might view the premises. The findings of the court recite that it viewed the premises, and, upon the stipulated facts, and further testimony incorporated in a bill of exceptions, found generally for the defendant as to lot 5.

Mr. George M. Robbins argued the cause and filed a brief for plaintiff in error.

Mr. Edward L. White, in propria persona, submitted the cause for defendant in error.

Mr. Justice Brewer delivered the opinion of the court:

The case was tried by the court without a jury. No special findings of fact having been made, and the proceedings in the trial court having been approved by the supreme court of the state, without an opinion, we must affirm the judgment if there be evidence sufficient to sustain it, although there may be other testimony of a contradictory nature. It is not our province to weigh conflicting testimony in a case coming to us as this does.

It is undoubtedly true that the official surveys of the public lands of the United States are controlling. Stoneroad v. Stoneroad, 158 U. S. 240, 39 L. ed. 966, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 822; Russell v. Maxwell Land Grant Co. 158 U. S. 253, 39 L. ed. 971, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 827; United States v. Montana Lumber & Mfg. Co. 196 U. S. 573, 49 L. ed. 604, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 367; Whitaker v. McBride, 197 U. S. 510, 49 L. ed. 857, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 530. Here we have two con-brought up for review in the Supreme Court of the United States by writ of error to those courts—see note to Apex Transp. Co. v. Garbade, 62 L. R. A. 513.

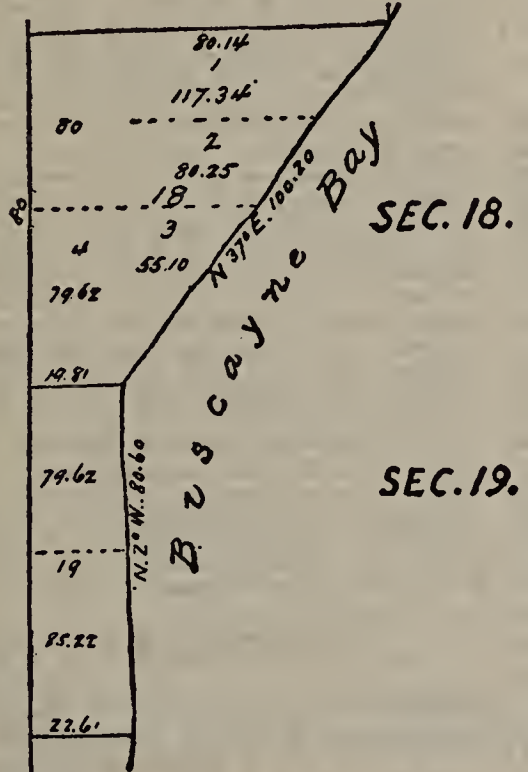
On how and when questions must be raised and decided in a state court in order to make a case for a writ of error from the Supreme Court of the United States—see note to Mutual L. Ins. Co. v. McGrew, 63 L. R. A. 33.

On what the record must show respecting the presentation and decision of a Federal question in order to confer jurisdiction on the Supreme Court of the United States on a writ of error to a state court—see note to Hooker v. Los Angeles, 63 L. R. A. 471.

As to what is the record for this purpose—see note to Home for Incurables v. New York, 63 L. R. A. 329.



On what questions the Federal Supreme Court will consider in reviewing the judgments of state courts— see note to Missouri ex rel. Hill v. Dockery, 63 L. R. A. 571.

On the practice and procedure governing the transfer of causes to the Federal Supreme Court on writ of error or appeal—see note to Wedding v. Meyler, 66 L. R. A. 833.

flicting official surveys and plats, and, by mistake of the Land Department, two patents have been issued, which, in a certain aspect of the surveys and plats, also conflict. It is one of those unfortunate mistakes which sometimes occur, and which necessarily throw confusion and doubt upon titles. Since it was discovered, the Land Department has wisely refused to extend the confusion by further patents under the survey of 1875.

The patent to Gleason was three years after the last survey, which, in so far as it conflicted with the prior survey, superseded that, and became the official record of the Land Department. Notwithstanding this, the patent purports to convey lots 1 and 2 as shown by the survey of 1845. Undoubtedly the mistake arose because the homestead entry, which must have been five years before the patent, was made before the survey of 1875, and at that time the official record was the plat of 1845, which showed only the two lots. Through care-[61] lessness, *and not recognizing the change made by the survey of 1875, the patent refers to the survey of 1845, relying upon the description in the homestead entry. The land patented amounted to 164.84 acres. The homestead law allowed one to enter 160 acres, and as the patent covered 4.84 acres more than the amount allowed for a homestead, the patentee paid the government price for the excess,—$6.05. The contract of McKay for the survey of 1845 was a contract to survey the exterior lines of township 53, and, while the field notes of the west line of the township are preserved, his notes of the east and subdivision lines are not to be found in the Land Department. The plat, as will be seen, shows an east line running north 2° west, 80.60 chains, a south line 22.61 chains from the west line, and a north line 19.81 chains, making almost a rectangle, and containing the number of acres described in the patent. East of this township appears Biscayne bay, according to each plat. The plat made in 1875 shows a south line of 22.35 chains, very nearly the same as that of the plat of 1845, but the north line is 59.92 chains, making an almost complete quarter of the N. W. sec. 19. The field notes of the survey of 1875 show that the surveyor found on the line between sections 18 and 19, at a distance of 40.35 chains from the west township line, an old quarter section post, and set a new one in place of it. It would seem a not unreasonable conclusion from this that McKay, in 1845, in fact surveyed a tract of land east of lots 1 and 2, but that when the plat was made either his field notes had disappeared or were ignored in running the lines of the north half of section 19. It further appears that the survey of 1875 was requested by the patentee,

Plat 1845.

Plat 1875.

William H. Gleason, who stated that the survey of the entire township was entirely, or almost entirely, obliterated. It also appears that Gleason, when he received his patent, took title to what was substantially the west half of the northwest quarter and the west half of the southwest quarter of section 19, the east line, as shown by the plat, being almost a straight line, running north and south. It does not seem that he [62] could have *been mistaken as to the land that he was acquiring from the government, for he must have lived on it five years in order to have perfected his homestead. He could not have been ignorant of the large tract lying east of what was described in the plat of 1845 as "lot 1." The official plat at the time of the patent was the plat of the survey of 1875. He was chargeable, as matter of law, with notice of that plat. More than that, as the survey was at his instance, it is a reasonable assumption that he knew in fact what the lines of that survey and plat were. Under those circumstances full justice is done if a patent title to lands outside his lines, as shown by the plat of 1845, is sustained, for he still is protected in the tract bounded by those lines, and amounting to 164.84 acres. To give him twice that amount of land would be enabling him to profit by a mistake of the government,—a mistake of which he was cognizant. Under those circumstances we are of opinion that the judgment of the Supreme Court of Florida must be and it is affirmed.

FREDERICK A. HYDE, Appt.,
v.
JOHN H. SHINE.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 62-88.)

1. Criminal law—removal to another Federal district for trial.—A person indicted in the supreme court of the District of Columbia for an offense against the United States may be removed to that District for trial, under U. S. Rev. Stat. § 1014, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 716, authorizing the removal for trial of a person charged with such a crime to the Federal district where the trial is to be had.

2. Courts—jurisdiction of District of Columbia supreme court over conspiracy to defraud United States.—The jurisdiction of the supreme court of the District of Columbia over a criminal conspiracy charged to have been entered into in the city of Washington is not defeated because such offense was also triable in the states of California and Oregon, on the theory that it was therefore "lawfully triable in any other court," within the meaning of D. C. Comp. Stat. chap. 35, § 23, excluding offenses so triable from the jurisdiction of that court over crimes and misdemeanors committed in the District, and which are, by law, to be prosecuted by indictment or information.

3. Conspiracy—to defraud United States.—A conspiracy to obtain school lands from the states of California and Oregon in the names of fictitious or disqualified persons by the use of forged affidavits, assignments, and other documents, and to relinquish them to the United States under the act of June 4, 1897 (30 Stat. at L. 36, chap. 2, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 1541), in exchange for other public lands, cannot escape condemnation under U. S. Rev. Stat. § 5440, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 3676, forbidding conspiracies to defraud the United States, on the theory that the United States, having received the school lands in lieu of the other lands patented, has not been defrauded, —even assuming that the United States stands in the position of a bona fide purchaser in respect to the school lands.

4. Habeas corpus—sufficiency of indictment to sustain removal to another Federal district.—The sufficiency of an indictment charging a conspiracy under U. S. Rev. Stat. § 5440, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 3676, "to defraud the United States out of the possession and use of, and the title to, divers large tracts of public lands of the United States," as against objections based on the lack of description of the lands, the uncertainty of the allegations as to the means to be used to carry out the alleged conspiracy, the failure to give the names of the fictitious or disqualified persons through whom the fraud was effected, the indefiniteness and inconsistency of the allegations, and the improper conclusion, will not be determined on habeas corpus to inquire into a detention to await a warrant for the removal of the accused, under § 1014, to the Federal district where the trial is to be had, but such objections are for the trial court to determine.

5. Habeas corpus—probable cause to sustain removal to another Federal district.—A Federal court is not required to weigh the evidence of probable cause on habeas corpus to inquire into a detention to await the removal of the accused to another Federal district for trial, although a prisoner may have the right, on habeas corpus, under the state practice, to have the state court consider that question, since the provision of U. S. Rev. Stat. § 1014, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 716, that the usual mode of process adopted in the state shall be pursued, refers to the proceedings in arrest and examination of the accused before the commissioner; and has no bear-

---

NOTE.—On removal to another Federal district for trial of persons there charged with an offense against the United States—see note to Greene v. Henkel, 46 L. ed. U. S. 177.

On the jurisdiction of United States courts on habeas corpus—see Re Reinitz, 4 L. R. A. 236, and note. See also notes to State ex rel. Cochran v. Winters, 10 L. R. A. 616; Re Huse, 25 C. C. A. 4; and Tinsley v. Anderson, 43 L. ed. U. S. 91.

As to questions reviewable by habeas corpus—see notes to State v. Jackson, 1 L.R.A. 373; Bion's Appeal, 11 L.R.A. 694; United States v. Hamilton, 1 L. ed. U. S. 490; Ex parte Carll, 27 L. ed. U. S. 288; Oteiza y Cortes v. Jacobus, 34 L. ed. U. S. 464; and Pearce v. Texas, 39 L. ed. U. S. 164.

ing upon a subsequent independent proceeding on habeas corpus.

6. Appeal—questions reviewable—discretionary orders.—The refusal of a Federal circuit court to grant certiorari as ancillary to a writ of habeas corpus is within its discretion, and cannot be assigned as error.

[No. 406.]

Argued February 21, 23, 1905. Decided May 29, 1905.

APPEAL from the Circuit Court of the United States for the Northern District of California to review the denial of habeas corpus and certiorari to inquire into a detention to await the removal of a person charged with an offense against the United States to the District of Columbia, where the trial is to be had. Affirmed.

Statement by Mr. Justice Brown:

This is an appeal from an order of the circuit court, denying the appellant's application for writs of habeas corpus and certiorari, and dismissing his petition therefor.

The proceedings which culminated in the arrest and remanding of the appellant originated in an indictment found in the supreme court of the District of Columbia [64] against the appellant *and John A. Benson, Henry P. Dimond, and Joost H. Schneider, charging them with a conspiracy, under Rev. Stat. § 5440, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 3676, "to defraud the United States out of the possession and use of, and the title to, divers large tracts of the public lands of the United States." All of the defendants except Schneider are residents of San Francisco, California. Upon a complaint made, based upon such indictment, before a United States commissioner for the northern district of California, Hyde was arrested under Rev. Stat. § 1014, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 716, taken before a commissioner, and held to bail to answer the indictment in the sum of $50,000, and in default thereof was committed to the custody of the defendant, Shine, to await the order of the district judge for his removal to the District of Columbia, or until he should be discharged by due course of law. Upon such order of removal being issued (United States v. Hyde, 132 Fed. 545), appellant presented his petition to the circuit court for the northern district of California, praying for writs of habeas corpus and certiorari, and for his discharge from imprisonment, which were denied, and this appeal taken.

Messrs. Charles C. Cole and William B. Hornblower argued the cause and filed a brief for appellant:

The statute under which the proceeding referred to in the petition was prosecuted does not authorize a removal from a United States judicial district in a state to the District of Columbia.

Hornbuckle v. Toombs, 18 Wall. 648, 655, 21 L. ed. 966, 967; Good v. Martin, 95 U. S. 90, 98, 24 L. ed. 341, 344; Reynolds v. United States, 98 U. S. 145–154, 25 L. ed. 244–246; McAllister v. United States, 141 U. S. 174, 35 L. ed. 693, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 949; United States v. Guiteau, 1 Mackey, 563, appx.

The conspiracy is the offense, and the overt acts are no part thereof, but the offense is complete as soon as the conspiracy is entered into.

United States v. Hirsch, 100 U. S. 33, 25 L. ed. 539; United States v. Britton, 108 U. S. 192, 27 L. ed. 703, 2 Sup. Ct. Rep. 525; Dealy v. United States, 152 U. S. 539, 38 L. ed. 545, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 680; Bannon v. United States, 156 U. S. 464, 39 L. ed. 494, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 467; McKenna v. United States, 62 C. C. A. 88, 127 Fed. 88; Conrad v. United States, 62 C. C. A. 478, 127 Fed. 799; Gantt v. United States, 47 C. C. A. 210, 108 Fed. 61; United States v. Watson, 17 Fed. 145; United States v. Lancaster, 44 Fed. 896; United States v. Gardner, 42 Fed. 829; United States v. Greene, 115 Fed. 343.

Even if it should be held that an overt act was necessary to complete the crime of conspiracy, that would not aid the jurisdiction of the supreme court of the District of Columbia in this case; for if an overt act is necessary to complete the crime, then the first overt act performed in pursuance of the conspiracy completes the offense.

This position is sustained by the holding of the courts upon the question of the statute of limitations, the rule being that the statute of limitations begins to run from the time of the commission of the first overt act, and that subsequent overt acts do not constitute a new conspiracy.

United States v. Owen, 32 Fed. 534; United States v. McCord, 72 Fed. 159.

Upon application for warrant of removal, or upon habeas corpus while the party is in custody under such warrant or the warrant of the commissioner, it is the duty of the court to look into the indictment; and if it charges no offense against the United States, or is so essentially and fundamentally defective that a conviction could not be sustained thereon, or the court in which it was found has not jurisdiction of the offense, it is the duty of the court to discharge the petitioner.

Re Buell, 3 Dill. 116, Fed. Cas. No. 2,102; Re Terrell, 51 Fed. 213; Stewart v. United States, 55 C. C. A. 641, 119 Fed. 89; Re

Greene, 52 Fed. 104; Horner v. United States, 143 U. S. 207, 36 L. ed. 126, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 407.

It is also to be remembered that the question of jurisdiction is always an open one upon habeas corpus, even where the party is held pursuant to a final judgment of a court.

Callan v. Wilson, 127 U. S. 540, 32 L. ed. 223, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1301.

And even in civil cases, wherever a judgment of a court is presented as a cause of action or ground of defense, it may be impeached collaterally on the ground of the want of jurisdiction in the court rendering it, and facts may be pleaded and proved which contradict the finding of the record upon jurisdictional questions.

Thompson v. Whitman, 18 Wall. 457, 21 L. ed. 897.

The removal of the appellant to the District of Columbia for trial would be in violation of his constitutional right to be tried in the district where the alleged offense was committed.

3 Story, Const. chap. 28, § 1775; Beavers v. Henkel, 194 U. S. 83, 48 L. ed. 886, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 605.

The doctrine of constructive presence in the locality of the alleged commission of a crime, when the party was actually not present, was always an odious doctrine in England and also in this country, and by the Federal Constitution was eliminated from the administration of criminal justice.

Burr's Case, 4 Cranch, 470, appx., Fed. Cas. No. 14,693.

It is not only the settled doctrine of this court, but also of the supreme court of California, that a patent granting public lands, although procured by irregularities or fraud, cannot be questioned collaterally, but only by a direct proceeding on behalf of the government to avoid the patent because of the fraud of irregularities, and that such a proceeding cannot be maintained against any party who stands in the position of a purchaser for value without notice.

O'Connor v. Frasher, 56 Cal. 499; Doll v. Meador, 16 Cal. 295; Thomas v. Lawlor, 53 Cal. 405; Gale v. Best, 78 Cal. 235, 12 Am. St. Rep. 44, 20 Pac. 550; Turner v. Donnelly, 70 Cal. 597, 12 Pac. 469; Moore v. Wilkinson, 13 Cal. 478; Yount v. Howell, 14 Cal. 465; Miller v. Dale, 44 Cal. 562; Kentfield v. Hayes, 57 Cal. 409; Plummer v. Brown, 70 Cal. 544, 12 Pac. 464; Chapman v. Quinn, 56 Cal. 278; Irvine v. Tarbat, 105 Cal. 242, 38 Pac. 896; Dreyfus v. Badger, 108 Cal. 58, 41 Pac. 279; Standard Quicksilver Co. v. Habishaw, 132 Cal. 115, 64 Pac. 113; Phillips v. Carter, 135 Cal. 604, 87 Am. St. Rep. 152, 67 Pac. 1031; Saunders v. LaPurisima Gold Min. Co. 125 Cal. 159, 57 Pac. 656; Harrington v. Goldsmith, 136 Cal. 169, 68 Pac. 594; Marshall v. Farmer's Bank, 115 Cal. 330, 42 Pac. 418, 47 Pac. 52; Colorado Coal & I. Co. v. United States, 123 U. S. 307, 31 L. ed. 182, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 131; United States v. California & O. Land Co. 1 C. C. A. 330, 7 U. S. App. 128, 49 Fed. 496, 148 U. S. 31, 37 L. ed. 354, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 458; United States v. Winona & St. P. R. Co. 165 U. S. 463, 41 L. ed. 789, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 368; United States v. Chicago, M. & St. P. R. Co. 195 U. S. 524, 49 L. ed. 306, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 113.

If a person by false and fraudulent representations obtains the consent of a defendant to the entry of a judgment in his favor in an action then pending, and the payment of a sum of money in satisfaction of that judgment, he cannot be convicted of obtaining the money by false pretenses.

7 Am. & Eng. Enc. Law, p. 713; Com. v. Harkins, 128 Mass. 79.

A party cannot maintain an action of damages against another for procuring a judgment against him by fraud, or for issuing execution thereon while the judgment remains valid of record.

Huffer v. Allen, L. R. 2 Exch. 15; Castrique v. Behrens, 30 L. J. Q. B. N. S. 163, 3 El. & El. 709; Engstrom v. Sherburne, 137 Mass. 153; Dunlap v. Glidden, 31 Me. 435, 52 Am. Dec. 625; Smith v. Abbott, 40 Me. 442; Lyford v. Demerritt, 32 N. H. 234; Hillsborough v. Nichols, 46 N. H. 379; Nicholson v. Nicholson, 113 Ind. 131, 15 N. E. 223; Peck v. Woodbridge, 3 Day, 30; Kimball v. Newport, 47 Vt. 38; Stackhouse v. Keiger, 25 W. N. C. 436.

Where the facts stated in the indictment, if true, might show a conspiracy to defraud or to commit an offense against a state, the offense cannot, by a mere allegation to that effect, be converted into a conspiracy to defraud or commit an offense against the United States.

United States v. Crafton, 4 Dill. 145, Fed. Cas. No. 14,881; Pettibone v. United States, 148 U. S. 197, 37 L. ed. 419, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 542.

The allegations of the indictment are uncertain, inconsistent, insensible, and repugnant, and insufficient to inform the appellant of the nature and cause of the accusation against him.

United States v. Cruikshank, 92 U. S. 542, 23 L. ed. 588; United States v. Hess, 124 U. S. 483, 31 L. ed. 516, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 571; United States v. Milner, 36 Fed. 890; Dealy v. United States, 152 U. S. 547, 38 L. ed. 548, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 680; Haynes v. United States, 42 C. C. A. 34, 101 Fed. 817; United States v. Glover, 32 Fed. 142; United States v. Simmons, 96 U. S. 360, 24 L. ed. 819; United States v. Pope, Fed. Cas. No. 16,069;

1 Bishop, New Crim. Proc. 281; 2 Hawk. P. C. p. 325; Lehman v. United States, 61 C. C. A. 577, 127 Fed. 45; People v. Myers, 20 Cal. 76; 10 Enc. Pl. & Pr. p. 532, note 2; Stewart v. United States, 55 C. C. A. 641, 119 Fed. 89.

It was the right of the prisoner to have the court consider the question of probable cause upon the writ of habeas corpus.

People v. Smith, 1 Cal. 9; Re Troia, 64 Cal. 152, 28 Pac. 231; Ex parte Palmer, 86 Cal. 631, 25 Pac. 130; Ex parte Walpole, 85 Cal. 362, 24 Pac. 657.

The same rule prevails in the Federal courts. It is common practice for those courts to bring before them the evidence produced before the committing magistrate, upon which the commitment is founded, and where the evidence is reduced to writing in the form of a deposition, whether by the committing magistrate or by other competent authority; this is frequently done by certiorari in aid of habeas corpus.

Re Martin, 5 Blatchf. 303, Fed. Cas. No. 9,151; Greene v. Henkel, 183 U. S. 249, 46 L. ed. 177, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 218.

It is not contended that the court below, or this court, should weigh the evidence if it be conflicting, but that it should consider it for the purpose of determining whether there was any sufficient evidence before the commissioner from which he might reasonably have found probable cause.

Re Oteiza y Cortes (Oteiza y Cortes v. Jacobus), 136 U. S. 330, 34 L. ed. 464, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1031; Bryant v. United States (Ex parte Bryant), 167 U. S. 104, 42 L. ed. 94, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 744.

Solicitor General Hoyt and Mr. Francis J. Heney argued the cause, and, with Mr. Arthur B. Pugh, filed a brief for appellee:

It is well settled that, wherever conspirators act, there they renew or continue their illegal agreement; and such agreement is renewed or continued as to all wherever and whenever any one of them does an act in furtherance of the common design. The law regards the illegal agreement itself, existing and in force, as the crime; and if the conspirators, or any of them, commit an act in furtherance of the conspiracy in a different jurisdiction from that in which the illegal agreement was originally formed, such act operates as a renewal or continuance of the agreement.

People v. Mather, 4 Wend. 229, 21 Am. Dec. 122; Com. v. Bartilson, 85 Pa. 482; 6 Am. & Eng. Enc. Law, p. 844; United States v. Rindskopf, 6 Biss. 259, Fed. Cas. No. 16,165; Fire Ins. Cos. v. State, 75 Miss. 24, 22 So. 99; People v. Willis, 23 Misc. 568, 52 N. Y. Supp. 808.

Is it competent for the court upon habeas corpus proceedings to determine whether or not the scheme set forth in the indictment constitutes a conspiracy to defraud the United States within the meaning of § 5440 of the Revised Statutes?

Horner v. United States, 143 U. S. 570, 577, 36 L. ed. 266, 269, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 522; Ex parte Rickelt, 61 Fed. 203.

Moreover, in this case the commissioner and the district judge, having jurisdiction both of the subject-matter and of the persons, have determined the question against the defendants; and it is well settled that the writ of habeas corpus cannot be used as a writ of error.

Horner v. United States, 143 U. S. 570, 577, 36 L. ed. 266, 269, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 522; Stevens v. Fuller, 136 U. S. 468, 477, 34 L. ed. 461, 463, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 911; Re Oteiza y Cortes (Oteiza y Cortes v. Jacobus) 136 U. S. 330, 334, 34 L. ed. 464, 466, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1031; Ex parte Yarbrough, 110 U. S. 651, 28 L. ed. 274, 4 Sup. Ct. Rep. 152; Ex parte Parks, 93 U. S. 18, 23, 23 L. ed. 787, 788; Ex parte Rickelt, 61 Fed. 203.

It seems to be well settled by the authorities that if the indictment or the complaint under which a person is imprisoned does not charge any offense whatever, or if the action of the committing magistrate is wholly without his jurisdiction, the remedy by habeas corpus will lie. But this is when it is clear and manifest that the matter is wholly without the jurisdiction of the court or committing magistrate, or that the acts charged are necessarily innocent in themselves and such as the legislature could not properly declare to constitute a crime.

Ex parte Watkins, 3 Pet. 193, 7 L. ed. 650; Ex parte Parks, 93 U. S. 18, 20, 23 L. ed. 787, 788; Ex parte Siebold, 100 U. S. 371, 376, 25 L. ed. 717, 719.

The courts of general jurisdiction in the District of Columbia have always been regarded and treated as courts of the United States, even prior to the enactment of the new Code of the District.

Moss v. United States, 23 App. D. C. 475; Embry v. Palmer, 107 U. S. 3, 27 L. ed. 346, 2 Sup. Ct. Rep. 25.

Territorial courts are "courts of the United States," as that designation is applied in § 33 of the judiciary act, to wit, § 1014 of the Revised Statutes, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 716.

United States v. Haskins, 3 Sawy. 262, Fed. Cas. No. 15,322.

All laws must be construed, if possible, to prevent absurd or mischievous results.

Maxwell, Interpretation of Statutes, 179; Sutherland, Stat. Const. §§ 323, 324; Lau Ow Bew v. United States, 144 U. S. 47, 59, 36 L. ed. 340, 344, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 517.

Mr. Justice Brown delivered the opinion of the court:

The petitioner assigns as error—

1. That Rev. Stat. § 1014, does not authorize a removal from a judicial district in a state to the District of Columbia;

2. That the supreme court of the District of Columbia has no jurisdiction over the alleged offense charged in the indictment;

3. That the indictment charges no offense against the United States;

4. That the evidence introduced before the commissioner proved that there was no probable cause for believing him guilty of the offense, and that the writ of certiorari should have been issued to bring the record before the court, and upon its inspection the appellant should have been discharged.

1. The first assignment is practically disposed of by the recent case of Benson v. Henkel, 198 U. S. 1, 49 L. ed. 919, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 569, in which one of the codefendants of the petitioner in this case, who had been arrested in Brooklyn, was held to be prop-
[76] erly removed to the *District of Columbia under Rev. Stat. § 1014. No additional considerations being presented, that case must be treated as controlling.

2. The second assignment, that the supreme court of the District of Columbia had no jurisdiction of the alleged offense, is based upon the proposition that the conspiracy, if any existed, was entered into either in the northern district of California or the district of Oregon; and that nothing but overt acts in pursuance of the conspiracy were done in the District of Columbia. Granting that the gravamen of the offense is the conspiracy, and that, at common law, it was neither necessary to aver nor prove an overt act (Rex v. Gill, 2 Barn. & Ald. 204; Bannon v. United States, 156 U. S. 464–468, 39 L. ed. 494–496, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 467), an overt act is necessary, under Rev. Stat. § 5440, to complete the offense. The language of the section is, "if two or more persons conspire either to commit any offense against the United States, or to defraud the United States in any manner or for any purpose, and one or more of such parties do any act to effect the object of the conspiracy, all the parties to such conspiracy shall be liable," etc.

It was aptly said by Mr. Justice Woods in United States v. Britton, 108 U. S. 199, 204, 27 L. ed. 698, 700, 2 Sup. Ct. Rep. 531, that the offense consisted in the conspiracy, and that the overt act afforded a locus penitentiæ, so that, before the act done, either one or all of the parties may abandon their design, and thus avoid the penalty prescribed by the statute. As the indictment in this case charges that the conspiracy was entered into in the city of Washington, it becomes unnecessary to consider whether an indictment will lie within the jurisdiction where the overt act was committed, though there are many authorities to that effect. King v. Brisac, 4 East, 164; People v. Mather, 4 Wend. 229, 21 Am. Dec. 122; Com. v. Gillespie, 7 Serg. & R. 469, 10 Am. Dec. 475; Noyes v. State, 41 N. J. L. 418; Com. v. Corlies, 3 Brewst. 575.

We have ourselves decided that, if the conspiracy be entered into within the jurisdiction of the trial court, the indictment will lie there, though the overt act is shown to have been committed *in another jurisdic-[77] tion, or even in a foreign country. Dealy v. United States, 152 U. S. 539, 38 L. ed. 545, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 680; Re Palliser (Palliser v. United States), 136 U. S. 257, 34 L. ed. 514, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1034; King v. Brisac, 4 East, 164; Rev. Stat. § 731, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 585.

In this connection it is also suggested that, as the conspiracy is alleged in all the counts to have been entered into prior to January 1, 1902, as well as the overt act charged in fifteen of the counts, the supreme court of the District of Columbia cannot take cognizance of the case under the new code which took effect upon that date, and that we must look to the law prior thereto to determine the jurisdiction of that court. By § 23, chap. 35, of the Compiled Statutes of the District of Columbia, it was enacted that "the criminal court of the District of Columbia shall have jurisdiction of all crimes and misdemeanors committed in said district, not lawfully triable in any other court, and which are required by law to be prosecuted by indictment or information."

The argument is made that, as the conspiracy in this case was triable in California or Oregon, as well as in the District of Columbia, it was lawfully triable in another court, and hence the supreme court of the District of Columbia has no jurisdiction. We are not impressed with the force of this contention. Chapter 35 provides for the organization of the judiciary of the District of Columbia, and relates exclusively to the jurisdiction and powers of the several courts of the District, providing that one of the justices may hold a criminal court, and that such court shall have jurisdiction of all crimes and misdemeanors committed in said District not lawfully triable in any other court, and which are required by law to be prosecuted by indictment or information. It is entirely clear that this has reference only to other courts within the District, and was not intended to change the law with respect to the general jurisdiction of courts having jurisdiction of the same offense.

Although it involves a seeming hardship to commit an accused person in San Francisco for trial in the District of Columbia, the terms of Rev. Stat. § 1014, are as applicable to such a case as they would be if [78] the arrest were made in Baltimore. *The section makes no discrimination based upon distance, and requires the commitment to be made for trial before the court having cognizance of the offense, wherever that court may sit. Where the statute contains no exception, the courts cannot create one. Indeed, the Constitution itself requires that the trial of all crimes shall be held in the state where the crimes have been committed, and the power of Congress to order the surrender of accused persons from other states is a necessary complement to the duty of trying offenses in the jurisdiction where the crime was committed. But we do not wish to be understood as approving the practice of indicting citizens of distant states in the courts of this District, where an indictment will lie in the state of the domicil of such person, unless in exceptional cases, where the circumstances seem to demand that this course shall be taken. To require a citizen to undertake a long journey across the continent to face his accusers, and to incur the expense of taking his witnesses, and of employing counsel in a distant city, involves a serious hardship, to which he ought not to be subjected if the case can be tried in a court of his own jurisdiction.

3. The third assignment—that the indictment charges no offense against the United States—requires a statement of its substance. As it contains forty-two different counts and covers some ninety-four pages of printed matter, a consideration of each count would unnecessarily prolong this opinion. The conspiracy charged embraced certain false practices by the defendants, whereby school lands were to be obtained fraudulently from the states of California and Oregon by Hyde and Benson, (1) in the names of fictitious persons, and (2) in the names of persons not qualified to purchase the same, whereby the said Hyde and Benson were to cause and require such school lands to be relinquished by means of false and forged relinquishments, assignments, and conveyances to the United States, in exchange for public lands, to be selected, and for titles thereto by patents to be obtained by and on behalf of the said Hyde and Benson. A further element of the conspiracy
[79] *is that defendants were, by bribery, to induce certain United States officials in the General Land Office, at Washington, in the District of Columbia, corruptly, and contrary to their official duties, to aid defendants to secure the approval of their fraudulent selections in advance of their regular order, and to inform defendants of any discovery or investigation by the government of their said fraudulent practices.

To grasp the significance of these somewhat complicated counts, and to appreciate the details of the offense charged, it should be borne in mind that the government had granted to California and Oregon large tracts of lands, many of which were covered with forests, known as school lands. Congress subsequently changed its intention with regard to them, and desired to retain them as forest reserves, and to reacquire the title thereto, and, for that purpose, enacted a law approved June 4, 1897 (30 Stat. at L. 36, chap. 2, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 1541), as follows:

"That in cases in which a tract covered by an unperfected bona fide claim or by a patent is included within the limits of a public forest reservation, the settler or owner thereof may, if he desires to do so, relinquish the tract to the government, and may select in lieu thereof a tract of vacant land open to settlement, not exceeding in area the tract covered by his claim or patent, and no charge shall be made in such cases for making the entry of record, or issuing the patent to cover the tract selected."

It seems that both of these states had passed laws by which any citizen of the United States resident in such state, or any person who had declared his intention to become a citizen, might acquire from such states a section or half section of such lands at $1.25 per acre. They were required to make application to the land offices of the state, and to make the necessary affidavits to show that they were qualified to purchase them, and that they were purchasing them for their own use or benefit, and had not sold or agreed to sell the same. Doubtless the intention was that the sale should be made to persons who desired to settle upon the lands; but there was *nothing to [80] prohibit such persons from afterwards disposing of them by assigning the certificates of purchase, and in this method the assignee might, by purchase from several patentees, acquire title to an unlimited amount of such lands, and might thereafter exchange such lands under the act of June 4, 1897, with the United States, provided he had acquired a valid title from the states, and convey the same to the United States in lieu of the land to be granted by the government.

The argument of the defendants that while the procuring of these school lands from the states through persons who were not qualified to purchase them, and did not desire to purchase them for their own use, and by supporting their application by false affidavits and forged assignments of the certificates of purchase, might have been a violation of the policy of the states of California and Oregon, and a fraud upon such states, it fails to show that the United States could have in any way been defrauded. The argument assumes that the title acquired by the defendants from the states in question was such a title as, upon conveyance to the United States, would vest in the latter a title good as against all the world, and therefore that the United States were not defrauded.

While it is doubtless true that, by means of these corrupt and fraudulent practices, Hyde and Benson may have obtained titles to these lands, it does not follow that the states might not have disaffirmed such titles, and recovered the lands. In this particular the case is covered by that of Moffat v. United States, 112 U. S. 24, 28 L. ed. 623, 5 Sup. Ct. Rep. 10. Nor does it follow that, when subsequent conveyances were made to the United States of these lands under the act of June 4, 1897, a good title was vested in the grantee. In the Moffat Case it was held that a patent issued to a fictitious person conveys no title which can be transferred to a person subsequently purchasing in good faith from a supposed owner. In delivering the opinion of the court, Mr. Justice Field observed: "The patents, being issued to fictitious parties, could not transfer the title, and no one could derive any right under a conveyance in the name [81] of the *supposed patentees. A patent to a fictitious person is, in legal effect, no more than a declaration that the government thereby conveys the property to no one. There is, in such case, no room for the application of the doctrine that a subsequent bona fide purchaser is protected. A subsequent purchaser is bound to know whether there was in fact a patentee,—a person once in being, and not a mere myth,—and he will always be presumed to take his conveyance upon the knowledge of the truth in this respect. To the application of this doctrine of a bona fide purchaser there must be a genuine instrument, having a legal existence, as well as one appearing on its face to pass the title. It cannot arise on a forged instrument or one executed to fictitious parties, that is, to no parties at all, however much deceived thereby the purchaser may be."

The argument that this indictment cannot be sustained because the United States, having received the school lands in lieu of the lands patented, were defrauded of nothing, if valid at all, applies equally to the school lands for which the states of California and Oregon must have received a statutory compensation, fixed at $1.25 per acre. Having received this compensation it may be said, with equal propriety, that they were defrauded of nothing. The result of the argument, then, is that, although a gross imposition was practised upon the states by the procuring of patents in favor of fictitious persons or of disqualified persons by the use of forged affidavits, assignments, or other documents, no indictment therefor would lie because the states had received the same consideration they would have received had the patents been issued to persons qualified under the statutes to purchase the lands. The unsoundness of this argument needs no demonstration. The states have a right to punish a violation of a statute enacted as part of their public policy, notwithstanding they may have suffered no pecuniary damage therefrom.

The same argument applies to the United States, whose lands have been procured in plain violation of the spirit, if not the letter, of the statute, and by a further step in the same fraudulent *scheme. By the act [82] of June 4, 1897 (30 Stat. at L. 36, chap. 2, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 1541), it is provided that in any case in which a tract covered by an unperfected bona fide claim, or by a patent, is included within the limits of a public forest reservation, the settler or owner thereof may, if he desires to do so, relinquish the tract to the government, etc. The privilege of the act is therefore reserved to a settler or owner; and as there is no claim that Hyde was a settler upon the lands, it only remains to consider whether he was an "owner" within the act. Although the word "owner" has a variety of meanings, and may, under certain circumstances, include an equitable as well as a legal ownership, or even a right of present use and possession, it implies something more than a bare legal title, and we know of no authority for saying that a person in possession of land under a void deed can be regarded as the owner thereof. Ownership may not imply a perfect title, but it implies something more than the possession of land under a title which is void; and when the government holds out to owners of lands an inducement to relinquish such lands in exchange for others, it implies that the persons with whom it is dealing, if not the owners in fee simple, are at least bona fide owners, with authority to dispose of and vest a good title thereto. We are clear that the defendant does not fall within this category, and that the United States may justly claim to have been defrauded out of the land patented to him. Cosmos Exploration Co. v. Gray Eagle Oil Co. 190 U. S. 301–308, 47 L. ed. 1064, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 692; Johnson v. Crookshanks, 21 Or. 339, 28 Pac. 78; Fallbrook Irrig. District v. Abila, 106 Cal. 355, 39 Pac. 794.

Whatever may be the rule in equity as to the necessity of proving an actual loss or damage to the plaintiff, we think a case is made out under this statute by proof of a conspiracy to defraud, and the commission of an overt act, notwithstanding the United States may have received a consideration for the lands, and suffered no pecuniary loss. MacLaren v. Cochran, 44 Minn. 255, 46 N. W. 408. The law punishes the false practices by which the lands were obtained, and the question whether the government stands in the position of a bona fide pur-[83] chaser *with respect to the school lands is not one which can be litigated in a criminal prosecution for a violation of law.

Even if the United States were in a position to claim the rights of a bona fide purchaser to the state lands, the methods by which these lands were acquired from the states, and the lands in exchange therefor procured from the United States, would be none the less a fraud, of which the latter might take advantage in a criminal prosecution. The indictment under § 5440 charges a conspiracy to defraud the United States out of the possession, use of, and title thereto, of divers large tracts of public lands; and if the title to these lands were obtained by fraudulent practices and in pursuance of a fraudulent design, it is none the less within the statute, though the United States might succeed in defeating a recovery of the state lands by setting up the rights of a bona fide purchaser. Under the circumstances it cannot be doubted that the United States might maintain a bill to cancel the patents to the exchanged lands procured by these fraudulent means, notwithstanding their title to the forest reserve lands might be good.

Other minor objections are taken to the indictment: that no description is given of the lands out of which the defendants are alleged to have conspired to defraud the government (Dealy v. United States, 152 U. S. 539, 543, 38 L. ed. 545, 547, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 680); that it is uncertain in its allegations as to the means to be used to carry out the alleged conspiracy; that the names representing the fictitious persons and of those not qualified to purchase, through whom the fraud was effected, are not given; that the allegations of the indictment are indefinite and inconsistent; that the conclusion is improper, etc.

It is sufficient to say of these objections that they are proper to be considered by the trial court, and that we do not feel called upon to express our own opinion in regard to them. Criticisms of this character are completely covered by the recent decision of this court in Benson v. Henkel, as well as in the cases of Ex parte Watkins, 3 Pet. 193–206, 7 L. ed. 650–654, and Ex parte Parks, 93 U. S. 18, 23 L. ed. 787, in both of which the petitioners sought *by writ of ha- [84] beas corpus to review the validity of certain indictments under which they had been convicted in the courts below, and in both this court declined to review the action of the court below. It was held that the question whether the act charged was or was not a crime was one which the trial court was competent to decide, and which this court would not review upon a writ of habeas corpus.

Our conclusion is that for the purposes of this case the indictment is sufficient.

4. The fourth assignment—that there was no probable cause for believing the petitioner guilty of the offense charged, and that the writ of certiorari should have been issued to bring the record before the court—is based upon that clause of § 1014, which requires that proceedings for the removal of persons from one district to another shall be "agreeably to the usual mode of process against offenders in such state," and § 1487 of the Code of California is cited to the effect that the petitioner shall be discharged where he has been committed upon a criminal charge without reasonable or probable cause. Certain cases are also cited from the supreme court of California, to the effect that it is the right of the prisoner to have the court consider the question of probable cause upon the writ of habeas corpus. People v. Smith, 1 Cal. 9; Ex parte Palmer, 86 Cal. 631, 25 Pac. 130; Ex parte Walpole, 85 Cal. 362, 24 Pac. 657. But see contra, Ex parte Long, 114 Cal. 159, 45 Pac. 1057.

In the Federal courts, however, it is well settled that upon habeas corpus the court will not weigh the evidence, although, if there is an entire lack of evidence to support the accusation, the court may order his discharge. In this case, however, the production of the indictment made at least a prima facie case against the accused, and if the commissioner received evidence on his behalf it was for him to say whether, upon the whole testimony, there was proof of probable cause. Re Oteiza y Cortes (Oteiza y Cortes v. Jacobus), 136 U. S. 330, 34 L. ed. 464, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1031; Bryant v. United States (Ex parte Bryant), 167 U. S. 104, 42 L. ed. 94, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 744. The requirement that the usual mode of process adopted in the state shall be pur- [85] sued refers to the proceedings for the *arrest and examination of the accused before the commissioner; but it has no bearing upon the subsequent independent proceeding before the circuit court upon habeas corpus. In this case the commissioner did receive evidence on behalf of the appellants, and, upon such evidence, found the existence of probable cause, and committed the defendants, and upon application to the district judge for the warrant of removal he reviewed his action, but did not pass upon the weight of the evidence.

While the circuit court may have had power to issue a writ of certiorari auxiliary to the writ of habeas corpus (Ex parte Burford, 3 Cranch, 448, 2 L. ed. 495; Re Martin, 5 Blatchf. 303, Fed. Cas. No. 9,151; Ex parte Bollman, 4 Cranch, 100, 2 L. ed. 563; Church, Habeas Corpus, § 260), it was under no obligation to do so, and its refusal cannot be assigned as error. Certiorari is a discretionary writ, and is often denied where the power to issue it is unquestionable. People ex rel. Church v. Allegany County, 15 Wend. 206; People ex rel. Vanderbilt v. Stilwell, 19 N. Y. 531; Rowe v. Rowe, 28 Mich. 353. Petitions for habeas corpus are frequently accompanied by applications for certiorari as ancillary thereto, and both are awarded or denied together. Appellant had nothing to complain of in the denial of the writ, and his petition should have set forth the evidence relied upon to show a want of probable cause. Terlinden v. Ames, 184 U. S. 279, 46 L. ed. 541, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 484; Craemer v. Washington, 168 U. S. 128, 42 L. ed. 408, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1.

There was no error in the action of the Circuit Court, and its judgment is therefore affirmed.

Mr. Justice Peckham (dissenting):

I dissent from the opinion and judgment of the court in this case, and wish simply to state the grounds of my dissent, without any attempt to do more. The indictment [86] avers that the *conspiracy was entered into in Washington, District of Columbia, on December 30, 1901, and the opinion holds, in substance (and rightly, as I think), that it is essential to aver its formation in the District in order to give the courts therein jurisdiction of the offense. The indictment constitutes prima facie evidence of probable cause, but evidence may be given to rebut it. It is averred in the application for the writs of habeas corpus and certiorari, in the case of Hyde, that the evidence taken before the commissioner showed indisputably that the petitioner was never in the District of Columbia, except upon one occasion in 1901, and then only for about six hours, and that he was not then guilty of any of the offenses charged in the indictment; and in the case of Dimond, it was said the evidence showed that the transactions complained of as a conspiracy occurred in California or Oregon, of which former state the defendant was, and had been for twenty years, a resident. In other words, it was claimed that the evidence before the commissioner showed conclusively and without contradiction that there was no probable cause to believe the defendants guilty of any offense as charged in the indictment. The writ of certiorari was called for in order that this evidence might be brought before the circuit judge, so that he could see from it that there was affirmative and conclusive proof of the absence of probable cause. The applications for the writs of habeas corpus and of certiorari were both denied. The opinion of the circuit judge, delivered upon refusing the writs, shows that the question of the want of probable cause to believe defendants guilty, based upon the absence of both defendants from the District of Columbia at the time of the alleged formation of the conspiracy, was not touched upon by him, but the objections considered were those based upon the charge contained in the indictment, and whether it charged an offense under the laws of the United States. This court now holds that the refusal of the judge to grant the writ of certiorari was within his discretion.

I think this is not the case for the application of the rule *stated in the cases [87] cited in the opinion of the court. Those from New York were based upon a matter of public policy, where the purpose was to overturn proceedings in assessments and taxation, in which the public was interested, and the courts refused in such cases to grant the writ. The result of the refusal in this case is to prevent the review of the findings of the commissioner before whom the original proceeding was had, upon the question of probable cause. I admit that the weight of evidence will not, in such cases, be reviewed here, but evidence which conclusively rebuts the presumption of probable cause arising from the indictment, and which is uncontradicted, may be looked at, and a finding of probable cause reversed. In order to refer to it the evidence must be part of the record, and in such a case as this the application for a writ of certiorari to bring up the evidence which the petitioner avers shows such fact is not addressed to the discretion of the court, but, on the contrary, the petitioner has the right to demand that it shall be granted. The right is none the less when the want of probable cause rests upon conclusive evidence of the absence of the defendants from the district at the time when the indictment alleges the conspiracy was formed in such district. If defendants were not then there, they could not be guilty of the crime charged in the indictment. This case is an extreme illustration of the very great hardship involved in sending a man 3,000 miles across the continent, from California or Oregon, to this district for trial, where he is to bring his witnesses, and where on such trial it will appear that the court must direct an acquittal because the averment of the formation of the conspiracy at Washington, D. C., is shown to be false to a demonstration.

The expense to a defendant in his necessary preparation for trial, and in procuring the attendance of witnesses in his behalf from such a distance, must necessarily be enormous; and in many, if not in most, cases, utterly beyond the ability of a defendant to pay. The enforcement of the criminal law should not be made oppressive in such cases, and therefore, when it [88] *appears there was no probable cause to found the indictment upon, the order of removal should be refused.

I am authorized to say that Mr. Justice White and Mr. Justice McKenna concur in this dissent.

HENRY P. DIMOND, Appt.,
v.
JOHN H. SHINE.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 88

This case is governed by the decision in Hyde v. Shine, ante, 90.

[No. 410.]

Argued February 21, 23, 1905. Decided May 29, 1905.

APPEAL from the Circuit Court of the United States for the Northern District of California to review the denial of habeas corpus and certiorari to inquire into a detention to await the removal of a person charged with an offense against the United States to the District of Columbia, where the trial is to be had. Affirmed.

Mr. Frank H. Platt argued the cause, and, with Messrs. Charles Page and Samuel Knight, filed a brief for appellant:

No person can in any case be removed to the District of Columbia for trial for any crime whatever.

American Ins. Co. v. Canter, 1 Pet. 516, note, 7 L. ed. 244, Fed. Cas. No. 302a; Cissel v. McDonald, 16 Blatchf. 150, Fed. Cas. No. 2,729; McAllister v. United States, 141 U. S. 174, 180, 185, 35 L. ed. 693, 695, 696, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 949; Re Dana, 68 Fed. 886.

No general act is locally applicable to the District of Columbia when there is a specific act in force on the same subject-matter.

Re Kirk, 3 Mackey, 116.

A person who commits a crime in the District of Columbia may be tried in the district in which he is found, or into which he is first brought.

United States v. Carr, 3 Sawy. 302, Fed. Cas. No. 14,730; Jones v. United States, 137 U. S. 202, 34 L. ed. 691, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 80; Cook v. United States, 138 U. S. 157, 34 L. ed. 906, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 268.

The prisoner must be tried in the judicial district where he is arrested.

United States v. Bird, 1 Sprague, 299, Fed. Cas. No. 14,597.

Even if applicable at all to the District of Columbia, U. S. Rev. Stat. § 1014, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 716, does not contemplate or authorize removal from a district, the courts of which are competent to try the offense.

Ex parte Baldwin, 69 Iowa, 502, 29 N. W. 428; Crater v. Barlow, 105 Iowa, 78, 74 N. W. 745; Re Johnson, 167 U. S. 120, 42 L. ed. 103, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 735; Re Twinan, 5 Best & S. 645; Wharton, 7th ed. §§ 2960, 2961; Tyler's Case (1859); Robbins Case (1874).

The venue of the alleged conspiracy is improperly laid in the District of Columbia.

United States v. Britton, 108 U. S. 199, 27 L. ed. 698, 2 Sup. Ct. Rep. 531; Pettibone v. United States, 148 U. S. 202, 37 L. ed. 422, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 542; Dealy v. United States, 152 U. S. 539, 38 L. ed. 545, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 680; Berkowitz v. United States, 35 C. C. A. 379, 93 Fed. 452; Shaftesbury v. Graham (Term Pasch. 34 Car. 2 R. B.) Skinner, 32; Smith v. Cranshaw (Term Mich. XX. Jacobi B. R.) 2 Rolle, 258; Reg. v. Best, 1 Salk. 174.

Mr. Frank H. Platt also filed a separate brief for appellant:

The warrant of removal under color of which appellant is detained, having been issued without jurisdiction, is void, and appellant is deprived of his liberty without due process of law.

Greene v. Henkel, 183 U. S. 261, 46 L. ed. 189, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 218.

The sufficiency of the charge of a crime is jurisdictional. It has always been held that the writ of habeas corpus is a proper instrument to secure the release of a prisoner held under order or sentence of a tribunal which acted without jurisdiction, and whose process was consequently void.

Re Nielsen, 131 U. S. 176, 33 L. ed. 118, 9 Sup. Ct. Rep. 672; Re Coy, 127 U. S. 731, 32 L. ed. 274, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1263; Re Snow, 120 U. S. 274, 30 L. ed. 658, 7 Sup. Ct. Rep. 556; Re Sawyer, 124 U. S. 200, 31 L. ed. 402, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 482; Ex parte Bain, 121 U. S. 1, 30 L. ed. 849, 7 Sup. Ct. Rep. 781; Re Ayres, 123 U. S. 443, 31 L. ed. 216, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 164; Ex parte Siebold, 100 U. S. 371, 25 L. ed. 717; Ohio v. Thomas, 173 U. S. 276, 43 L. ed. 699, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 453.

It has been the practice in all Federal jurisdictions, in removal proceedings, to determine whether the indictment sufficiently charges a crime, and to discharge the prisoner if it does not.

Stewart v. United States, 55 C. C. A. 641, 119 Fed. 89; Re Buell, 3 Dill. 116, Fed. Cas. No. 2,102; Re Terrell, 51 Fed. 213; Re Corning, 51 Fed. 205; Re Dana, 68 Fed. 886; United States v. Lee, 84 Fed. 626; Re Greene, 52 Fed. 104; Re Belknap, 96 Fed. 614; Re Huntington, 68 Fed. 881; United States v. Conners, 111 Fed. 734; Re Doig, 4 Fed. 193; Re Palliser (Palliser v. United States) 136 U. S. 257, 34 L. ed. 514, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1034.

An indictment which fails to show as the object or means of the conspiracy a scheme or agreement which would result in defrauding the United States is fatally defective.

United States v. Crafton, 4 Dill. 145, Fed. Cas. No. 14,881; United States v. Reichert, 32 Fed. 142; United States v. Taffe, 86 Fed. 113; United States v. Milner, 36 Fed. 890; United States v. Barnhart, 33 Fed. 459.

When the state has issued its patent, the title so obtained by the patentee cannot be attacked collaterally by third parties for frauds practised in obtaining it, even in the hands of a patentee who was a party to the fraud.

O'Connor v. Frasher, 56 Cal. 499; Doll v. Meador, 16 Cal. 295; Thomas v. Lawlor, 53 Cal. 405; Gale v. Best, 78 Cal. 235, 12 Am. St. Rep. 44, 20 Pac. 550; Turner v. Donnelly, 70 Cal. 597, 12 Pac. 469; Moore v. Wilkinson, 13 Cal. 478; Yount v. Howell, 14 Cal. 465; Miller v. Dale, 44 Cal. 562; Kentfield v. Hayes, 57 Cal. 409; Plummer v. Brown, 70 Cal. 544, 12 Pac. 464; Chapman v. Quinn, 56 Cal. 278; Irvine v. Tarbat, 105 Cal. 242, 38 Pac. 896; Dreyfus v. Badger, 108 Cal. 58, 41 Pac. 279; Standard Quicksilver Co. v. Habishaw, 132 Cal. 115, 64 Pac. 113; Phillips v. Carter, 135 Cal. 604, 87 Am. St. Rep. 152, 67 Pac. 1031; Saunders v. La Purisima Co. 125 Cal. 165, 57 Pac. 656; Harrington v. Goldsmith, 136 Cal. 169, 68 Pac. 594.

The state, if it chooses, can bring an action to cancel the patent in the hands of a patentee who has participated in the fraud; but even the state cannot successfully attack its patent in the hands of a bona fide purchaser for value.

People v. Swift, 96 Cal. 165, 31 Pac. 16; Colorado Coal & I. Co. v. United States, 123 U. S. 307, 31 L. ed. 182, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 131; United States v. California & O. Land Co. 1 C. C. A. 330, 7 U. S. App. 128, 49 Fed. 496, Affirmed in 148 U. S. 31, 40, 41, 37 L. ed. 354, 359, 360, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 458; United States v. Winona & St. P. R. Co. 165 U. S. 463, 478, 41 L. ed. 789, 796, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 368; Marshall v. Farmers' Bank, 115 Cal. 330, 42 Pac. 418, 47 Pac. 52.

No proposition of law is better settled than that there is no implied warranty of title in a conveyance of land without covenants, and that expressed covenants in the conveyance exclude all implied covenants.

Frost v. Raymond, 2 Caines, 188, 2 Am. Dec. 228; Cal. Civ. Code, § 1113; Bryan v. Swain, 56 Cal. 616; Peabody v. Phelps, 9 Cal. 213; Bellinger & Cotton's Anno. Codes & Statutes, § 5338; Taggart v. Risley, 4 Or. 235; Baldwin v. Leroy, Fed. Cas. No. 800a; Huntly v. Waddell, 34 N. C. (12 Ired. L.) 32; Bethell v. Bethell, 54 Ind. 428, 23 Am. Rep. 650; Aiken v. Franklin, 42 Minn. 91, 6 L. R. A. 360, 43 N. W. 839; Allen v. Pegram, 16 Iowa, 163; McKesson v. Hennessee, 66 N. C. 473; McDonough v. Martin, 88 Ga. 675, 18 L. R. A. 346, 16 S. E. 59; Lamb v. Kamm, 1 Sawy. 238, Fed. Cas. No. 8,017.

It is equally elementary that no contract can be rescinded on the ground of fraud, unless it appears that injury has resulted therefrom or may result to the party claiming the rescission. Fraud without resulting injury is not actionable.

Irons v. Reyburn, 11 Ark. 378; Otis v. Raymond, 3 Conn. 413; Skrine v. Simmons, 11 Ga. 401; Sieveking v. Litzler, 31 Ind. 13; Wharf v. Roberts, 88 Ill. 426; Hale v. Philbrick, 47 Iowa, 217; Brown v. Blunt, 72 Me. 415; Fuller v. Hodgdon, 25 Me. 243; Morgan v. Bliss, 2 Mass. 111; Johnson v. Seymour, 79 Mich. 156, 44 N. W. 344; Alden v. Wright, 47 Minn. 225, 49 N. W. 767; Lorenzen v. Kansas City Invest. Co. 44 Neb. 99, 62 N. W. 231; Weaver v. Wallace, 9 N. J. L. 251; Dung v. Parker, 52 N. Y. 494; Aron v. DeCastro, 36 N. Y. S. R. 716, 13 N. Y. Supp. 372; Slaughter v. Gerson, 13 Wall. 379, 20 L. ed. 627; Marshall v. Hubbard, 117 U. S. 415, 417, 29 L. ed. 919, 920, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 806.

Solicitor General Hoyt and Mr. Francis J. Heney argued the cause, and, with Mr. Arthur B. Pugh, filed a brief for appellee. For their contentions see their brief as reported in Hyde v. Shine, ante, 90.

Per Curiam:

This case is indistinguishable from the last, and the judgment of the Circuit Court is also affirmed.

[89]*HANNAH O'CALLAGHAN and Edward Corcoran, Appts.,

v.

TERENCE O'BRIEN, as Administrator of the Estate of John Sullivan, Deceased; Marie Carrau, W. M. Russell, and S. F. Coombs.†

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 89–119.)

1. Appeal from circuit court of appeals—jurisdiction.—Rights asserted under the Constitution of the United States may be so wholly wanting in merit as not to afford a basis for an appeal to the Supreme Court from a decree of a circuit court of appeals.
2. Courts—jurisdiction of circuit court—diverse citizenship.—Diverse citizenship does not give jurisdiction to a Federal circuit court of a bill which seeks a declaration of the nonexistence of a will, and the consequent nullity of its probate in a state court, where the proceeding to contest a will afforded by the laws of that state is but supplementary, or ancillary, to the original probate proceedings, and is not an independent controversy inter partes.
3. Courts—jurisdiction of circuit court—case involving constitutional questions.—The contention that a state court, in admitting a nuncupative will to probate without giving the statutory notice to the next of kin, violated the due process of law clause of the 14th Amendment to the Constitution of the United States, is too lacking in merit to afford a basis for the jurisdiction of a Federal circuit court of a suit to set aside the probate, even assuming that such notice is essential to the preliminary probate, where the bill proceeds on the theory, which finds support in the law of the state, that, despite the mere preliminary admission to probate, there remained a right to assail the existence of the will and its probate, which was not lost by the failure to give notice.
4. Courts—jurisdiction of circuit court—case involving constitutional question—The assertion that, because real estate cannot be devised by a nuncupative will, the attempt of a probate court to exert authority over property of that character by admitting such a will to probate deprived the heirs of such property without due process of law, cannot give a Federal circuit court jurisdiction to pass upon the construction and effect of such will, where this question is wholly subordinate to the determination of another question, of which that court had no jurisdiction, such as the nonexistence of the will and the consequent invalidity of its probate.

[No. 193.]

Argued and submitted April 4, 5, 1905. Decided May 29, 1905.

APPEAL from and Certiorari to the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Ninth Circuit to review a decree which reversed a decree of the Circuit Court for the Northern Division of the District of Washington, in favor of complainants in a suit to set aside the probate of a will in a state court, and remanded the cause with directions to dismiss the bill. Appeal dismissed and judgment affirmed on writ of certiorari.

See same case below, 60 C. C. A. 347, 125 Fed. 657.

Statement by Mr. Justice White:

This suit was commenced in the circuit court of the United States for the district of Washington, northern division, by the filing, on June 20, 1901, of a bill on behalf of Hannah O'Callaghan and Edward Corcoran, appellants in this court. The defendants were Terence O'Brien, as administrator of the estate of John Sullivan, and Marie Carrau. W. M. Russell and S. F. Coombs, who are joined as appellees, were the sureties on a bond given by Marie Carrau, on the appeal taken by her to the circuit court of appeals.

It was averred that the complainants, aliens and residents of Ireland, were the first cousins and the sole heirs at law and next of kin of one John Sullivan, who died on September 26, 1900, in the city of Seattle, state of Washington, intestate, leaving a large amount of real and personal property. The appointment by the superior court of King county, state of Washington, of a special administrator, and the subsequent appointment of the defendant O'Brien, and his qualification as general administrator, were next averred. O'Brien and his codefendant were alleged to be citizens of the state of Washington. The remaining averments were, in substance, that the defendant Marie Carrau, confederating with certain named relatives, had manufactured a pretended nuncupative will of John Sullivan, in favor of said Marie Carrau, under which will she was claiming to be the sole legatee and devisee of all his property. The will purported to have been made about 11 o'clock on the night previous to the death of Sullivan, in the presence of Marie Carrau and her relatives, and the testamentary words em-

†This case is reported by the Official Reporter under the title of "Farrell v. O'Brien."

NOTE.—On probate jurisdiction of the Federal courts—see note to Bedford Quarries Co. v. Thomlinson, 36 C. C. A. 276.

As to what constitutes due process of law—see Kuntz v. Sumption, 2 L.R.A. 655, and note; Re Gannon, 5 L.R.A. 359, and note; Ulman v. Baltimore, 11 L.R.A. 224, and note; and Gilman v. Tucker, 13 L.R.A. 304, and note. And see notes to People v. O'Brien, 2 L.R.A. 255; Pearson v. Yewdall, 24 L. ed. U. S. 436; and Wilson v. North Carolina, 42 L. ed. U. S. 865.

On notice and hearing required to constitute due process of law—see notes to Kuntz v. Sumption, 2 L.R.A. 657; Chauvin v. Valiton, 3 L.R.A. 194; and Ulman v. Baltimore, 11 L. R.A. 225.

ployed, or the substance thereof, were alleged to be the following:

"I want you to remember and witness that I will all my property and personal effects, worth many thousands of dollars, to be the money and property of your sister, Marie Carrau. I am sick, and we know not what might happen."

[91] *It was averred that, on the application of the defendant Carrau, and after the appointment of O'Brien as general administrator, the alleged nuncupative will was admitted to probate, and, at the time of the filing of the bill, stood, as illegally probated, on the records of the superior court of King county, state of Washington. It was, however, charged that the said superior court, in assuming to probate said nuncupative will, acted wholly without jurisdiction in the premises, for the reason that the estate bequeathed exceeded the value of $200, and because no legal citations had been issued out of said court, and ten days had not elapsed between the filing of the will and the hearing of the proof offered in support of the same. It was further averred that, under the laws of the state of Washington real estate could not be disposed of by a nuncupative will.

Further averring that the state court, on the application of Marie Carrau, was about to make and enter a decree distributing to her the whole of the Sullivan estate upon the execution of a bond conditioned for the payment of her proportion of the indebtedness of the estate, to which decree the defendant O'Brien, administrator, it was averred, would yield obedience, and that said Marie Carrau, on receiving possession, would transfer the estate to others, and alleging that such an order and the action of the administrator thereunder would violate the due process clause of the Constitution of the United States, an injunction and the appointment of a receiver was prayed. It was also prayed that a decree might be made adjudging the alleged nuncupative will to be null and void, and perpetually restraining the defendant Carrau from setting up any title or claim thereunder, and adjudging and decreeing the complainants to be the only heirs at law of the decedent, and entitled to receive his estate, and commanding the defendant administrator to surrender possession thereof to, and account therefor to, the complainants.

On behalf of O'Brien, administrator, there was filed what was termed a "stipulation and answer," signed by the complainants [92] *and their solicitor and the administrator. In this paper the appointment of O'Brien was recited, and there was also embodied a disclaimer of any interest of said administrator in the subject-matter of the controversy between complainants and the defendant Marie Carrau, or any knowledge in respect thereto other than as shown by the records. It was stipulated that no costs should be taxed against the administrator and that complainants should not be put to proof of the allegations of the bill, so far as the same affected the administrator, and that the stipulation should be taken as and for an answer of said defendant administrator to the bill of complaint.

After other proceedings in the cause, not essential to be stated, an answer was filed on behalf of the defendant Carrau.

Briefly stated, the answer admitted the death of Sullivan, affirmed the validity of the alleged nuncupative will and of the probate thereof, and further averred that, under the laws of Washington, a nuncupative will, duly proved and probated, "devises both real and personal property to any amount in value." After specially answering each of the allegations of the bill, it was, in substance, averred, "by way of defense, and as questioning the jurisdiction of the court," that the court in which the alleged will had been probated had the sole, original, and exclusive jurisdiction of the probation of said will and the management of the estate of the decedent; that in said court various persons, including one Eugene Timothy Sullivan, a resident of the state of Washington, had filed their verified petitions, claiming each to be the sole heir of the decedent; that certain of said claimants (Sullivan not being one of the number), and also the complainants and the state of Washington, had commenced, in the state court, proceedings to contest the validity of the alleged will, and that such proceedings were at issue and were still pending.

Testimony was taken by commission and otherwise, under an agreement providing that the same might be read in evidence in any suit or proceeding which was then or might thereafter be pending in a state or Federal court affecting the estate of *John [93 Sullivan. Both during the taking of the testimony and at the hearing which followed, the objection to the jurisdiction of the court was reiterated and exceptions were reserved.

A decree was entered in favor of complainants. 116 Fed. 934. In substance the decree found the complainants to be the next of kin of the decedent; that O'Brien was the duly qualified administrator; that the alleged nuncupative will was not made; that the Washington court acted wholly without jurisdiction in the probate of the alleged will, and hence the proceedings in respect thereto were void. It was decreed that the complainants, as first cousins of the deceased, were entitled to share equally in the assets of his estate, and the defendant O'Brien was directed to recognize their right. The defendant Carrau was perpetually restrained from setting up any claim to said estate, under the alleged will or otherwise.

On appeal, the circuit court of appeals reversed the decree of the circuit court for want of jurisdiction in that court over the subject-matter and because of the absence of necessary parties, who, if made parties, would oust the court of jurisdiction; and the cause was remanded, with directions to dismiss the bill, at the cost of complainants. 60 C. C. A. 347, 125 Fed. 657. The cause was appealed to this court. Following the filing of a motion to dismiss such appeal, an application was made on behalf of the complainants below, for the allowance of a writ of certiorari, and the determination of these two motions was postponed to the hearing on the merits.

Mr. James B. Howe argued the cause, and, with Messrs. Samuel H. Piles, George Donworth, Charles H. Farrell, and F. D. McKenney, filed a brief for appellants and petitioners:

To impress the attribute of finality upon a judgment of the circuit court of appeals, it must appear that the original jurisdiction of the circuit court was dependent entirely upon diverse citizenship.

Northern P. R. Co. v. Soderberg, 188 U. S. 526, 47 L. ed. 575, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 365; Ayres v. Polsdorfer, 187 U. S. 585, 47 L. ed. 314, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 196; Howard v. United States, 184 U. S. 676, 46 L. ed. 754, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 543; Huguley Mfg. Co. v. Galeton Cotton Mills, 184 U. S. 290, 46 L. ed. 546, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 452; Loeb v. Columbia Twp. 179 U. S. 472, 45 L. ed. 280, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 174; Robinson v. Caldwell, 165 U. S. 359, 41 L. ed. 745, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 343; Colorado Central Consol. Min. Co. v. Turck, 150 U. S. 138, 37 L. ed. 1030, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 35.

The construction to be given to the clause of the act making the decrees of the circuit courts of appeals final is to be determined not by ascertaining whether jurisdiction in the circuit court exists, but whether it is claimed in good faith, and not fictitiously, in the pleading which invokes the jurisdiction of the circuit court. In determining the finality of the decree of the circuit court of appeals, the question is not, Upon what ground can the decree of the circuit court be sustained? but the question is, Upon what ground was the jurisdiction invoked by the party seeking it?

Florida, C. & P. R. Co. v. Bell, 176 U. S. 321, 44 L. ed. 486, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 399.

If, in order to render the decree of the circuit court of appeals final, the word "dependent" is to be interpreted as "attached," the decree in the case at bar was not final, because the court held that the jurisdiction never attached. If the word "dependent" is to be interpreted as synonymous with "invoked," the decree of the circuit court of appeals was not final, because the jurisdiction of the circuit court was invoked not entirely upon the ground of citizenship, but upon that ground and also upon the ground that the case was one involving the construction and application of the Constitution of the United States.

Loeb v. Columbia Twp. 179 U. S. 472, 479, 45 L. ed. 280, 285, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 174; American Sugar Ref. Co. v. New Orleans, 181 U. S. 277, 280, 45 L. ed. 859, 861, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 646; Huguley Mfg. Co. v. Galeton Cotton Mills, 184 U. S. 290, 294, 46 L. ed. 546, 547, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 452; Press Pub. Co. v. Monroe, 164 U. S. 105, 112, 41 L. ed. 367, 369, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 40; Spreckels Sugar Ref. Co. v. McClain, 192 U. S. 397, 48 L. ed. 496, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 376.

If the rendition of a judgment in a proceeding to which there are parties, without any determination of the issues raised, is depriving the parties against whom the decision is rendered of their property without due process of law (Fayerweather v. Ritch, 195 U. S. 276, 49 L. ed. 193, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 58), it necessarily follows that the rendition of a judgment without acquiring jurisdiction, either of the subject-matter or of the parties against whom the decision is rendered, is equally a depriving of those parties of their property without due process of law, and when a bill alleges those facts, and, in addition thereto, specifically alleges that the property of the complainants, pursuant to such proceedings, is about to be taken from them without due process of law, in violation of their rights under the 14th Amendment of the Constitution of the United States, it would seem that the case at bar is much stronger in presenting a case involving the application of the Constitution of the United States than Fayerweather v. Ritch, 195 U. S. 276, 49 L. ed. 193, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 58.

If an order made without notice to these complainants, which took from them part of the estate, was void because to give it effect would be to deprive them of their property without due process of law (Corcoran v. Bell [Wash.] 78 Pac. 945), it necessarily follows that a decree of probate rendered without notice to these complainants, although the statute forbade the court rendering the decree to hear any proof until they had been notified, and which deprives them of the entire estate, is void for the same reason.

The sole ground upon which this court obtained jurisdiction on the writ of error to the supreme court of the state of Washington, in Scott v. McNeal, 154 U. S. 34, 38 L. ed. 896, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1108, was that the judgment holding that Scott was dead, when he was in fact alive, under which judgment his property had been taken, was void, and that when that judgment was received in evidence as a muniment of title Scott was thereby deprived of his property without due process of law.

If five days' notice in an action in rem instituted in Texas did not constitute due process of law as against a person served with process in the state of Virginia (Roller v. Holly, 176 U. S. 398, 44 L. ed. 520, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 410), we submit that a judgment devesting the appellants, then residing in Ireland, of their title to property inherited from the deceased, John Sullivan, was not due process of law, when founded on a citation issued by a court 6,000 miles distant, and returnable on the same day, but at an hour already past when the process was issued.

See also Chicago, B. & Q. R. Co. v. Chicago, 166 U. S. 226, 234, 41 L. ed. 979, 983, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 581; Windsor v. McVeigh, 93 U. S. 274, 277, 23 L. ed. 914, 915; Earle v. McVeigh, 91 U. S. 503, 510, 23 L. ed. 398, 401; Hovey v. Elliott, 167 U. S. 409, 42 L. ed. 215, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 841; Galpin v. Page, 18 Wall. 350, 21 L. ed. 959; Ex parte Wall, 107 U. S. 289, 27 L. ed. 562, 2 Sup. Ct. Rep. 569; Lavin v. Emigrant Industrial Sav. Bank, 18 Blatchf. 1, 1 Fed. 641; Simon v. Craft, 182 U. S. 427, 45 L. ed. 1165, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 836.

That the decree of probate was void is clearly established by the following authorities:

Dolan v. Jones, 36 Wash. —, 79 Pac. 640; Corcoran v. Bell (Wash.) 78 Pac. 945; National Exchange Bank v. Wiley, 195 U. S. 257, 49 L. ed. 184, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 70; Smith v. White, 32 Wash. 414, 73 Pac. 480; Ball v. Clothier, 34 Wash. 299, 75 Pac. 1099; Re Leonard (N. J. Eq.) 47 Atl. 222; Randolph v. Bayue, 44 Cal. 370; Charleboise v. Bourdon, 6 Mont. 373, 12 Pac. 775; Ashurst v. Fountain, 67 Cal. 18, 6 Pac. 849; Spencer v. Houghton, 68 Cal. 82, 8 Pac. 679; Haws v. Clark, 37 Iowa, 356; Boals v. Shules, 29 Iowa, 507; Jones & M. Lumber Co. v. Boggs, 63 Iowa, 589, 19 N. W. 678; Sprote v. Marshall, 4 G. Greene, 344; Hodges v. Brett, 4 Greene, 345; Milbourn v. Fouts, 4 G. Greene, 346; Fernekes v. Case, 75 Iowa, 152, 39 N. W. 238; Joiner v. Delta Bank, 71 Miss. 382, 14 So. 464; Hunsaker v. Coffin, 2 Or. 107; Northcut v. Lemery, 8 Or. 317; Lewis v. Bishop, 19 Wash. 312, 53 Pac. 165; Everett Water Co. v. Fleming, 26 Wash. 364, 67 Pac. 82.

If, in a suit in ejectment, the admission in evidence of a judgment rendered without jurisdiction for want of notice, and therefore not constituting due process of law, is depriving the person whose rights are affected thereby of his property in a manner forbidden by the 14th Amendment to the Constitution of the United States, can it be denied that to allow such judgment to be used as a muniment of title, to take the property of complainants from the possession of the administrator, who holds it in trust for them, is an act equally forbidden by the Amendment, and therefore one which can be prevented by injunction before it is consummated, instead of being annulled after its execution?

Vicksburg Waterworks Co. v. Vicksburg, 185 U. S. 65, 46 L. ed. 808, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 585; Walla Walla v. Walla Walla Water Co. 172 U. S. 1, 43 L. ed. 341, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 77; Pacific Electric R. Co. v. Los Angeles, 194 U. S. 112, 48 L. ed. 896, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 586; Pacific Gas Improv. Co. v. Ellert, 64 Fed. 421; Nashville, C. & St. L. R. Co. v. Taylor, 86 Fed. 168.

The authorities establish the following propositions:

(1) When the jurisdiction of the circuit court is invoked on the ground of diverse citizenship only, and the jurisdiction is not in issue in the circuit court, the circuit court of appeals has final jurisdiction of all questions in the case of an appeal being taken to that court.

(2) When the jurisdiction of the circuit court is invoked upon the ground of diverse citizenship, and also upon grounds other than those mentioned in § 5 of the act of March 3, 1891, and the jurisdiction of that court is not in issue there, then the court of appeals has appellate jurisdiction, and the Supreme Court has no direct appellate jurisdiction; but the decree of the circuit court of appeals is not final, because the jurisdiction of the circuit court was not dependent entirely upon diverse citizenship.

(3) When the jurisdiction of the circuit court is invoked not on the ground of diverse citizenship, nor upon any ground mentioned in § 5, but upon the ground that the suit arises under the laws of the United States, and the jurisdiction of the circuit court is not in issue there, then the circuit court of appeals has appellate jurisdiction, and the Supreme Court has no direct appellate jurisdiction; but the decree of the circuit court of appeals is not final.

(4) When the jurisdiction of the circuit court is invoked solely upon the ground that the case is one arising under the 4th, 5th, or 6th subdivision of § 5, then the jurisdiction of the Supreme Court is exclusive, and the circuit court of appeals is without jurisdiction.

(5) When the jurisdiction of the circuit court is invoked both on the ground of diverse citizenship, and also upon one of the grounds mentioned in the 4th, 5th, or 6th subdivisions of § 5, then the case must be taken directly to the Supreme Court, and the circuit court of appeals has no jurisdiction.

(6) When the jurisdiction of the circuit court is invoked solely upon the ground of diversity of citizenship, and in the progress of the case a question arises which, if pleaded in the bill, would have given exclusive jurisdiction on appeal to the Supreme Court, then jurisdiction may be exercised directly by the Supreme Court, or by the circuit court of appeals. If an appeal in such case should be taken to the circuit court of appeals, its decree would be final, because the jurisdiction of the circuit court was dependent entirely upon diversity of citizenship.

(7) When the jurisdiction of the circuit court is in issue in that court, the circuit court of appeals is without jurisdiction to decide that question.

Union & Planters' Bank v. Memphis, 189 U. S. 71, 47 L. ed. 712, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 604; American Sugar Ref. Co. v. New Orleans, 181 U. S. 277, 45 L. ed. 859, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 646; Northern P. R. Co. v. Soderberg, 188 U. S. 526, 47 L. ed. 575, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 365; Howard v. United States, 184 U. S. 676, 46 L. ed. 754, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 543; Giles v. Harris, 189 U. S. 475, 47 L. ed. 909, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 639; Cummings v. Chicago, 188 U. S. 410, 47 L. ed. 525, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 472; Pacific Electric R. Co. v. Los Angeles, 194 U. S. 112, 48 L. ed. 896, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 586; Field v. Barber Asphalt Paving Co. 194 U. S. 618, 48 L. ed. 1142, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 784; Holder v. Aultman, M. & Co. 169 U. S. 81, 42 L. ed. 669, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 269; Penn Mut. L. Ins. Co. v. Austin, 168 U. S. 685, 42 L. ed. 626, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 223; Loeb v. Columbia Twp. 179 U. S. 472, 45 L. ed. 280, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 174; Whitten v. Tomlinson, 160 U. S. 231, 40 L. ed. 406, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 297; Chappell v. United States, 160 U. S. 499, 40 L. ed. 510, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 397; Horner v. United States, 143 U. S. 570, 36 L. ed. 266, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 522; Fayerweather v. Ritch, 195 U. S. 276, 299, 49 L. ed. 193, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 58; Davis & F. Mfg. Co. v. Los Angeles, 189 U. S. 207, 47 L. ed. 778, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 498; Cincinnati, H. & D. R. Co. v. Thiebaud, 177 U. S. 615, 44 L. ed. 911, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 822; Keyser v. Lowell, 54 C. C. A. 574, 117 Fed. 400; Owensboro v. Owensboro Waterworks Co. 53 C. C. A. 146, 115 Fed. 318, 191 U. S. 358, 48 L. ed. 217 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 82; Illinois C. R. Co. v. Adams, 180 U. S. 28, 45 L. ed. 410, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 256; Wright v. MacFarlane, 58 C. C. A. 570, 122 Fed. 770.

Assuming, for the sake of argument, that the jurisdiction of the circuit court was invoked solely on the ground of diversity of citizenship, still the circuit court of appeals had no jurisdiction to determine the question of the jurisdiction of the circuit court, because the jurisdiction of that court was in issue in the circuit court.

Sun Printing & Pub. Asso. v. Edwards, 194 U. S. 377, 48 L. ed. 1027, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 696; Fisheries Co. v. Lennen, 130 Fed. 533; United States v. Lee Yen Tai, 51 C. C. A. 299, 113 Fed. 465; St. Louis Cotton Compress Co. v. American Cotton Co. 60 C. C. A. 80, 125 Fed. 196.

When a proceeding inter partes can be maintained in a state court, by whatever name the proceeding may be called, for the annulment of a will and its probate, a suit for the same relief may be maintained in the circuit court of the United States for the same state, if the other jurisdictional requisites exist.

Richardson v. Green, 9 C. C. A. 565, 15 U. S. App. 488, 61 Fed. 423; Wart v. Wart, 117 Fed. 766; Williams v. Crabb, 59 L. R. A. 425, 54 C. C. A. 213, 117 Fed. 193; Sawyer v. White, 58 C. C. A. 587, 122 Fed. 223; Gaines v. Fuentes, 92 U. S. 10, 23 L. ed. 524; Ellis v. Davis, 109 U. S. 485, 496, 27 L. ed. 1006, 1009, 3 Sup. Ct. Rep. 327; Byers v. McAuley, 149 U. S. 608, 37 L. ed. 867, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 906; Cowley v. Northern P. R. Co. 159 U. S. 569, 582, 40 L. ed. 263, 266, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 127; Bardon v. Land & River Improv. Co. 157 U. S. 327, 39 L. ed. 719, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 650; Smyth v. Ames, 169 U. S. 466, 517, 42 L. ed. 819, 838, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 418; Darragh v. H. Wetter Mfg. Co. 23 C. C. A. 609, 49 U. S. App. 1, 78 Fed. 7; Sheffield Furnace Co. v. Witherow, 149 U. S. 574, 579, 37 L. ed. 853, 856, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 936; Leighton v. Young, 18 L. R. A. 266, 3 C. C. A. 176, 10 U. S. App. 298, 52 Fed. 439; Woerner, Am. Law of Administration, 2d ed. § 156, p. 357; Brodhead v. Shoemaker, 11 L. R. A. 567, 44 Fed. 518; Everhart v. Everhart, 34 Fed. 82; Kirby v. Chicago & N. W. R. Co. 106 Fed. 551; McDonnell v. Jordan, 178 U. S. 229, 44 L. ed. 1048, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 886; Ex parte McNiel, 13 Wall. 236, 243, 20 L. ed. 624, 626.

The proceeding in Washington to contest a will and its probate is a suit in a court of general jurisdiction.

Re Clayson, 26 Wash. 253, 66 Pac. 410; Reformed Presby. Church v. McMillan, 31 Wash. 643, 72 Pac. 502; Ball v. Clothier, 34 Wash. 299, 75 Pac. 1099; Filley v. Murphy, 30 Wash. 1, 70 Pac. 107; Browder v. Phinney, 30 Wash. 74, 70 Pac. 264; State ex rel. Stratton v. Tallman, 25 Wash. 295, 65 Pac. 545; Higgins v. Nethery, 30 Wash. 239, 70 Pac. 489.

A court of the United States has jurisdiction of a suit to enjoin a person from availing himself of a judgment obtained by fraud, based upon false evidence and rendered ex parte.

Howard v. De Cordova, 177 U. S. 609, 44 L. ed. 908, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 817; Graver v. Faurot, 22 C. C. A. 156, 46 U. S. App. 268, 76 Fed. 257; Arrowsmith v. Gleason, 129 U. S. 86, 32 L. ed. 630, 9 Sup. Ct. Rep. 237; Marshall v. Holmes, 141 U. S. 590, 35 L. ed. 871, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 62; Cooper v. Newell, 173 U. S. 555, 43 L. ed. 808, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 506; Huntington v. Laidley, 176 U. S. 668, 44 L. ed. 630, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 526; National Surety Co. v. State Bank, 61 L. R. A. 394, 56 C. C. A. 657, 120 Fed. 593; McNeil v. McNeil, 78 Fed. 834; Davenport v. Moore, 74 Fed. 945; Johnson v. Waters, 111 U. S. 640, 28 L. ed. 547, 4 Sup. Ct. Rep. 619.

Mr. Joseph W. Robinson submitted the cause for appellees and respondents. Mr. J. P. Houser was on the brief:

The decree of the United States circuit court of appeals, in reversing Circuit Judge Hanford, was final, and cannot be reviewed in this court.

Carrau v. O'Calligan, 60 C. C. A. 347, 125 Fed. 657; United States v. Taylor, 147 U. S. 695, 37 L. ed. 335, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 479; Loeb v. Columbia Twp. 179 U. S. 483, 45 L. ed. 287, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 174; Ayres v. Polsdorfer, 187 U. S. 589, 47 L. ed. 315, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 196.

The Washington statute makes express provision for a contest of any will admitted to probate, for any cause affecting the validity of the will; but this must be done by petition to the superior court having jurisdiction and administering such estate.

State ex rel. Stratton v. Tallman, 25 Wash. 295, 65 Pac. 545, 29 Wash. 317, 69 Pac. 1101; Re Alfstad, 27 Wash. 175, 67 Pac. 593; Filley v. Murphy, 30 Wash. 1, 70 Pac. 107.

The Washington Code authorizes the trial and determination, in the probate department of the state court, of all questions of heirship, as well as the right to take under wills; and such a contest necessarily requires that court to determine the question of kinship as an issue incident to the right to contest the will. The probate department has the sole and exclusive jurisdiction so to do.

Webster v. Seattle Trust Co. 7 Wash. 651, 33 Pac. 970, 35 Pac. 1082; Griffin v. Warburton, 23 Wash. 231, 62 Pac. 765; State ex rel. Stratton v. Tallman, 25 Wash. 295, 65 Pac. 545, 29 Wash. 317, 69 Pac. 1101; Re Alfstad, 27 Wash. 175, 67 Pac. 593; Browder v. Phinney, 30 Wash. 74, 70 Pac. 264; Filley v. Murphy, 30 Wash. 1, 70 Pac. 107; Re Murphy, 30 Wash. 9, 70 Pac. 109; Reformed Presby. Church v. McMillan, 31 Wash. 643, 72 Pac. 502.

The Federal courts have never assumed to exercise jurisdiction over probate matters, though from the examination of certain decisions in the various Federal courts throughout the United States, in certain instances it might seem that they had; but a careful examination of each of such cases will, we think, show to the court that it was owing to some peculiar statute in the one class of cases, and in the other a clear misapprehension of what had been decided in certain other cases.

Bedford Quarries Co. v. Thomlinson, 36 C. C. A. 272, 95 Fed. 208; Walker v. Brown, 11 C. C. A. 135, 27 U. S. App. 291, 63 Fed. 204; Wahl v. Franz, 49 L. R. A. 62. 40 C. C. A. 638, 100 Fed. 680; Re Cilley, 58 Fed. 977; Ellis v. Davis, 109 U. S. 485, 27 L. ed. 1006, 3 Sup. Ct. Rep. 327; Simmons v. Saul, 138 U. S. 439, 34 L. ed. 1054, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 369; Broderick's Will (Kieley v. McGlynn), 21 Wall. 503, 22 L. ed. 599; Reed v. Reed. 31 Fed. 53; Re Aspinwall, 83 Fed. 852; Oakley v. Taylor, 64 Fed. 246; Blythe v. Hinckley, 84 Fed. 250.

A petition to probate a will is the beginning of a special proceeding. The order admitting to probate is not final so long as proceedings may be taken to revoke the probate.

Re Joseph, 118 Cal. 660, 50 Pac. 768.

In all subsequent stages the contest is but a part of the proceeding to probate the will, and is not a new and distinct proceeding.

Higgins v. Nethery, 30 Wash. 239, 70 Pac. 489; Hunt v. Phillips, 34 Wash. 362, 75 Pac. 970; Zimmerman v. So Relle, 25 C. C. A. 518, 49 U. S. App. 387, 80 Fed. 417; Hughes v. Green, 28 C. C. A. 537, 56 U. S. App. 56, 84 Fed. 833; Nugent v. Philadelphia Traction Co. 87 Fed. 251; Marks v. Marks, 75 Fed. 322; Taylor v. Taintor, 16 Wall. 370, 21 L. ed. 290; Gamble v. San Diego, 79 Fed. 500.

When the statute requires notice of the proceeding to probate or contest a will, the judgment of the court cannot be collaterally attacked for want of notice, if the party not notified may still contest the will by appeal and trial de novo, or by a statutory action, suit, or other proceeding.

16 Enc. Pl. & Pr. 1004; Hall v. Hall, 47 Ala. 290; Herring v. Ricketts, 101 Ala. 340, 13 So. 502; Dickey v. Vann, 81 Ala. 425, 8 So. 195; Wetmore v. Parker, 52 N. Y. 450.

Messrs. William F. Hays and John H. Mitchell also submitted the cause for appellees and respondents.

Mr. Justice White, after making the foregoing statement, delivered the opinion of the court:

The motion to dismiss the appeal, and the application for the allowance of a writ of certiorari, will first be passed upon.

[100] *While the alienage of complainants and the citizenship of respondents was alleged, the jurisdiction of the circuit court was not invoked solely upon that ground. It was asserted in the bill that the requirements of the Code of Washington had not been complied with in respect to the preliminary issue of citations to the next of kin of the decedent; that the hearing on the application to probate the alleged nuncupative will was had before service of citations in the mode prescribed by law, and as, at the time of the filing of the bill, six months had elapsed without lawful probate of the will, the title of complainants to the property as heirs and next of kin of the intestate had become absolute. The use by the defendant Carrau of the decree of probate as a muniment of title, with which to obtain from the administrator, under the authority of the state court, the property of complainants in the custody of the administrator, was, as a consequence, asserted to amount to a deprivation of property without due process of law, in violation of the Constitution of the United States.

The statute which, it was asserted, limited the authority of the Washington court to probate the nuncupative will in question to a lawful probate thereof within six months of the speaking of the testamentary words, is as follows:

"No proof shall be received of any nuncupative will unless offered within six months after speaking the testamentary words nor unless the words or the substance thereof be first committed to writing, and a citation issued to the widow or next of kin of the deceased, that they may contest the will if they think proper." Pierce's Code, 2352.

It is settled that the mere averment of a constitutional question is not sufficient, where the question sought to be presented is so wanting in merit as to cause it to be frivolous or without any support whatever in reason. Fayerweather v. Ritch, 195 U. S. 276, 299, 49 L. ed. 193, 210, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 58. We think that the alleged violations of Federal right based upon the 14th Amendment were so unsubstantial and devoid of merit that they furnish no real support to the contention that the decree of the circuit [101] court of appeals *was not final. From this it follows that the motion to dismiss must prevail. But we are not thereby relieved of the duty of considering the correctness of the decree of the circuit court of appeals, because, in our opinion, the case is one in which the writ of certiorari should be allowed. We therefore dismiss the appeal, and grant the application for certiorari, treating the record filed on the appeal as a return to that writ. Before coming, however, to dispose of the case, we observe that we do not, at this moment, state the reasons by which we are led to the conclusion that the rights asserted under the Constitution of the United States were so wholly wanting in merit as not to afford a basis for the appeal, because those reasons will be made manifest when we come to consider the question whether the bill was one within the jurisdiction of the circuit court.

The issue first for decision is, Did the circuit court of appeals rightly hold that the circuit court was without jurisdiction of the case made by the bill?

The solution of the question is not free from complexity. Original reasoning is not, however, required, since the subject has been previously considered by this court. We come, therefore, to an analysis of the leading cases. It results from the analysis which we have made of the bill that, by necessary effect, it assailed the previous probate and the existence of the will, and, besides, under the hypothesis that a will and probate might be found to exist, sought to limit the operation and effect of the will. The subject, therefore, has a twofold aspect,—the power of Federal courts to entertain jurisdiction concerning the probate or the revocation of the probate of wills, where the requisite diversity of citizenship exists, and the power of those courts, where such diversity obtains, to adjudicate concerning rights against the estates of decedents. Whilst we shall consider these two subjects separately, to avoid repetition we shall first consecutively analyze the cases concerning both subjects.

In Hook v. Payne, 14 Wall. 253, 20 L. ed. 887, certain distributees of an estate over which an administrator had been appointed in a court of Missouri, alleging diversity of [102] citizenship, filed their *separate bills in a circuit court of the United States, for the purpose of annulling releases which they had given as to their distributive shares to the administrator, on the ground of his fraud, and also sought to annul settlements alleged to have been fraudulently made in the probate court, and to have a decree against the administrator for the amount of their distributive shares. The several suits were consolidated. The trial court, by an interlocutory decree, set aside the releases and the settlements made by Hook (the administrator) with the county court, and appointed a master to state an account with Hook as administrator. Moreover, the master was directed to inquire what other persons were interested in the estate, and to report what payments, if any, had been made to them, and what was due to them, respectively, at the date of the report. The report of the master not only accorded the relief claimed by the complainants, but restated the accounts of the administrator, and in effect reported a scheme of distribution of the estate. The report was approved by the trial court. In this court the decree, in so far as it concerned the rights of the complainants, was affirmed. In so far as it attempted to distribute the estate, and to deal generally with the rights of persons other than the complainants, the decree was reversed, the court saying (p. 255, L. ed. p. 889):

"We are of opinion [therefore] that all that part of the decree which attempts to settle the right of the parties who were neither plaintiffs nor defendants in the original suit must be reversed.

"We do not propose, in this case, to lay down any precise rule on the subject of adjusting administrators' accounts in the Federal courts, or how far certain persons, not made parties in the original suit, or incapable of being made parties by reason of their citizenship, may or may not come in before the master, on a general accounting, and protect their rights; nor do we intend to go into that question."

In Broderick's Will (Kieley v. McGlynn), 21 Wall. 503, 22 L. ed. 599, the case was this: A suit in equity was brought in the circuit court for the district of California by the alleged heirs at law of Broderick to [103] set aside the *probate of his will, to have the same declared a forgery, and to recover the assets of Broderick's estate, much of which consisted of real property. The defendants were the executors, and several hundred persons who were in possession of portions of the real estate, claiming ownership thereof as purchasers at sales made by the executors. The estate had been administered upon, and distribution had been fully made before the institution of the suit. The first contention which the court disposed of was that a court of equity had no jurisdiction of the subject-matter of the suit, the same being vested exclusively in the probate court of the city and county of San Francisco. In sustaining this objection, the court, through Mr. Justice Bradley, said (p. 509, L. ed. p. 602):

"As to the first point, it is undoubtedly the general rule, established both in England and this country, that a court of equity will not entertain jurisdiction of a bill to set aside a will or the probate thereof. The case of Kerrich v. Bransby, decided by the House of Lords in 1727, 7 Bro. P. C. 437, is considered as having definitely settled the question. Whatever may have been the original ground of this rule (perhaps something in the peculiar constitution of the English courts), the most satisfactory ground for its continued prevalence is that the constitution of a succession to a deceased person's estate partakes, in some degree, of the nature of a proceeding in rem, in which all persons in the world who have any interest are deemed parties, and are concluded as upon res judicata by the decision of the court having jurisdiction. The public interest requires that the estates of deceased persons, being deprived of a master, and subject to all manner of claims, should at once devolve to a new and competent ownership; and, consequently, that there should be some convenient jurisdiction and mode of proceeding by which this devolution may be effected with least chance of injustice and fraud; and that the result attained should be firm and perpetual. The courts invested with this jurisdiction should have ample powers both of process and investigation, and sufficient opportunity should be given to check and revise proceedings *tainted with mistake, [104] fraud or illegality. These objects are generally accomplished by the constitution and powers which are given to the probate courts, and the modes provided for reviewing their proceedings. And one of the principal reasons assigned by the equity courts for not entertaining bills on questions of probate is that the probate courts themselves have all the powers and machinery necessary to give full and adequate relief.

"In England after the acts of Parliament had authorized devises of real estate, the same position was assumed by courts of equity in regard to such devises; it being held that any fraud, illegality, or mistake affecting their validity could be fully investigated and redressed in the courts of common law, where also devises were recognizable."

After a full review of authorities holding that a court of equity did not possess power to annul the probate of a will, and in concluding its opinion referring to a statute of the state of California, the court observed (p. 519, L. ed. p. 605):

"The statute of 1862 has been referred to, which gives to the district courts of California power to set aside a will obtained by fraud or undue influence, or a forged will, and any probate obtained by fraud, concealment, or perjury. Whilst it is true that alterations in the jurisdiction of the state courts cannot affect the equitable jurisdiction of the circuit courts of the United States, so long as the equitable rights themselves remain, yet an enlargement of equitable rights may be administered by the circuit courts, as well as by the courts of the state. And this is probably a case in which an enlargement of equitable rights is effected, although presented in the form of a remedial proceeding. Indeed, much of equitable jurisdiction consists of better and more effective remedies for attaining the rights of parties. But the statute referred to cannot affect this suit, inasmuch as the statute of limitations would still apply in full force, and would present a perfect bar to the suit."

In Gaines v. Fuentes, 92 U. S. 10, 23 L. ed. 524, the facts were these: A will of Daniel Clark had been probated in the second dis-[105] trict *court for the parish of Orleans, state of Louisiana. Distribution of the estate had been completed, when certain parties brought an action in the court named to annul the alleged will and to recall the decree by which it was probated. The alleged daughter of Daniel Clark was made a party defendant, and it was averred that suits had been brought by her against the plaintiffs, in a circuit court of the United States, as heir at law of her father, to recover certain property alleged to belong to his estate, and that the existence of the decree of probate was an obstacle to the proper defense of those suits, and made it necessary to sue to annul the will and avoid the decree of probate. Application was made to remove the cause to the circuit court of the United States, which the state court refused, on the ground that the suit involved merely a probate matter, and was therefore not cognizable in the Federal court. From a final decree of the state court in favor of the plaintiffs the cause was brought to this court. It was decided that the state court erred in refusing to permit the removal. In the opening passage of the opinion the court pointed out that, whilst the suit was, in form, one to annul the alleged will of Daniel Clark, and to recall the decree by which it was probated, it was in reality a suit brought against the devisee, and by strangers to the estate, to annul the will as a muniment of title, and to restrain the enforcement of the decree by which its validity had been established, so far as it affected their property. The court observed:

"It is in fact an action between parties, and the question for determination is whether the Federal court can take jurisdiction of an action brought for the object mentioned, between citizens of different states, upon its removal from a state court."

The decision in the case of Broderick's Will, concerning the want of power in a court of equity to probate a will or revoke its probate, was expressly approved. But, referring doubtless to the concluding passage in the opinion in that case, it was observed that, if such equitable power was vested in the state courts, the Federal courts sitting [106] in the states where such statutes *existed might exercise concurrent jurisdiction in a case between proper parties. Considering the want of authority of Federal courts as such, over the probate of wills, it was declared (p. 21, L. ed. p. 528):

"There are, it is true, in several decisions of this court, expressions of opinion that the Federal courts have no probate jurisdiction, referring particularly to the establishment of wills; and such is undoubtedly the case under the existing legislation of Congress. The reason lies in the nature of the proceeding to probate a will as one in rem, which does not necessarily involve any controversy between parties; indeed, in the majority of instances, no such controversy exists. In its initiation all persons are cited to appear, whether of the state where the will is offered, or of other states. From its nature, and from the want of parties, or the fact that all the world are parties, the proceeding is not within the designation of cases at law or in equity between parties of different states, of which the Federal courts have concurrent jurisdiction with the state courts under the judiciary act; but whenever a controversy in a suit between such parties arises respecting the validity or construction of a will, or the enforcement of a decree admitting it to probate, there is no more reason why the Federal courts should not take jurisdiction of the case than there is that they should not take jurisdiction of any other controversy between the parties."

Having decided that the suit was, in all essential particulars, one inter partes, for equitable relief to cancel an instrument alleged to be void, and to restrain the enforcement of a decree alleged to have been obtained by false and insufficient testimony, the court was brought to consider whether the law of Louisiana allowed such equqitable relief, and said (p. 20, L. ed. p. 528):

"There are no separate equity courts in Louisiana, and suits for special relief of the nature here sought are not there designated suits in equity. But they are none the less essentially such suits; and if, by the law obtaining in the state, customary or statutory, they can be maintained in a state court, whatever designation that court may bear, we think they may be maintained *by original [107] process in a Federal court, where the parties are, on the one side, citizens of Louisiana, and, on the other, citizens of other states."

In Ellis v. Davis, 109 U. S. 485, 27 L. ed. 1006, 3 Sup. Ct. Rep. 327, the will of Mrs. Dorsey had been duly proved in a probate court of Louisiana, and the universal legatee named therein had been recognized and put in possession of the estate under the will. Some time after a bill was filed in the circuit court of the United States against him for the twofold purpose of setting aside the probate and annulling the will, on the ground that it had been made under undue influence; and, for similar reasons, the annulment was prayed of a conveyance which had been made by the deceased to the universal legatee. An account of the rents and profits, etc., was also prayed. A demurrer to the bill was sustained and the case came to this court. It was decided that the court below had rightly sustained the demurrer. In the course of the opinion the court declared (p. 497, L. ed. p. 1010, Sup. Ct. Rep. p. 334):

"The original probate [of wills] of course is mere matter of state regulation, and depends entirely upon the local law; for it is that law which confers the power of making wills, and prescribes the conditions upon which alone they may take effect; and as, by the law in almost all the states, no instrument can be effective as a will until proved, no rights in relation to it, capable of being contested between parties, can arise until preliminary probate has first been made. Jurisdiction as to wills, and their probate as such, is neither included in nor excepted out of the grant of judicial power to the courts of the United States. So far as it is ex parte and merely administrative, it is not conferred, and it cannot be exercised by them at all until, in a case at law or in equity, its exercise becomes necessary to settle a controversy of which a court of the United States may take cognizance by reason of the citizenship of the parties."

The court expressly reaffirmed the want of power in a Federal court of equity to set aside the probate of a will in the absence of a state statute giving the right in the courts of the state to such equitable relief, it being reiterated (p. 494, L. ed. p. 1008, Sup. Ct. Rep. p. 332):

[108] *"It is well settled that no such jurisdiction belongs to the circuit courts of the United States as courts of equity; for courts of equity, as such, by virtue of their general authority to enforce equitable rights and remedies, do not administer relief in such cases. The question in this aspect was thoroughly considered and finally settled by the decision of this court in the case of Broderick's Will (Kieley v. McGlynn), 21 Wall. 503, 22 L. ed. 599."

Coming to consider whether, by the customary or statute law of Louisiana, there existed power in the courts of that state, as a matter of equitable cognizance, to entertain a suit to annul a will and set aside its probate, it was decided that no such right existed, but that, on the contrary, the Louisiana law, whilst denying such right, afforded relief in an action at law, where the recovery of property was sought, by permitting the validity of a will and its probate, when asserted as a muniment of title, to be collaterally questioned. The court said (p. 499, L. ed. p. 1011, Sup. Ct. Rep. p. 335):

"It remains, therefore, in the present case to inquire whether the complainants are entitled, under the laws of Louisiana, to draw in question in this mode and with a view to the decree sought the validity of the will of Sarah Ann Dorsey and the integrity of its probate.

"An examination of the decisions of the supreme court of Louisiana on the subject will disclose that a distinction is made in reference to proceedings to annul a will and its probate, according to the objects to be accomplished by the judgment and the relation of the parties to the subject. If the administration of the succession is incomplete and in fieri, and the object is to alter or affect its course, the application must be made to the court of probates, which, in that case, has possession of the subject, and exclusive jurisdiction over it. If, on the other hand, the succession has been closed, or has proceeded so far that the parties entitled under the will have been put in possession of their rights to the estate, then the resort of adverse claimants must be an action of revendication in the courts of general jurisdiction, in which the legal title is asserted as against the will claimed to be invalid, making an issue involving that question."

*Following this statement the court made [109] an exhaustive review of the decided cases in the state of Louisiana, establishing the proposition just previously quoted; and, as a necessary result of this conclusion, the court declared that in Gaines v. Fuentes it had been merely assumed that relief in the nature of an equitable remedy was allowed by the law of Louisiana, under which the probate of a will could be set aside, saying (pp. 499, 503, L. ed. pp. 1010, 1012, Sup. Ct. Rep. pp. 335, 338):

In that case "it was assumed, and not decided, that the said suit brought in the state court was one which, under the laws of the state, its courts were authorized to entertain for the purpose of granting the relief prayed for. The point decided was, that if it were, it might properly be transferred to a court of the United States."

"The case of Gaines v. Fuentes, 92 U. S. 10, 23 L. ed. 524, was such an action of nullity, but, as before remarked, the point decided in that case was not that it would lie, according to the law of Louisiana, but that if it would lie in the state court, it was removable to the circuit court of the United States, because it presented a controversy wholly between citizens of different states."

In Byers v. McAuley, 149 U. S. 608, 37 L. ed. 867, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 906, it was decided that a Federal court cannot exercise original jurisdiction in respect to the administration of the estate of a decedent, and that it cannot, by entertaining jurisdiction of a suit against the administrator, draw to itself the full possession of the estate, or the power of determining all claims against or to it. It was, however, decided that where the estate of a deceased person is ready for distribution, but no adjudication has been made as to the distributees, the circuit court can entertain jurisdiction in favor of citizens of other states to determine and award their shares in the estate. It is true that the bill filed in the case assailed the validity of the probate of a document which disposed, in favor of two corporations, of a house and lot in the city of Pittsburg. But the trial court [110] gave effect to the document as *a declaration of trust, and the controversy on that branch of the case was not pressed on the appeal.

Let us, then, first deduce the principles established by the foregoing authorities as to the power of a court of the United States over the probate or revocation of the probate of a will. An analysis of the cases, in our opinion, clearly establishes the following:

First. That, as the authority to make wills is derived from the state, and the requirement of probate is but a regulation to make a will effective, matters of pure probate, in the strict sense of the words, are not within the jurisdiction of courts of the United States.

Second. That where a state law, statutory or customary, gives to the citizens of the state, in an action or suit inter partes, the right to question at law the probate of a will or to assail probate in a suit in equity, the courts of the United States, in administering the rights of citizens of other states or aliens, will enforce such remedies.

The only dispute possible under these propositions may arise from a difference of opinion as to the true significance of the expression "action or suit inter partes," as employed in the second proposition. When that question is cleared up the propositions are so conclusively settled by the cases referred to that they are indisputable. Before coming to apply the propositions we must, therefore, accurately fix the meaning of the words "action or suit inter partes."

The cited authorities establish that the words referred to must relate only to independent controversies inter partes, and not to mere controversies which may arise on an application to probate a will because the state law provides for notice, or to disputes concerning the setting aside of a probate, when the remedy to set aside afforded by the state law is a mere continuation of the probate proceeding; that is to say, merely a method of procedure ancillary to the original probate, allowed by the state law for the purpose of giving to the probate its ultimate and final effect. We say the words "action or suit inter partes*" must have this sig- [111] nificance, because, unless that be their import, it would follow that a state may not allow any question to be raised concerning the right to probate at the time of the application, or any such question thereafter to be made in an ancillary probate proceeding without depriving itself of its concededly exclusive authority over the probate of wills. This may be readily illustrated. Thus, if a state law provides for any form of notice on an application to probate a will, and authorizes a contest before the admission of the writing to probate, then it would follow, if the words "suit or action of inter partes" embraces such a contest, the proof of wills, if contested by a citizen of another state or alien, would be cognizable in the courts of the United States, and hence not under the exclusive control of the state probate court. Again, if a state authorized a will to be proved in common form, that is, without notice, and allowed a supplementary probate proceeding by which the probate in common form could be contested, then, again, if such a contest be a suit inter partes, it would also be a Federal cognizance.

Having fixed the meaning of the words "action or suit inter partes" we come to apply the propositions deduced from the decided cases, in order to test the question of the jurisdiction of the circuit court over the relief prayed for in the bill, so far as relates to the annulment of the probate. This requires us to determine whether, by custom or by the statute law of the state of Washington, the courts of that state had the power of administering the relief prayed for on that subject in the bill by an independent suit, as distinguished from the exercise of probate jurisdiction originally or merely ancillary. There is no pretense of any custom in the state of Washington beyond the scope of authority conferred upon the courts of the state by the laws thereof. The question, therefore, reduces itself to a narrow compass; that is, what remedies do the laws of Washington create for the purpose of the probate of wills and the revocation of a probate, and are those remedies exclusively probate in their character or necessarily merely *ancillary thereto, or do they [112] confer upon the state courts general legal or equitable authority on the subject merely because of the existence of a controversy? That is to say, Is a will contest under the laws of Washington an ordinary action or suit between parties or a special probate proceeding directly ancillary to or concerning the probate of the will?

By § 5 of article 4 of the Constitution of Washington it was provided that there should be in each of the organized counties of the state a superior court, and by § 6 of the same article original jurisdiction was conferred upon such court in equity cases and cases at law, and over specified crimes, etc., and it was vested with original jurisdiction "of all matters of probate." By such statute such courts, in the exercise of their jurisdiction over matters of probate, were authorized:

"1. To take proofs of wills, and to grant letters testamentary and of administration. . . .

"2. To settle the estates of deceased persons, and the accounts of executors administrators, and guardians.

"3. To allow or reject claims against the estates of the deceased persons as hereinafter provided. . . .

"5. To award process and cause to come before them all persons whom they may deem it necessary to examine, whether parties or witnesses, or who, as executors, administrators, or guardians, or otherwise, shall be intrusted with or in any way accountable for any property belonging to a minor, orphan, or person of unsound mind, or estate of any deceased person.

"6. To order and cause to be issued all writs which may be necessary to the exercise of their jurisdiction." Ballinger's Anno. Codes and Stat. of Washington, § 6075.

Applications for the probate of a will or for letters testamentary are required to be made to the judge of the superior court having jurisdiction, and he is authorized, in the case of ordinary wills, on the exhibition of [113] the will, to receive the proof *and grant a certificate of probate, or, if such will be rejected, to issue a certificate of rejection. Hill's Anno. Stat. and Codes, §§ 861, 862; Ballinger's Anno. Codes and Stat. §§ 6099, 6100. Testimony given in support of a will is to be reduced to writing, signed by the witnesses, and certified by the judge of the court, and wills admitted to probate are required to be recorded. Ballinger's Anno. Codes and Stat. §§ 6105, 6106.

After defining a nuncupative will, the statutes of Washington provide as follows:

"No proof shall be received of any nuncupative will, unless it be offered within six months after speaking the testamentary words, nor unless the words, or the substance thereof, be first committed to writing, and a citation issued to the widow or next of kin of the deceased, that they may contest the will if they think proper." Id. § 4606.

Proceedings to contest a will after admission to probate, or to secure probate after a certificate of rejection, are regulated by the following sections of the Code:

"If any person interested in any will shall appear within any one year after the probate or rejection thereof, and, by petition to the superior court having jurisdiction, contests the validity of said will, or pray to have the will proven which has been rejected, he shall file a petition containing his objections and exceptions to said will, or to the rejection thereof. Issue shall be made up, tried, and determined in said court respecting the competency of the deceased to make last will and testament, or respecting the execution by the deceased of such last will and testament under restraint or undue influence or fraudulent representation, or for any other cause affecting the validity of such will." Id. § 6110.

"Upon the filing of the petition referred to in the next preceding section, a citation shall be issued to the executors who have taken upon them the execution of the will, or to the administrators with the will annexed, and to all legatees named in the will residing in the state, or to their guardians if any of them are minors, or their personal representatives if any of them are dead, requiring them to appear before the court on *a day therein specified, to show cause why [114]
the petition should not be granted." Id. § 6111.

"If no person shall appear within the time aforesaid, the probate or rejection of such will shall be binding, save to infants, married women, persons absent from the United States, or of unsound mind, a period of one year after their respective disabilities are removed." Id. § 6112.

"If, upon the trial of said issue, it shall be decided that the will is, for any reason, invalid, or that it is not sufficiently proved to have been the last will of the testator, the will and probate thereof shall be annulled and revoked." Id. § 6114.

These statutory provisions have been decided by the supreme court of Washington to apply as well to a contest of a nuncupative will as to one of an ordinary will. State ex rel. Stratton v. Tallman, 25 Wash. 295, 65 Pac. 545, 29 Wash. 317, 69 Pac. 1101.

We are of opinion that the sections in question authorize a proceeding for contest only before the court which has admitted the will to probate or rejected the application made for probate, and that the authority thus conferred concerning the contest is an essential part of the probate procedure created by the laws of Washington, and does not, therefore, cause a contest, when filed, to become an ordinary suit between parties. This is plainly indicated by the fact that the proceeding provided by the statute concerns not only revocation of the probate of a will, but also the right to petition for the probate of a will where an application to probate it had been previously rejected. The context of the legislation in question also clearly establishes that the authorized proceeding is but supplementary to, and a continuation of, the original proceeding in probate. This is indicated both by the form of the petition which is required to be filed and the character of the proof which may be considered on that petition. That the statute does not contemplate a formal suit, but a mere summary and ancillary proceeding, is shown by the circumstance that the petitioner is merely required to state in his [115] petition "his objections and *exceptions to said will, or to the rejection thereof," and on the statement of these objections in the petition, without the formality of the technical pleadings customary in ordinary suits inter partes, the statute requires that specified issues be then made up for hearing. And, further, the terms of § 876 treat the contest as not an ordinary suit between parties, since it is made the duty of the court to revoke the probate if, for any reason, the will is invalid, or if "it is not sufficiently proved to have been the last will of the testator." Moreover, it is evident that the statute contemplates that the court, when acting on a contest filed under its provisions, is not confined to the exertion of powers which would properly be exerted in an ordinary suit inter partes, since the statute causes a decree in favor of the petitioner, revoking a will already admitted to probate, to inure not only to the benefit of the particular contestant, but to be operative as to the whole world. This follows from the provision of the statute saying that if the court finds in favor of the petitioner who sought the revocation of a probate "the will and the probate thereof shall be annulled and revoked."

It is insisted in argument that the supreme court of Washington has referred to a will contest under the statutes of that state as a suit or action, and from this the inference is deduced that the proceeding is one inter partes, in the broad sense of the term, and not a part of the probate proceedings. But we do not consider that the cases relied on do more than use the term "suit or action" as a convenient form of expression. The view taken by the supreme court of Washington as to the substantive nature of a will contest is illustrated by its opinion in Hunt v. Phillips, 34 Wash. 362, 75 Pac. 970, where the court, in opening its opinion, referred to the case before it as "a proceeding in contest of the will," etc.

But the opinion of the supreme court of Washington as to the nature of a will contest under the statute of Washington does not depend upon the mere inference deducible from the characterization which the court has given to that proceeding. In Montrose v. Byrne, 24 Wash. 288, 64 Pac. 534, it was expressly held *that the statutory [116] proceeding to establish a will was special in its character; so much so that in a contest concerning the same the parties were necessarily limited to the question of the execution or validity of the will and the right to admit the same to probate, and therefore issues concerning the construction of the will or the vesting of property thereunder could not be considered in a contest proceeding.

It follows that as the circuit court of the United States had no jurisdiction to admit a will to probate, or to entertain a pure probate proceeding, and as the remedy afforded by the laws of Washington to secure the probate or the revocation of the probate of a will were proceedings of a purely probate character, and not an action or suit inter partes, the circuit court of appeals correctly decided that the circuit court, although there was diversity of citizenship, was without jurisdiction of the cause so far as the bill sought a declaration of the nonexistence of a will, and the consequent nullity of the probate.

It remains only to consider the bill under its other aspects. The contention that the state court, in admitting the nuncupative will to probate, violated the due process clause of the 14th Amendment to the Constitution of the United States, rests upon two propositions: (a) The law of the state, it is contended, required that proof of an alleged nuncupative will should be offered within six months after the speaking of the testamentary words, and that notice should issue to the next of kin as a prerequisite to the power to entertain the application for probate. As here it is said the proof established that the hearing as to probate was had without the notice required by the statute, therefore the admission to probate was a violation of the due process clause of the 14th Amendment to the Constitution of the United States. (b) As under the laws of Washington it is asserted real estate could not be devised by a nuncupative will, therefore, the contention is, the probate court had no jurisdiction over such real estate or the rents, issues, and profits thereof, and hence an attempt by that court to exert authority over that character of property *amounted to [117] depriving the heirs at law of such property without due process of law, in violation of the 14th Amendment.

We are of opinion that the proposition resting upon the want of notice did not furnish a basis for the jurisdiction of the circuit court. The contention rests upon the assumption that the failure to give the notice under the state law was so essentially a prerequisite to a hearing on the question of probate that a probate made without the notice was null and void, and could collaterally be so treated. In State ex rel. Stratton v. Tallman, 25 Wash. 295, 65 Pac. 545, the contrary doctrine was expressly held. That case concerned a collateral controversy relating to the very estate here in question. The attorney general had filed in the probate court a motion praying for the vacation of the order admitting the will to probate, and to set aside all the proceedings leading up to the probate of the will, upon the grounds that the court acquired no jurisdiction to hear any evidence in support of the will, because no citation was issued as required by law, as the citation was issued on the day it bears date, and was immediately returned by the sheriff without making any effort to find any of the heirs of deceased or any person interested in the estate, and because the deceased never made or attempted to publish and declare the will. The probate court having refused to entertain the motion, for the reason that the state was not an interested party, original proceedings by mandamus were commenced in the supreme court of the state to compel the court to hear and decide the motion. The supreme court, however, refused the writ, on the ground that any appropriate proceeding to contest the probate was provided in the statutes, which gave a year in which to make the contest, and that, conceding the interest of the state, it nevertheless could not, by a mere motion, raise the question of the validity of the probate. But, let us concede, for the sake of the argument only, that under the Washington statutes the requirement of notice was essential to the preliminary probate, [118]*and if, by its omission, the parties were deprived of or lost their right to deny the existence of the will, or to question its probate, that the absence of the notice might afford substantial ground to contend that rights protected by the Constitution of the United States had been violated. These concessions, however, cannot control this case. As the theory of the bill was, and as undoubtedly it was also the law of Washington, that despite the mere preliminary admission to probate, there was full right to assail the existence of the will and its probate, which was not lost by the failure to give notice, it must follow that such omission did not deprive of the right to a hearing, which right was adequately conferred by the statute, wholly irrespective of whether the notice on the preliminary probate had or had not been given. Indeed, the contention made on this subject amounts to asserting that every state law which provides for a probate in common form is repugnant to the due process clause of the Constitution, even although, under the state statutes, full and adequate probate remedies are provided by which interested parties may subsequently, within a time fixed by law, be heard in the probate proceedings to question the existence of a will or its probate. When the result of the proposition is thus ascertained it becomes obvious that it is not only opposed to the theory upon which the bill was framed, but is so in conflict with the adjudications of this court, to which we have previously referred, that it is devoid of all foundation in reason to such an extent as to prevent it from affording a basis for the jurisdiction of the circuit court.

We think also the claim of the want of due process of law arising from the contention that, in the state of Washington, a nuncupative will does not pass title to real estate, and therefore a violation of the due process clause of the 14th Amendment would arise if the probate court acted upon the contrary assumption, was clearly devoid of all reasonable foundation. It is not denied that, under the law of Washington, in cases of intestacy as well as of testacy, both real and personal property is taken into the control of and is administered by the probate *court.[119] And as it is obvious on the face of the bill that the averment referred to was wholly subordinate to the determination of the existence of the alleged nuncupative will and the validity of the probate thereof, a question over which the circuit court did not have jurisdiction, it results that the bill, upon constitutional or other grounds, did not present a case warranting the court in passing upon the construction and effect of the will.

There was no error in the action of the Circuit Court of Appeals, and its judgment is, therefore, affirmed.

THE ELIZA LINES.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 119-141.)

Shipping—effect of abandonment on contract of affreightment.—The justifiable abandonment of a vessel in consequence of the dangers of the seas is such a renunciation of the contract of affreightment as entitles the cargo owners to refuse to go on with the voyage, at least, where the master has not rejoined the ship before anyone else has taken possession, or has not obtained the vessel and cargo from the salvors before the cargo owners have announced their decision.

[No. 12.]

Argued April 11, 12, 13, 1905. Decided October 30, 1905.

ON WRIT and Cross Writ of Certiorari to the Circuit Court of Appeals for the First Circuit to review a decree which affirmed, with a slight modification, a decree of the Circuit Court for the District of Massachusetts which, reversing the decision of the District Court for that district, held that the master of an abandoned vessel afterwards rescued by salvors was entitled to complete the voyage and earn the freight. Reversed.

See same case below, 52 C. C. A. 195, 114 Fed. 307. On rehearing, 65 C. C. A. 538, 132 Fed. 242.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Mr. L. S. Dabney argued the cause, and, with Mr. F. Cunningham, filed a brief for Henry P. Booth:

When the vessel has been abandoned at sea by the master and crew, as was The Eliza Lines in this case, without any intention of returning to her, the owner of the cargo has the right, before the carrier or his agents have regained possession of the cargo, to treat the contract of affreightment as abandoned and at an end, and to receive his cargo without becoming liable for any freight; and this, although the abandoned ship and cargo are carried by salvors to the original port of destination.

The Arno, 8 Asp. Mar. L. Cas. 5, 72 L. T. N. S. 621; The Cito, L. R. 7 Prob. Div. 5; The Kathleen, L. R. 4 Adm. & Eccl. 269; The Leptir, 5 Asp. Mar. L. Cas. 411, 52 L. T. N. S. 768; The Argonaut, Shipping Gazette, 1884, Dec. 5, p. 775; Lewis v. The Elizabeth & Jane, 1 Ware, 41, Fed. Cas. No. 8,321; Smith v. The Mansanito, Fed. Cas. No. 13,075; The James Martin, 88 Fed. 649; Dunnett v. Tomhagen, 3 Johns. 154; Post v. Robertson, 1 Johns. 24.

It is the general rule that, after the renunciation of a continuing agreement by one party, the other party is at liberty to consider himself absolved from any further performance of it, retaining his right to sue for any damages he has suffered from any breach of it.

Roehm v. Horst, 178 U. S. 1, 44 L. ed. 953, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 780.

If the abandonment, by her master and crew, of The Eliza Lines and cargo, had not been justified by a peril excepted in the contract of affreightment, the cargo owner had an immediate right of action against the carrier; and this right of action could not have been defeated by any subsequent offer or attempt of the carrier, if the cargo afterwards happened to come within his reach, to resume performance of his contract and complete the carriage.

Ibid.

Messrs. Edward S. Dodge and Harrington Putnam argued the cause, and, with Mr. Frederic Dodge, filed a brief for Catherine T. Black, administratrix, and Banque de Genes:

In a case where a vessel, after starting on the voyage, had returned to her loading port for fear of capture, Chancellor Kent said: "Here was clearly no relinquishment or breaking up of the voyage on the part of the master. He only retired as fast as the impending danger pressed upon him."

Palmer v. Lorillard, 16 Johns. 348.

The danger from which the master of The Eliza Lines retired was no less.

The master's intention when he left the vessel goes no further than to establish what no one denies, viz., that the salvors found her derelict, so that they acquired a right to compensation on that basis, and such a possession as was necessary to secure their compensation. No intention on his part to return could, under the circumstances, have prevented her being treated as derelict so far as the salvors were concerned.

The Georgiana, 1 Low. Dec. 91, Fed. Cas. No. 5,355.

It has been said in an English decision upon an insurance policy covering a vessel which had become derelict and afterward had been saved: "Desertion of the ship by the crew does not, of itself, constitute a total loss; and the subsequent taking possession by the salvors was not adverse, but an act done for the benefit of the owners, and therefore did not dispossess them. The custody of the vessel was in the salvors till the salvage was paid; but the legal possession was still in the owners."

Thornely v. Hebson, 2 Barn. & Ald. 513.

And by Ware, J., in a decision often cited regarding the rights of salvors of derelict property: "A person undertaking to save derelict goods stands, in relation to the owner, somewhat in the character of a negotiorum gestor of the Roman law,—that of a voluntary agent who interferes in the affairs of another without a mandate or authority; and he is bound to act for the interest of the owner as well as his own."

The Amethyst, 2 Ware, 28, Fed. Cas. No. 330.

Derelict is the only case in which salvors gain any right to possession. Even in cases of derelict they are not entitled to insist upon it under all circumstances.

The Lady Worsley, 2 Spinks, Eccl. & Adm. 253.

The possession of the property by the court through its officers is a possession protective of the interests of all concerned, and not displacing the rights or lien of any party.

The Nathaniel Hooper, 3 Sumn. 542, Fed. Cas. No. 10,032.

Once the master had come to Boston, returned on board, and offered to stipulate for vessel and cargo, and to proceed, he had waived all benefit of any possible excuse for nonperformance by reason of sea peril encountered up to that time. That, after such waiver, the cargo owner must have prevailed over any such defense in a suit against the vessel for nonperformance cannot be doubted.

Carver, Carriage by Sea, 3d ed. § 302, p. 352; Assicurazioni Generali v. The Bessie Morris Co. [1892] 2 Q. B. 652.

The desertion of the ship was an act justified by the necessities of the case, and the subsequent occupation by the salvors, with all the detention arising therefrom, was but an incident to a common calamity.

The Nathaniel Hooper, 3 Sumn. 562, Fed. Cas. No. 10,032.

To turn a justifiable act, excused by the terms of the contract, into a weapon which the cargo owner may, if he chooses, use for the purpose of breaking up the voyage and defeating any obligations to which it may have subjected the cargo, is manifestly unjust and contrary to the principles of maritime law, which distribute the burdens of common disaster proportionally.

The master has a right to carry on the cargo to the port of destination; and, if his ship is capable, either then or within a reasonable time, of carrying the cargo to the port of destination, there is no ground to say that he is not entitled to earn a full freight; and the shippers of the cargo cannot insist upon changing the original contract in invitum, and cut him off from all freight, or dismiss him with a pro rata freight.

Jordan v. Warren Ins. Co. 1 Story, 342, Fed. Cas. No. 7,524.

His duties in similar cases are correlative. He is bound to complete the voyage, and is not allowed to abandon it, unless the effect of the excepted peril has made continuance either physically impossible or so clearly unreasonable as to be impossible from a business point of view.

Assicurazioni Generali v. The Bessie Morris Co. supra.

The above rights and duties extend even to transhipment and forwarding by another vessel.

Harrison v. Fortlage, 161 U. S. 57, 65, 40 L. ed. 616, 619, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 488; The Maggie Hammond (The Maggie Hammond v. Morland) 9 Wall. 435, 458, 19 L. ed. 772, 780; 3 Kent, Com. 212.

The salvage and general average claims which had accrued upon the cargo do not at all impair the master's right to complete the voyage according to the ordinary rules.

Jordan v. Warren Ins. Co. supra.

Messrs. James A. Lowell and John Lowell argued the cause and filed a brief for Hans Andreasen, claimant, etc.:

It is the law of England that, when a vessel abandoned by the shipowner, owing to stress of weather, is brought into harbor by salvors, the cargo owner may elect to treat the contract of affreightment as at an end if the vessel has not come into the possession of the shipowner again.

The Kathleen, 2 Asp. Mar. L. Cas. 367; The Cito, 4 Asp. Mar. L. Cas. 468; The Argonaut, Shipping Gazette, 1884, p. 775; The Leptir, 5 Asp. Mar. L. Cas. 411; The Arno, 8 Asp. Mar. L. Cas. 5.

The injustice of this rule in allowing one party to a contract to determine whether the contract shall continue is obvious. The shipowner has not been at fault, as his abandonment of the vessel was caused by the excepted peril of the seas; but he must deliver up the goods without receiving freight if the cargo owner so desires, or he may be compelled to carry them on. The doctrine rests on technical grounds, and it has been suggested by a recent English writer that the shipowner might avoid the harsh consequences of this rule by filing a caveat against the arrest of his vessel, with a stipulation to give bail for it.

Saunders, Maritime Law, p. 133.

The English cases do not rest on a sound basis. They overlook the true nature of a contract of carriage. In such a contract the shipowner agrees to carry the goods to their destination; the cargo owner agrees to pay the freight when the goods arrive.

Hunter v. Prinsep, 10 East, 378; The Arno, supra; Ellis v. Willard, 9 N. Y. 529; The Tornado (Ellis v. Atlantic Mut. Ins. Co.) 108 U. S. 342, 27 L. ed. 747, 2 Sup. Ct. Rep. 746.

Under this contract the perils of the sea are excepted. The law of carriage by sea rests on the basis of this simple contract. The shipowner has the right to carry the cargo, and the cargo owner has the right to have it carried. The shipowner may carry to the destination (Allen v. Mercantile Mut. Ins. Co. 44 N. Y. 437, 4 Am. Rep. 700); the cargo owner cannot get the goods at an intermediate port except by paying full freight (Schouler, Bailments, 3d ed. § 528; 2 Parsons, Contr. 9th ed. p. 425; The Teutonia, 1 Asp. Mar. L. Cas. 32; Palmer v. Lorillard, 16 Johns. 348; The Nathaniel Hooper, 3 Sumn. 542, Fed. Cas. No. 10,032); unless they are voluntarily given up for a less amount (2 Parsons, Contr. 9th ed. p. 427; Smyth v. Wright, 15 Barb. 51; McKibbin v. Peck, 39 N. Y. 262; Hunt v. Haskell, 24 Me. 339, 41 Am. Dec. 387).

The shipowner has the right to complete the carriage, and may have a reasonable time in which to repair his injured vessel, or he may tranship and send the goods on in another vessel.

Shipton v. Thornton, 9 Ad. & El. 314; The Soblomsten, L. R. 1 Adm. & Eccl. 293; M'Gaw v. Ocean Ins. Co. 23 Pick. 405; Harrison v. Fortlage, 161 U. S. 57, 65, 40 L. ed. 616, 619, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 488.

Ordinarily the shipowner keeps possession of the goods during carriage, but possession in him is not essential. He may forward the cargo in a vessel belonging to someone else if his vessel is injured.

Shipton v. Thornton, supra.

He is entitled to freight, though the voyage be only partly performed by himself and completed by salvors or insurers.

The Nathaniel Hooper, supra; Hubbell v. Great Western Ins. Co. 74 N. Y. 246; Hughes v. Sun Mut. Ins. Co. 12 Daly, 45, 100 N. Y. 58, 2 N. E. 901, 3 N. E. 71.

Capture by an enemy does not put an end to the right to freight, which is only suspended, and revests in the shipowner on recapture.

Carver, Carriage by Sea, 3d ed. p. 274; The Copenhagen, 1 C. Rob. 289; The Nathaniel Hooper, supra; Spafford v. Dodge, 14 Mass. 66.

If the cargo owner forcibly takes possession of the goods, the right to freight is not thereby lost.

Braithwaite v. Aikin, 1 N. D. 455, 48 N. W. 354.

The question of possession, therefore, is not one of the important things to be considered, as the rights of the parties to a contract of carriage do not depend on it.

When Andreasen left the bark he had no thought of completing the voyage, but his thoughts, not communicated to the cargo owner, had no effect on the relations between the parties. He had the right to carry the lumber to Montevideo. He never gave up this right. His excusable abandonment of the vessel was not a breach of the contract, because it was a thing mutually excepted and expressly allowed for.

The Luteken, 6 Ben. 565, Fed. Cas. No. 8,609.

The only way in which Ward & Company could have got their cargo at Boston, unless Andreasen agreed to give it up, was by paying full freight for it. Andreasen could insist on carrying it on, as he did insist, and he would be obliged to give it up only on payment of the full amount. Ward & Company might waive the performance of the contract by him, but they must carry out their part of the contract by paying full freight, unless he waived the performance on their side.

Ellis v. Willard, supra.

When Andreasen rejoined his vessel at Boston the situation was the same as if he had not been obliged to abandon her, but had put into a port of necessity. The question was whether he could repair his ship within a reasonable time and complete the voyage. He found that he could repair the ship and carry on the lumber without unreasonable delay, and he was bound to do so. If he had refused so to do he could not have recovered any freight at all (2 Parsons, Contr. 9th ed. p. 427; Hunter v. Prinsep, 10 East, 378; Portland Bank v. Stubbs, 6 Mass. 422, 4 Am. Dec. 151; Adams v. Haught, 14 Tex. 243; Welch v. Hicks, 6 Cow. 504, 16 Am. Dec. 443), but would have been liable in damages for breach of the contract of carriage (Hill v. Wilson, L. R. 4 C. P. Div. 329; Assicurazioni Generali v. The Bessie Morris Co. [1892] 1 Q. B. 571).

Mr. Justice Holmes delivered the opinion of the court:

This case comes here by certiorari to the circuit court of appeals. The decree in that court was made in a cause in which were consolidated four suits: A libel for salvage against the Eliza Lines, her cargo and freight; a libel for possession by the cargo owners against the cargo; a libel by the master against cargo and cargo owners for freight and general average; and a libel by a bottomry lender against the vessel and freight. The Eliza Lines, a Norwegian bark, was bound on a voyage from Pensacola to Montevideo with a cargo of lumber, under a charter party, "the dangers of the seas, fire, and navigation always mutually excepted." It was abandoned, justifiably, in consequence of dangers of the seas, and was afterwards picked up by salvors and brought into Boston on September 19, 1889. The master was notified by the owners, and came on from St. John, New Brunswick, arriving on September 21. The cargo [126]owners (*Ward & Company) and the master both demanded possession of the cargo from the salvors, but the salvors retained possession, and filed their libel for salvage on September 26. The next day the master filed a claim for ship and cargo, and within an hour Ward & Company filed their claim for the cargo, as above mentioned. On October 5 the vessel was delivered to the master, and on October 18 the master moved for a delivery of the cargo to him upon stipulation, in order to resume his voyage, while Ward & Company moved that the cargo be sold, on the ground that its value was rapidly diminishing by reason of charges and costs. The former motion was denied and the latter granted on November 16. On November 27 the master filed his libel for freight and general average. The circuit court, reversing the decision of the district court, held that the master should have been allowed to complete the voyage and earn freight, and charged the cargo owners personally with the net freight that would have been earned, with other particulars not necessary to mention. 61 Fed. 308, 102 Fed. 184. The decree was affirmed with a slight variation by the circuit court of appeals. 52 C. C. A. 195, 114 Fed. 307.

The question is whether the abandonment of the vessel by the master and crew gave the cargo owners a right to refuse to go on with the voyage in the circumstances disclosed; in other words, whether the cargo owners properly were treated as guilty of a breach of contract for preventing the continuance of the voyage by their refusal and by procuring a sale. It will be noticed that the decree must stand on the ground that the contract was broken by the cargo owners, and that the shipowners were entitled to recover under it, although the voyage was not completed. The decree was not upon a new contract, such as it was attempted to set up in Hopper v. Burness, L. R. 1 C. P. Div. 137, or upon the analogy of a quantum meruit at common law, which was expressly disavowed. The very foundation of a recovery upon the latter ground is that the express contract is out of the way, but that a benefit has been received which ought to be paid for. Therefore, in such a case the recovery cannot exceed *the [127]benefit, as often has been explained in the books. Gillis v. Cobe, 177 Mass. 584, 59 N. E. 455; Keener, Quasi-Contracts, chap. 4. See Flaherty v. Doane, 1 Low. Dec. 148, 150, Fed. Cas. No. 4,849. In the case at bar, while the district court allowed freight pro rata as a charge on the proceeds of the cargo, the circuit court of appeals held the cargo owners personally for a sum much exceeding that amount, and therefore much exceeding the benefit actually received. It will not be necessary to consider the decree of the district court, since that was not appealed from by the cargo owners, and we shall not discuss the effect of the judicial sale, as it is not necessary in the view which we take.

There is no doubt that the English decisions confidently assert the cargo owner's right to refuse to go on. They may be read in the reports, and there is no need to do more than to refer to them. The Arno, 8 Asp. Mar. L. Cas. 5; The Leptir, 5 Asp. Mar. L. Cas. 411; The Argonaut, Shipping Gazette, Weekly Summary, Dec. 5, 1884, p. 775; The Cito, L. R. 7 Prob. Div. 5; The Kathleen, L. R. 4 Adm. & Eccl. 269. The only point which they leave open is whether, if the master should get the abandoned vessel and cargo back from the salvors before the cargo owners had declared an election to end the contract, he might in that way revive his right to finish the voyage. On that point it is enough to say here that if the English rule is right, then, even if there is any such qualification to it, the exception must depend upon something more substantial than a few minutes' priority in filing a libel, when neither master nor cargo owner has possession either of cargo or ship, as, plainly, neither had in this case.

The right of cargo owners to treat the contract as ended by the abandonment of the ship was asserted much earlier than the English cases by Judge Ware in Lewis v. The Elizabeth & Jane, 1 Ware, 41, Fed. Cas. No. 8,321, and earlier still by Mr. Story, before he became a justice of this court, in his Edition of Abbott on Shipping (1810), pp. 338, 512, citing Dunnett v. Tomhagen, 3 Johns. 154, and Mason v. The Blaireau, 2 Cranch, 240, 2 L. ed. 266. We see nothing in The Nathaniel Hooper, 3 Sumn. 542, Fed. Cas. No. 10,032, sufficient [128]*to prove that he changed his opinion. That case is cited in 3 Kent, Com. 13th ed. 228, along with Post v. Robertson, 1 Johns. 24, in which, and in Dunnett v. Tomhagen, 3 Johns. 154, the supreme court of New York and Chief Justice Kent took the same general view, subject to the question whether there might be a recovery on a quantum meruit when benefits were accepted under the contract, in spite of a failure of complete performance. See Caze v. Baltimore Ins. Co. 7 Cranch, 358, 362, 3 L. ed. 370, 371; 3 Kent, Com. 229. Other cases are Smith v. The Mansanito, Fed. Cas. No. 13,075; The James Martin, 88 Fed. 649. See also 3 Kent, Com. 196. In short, we are aware of no decision in this country or in England before the present case which casts any doubt upon the rule.

It was thought by the circuit court and circuit court of appeals that the doctrine so unanimously sanctioned by so many of the most eminent judges of this country and of England is unjust; and the case was put of a long voyage nearly completed and the ship and cargo subsequently brought by salvors intact to the port of destination. But we are of opinion that there is no injustice in holding that what excuses the ship excuses the cargo, and that the rule is in accord with the general principles of contract. Subject to the question whether the cargo owners broke their contract, it seems to us more unjust to charge them personally, in favor of those who failed to complete the voyage as contemplated, with a sum much exceeding the benefit which the cargo owners received from what was done. Of course, it is desirable, if there is no injustice, that the maritime law of this country and of England should agree.

To begin at a distance, a repudiation of a contract, amounting to a breach, warrants the other party in going no further in performance on his side. Roehm v. Horst, 178 U. S. 1, 44 L. ed. 953, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 780. But the same thing is true of an absolute repudiation not amounting to a breach. Frost v. Knight, L. R. 7 Exch. 111, 113; Phillpotts v. Evans, 5 Mees. & W. 475, 477; Ballou v. Billings, 136 Mass. 307, 309.

It appears to us, and we shall try to prove, that an abandonment *of the ship [129] must be regarded as a renunciation of the contract, even if not a repudiation of its terms as binding. It is an overt act which is more than an attempt to give up the voyage. It not merely makes the completion of the voyage so improbable, by reason of the helplessness in which the ship is left and the intent with which the act is done, as practically to destroy the value of the contract to the cargo owner (see Swift & Co. v. United States, 196 U. S. 375, 396, 49 L. ed. 518, 524, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 276), it is a present failure to do what the contract requires, if the purposes of the contract are to be carried out. The requirement is shown by the fact that the abandonment would be a cause of action unless justified. It not only would be a breach of contract, but no one questions that it would authorize a rescission of the contract on the other side, which not every breach of contract does. That it would authorize rescission or refusal to allow the master to change his mind if the vessel was saved shows that a continuous intent and effort to go on with the voyage is an essential condition to the obligation to pay freight. It shows, what needs no illustration, that the continuous care of the master is the main object of the cargo owner's interest in the contract. By the general principles of contract, an open cessation of performance, with the intent to do no more, even if justified, excuses the other party from further performance on his side. The principle is not peculiar to charter parties, it is illustrated in other parts of the law. See Roehm v. Horst, 178 U. S. 1, 44 L. ed. 953, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 780.

In the case at bar the vessel was abandoned with the intent not to return to her or to complete the voyage. This is admitted, if admission be necessary, by the testimony of the master. Of course it is not disputed that the completion of the voyage and delivery of the cargo are absolute conditions to the undertaking to pay freight, by the express terms of the contract and the familiar rule of law. 3 Kent, Com. 220, 228. The master left ship and cargo to their fate, and we cannot doubt, although it was denied, that, after he had done so, if the cargo owners had been the salvors, they could have treated the voyage as at an end. The ground must be that the aban-[130] donment *was more than an attempt, or a mere offer of rescission, which might be revoked by the master before acceptance, and that it was an unequivocal departure from the conditions which the contract imposed. If the abandonment had been unjustified and a breach of contract, of course it would not have ended the contract, but would have left the choice whether to end it or not to the cargo owner. If justified, the simplest view would be that it was so because the contract authorized the master to end it when prevented from performance by perils of the sea, and that the contract was ended. But at all events, as control of the ship and voyage was given up and never regained, the abandonment at least gave an irrevocable power to the cargo owners to decline to be further bound. See, in addition to cases cited above, 3 Kent, Com. 196. The opposite view must be that the master still is bound to go on with the voyage notwithstanding his justifiable abandonment, if a chance should turn up,—a view which leaves his duties in a very ambiguous shape; or else that the master has the choice, which gives the election to the party whose act has made the trouble, as against the party that has done nothing and has had nothing to say.

If it be true that if, on the other hand, the master had rejoined the ship before anyone else had taken possession, or had got it back from the salvors before the cargo owners had been heard from, he might have had a right to complete the voyage, the ground must be that the law would not insist on a technical breach of condition when there had been no substantial change of circumstances and no harm done.

The argument on the other side consists largely in the attempt to treat leaving the ship under stress of perils of the sea as not distinguishable on principle from being torn bodily away from it by tempest. This is one of the oldest fallacies of the law. The difference between the two is the difference between an act and no act. The distinction is well settled in the parallel instance of duress by threats, as distinguished from overmastering physical force applied to a man's body and imparting to it the motion sought to be attributed [131] to him. In the former case *there is a choice and therefore an act, no less when the motive commonly is recognized as very strong or even generally overpowering, than when it is one which would affect the particular person only, and not the public at large. It has been held on this ground that duress created by fear of immediate death did not excuse a trespass. Gilbert v. Stone, Aleyn, 35, Style, 72; Scott v. Shepherd, 2 W. Bl. 892, 896. See Miller v. Horton, 152 Mass. 540, 547, 10 L. R. A. 116, 23 Am. St. Rep. 850, 26 N. E. 100. It has been held that a similar plea in the case of shipwrecked men at sea did not prevent the killing of one of them from being murder. Queen v. Dudley, L. R. 14 Q. B. Div. 273. See United States v. Holmes, 1 Wall. Jr. 1, Fed. Cas. No. 15,383. It is clear that a contract induced by such fear is voidable only, not void, and that the ground of avoidance being like fraud, that the party has been subjected to an improper motive for action, when that motive has been created by a stranger, and is unknown to the party, the contract stands. Keilwey, 154 a. pl. 3. Fairbanks v. Snow, 145 Mass. 153, 1 Am. St. Rep. 446, 13 N. E. 596. So a conveyance induced by duress is operative until avoided, and cannot be set aside when the property has passed to a purchaser without notice. Bainbrigge v. Browne, L. R. 18 Ch. Div. 188, 197; 2 Wms. Vend. & P. 767; Clark v. Pease, 41 N. H. 414. The distinction is as old as the Roman law. Tamen coactus volui. D. 4, 2. 21, § 5; 1 Windscheid, Pandekten, § 80.

The same principles which apply to the making of a contract apply to the breach of it and to nonperformance of the conditions attached to performance on the other side. The contract before us by construction provides that an abandonment of the voyage in consequence of the perils of the sea shall not be an actionable breach, but it equally provides that a completion of the voyage shall be an absolute condition to the right to freight. The same absoluteness attaches the further condition implied from the first, that the effort to complete the voyage shall not be given up voluntarily, midway.

The argument urged to the effect that the cargo's liability to general average created a right to have the voyage finished, however it might have been otherwise, does not need an extended *answer. The [132] cargo owners had the same right to treat the contract as ended as against a shipowner who had cut down a mast, that they would have had against one who had made no sacrifice for the common good. The contract is the supreme source of mutual rights, and cannot be overridden by the incidents of its performance.

The case was brought here by the cargo owners to get rid, if possible, of the personal liability imposed by the circuit court. As this court is of opinion that the personal liability should not have been imposed, no other question needs consideration here.

Decree reversed.

Mr. Justice Brown, with whom were Mr. Justice Harlan, Mr. Justice McKenna, and Mr. Justice Day, dissenting:

Underlying all the questions connected with the libel of Ward & Company for the possession of the cargo, and that of Andreasen, in the nature of a cross libel against the cargo in rem, and against Ward & Company in personam, for freight, is the proposition that the abandonment of the vessel by the master and crew operated as a dissolution of the contract of affreightment, and authorized Ward & Company to reclaim possession of the cargo, either freed altogether from any claim for freight, or upon the payment of a pro rata freight to Boston.

The general principles applicable to a contract of affreightment are entirely well settled; but it may not be amiss to restate such of them as bear upon the effect of an abandonment at sea, and subsequent rescue of the vessel. The contract is an entire one, and cannot be apportioned, unless by consent of the parties. The Nathaniel Hooper, 3 Sumn. 542, 554, Fed. Cas. No. 10,032; Hunter v. Prinsep, 10 East. 378, 394; Post v. Robertson, 1 Johns. 24, 26. From the moment the cargo is delivered to the vessel, each is bound to the other for the performance of the contract. The shipper cannot recover his cargo except upon the payment of full freight. Tindall v. Taylor, 4 El. & Bl. 219. Neither can the vessel demand any portion of the freight [133] until the cargo is delivered at the port *of destination. If the vessel meet with disaster at sea, and put into a port of refuge, she is entitled to retain the cargo for a reasonable time for repairs, or to tranship it to another vessel, in order that her freight may be earned. The Soblomsten, L. R. 1 Adm. & Eccl. 293; 1 Parsons, Shipping, 175, 231; Cargo v. Galam, Brown. & L. 167, 178. If, however, the master of the vessel is willing to surrender the cargo at an intermediate port, and the shipper is willing to receive it, he may do so upon payment of a pro rata freight. In other words, the parties may substitute a new contract for the original one. Neither party, however, can be compelled to this course. Post v. Robertson, 1 Johns. 24, 27.

If it be once granted that, in case of shipwreck or other disaster, the contract of affreightment is not dissolved, and the authorities on this question, both in this country and in England, settle this beyond controversy (Cargo v. Galam, Brown. & L. 167; Shipton v. Thornton, 9 Ad. & El. 314, 335), it is difficult to see why, on principle, a compulsory abandonment at sea should work a different result, provided the vessel be ultimately rescued and taken into port. The abandonment is but a feature of the disaster, and is no abandonment at all of the ship and cargo in the sense in which that word is used in the law of marine insurance, where a vessel, after such disaster, is abandoned to the underwriters. Thornely v. Hebson, 2 Barn. & Ald. 513, 519. In such case the abandonment is a voluntary and complete surrender of the ship and cargo, and of all right, title, and interest thereto, and the underwriter becomes the owner, with all the rights and liabilities incident to such ownership. It is true it has been held that the underwriter may decline to accept such abandonment, and may repair the vessel and return it to the owner, but that does not change the character of the abandonment.

The same may be said of the throwing overboard of portions of a cargo of perishable articles, on account of rottenness, putrescence, or threatened danger to the rest of the cargo. But the case under consideration is more nearly analogous to the jettison of valuable cargo for the purpose of relieving the ship or preventing her from drifting ashore. This has never been *supposed to work any change in the owner- [134] ship or an abandonment of the property, although it may subject it to the claim of salvors, who may subsequently rescue it. The Kathleen, L. R. 4 Adm. & Eccl. 269, 278. The abandonment of the ship and cargo in this case did not operate as a transfer of the property to anyone who should rescue it, but was an involuntary abandonment of the voyage, a relinquishment of any present intention to continue it, and a flight from the vessel to save the lives of the crew, and for the purpose of obtaining a supply of fresh water. If the abandonment have the effect claimed for it, of dissolving the contract of affreightment, logically it would have that effect from the moment the master and crew were transferred to the schooner which took them off; but it will not be doubted that if, within an hour, a steam tug had hove in sight and offered to take the abandoned vessel in tow, the rights of the master and owner would have remained unimpaired, except for the claim for salvage. In our view it would make no difference whether the master had hired a steam tug to tow her to a place of safety, or whether, after the master and crew had left her, a vessel had come along, picked her up, and towed or navigated her to a harbor of refuge. Granting that the master and crew left her with no intention of returning, such intention was caused by the belief on his part that she was a total loss. But if the circumstances were so changed that she did not become such, we see no reason why he was not entitled to change his mind in that particular, provided that he acted with sufficient promptness, and intervening rights had not accrued.

The facts of this case show that, as soon as the master learned of the rescue of the vessel, he went to Boston, arriving September 21, two days after the bark, went aboard the vessel, announced his intention of completing the voyage, and, the day after the libel for salvage was filed, interposed a claim for ship and cargo, in which he alleged that he was entitled to the possession of the cargo of hard pine lumber then on board of her, having given bills of lading for it, and being obliged by the terms of such bills of lading to de-[135] liver said cargo at Montevideo, *in the province of Uruguay. There was manifestly no lack of diligence here, although the agents of Ward & Company filed a claim to the cargo later on the same day, and on October 18 filed a libel for possession, and moved for a sale of the cargo. The question was thus squarely presented as to which of these parties was entitled to the cargo, which was manifestly dependent upon the other question, whether the contract of affreightment was still in existence. That there was no definite intention of abandoning the lien of the ship upon the cargo is shown by the fact that, as soon as the master was informed that the vessel had been rescued, he took immediate steps to recover possession of the cargo.

The American cases upon the effect of abandonment of a vessel at sea upon the contract of affreightment are not of any great value, as the subject is not fully discussed in any of them, and the question was not presented in the aspect in which it is before us in this case. In Lewis v. The Elizabeth & Jane, 1 Ware, 41, Fed. Cas. No. 8,321, the petition was for wages, which were denied upon the ground that the vessel had been abandoned and no freight had been earned. The case of The Nathaniel Hooper, 3 Sumn. 542, Fed. Cas. No. 10,032, is still more indefinite in its treatment of the subject herein involved. So, in the case of Dunnett v. Tomhagen, 3 Johns. 154, wages were denied to the seamen because no freight was earned on the homeward voyage, no part of the cargo being delivered by the ship.

In Post v. Robertson, 1 Johns. 24, the vessel was abandoned after performing three fourths of her homeward voyage, was rescued by salvors, and brought into port, where the cargo was sold, and the proceeds paid to the salvors and owners. It was held that this was not such a delivery of the cargo as would entitle the shipowners to maintain an action on the charter party for full freight. The case turned largely upon the form of action,—covenant,—and the court was inclined to the opinion that an action might have lain for a quantum meruit.

In none of these cases was the question discussed as to the power of the master to reclaim possession of the cargo at the *port [136] of refuge in order to earn his freight, it being seemingly assumed that the wreck and abandonment of the vessel hac dissolved all contracts, and especially that of the seamen, who attempted to enforce their lien upon the cargo before freight had been earned by its delivery at the port of destination.

It may be frankly admitted that the English cases lay down the rule that the abandonment of the vessel puts an end to the contract of affreightment, or, at least, it gives the owner of the cargo an option to do so. The case of The Kathleen, L. R. 4 Adm. & Eccl. 269, is the earliest upon the subject, and asserts a principle which has been followed in the subsequent English cases. The Kathleen had left Charleston with a cargo of cotton bound for Bremen, and when in the English channel suffered a collision with another vessel, for which the Kathleen was in nowise to blame. On the following day she was abandoned by her crew, and rescued by salvors, taken to Dover, and sued for salvage. The owners of the Kathleen applied for leave to bond the cargo in the salvage suits, in order that they might carry the same to its destination. The court ordered the cargo sold, on the ground that it was deteriorating fast through the damage sustained by salt water. A suit for freight was subsequently instituted by the owners of the vessel. Sir Robert Phillimore held that the original contract between the owners of the ship and cargo was at an end, and that no freight was due; and, in answer to the claim of pro rata freight, observed that the title to such pro rata freight must arise out of a new contract with the shipowner, to which both parties assent, and as neither party assented, pro rata freight was not due. In view of the fact that at least seven eighths of the voyage had been performed, that the collision which put an end to the voyage was not in anywise the fault of the Kathleen, that she was taken into a port in the immediate neighborhood, and that the vessel stood ready to take the cargo on to Bremen and earn her freight,—we are not favorably impressed with the natural justice of a decision which denied even pro rata freight to the master.

The case of The Cito, L. R. 7 Prob. Div. 5, was much like that of the *Kathleen, [137] which was followed by the court of appeals in an opinion by Lord Justice Brett, subsequently Lord Esher. The Cito, on a voyage from Wilmington to Rotterdam, with a cargo of resin in barrels, was, owing to the peril of the sea, abandoned by her crew off the American coast. She was subsequently picked up and navigated to Plymouth, and there arrested for salvage. The court declined to hold that a mere abandonment at sea put an end to a contract of affreightment, since the abandonment might be wrongful, and in such a case the owner of the cargo might sue the ship upon its contract; but it held that the abandonment was so far binding upon the shipowner as to allow the cargo owner to treat such contract as abandoned. The court also held that the court below was right in ordering the cargo to be delivered to the owners upon their giving bail for salvage. Some stress was laid upon the fact that before the shipowners sought the possession of the cargo, the cargo owners had intervened and applied for it.

In the case of The Leptir, 5 Asp. Mar. L. Cas. 411, the salving vessel took off the crew of the vessel in distress, refused to allow her own crew to return, and the two vessels were navigated into a port of refuge. It was held that there was no abandonment, that the case of the Cito did not apply, and the court decreed for a pro rata freight.

In The Argonaut, unreported, but published in the Shipping Gazette of December 5, 1884, a vessel on a voyage from Halifax to Liverpool was abandoned by her crew, and picked up by salvors off the English coast. On being taken to Plymouth, the owners demanded the cargo, but the court ordered it carried to Liverpool, where it obtained a higher price than the owner could have gotten for it at Plymouth. It seems to have been carried in the ship by her own crew from Plymouth to Liverpool. The admiralty court allowed a quantum meruit freight, but its decree was reversed by the court of appeals, which held that the ship was entitled to nothing.

The prior cases were, however, pushed to their logical conclusion in that of The Arno, [138] decided by the court of appeals, *8 Asp. Mar. L. Cas. 5. The vessel, while on a voyage from New York to Liverpool, was owing to stress of weather, abandoned at sea on March 31, and three days thereafter was picked up by a salvage crew, and taken to Liverpool, her port of destination. The admiralty court held that, although the cargo was delivered by the vessel on which it had been originally shipped, at the port of destination, the act of abandoning her so clearly indicated the intention of the master not to carry out the contract as to entitle the owners of the cargo to treat that act as putting an end to it. It was held that no freight was recoverable. It appeared that on April 11, as soon as the owner of the Arno heard of the abandonment, he made an arrangement with the salvors, sent a tug to meet the vessel, which returned with her to Liverpool on April 25. It was intimated that if, before notice to the shipowner of the election of the cargo owner to treat the contract as at an end, he had been able to resume possession of the ship and cargo, he might perhaps have been able to annul the abandonment; but not having done so, the cargo owner had a right to treat the abandonment as a dissolution of the contract. The judgment was affirmed by the court of appeals. It is true that, in this case, the cargo was not delivered at the port of destination by the crew of the ship, but by the salvor's crew. It was, however delivered by the ship herself, and we see no reason why the salvor's crew might not have been treated as the agent of the ship in that particular; but the court held to the hard and fast rule of the Cito, that the abandonment of a ship ipso facto put an end to the contract of affreightment, notwithstanding the fact that the cargo was delivered by the same ship and at the port of destination. Under such circumstances the denial of all freight seems to have worked a great hardship.

Although the House of Lords has not yet spoken upon the subject, these cases must be regarded as settling the English rule that a compulsory abandonment of a vessel at sea puts an end to the contract of affreightment, and disentitles her owners to recover any portion of her freight, notwithstanding that she *and her cargo may be [139] picked up by salvors, and taken into an intermediate port, or even to the port of discharge.

That the soundness of this doctrine has not been accepted without challenge is evident, not only from certain expressions by some of the English writers, but notably by Dr. Wendt, in his work on Maritime Legislation, wherein he speaks of the Cito as having caused much surprise among those interested in maritime commerce, and comments upon it as follows (3d edition, page 629):

"So long as this Cito decision stands it gives the cargo owner the full option to take advantage of the common misfortune for the purpose of evading the contract entered into by him. This, I confidently assert, is opposed to every principle of law and justice. A contract, by the law of every civilized country, holds good until both parties to it, of their own free will, agree that it shall not be carried out. Now, how can the abandonment of a ship in such a case as the Cito be taken to be an expression of an agreement on the part of the owners of the vessel to cancel the contract? The action of the crew in leaving a vessel to save their lives is not an act of will at all; they have to desert their vessel under the pressure of a vis major. How can this be taken to show an agreement on the part of the shipowner to abandon his part of the contract? He has no power to exercise any option at all. If when the vessel is recovered and the owner again requires [acquires?] the power to exercise his will in the matter, he then elects not to carry out his contract, and the cargo owner agrees, well and good; the contract is put an end to by mutual consent. To assume, however, such consent on the part of one of the contracting parties from an action forced on his servants by a power which cannot be resisted, seems to me to be a doctrine utterly opposed to common sense."

The ruling of the English courts that even a delivery of the cargo at the port of destination does not entitle the shipowners to any freight whatever seems a somewhat startling innovation upon the ancient rule [140]of the admiralty, that a loss occasioned *by a peril of the sea shall be borne as a common burden, and shared proportionately by the ship, cargo, and freight, as well as a departure from the general rule that neither party can put an end to a contract without the assent of the other.

We consider the sounder doctrine to be that the compulsory abandonment of a ship at sea should be treated merely as a relinquishment of the voyage and of any present intention to continue it; but that, if the vessel be subsequently rescued and taken into an intermediate port, the master retains the same right given to him by an ordinary disaster at sea, unattended by an abandonment, to resume possession of the ship and cargo, subject, of course, to the claim of salvors, and carry the latter forward to its destination, provided he act with promptness and before any intervening rights had accrued.

The opinion of the court assumes that the abandonment of the vessel was a repudiation and a rescission of the contract of affreightment, when in fact it was involuntary, designed only to save the lives of the crew, and had as little effect upon the contract as if the vessel had met with a disaster not involving an abandonment, and put into a port of safety for repairs. It apparently ignores the principle that, to constitute a rescission, there must be the same intent to rescind as there was originally to contract, and that the intent to rescind should not be inferred without some act which points unmistakably to that conclusion. There is no more reason for holding that the abandonment of the ship was a rescission of the contract of affreightment than that such abandonment was a renunciation of all the owner's title to the ship in case she were subsequently rescued. Whether, if Ward & Company had insisted upon the ship carrying out her contract, they might, in case of refusal, have had a cause of action, it is unnecessary to consider. In view of the severity of the storm, and of the danger of remaining on board, the effect of her abandonment on the contract probably never entered the mind of the master. Such abandonment was not a failure to perform the contract in any particular, since it was the result of an overwhelming necessity; and, if the vessel were *rescued the mas-[141] ter might repair and continue the voyage, or tranship the cargo to another vessel after the extent of the damage had been ascertained. He might indeed have supposed that the ship was irretrievably lost; but both parties took the chance of its being rescued and taken to a port of safety, when the question would then arise whether prudence required her to be repaired, or the cargo transhipped.

In such case the same question arises as if the ship had met with a disaster, and been navigated into a port by her own crew. We think it makes no difference in principle whether a tug is hired by the master to take his ship into port, or a tug in the employment of another person comes along and picks her up. If the cargo owner had himself rescued the vessel, he might doubtless have declared the contract rescinded; but it is quite otherwise if the vessel be rescued by her own master and crew, or be taken in tow by a third party.

Applying the doctrine of the opinion, it would follow (and such are the English cases of The Kathleen and The Arno) that if the vessel be abandoned near her port of destination, and towed into such port by a salving tug, she loses her whole freight, and cannot even recover on a quantum meruit, though the whole voyage be performed.

This conclusion seems so irreconcilable with natural justice that we are constrained to dissent.

[142]*FLORIDA McGUIRE and Matilda Caro

v.

WILLIAM A. BLOUNT, William Fisher, Mrs. William Fisher, The Pensacola City Company, Thomas C. Watson, John Williams, James M. Bullard.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 142–148.)

1. Courts—disqualification of judge for interest.—The disqualification of the trial judge for interest is not established, nor is it offered to be established in any legitimate way, by an unverified petition stating that the wife of the judge has acquired an interest in the property which is the subject-matter of the litigation, accompanied by a statement of a desire to offer testimony in support thereof, without furnishing the names of the witnesses, or filing any affidavits, or definitely stating what the witnesses would say if permitted to testify.

2. Ejectment—sufficiency of plaintiff's title.—The plaintiff in ejectment must recover upon the strength of his own title.

3. Ejectment—defense of outstanding title.—A defendant in ejectment who is not a mere trespasser or interloper may show an outstanding and subsisting title in a stranger, to defeat the plaintiff's right of recovery.

4. Evidence—admissibility of public records as ancient documents.—Documents which show the probate of a will in proceedings had during the Spanish control of Florida, and a judicial sale of the testator's lands, and bear upon their face every evidence of age and authenticity, and come from the official custody of the surveyor general of the United States, are admissible in evidence as ancient documents,—especially where the proceedings have been given express or tacit recognition in subsequent official investigations and conveyances.

5. Judicial sale—validity as against technical objections.—Technical objections to the regularity of a judicial sale had during the Spanish control of Florida will not be permitted to defeat the operation of the sale and the conveyance thereunder to pass title,—especially where a sale of the lands has been made under the title undertaken to be passed by the proceedings, and this sale has subsequently been held sufficient to convey the title by the commissioners appointed under the act of Congress of May 8, 1822 (3 Stat. at L. 709, chap. 129), for ascertaining titles to lands within the territory of Florida.

6. Trial—directed verdict.—A verdict may be directed in favor of one of the parties when the testimony and all the inferences which the jury can justifiably draw therefrom are insufficient to support a different verdict.

[No. 6.]

Submitted January 18, 1905. Ordered for oral argument January 30, 1905. Argued October 12, 13, 1905. Decided October 30, 1905.

ON WRIT of Certiorari to the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Fifth Circuit to review a judgment which affirmed a judgment of the Circuit Court of the United States for the Northern District of Florida in favor of defendants in an action of ejectment. Affirmed.

See same case below, 56 C. C. A. 682, 121 Fed. 1020.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Messrs. Hilary A. Herbert and Benjamin Micou for petitioners on original submission. Messrs. E. T. Davis and Samuel S. Belden were on the brief:

The trial judge was disqualified for interest.

State ex rel. Perez v. Wall, 41 Fla. 463, 49 L.R.A. 548, 79 Am. St. Rep. 195, 26 So. 1020; Place v. Butternuts Woolen & Cotton Mfg. Co. 28 Barb. 507.

A mere intruder cannot enter upon a person actually seised, and eject him, and then question his title, or set up an outstanding title in another. The maxim that the plaintiff must recover on the strength of his own title, and not on the weakness of the defendant's, is applicable to all actions for the recovery of real property. But, if the plaintiff had actual prior possession of the land, this is strong enough to enable him to recover it from a mere trespasser who entered without any title.

Christy v. Scott, 14 How. 292, 14 L. ed. 426; Bradshaw v. Ashley, 180 U. S. 59, 45 L. ed. 423, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 297; Seymour v. Creswell, 18 Fla. 40.

A plaintiff in ejectment can recover against one not showing a better right, or an intruder.

Ashmead v. Wilson, 22 Fla. 258.

Where both parties claim title to land from a common source, the defendant is estopped from setting up an outstanding title with which he is disconnected.

Doyle v. Wade, 23 Fla. 98, 11 Am. St. Rep. 334, 1 So. 516.

As to an intruder or trespasser, or one who does not show a better right, possession of lands, like the possession of per-

NOTE.—As to what title or interest will support an action of ejectment—see note to Hancock v. McAvoy, 18 L.R.A. 781.

On defenses in actions of ejectment—see note to Greene v. Couse, 13 L.R.A. 206.

As to proof of ancient documents—see note to Coulson v. Walton, 9 L. ed. U. S. 51.

As to when judicial sale will be set aside—see note to Schroeder v. Young, 40 L. ed. U. S. 721.

On how far a purchaser at an execution or judicial sale is protected as a bona fide purchaser—see note to Riley v. Martinelli, 21 L.R.A. 33.

As to when a verdict may be directed by the court—see note to Grand Chute v. Winegar, 21 L. ed. U. S. 174.

sonal property, is prima facie evidence of title, and will support ejectment.

Dothard v. Denson, 72 Ala. 544.

None of the documents asked to be considered as a will, nor the proceedings thereunder, whether in Spanish or translations into English, are properly authenticated.

Church v. Hubbart, 2 Cranch, 238, 2 L. ed. 265.

To introduce into a cause a copy of any paper, the truth of that copy must be established, and sufficient reasons for the nonproduction of the original must be shown.

Smith v. Carrington, 4 Cranch, 70, 2 L. ed. 553.

To all intents and purposes these are private documents, coming from private hands.

Peralta v. United States, 3 Wall. 440, 18 L. ed. 223; United States v. Vallejo, 22 How. 422, 16 L. ed. 360.

That the defendants in error offer what they wish to have considered as the original will of Gabriel de Rivas, without evidence of its ever having been filed or recorded, or any action taken upon it, certainly, to say the least, casts well-grounded suspicions upon the validity of the other papers purporting to be copies and translations.

United States v. Teschmaker, 22 How. 392–406, 16 L. ed. 353–357.

All these papers were admitted as evidence without first requiring any evidence of their antiquity or of their genuineness. There is no evidence offered of the execution of the will. In fact it does not purport to be signed by Gabriel de Rivas. It is not a valid will on its face.

Meegan v. Boyle, 19 How. 149, 15 L. ed. 583.

There is no evidence offered to show where or when these documents were found, or of possession under any of them by alleged grantees. There is no evidence offered to free the papers from the just ground of suspicion under which they fall; yet, under the decisions of this court, there should be proof preliminary to their admission into evidence.

Applegate v. Lexington & C. County Min. Co. 117 U. S. 255, 29 L. ed. 892, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 742; Barr v. Gratz, 4 Wheat. 213, 4 L. ed. 553; Winn v. Patterson, 9 Pet. 663, 9 L. ed. 266; Stoddard v. Chambers, 2 How. 284, 17 L. ed. 269.

This court has always protected the right of trial by jury with jealous care.

Bank of Washington v. Triplett, 1 Pet. 31, 7 L. ed. 40; Barney v. Schmeider, 9 Wall. 254, 19 L. ed. 650; Mutual L. Ins. Co. v. Snyder, 93 U. S. 396, 23 L. ed. 889; Crane v. Morris, 6 Pet. 610, 8 L. ed. 518; Phœnix Mut. L. Ins. Co. v. Doster, 106 U. S. 30–38, 27 L. ed. 65–69, 1 Sup. Ct. Rep. 18; United States v. Union P. R. Co. 98 U. S. 582, 25 L. ed. 143.

Even if Fisher's possession as receiver could be adverse to plaintiffs in error, whether he took possession under the order of Judge McLellan would be a collateral fact in pais,—an extrinsic circumstance; and the inference to be drawn therefrom should have been left to the jury.

Etting v. Bank of United States, 11 Wheat. 60, 6 L. ed. 419.

Whether possession is, or is not, adverse in any particular case, is a question of fact for the jury.

Hogan v. Kurtz, 94 U. S. 773, 24 L. ed. 317; Jackson ex dem. Bradstreet v. Huntington, 5 Pet. 402, 8 L. ed. 170.

Whether possession is continuing is also a question to be decided by the jury under proper instructions from the court.

Cook v. Burnley (Cook v. Porter) 11 Wall. 659, 20 L. ed. 29.

It should have been left to the jury to determine whether these documents were fraudulent, under proper instruction from the court as to what was the law. Also, no presumptions the jury might make from the other evidence in connection with the antiquity of the papers before them should have been excluded.

Warner v. Norton, 20 How. 460, 15 L. ed. 953; Gregg v. Sayre, 8 Pet. 252, 8 L. ed. 935; Adams v. Roberts, 2 How. 496, 11 L. ed. 353.

Whether the place of location agrees with the description in the grant is a question for the jury.

Pinkerton v. Ledoux, 129 U. S. 346, 32 L. ed. 706, 9 Sup. Ct. Rep. 399.

Where the boundaries of land described in any deed really are, is always a question of fact.

Andreu v. Watkins, 26 Fla. 401, 7 So. 876.

Where defendants do not set up title in themselves, but seek to maintain their possession as mere intruders by setting up title in a third person, it is necessary to establish the existence of such an outstanding title beyond controversy.

Greenleaf v. Birth, 6 Pet. 312, 8 L. ed. 410.

Among the papers relied on to show a judicial sale of this tract, there is no plat of the land, and nothing giving a description of it by metes and bounds.

United States v. Castro, 24 How. 351, 16 L. ed. 661.

A document, to be admissible as an ancient document, should not raise on its face any suspicions of its genuineness, should appear upon its face to be more than thirty years old, and should have come from the proper, that is, the natural, custody.

Applegate v. Lexington & C. County Min. Co. 117 U. S. 255, 29 L. ed. 892, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 742.

There is nothing to prohibit an action of ejectment being founded upon a title by prescription.

Toltec Ranch Co. v. Cook, 191 U. S. 538, 48 L. ed. 292, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 166; Toltec Ranch Co. v. Babcock, 191 U. S. 542, 48 L. ed. 294, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 169.

Plaintiffs had a prior possession at the time that a possession adverse to them is claimed by defendants to have commenced running, and against this defendants cannot set up an outstanding title.

Bradshaw v. Ashley, 180 U. S. 63, 64, 45 L. ed. 429, 430, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 297.

Mr. Benjamin Micou for petitioners on oral argument.

Messrs. William A. Blount and A. C. Blount, Jr., for respondents on original submission:

The plaintiffs in error cannot allege error in the nonadmission of testimony in the court below upon a general offer to introduce testimony upon a given point, unaccompanied by the production of any witness or the propounding of any specific question to him. Non constat that any witness produced might not have been incompetent, or any evidence offered, hearsay or otherwise, inadmissible.

Ladd v. Missouri Coal & Min. Co. 14 C. C. A. 246, 32 U. S. App. 93, 66 Fed. 882.

The court had a right to base its finding on its own knowledge of the facts, and refuse to take testimony upon the subject. This is the rule in cases of contempt, when the matter transpires in the presence of the court, and, hence, is in his own knowledge.

Ex parte Terry, 128 U. S. 290, 306, 32 L. ed. 405, 409, 9 Sup. Ct. Rep. 77.

The court did not err in directing a verdict for the defendants.

Chapman v. Yellow Poplar Lumber Co. 32 C. C. A. 402, 61 U. S. App. 499, 89 Fed. 903; Holmes v. Goldsmith, 147 U. S. 162, 37 L. ed. 122, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 288.

The proceedings show conclusively their judicial character as the transactions of a Spanish court. This being so, proof of the signature of the persons executing them, or of their official character, was not necessary.

Williams v. Conger, 125 U. S. 397–409, 31 L. ed. 778–784, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 933.

Custodians from the land commissioners, exercising the powers of the office, will be presumed to have done so legally, and to have been duly appointed and acting.

M'Mahon v. Lennard, 6 H. L. Cas. 970; 19 Am. & Eng. Enc. Law, pp. 436, 437.

Even a copy of a paper certified by a public officer who is the custodian of it is evidence, without proof of signatures to the original, upon general principles of law.

United States v. Percheman, 7 Pet. 51, 8 L. ed. 604; Doe ex dem. Magruder v. Roe, 13 Fla. 602; Bell v. Kendrick, 25 Fla. 778, 6 So. 868.

The protocol was admissible in evidence because the title evidenced by it had been pronounced valid by the confirmation of the land commissioners for West Florida.

Hallett v. Doe, 7 Ala. 900; Cousin v. Labatut, 19 How. 202–211, 15 L. ed. 601–605; United States v. Arredondo, 6 Pet. 723, 724, 8 L. ed. 559, 560.

The court, in its opinion, said that it appeared to be an ancient document; and this assertion must be taken to be true in the absence of affirmative evidence of its untruth.

Kirkland v. Oates, 25 Ala. 465.

Even if there was no admission, and no proof, as to keepers of the Spanish archives, the fact that they acted as such raises a presumption that they were duly appointed and acting.

M'Mahon v. Lennard, supra; 19 Am. & Eng. Enc. Law, pp. 436, 437.

The confirmation by the commissioners was evidence of title.

Ryder v. Innerarity, 4 Stew. & P. (Ala.) 29; Hallett v. Doe, supra.

There was no testimony which required the submission of the cause to the jury.

Randall v. Baltimore & O. R. Co. 109 U. S. 483, 27 L. ed. 1005, 3 Sup. Ct. Rep. 322; Metropolitan R. Co. v. Jackson, L. R. 3 App. Cas. 193; Ryder v. Wombwell, L. R. 4 Exch. 39; Delaware, L. & W. R. Co. v. Converse, 139 U. S. 472, 35 L. ed. 215, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 569; North Pennsylvania R. Co. v. Commercial Nat. Bank, 123 U. S. 733, 31 L. ed. 289, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 266; Chapman v. Yellow Poplar Lumber Co. supra; Hinds v. Keith, 6 C. C. A. 231, 13 U. S. App. 222, 314, 57 Fed. 15; Marion County v. Clark, 94 U. S. 278, 24 L. ed. 59; Patton v. Texas & P. R. Co. 179 U. S. 661, 45 L. ed. 363, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 275; Doswell v. De La Lanzo, 20 How. 29, 15 L. ed. 824; Hanrick v. Patrick, 119 U. S. 172, 30 L. ed. 405, 7 Sup. Ct. Rep. 147.

A general lumping exception to the admission of all of the documents offered is unavailing if any of them are admissible.

Holloway v. Dunham, 170 U. S. 615–619, 42 L. ed. 1165–1167, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 784; Price v. Pankhurst, 3 C. C. A. 551, 10 U. S. App. 497, 53 Fed. 312; Luttrell v. Martin, 112 N. C. 593, 17 S. E. 573; Martin v. Kline, 157 Pa. 473, 27 Atl. 753; Rio Grande R. Co. v. Cross, 5 Tex. Civ. App. 454, 23 S. W. 529, 1004; Lowe v. State, 88 Ala. 8, 7 So. 97; Coveny v. Hale, 49 Cal. 552; University v. Shanks, 40 Wis. 356; Brantley v.

Gunn, 29 Ala. 392; Fitch v. Woodruff & B. Iron Works, 29 Conn. 82.

The possession of John De La Rua, from whom the surveyor general obtained the Spanish archives, was a reasonable and natural possession.

Meath v. Winchester, 3 Bing. N. C. 183; Gibson v. Poor, 21 N. H. 441, 53 Am. Dec. 216; Doe ex dem. Wildgoose v. Pearce, 2 Moody & R. 240.

A defendant in ejectment need show no title, but can prove outstanding title in a third person without connecting himself with it.

Henderson v. Wanamaker, 25 C. C. A. 181, 49 U. S. App. 174, 79 Fed. 736.

The protocol was an original, and correctly designated as a protocol.

Sheldon v. Milmo, 90 Tex. 21, 36 S. W. 413.

Mr. William A. Blount for respondents on oral argument.

[143] *Mr. Justice Day delivered the opinion of the court:

This case was begun in the circuit court of the United States for the northern district of Florida to recover in ejectment certain lands described in the declaration. The defendants answered, and issues were joined as to the right of possession of the lands in question.

Upon the trial, after the testimony was submitted and the cause argued, the court instructed the jury to find for the defendants. Upon writ of error this judgment was affirmed by the circuit court of appeals, 56 C. C. A. 682, 121 Fed. 1020.

The plaintiffs, when the case was called for trial, filed a written motion, or petition, challenging the right of the presiding judge to hear the case, and praying that he "recuse" himself. The petition was denied and the judge presided at the trial of the case. The ground of the petition for recusation was that the wife of the judge had acquired an interest in the property which was the subject-matter of the litigation. The petition was not sworn to, and while a statement was made of the desire of the plaintiffs to offer testimony in support thereof, the names of witnesses were not furnished, no affidavits were filed, and no definite statement made of what witnesses would say if permitted to testify. The judge overruled this motion, stating that his wife had no interest in the property, and, with a view to convey an interest, the vendor had tendered a quitclaim deed to his wife, which had been declined, and no delivery ever made thereof or title vested in her. Later the judge placed on file an affidavit of a real-estate agent, stating substantially the same facts.

While the courts cannot too carefully guard against any attempt of an interested judge to force himself upon litigating parties, and should scrupulously maintain the right of every litigant to an impartial and disinterested tribunal for the determination of his rights, we find in this record nothing establishing or offering to establish, in any legitimate way, the disqualification relied upon because of a pecuniary interest in the *controversy, resulting from [144] his wife's alleged ownership of a part of the land in question.

The petitioners, who were plaintiffs in the original case, sought to recover the tract of land as the heirs of one Gabriel Rivas. The tract originally owned by him consisted of about 300 "arpents" of land near the city of Pensacola, Florida.

The defendants at the trial undertook to defeat the plaintiffs' right of recovery, not by establishing a perfect title in themselves, but relied upon showing the devestiture of the plaintiffs' title as heirs of Gabriel Rivas. It is elementary law that the plaintiff in ejectment must recover upon the strength of his own title, which must be sufficiently established to warrant a verdict in his favor. McNitt v. Turner, 16 Wall. 352, 362, 21 L. ed. 341, 346; Watts v. Lindsey, 7 Wheat. 158, 5 L. ed. 423.

A defendant in ejectment who is not a mere trespasser or interloper may show an outstanding and subsisting title in a stranger, to defeat the plaintiff's right of recovery. Love v. Simms, 9 Wheat. 515, 6 L. ed. 149; Smith v. McCann, 24 How. 398, 16 L. ed. 714; King v. Mullins, 171 U. S. 404–437, 43 L. ed. 214–226, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 925.

Relying on this right, the defendants sought to show, by the production of certain ancient documents, bound together, styled a protocol, that Gabriel Rivas's will had been established by proceedings had during the Spanish control of Florida, which showed that Rivas, who had received the lands in controversy by grant of November 10, 1806, from Morales, intendant, etc., of Spain, had died on April 28, 1808, his will being probated by certain proceedings approved by the governor of Florida on May 2, 1808. In this protocol proceedings are shown for the sale of the three hundred (300) arpents of lands, which belonged to Rivas, resulting in a sale to one Gregario Caro, which sale purports to have been approved by the civil and military governor of West Florida. These original documents, evidencing the probate of the will of Rivas and the sale of the lands, including those in controversy, were presented to this court, having been admitted in testimony at the trial, against the objections of *plaintiffs, [145] under the stipulation that they came from the custody of the surveyor general of the United States, keeper of the archives. Many objections are urged to the authenticity and admissibility of these documents, as well as to the regularity of the proceedings under the Spanish law. The production of the originals of these documents has given the court an opportunity to inspect them. They bear upon their face every evidence of age and authenticity. There is nothing about them to suggest that they have been forged or tampered with. They present an honest as well as ancient appearance, and come from official custody. To such public and proprietary records the courts have applied the rules of admissibility governing ancient documents. 3 Wigmore, Ev. § 2145 and notes. With reference to such documents and records it is only necessary to show that they are of the age of thirty years, and come from a natural and reasonable custody; from a place where they might reasonably be expected to be found. 3 Wigmore, Ev. §§ 2138, 2139. While the testimony tends to show that these documents were subjected to various changes of possession during the transition of the government of Florida from Spain to the United States, and upon the evacuation of Pensacola during the Civil War, there is nothing to establish that they were ever out of the hands of a proper custodian. Nor is there proof to show that the originals were lost, or any evidence of a fraudulent substitution of a made-up record in the interest of parties to be benefited thereby.

In view of the frequency with which these proceedings have been given express or tacit recognition in subsequent official investigations and conveyances of the lands, corroborating the inference of genuineness to be gathered from the appearance and history of these documents, and the possession of the lands conveyed, we have no question that the court properly admitted them in evidence.

Admitting the correctness of this ruling, the inquiry follows, Did the judicial sale operate to devest the Rivas heirs of title to the lands? The lands were purchased at [146] the sale of October 20, *1817, by one Gregario Caro. The sale to Caro was duly approved and confirmed on October 21, 1817. Caro conveyed to Fitzsimmons, Smythe, and Chebeaux on October 22, 1817. The sale in the judicial proceeding was recited in this deed, which was "passed" or approved by Masot, civil and military governor of West Florida.

Various technical objections have been urged as to the regularity of the proceedings. Some of these might have possibly availed had they been urged as objections to their regularity in the forum where they were had. But it is to be remembered that we are here dealing with proceedings had eighty-five years ago, under a foreign system of laws, by which it was undertaken to convey title to the premises. Such proceedings are not to be scrutinized with a view to discovering defects. They were sufficient in the view of those who undertook to pass title to the lands under the Spanish system, and our courts should have neither the right nor the disposition to upset such titles by a nice examination of the regularity of the proceedings. Every presumption is in favor of the authority and authenticity of such proceedings. Strother v. Lucas, 12 Pet. 410–438, 9 L. ed. 1137–1148. If this were not so, great confusion and uncertainty of titles would arise, especially when title depends upon the action of early colonial governors, undertaking to exercise the sovereign power which they represented. Such authority is presumed to be legitimate and regularly exercised. United States v. Arredondo, 6 Pet. 691–727, 8 L. ed. 547–560. Moreover, it appears that sale of the land has been made under the title conveyed by the proceedings and the conveyance to Gregario Caro, and the sale has been subsequently held sufficient to convey the title by the commissioners appointed under the act of Congress of May 8, 1822 [3 Stat. at L. 709, chap. 129], for ascertaining titles to lands within the territory of Florida. The report of the commissioners was subsequently ratified and confirmed by act of Congress of April 22, 1826. 4 Stat. at L. 156, chap. 29. While this action of the commissioners and of Congress may not have concluded others claiming the property, it was based upon the judicial proceedings evidenced by the protocol, and is *strong evidence of their [147] authenticity and regularity. Those claiming in the chain of title from this conveyance have made sale of many pieces of the property, various conveyances have recited the proceedings under the will of Rivas and the conveyance to Caro, and to upset them and declare them of no effect would be to unseat many titles to real estate, conveyances which have stood for years without question. We have no hesitation in reaching a conclusion, under the facts shown in this record, that title to the lands of Gabriel Rivas, under whom the plaintiffs in ejectment claim title as heirs, was devested by the proceedings had under the Spanish authorities in Florida, and the conveyance of the lands therein to Caro, from whom, by other conveyances, many persons have acquired title to the land in controversy.

Nor are we more impressed by the claim that the plaintiffs were in adverse and continuous possession of the property so as to acquire title by prescription. The alleged possession of the plaintiffs has not been of that character which could ripen into a prescriptive title. The alleged agent of the plaintiffs may have had some occupation of a part of the territory, not embracing the lots in controversy, and it appears that he obtained the payment of the rent from certain tenants of a land company known as the Pensacola City Company, which derived title in the chain of conveyances running back to Gregario Caro. But it also appears that this agent for the heirs of Rivas was engaged in looking after the lands for the land company, for a time at least, and that he purchased the outstanding title of one Chebeaux, who also derived title under Caro. The plaintiffs certainly did not establish or introduce testimony fairly tending to establish that open, notorious, continuous, adverse possession which gives a title by prescription. While the defendants below did not show complete title in themselves, they were not mere interlopers or trespassers, but were claiming the lands under deeds, and were entitled to show, as a defense in ejectment, an outstanding title in another. It is strenuously urged that, whatever the merits of the controversy, [148] there was sufficient *proof to require a trial judge to submit the case to a jury; but no rule is better established in this court than that which permits a presiding judge to direct a verdict in favor of one of the parties when the testimony and all the inferences which the jury could justifiably draw therefrom would be insufficient to support a different verdict. It is clear that where the court would be bound to set aside a verdict for want of testimony to support it, it may direct a finding in the first instance, and not await the enforcement of its view by granting a new trial. Elliott v. Chicago, M. & St. P. R. Co. 150 U. S. 245, 37 L. ed. 1068, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 85; Union P. R. Co. v. McDonald, 152 U. S. 262, 38 L. ed. 434, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 619; Anderson County v. Beal, 113 U. S. 227, 28 L. ed. 966, 5 Sup. Ct. Rep. 433; Delaware, L. & W. R. Co. v. Converse, 139 U. S. 469, 35 L. ed. 213, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 569.

This view of the case warranted an instruction directing a verdict at the trial in favor of the defendants, and renders it unnecessary to consider the other errors alleged to have been committed at the trial.

The judgment of the Circuit Court of Appeals is affirmed.

J. W. GUTHRIE, A. R. Heywood, Henry Conant, Edward Conant, Patrick Healy, Richard T. Hume, and O. M. Runyon, Plffs. in Err.,

v.

HENRY O. HARKNESS.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 148–159.)

1. Mandamus—power of state courts to issue against national banks.—Any legal right which a stockholder of a national bank may have to obtain an inspection of its books may be enforced in the state courts by mandamus, in view of the provision of the act of August 13, 1888 (25 Stat. at L. 433, chap. 866, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 508), that, for actions against national banks at law or in equity, they shall be deemed citizens of the state in which they are located, and that in such cases the Federal circuit and district courts shall have jurisdiction only as in cases between individual citizens of the same state.

2. National banks—shareholder's right to inspect the books.—The common-law right of a stockholder, for proper purposes and under reasonable regulations as to place and time, to inspect the books of the corporation of which he is a member, is not restricted as to national banks by U. S. Rev. Stat. § 5211 (U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 3498), requiring such banks to make reports to the Comptroller of the Currency, or by § 5240 (U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 3516), providing for the appointment of examiners to investigate the condition of such banks, or by § 5241 (U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 3517), providing that no such bank "shall be subject to any visitorial powers other than such as are authorized by this title, or are vested in the courts of justice."

[No. 9.]

Submitted April 6, 1905. Ordered for oral argument May 8, 1905. Argued October 16, 1905. Decided October 30, 1905.

IN ERROR to the Supreme Court of the State of Utah to review a judgment which affirmed a judgment of the District Court for the Second Judicial District of Weber County in that state, awarding a writ of mandamus to compel the directors of a national bank to permit a stockholder to inspect the books at such times as would not interfere with the business of the bank. Affirmed.

See same case below, 27 Utah, 248, 75 Pac. 624.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Mr. Abbot R. Heywood for plaintiffs in error on original submission. Mr. George McCormick was with him on the brief.

No counsel for defendant in error.

NOTE.—On the right of a stockholder to inspect books of corporation—see note to Weihenmayer v. Bitner, 45 L.R.A. 446.

Mr. Abbot R. Heywood for plaintiffs in error on oral argument.

Mr. Hiram H. Henderson for defendant in error on oral argument. Mr. Herbert R. Macmillan was with him on the brief.

Mr. Justice Day delivered the opinion of the court:

The defendant in error was the owner of nearly one fifth of the capital stock of the Commercial National Bank of Ogden, Utah. As such shareholder he applied for leave to inspect the books, accounts, and loans of the bank, which was refused him. He alleges the reasons for seeking such inspection to be that he might ascertain the value of his stock in the bank, and whether the business affairs of the same had been conducted according to law. He charges that loans had been made to patrons of the bank of more than one tenth of the capital stock, in violation of law, and that an inspection of the books, accounts, and loans of the bank would reveal other irregularities. Upon the hearing in the district court the following findings of fact were made:

"1. That the Commercial National Bank of Ogden, Utah, is a corporation organized and existing under and by virtue of the laws of the United States; that said corporation is doing a banking business in Ogden City, Weber county, state of Utah; that the capital stock of said bank is $100,000. divided into 1,000 shares of the par value of $100.00 per share.

"2. That the defendants are directors and have under their control and in their possession all books, papers, accounts, and loans of said Commercial National Bank.

"3. That there is no acting cashier of said bank, and that there has been no such cashier since the 1st day of November, 1902; that J. W. Guthrie is president, A. R. Heywood, vice president, and R. T. Hume is assistant cashier of said bank.

"4. That on or about the 1st day of February, 1903, plaintiff made a demand upon said directors, at the banking house of said bank, and also upon J. W. Guthrie, as pres-[150]ident, A. R. *Heywood, as vice president and general manager of said bank, and upon R. T. Hume, as assistant cashier of said bank, for permission to permit plaintiff to inspect all books, accounts, and loans of the said bank, and plaintiff made demand for such inspection at such time or times as would not interfere with the proper conducting and operating of said bank.

"5. That each and all of said persons refused permission to plaintiff to inspect the said books, accounts, and loans of said bank at any time or at all and they still refuse to permit such inspection.

"6. That the plaintiff is the owner and has in his possession 183⅓ shares of the capital stock of said bank, of the par value of $18,333.33, and that said stock appears on the stock books of said bank in the name of the said plaintiff.

"7. That plaintiff sought and now seeks the inspection of the books, accounts, and loans of said bank for the purpose of ascertaining the true financial condition of said bank, and also for the purpose of ascertaining the value of his stock in said bank, and also for the purpose of ascertaining whether the business affairs of the said bank have been conducted according to law.

"The court further finds that sufficient reason exists for the inspection of said books and accounts of said bank."

Upon this finding the court entered a judgment requiring the defendants to permit the plaintiff to inspect the books, accounts, and loans of the bank at such time or times as would not interfere with the business of the bank.

While the state has no power to enact legislation contravening the Federal laws for the control of national banks (Davis v. Elmira Sav. Bank, 161 U. S. 275, 40 L. ed. 700, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 502), Congress has provided that, for actions against them at law or in equity, they shall be deemed citizens of the state in which they are located, and that in such cases the circuit and district courts of the United States shall have such jurisdiction only as they would have in cases between individual citizens of the same state. 25 Stat. at L. 433, chap. 866, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 508. If the stockholders had the legal right to enforce inspection, there is no room to question the authority of the state courts to enforce the right by granting the proper relief in a judicial *proceeding. Petri v. Commercial[153] Nat. Bank, 142 U. S. 644, 35 L. ed. 1144, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 325; Continental Nat. Bank v. Buford, 191 U. S. 119–123, 48 L. ed. 119–121, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 54.

Upon review in the supreme court of Utah, the judgment of the district court was affirmed, it being held that it was the common-law right of the shareholder to have the inspection demanded, and that the same had not been cut down by the act of Congress regulating the business of national banks. 27 Utah, 248, 75 Pac. 624.

There can be no question that the decisive weight of American authority recognizes the common-law right of the shareholder, for proper purposes and under reasonable regulations as to place and time, to inspect the books of the corporation of which he is a member. Morawetz, in his work on Private Corporations, § 473, vol. 1, says:

"However, in the United States the prevailing doctrine appears to be that the individual shareholders in a corporation have the same right as the members of an ordinary partnership to examine their company's books, although they have no power to interfere with the company's management."

In many of the states this right has been recognized in statutes which are generally held to be merely in affirmance of the common law. Nor do we find the authorities making an exception as to this right when a corporation which does a banking business is the subject of consideration. It is said to be customary for banking companies in England to insert in their constitutions a provision forbidding the inspection of customers' accounts by shareholders or creditors. Morgan's Case (1884) L. R. 28 Ch. Div. 620; Cook, Corp. § 517, note. The subject appears to be now regulated by statute in England. Cook, Corp. § 518. In Cockburn v. Union Bank, 13 La. Ann. 289, it was held that a stockholder in the Union Bank of Louisiana had the right to a writ of mandamus to compel the officers of the bank to allow him the privilege of inspecting the discount books of the bank within proper and reasonable hours, and in the course of the opinion it was said:

"A stockholder in a corporation possesses [154] all his individual *rights, except so far as he is deprived of them by the charter or the law of the land; as long, then, as the charter, or the rules and by-laws passed in conformity thereto, and the law, do not restrict his individual rights, he possesses them in full, and can demand to exercise them. It cannot be denied that it is the right of everyone to see that his property is well managed, and to have access to the proper sources of knowledge in this respect."

This case was cited with approval in State ex rel. Burke v. Citizens' Bank, 51 La. Ann. 426, 25 So. 318, and Tuttle v. Iron Nat. Bank, 170 N. Y. 9–12, 62 N. E. 761. In the latter case it was said: "The principle upon which a stockholder is allowed access to the books of a corporation is as applicable to the case of a banking corporation as it is to any other kind of corporation."

In State ex rel. Doyle v. Laughlin, 53 Mo. App. 542, a stockholder in an incorporated bank had been denied by the directors the right to inspect the books for the purpose of acquainting himself with the conduct of its affairs and to learn how it was managed. The court there held that he was entitled to a writ of mandamus to compel the inspection, and this notwithstanding the bank contended that it occupied such a confidential and trust relation to its customers and depositors that it would be a breach of duty on its part to open up the books to the inspection of the relator. The authorities are fully examined, and the right of the shareholders to inspect the books for proper purposes and at proper times is recognized, in Re Steinway, 159 N. Y. 251, 45 L. R. A. 461, 53 N. E. 1103; Com. ex rel. Sellers v. Phoenix Iron Co. 105 Pa. 111, 51 Am. Rep. 184. To the same effect are Deaderick v. Wilson, 8 Baxt. 108–137; Lewis v. Brainerd, 53 Vt. 520; and Huylar v. Cragin Cattle Co. 40 N. J. Eq. 392–398, 2 Atl. 274. In the latter case it was said:

"Stockholders are entitled to inspect the books of the company for proper purposes at proper times . . . and they are entitled to such inspection though their only object is to ascertain whether their affairs have been properly conducted by the directors or managers. Such a right is necessary *to their protection. To say that they have [155] the right, but that it can be enforced only when they have ascertained, in some way without the books, that their affairs have been mismanaged, or that their interests are in danger, is practically to deny the right in the majority of cases. Oftentimes frauds are discoverable only by examination of the books by an expert accountant. The books are not the private property of the directors or managers, but are the records of their transactions as trustees for the stockholders."

The right of inspection rests upon the proposition that those in charge of the corporation are merely the agents of the stockholders, who are the real owners of the property. Cincinnati Volksblatt Co. v. Hoffmeister, 62 Ohio St. 189–201, 48 L. R. A. 732, 78 Am. St. Rep. 707, 56 N. E. 1033.

It is suggested in argument that, if the shareholder has this right, it may be abused, in that he may make an improper use of the knowledge thus gained. There is nothing in this record, however, to suggest, by way of argument or testimony, that the shareholder desired the information which the books would give for other than a lawful purpose. On the other hand, there is a distinct finding that the inspection was desired for the purpose of ascertaining the true financial condition of the bank, and for the purpose of enabling the complainant to find out the value of his stock, and whether its business was being conducted according to law. There is no suggestion that the complainant was acting in bad faith or from improper motives, or that he was seeking in any way to misuse the information which the books would afford him. We need not hold that there may not be circumstances which would justify the courts in withholding relief to a stockholder seeking an examination of the books and accounts of the bank. In the case before us no reason is shown for denying to the stockholder the right to know how his agents are conducting the affairs of a concern of which he is part owner. Many legal rights may be the subjects of abuse, but cannot be denied for that reason. A director, who has the right to an examination of the books, may abuse the confidence reposed in him. Cer-[156] tainly this possibility *will not be held to justify a denial of legal right, if such right exists in the shareholder. The possibility of the abuse of a legal right affords no ground for its denial. State ex rel. Doyle v. Laughlin, 53 [illegible]. App. 542; People ex rel. Gunst v. Goldstein, 37 App. Div. 550, 56 N. Y. Supp. 306. The text-books are to the same effect as the decided cases. Cook, Stocks & Stockholders, § 511; Boone, Banking, § 235; Angell & A. Priv. Corp. 607.

It does not follow that the courts will compel the inspection of the bank's books under all circumstances. In issuing the writ of mandamus the court will exercise a sound discretion, and grant the right under proper safeguards to protect the interests of all concerned. The writ should not be granted for speculative purposes, or to gratify idle curiosity, or to aid a blackmailer, but it may not be denied to the stockholder who seeks the information for legitimate purposes. Re Steinway, 159 N. Y. 250, 45 L. R. A. 461, 53 N. E. 1103; Thomp. Corp. §§ 4412 et seq.

We are unable to find in § 5211 (U. S. Rev. Stat., U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 3498), requiring reports to be made to the Comptroller of the Currency, or in § 5240 (U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 3516), providing for the appointment of examiners to investigate the condition of national banks, anything which cuts down the usual common-law right in shareholders in such corporations.

In § 5210 (U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 3498) it is provided that a list of shareholders shall be kept, subject to inspection by the shareholders and creditors of the corporation and the officers authorized to assess taxes under state authority. The purpose of this section seems obvious in view of the other provisions of the statute, authorizing taxation by the state, upon the shareholder,—§ 5219 (U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 3502),— and providing for the individual liability of the shareholder to an amount equal to his stock, in cases of insolvency. Sec. 5151 (U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 3465).

This court has said that one, if not the principal, object of this section was to acquire information as to the shareholders upon whom may rest individual liability for contracts, debts, or other engagements of the bank. Pauly v. State Loan & T. Co. 165 U. S. 606, 608–621, 41 L. ed. 844, 845–850, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 465.

*It is true that for some purposes a na-[157]
tional bank is a public institution, notwithstanding it is the subject of private ownership. It may issue bills, which circulate as part of the currency of the country. It is subject to examination, and, in a large measure, to the supervision, of the Comptroller of the Currency. It is examined at stated periods, and may be the subject of special examination by order of the Comptroller. But it is owned by shareholders, like other banking institutions. It is subject by statute to be sued in the courts of the state. 25 Stat. at L. 433, chap. 866, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 508. There is nothing in the banking act, as we read it, which limits a shareholder or shareholders, seeking knowledge for a lawful purpose of an institution in which they have a proprietary interest, to an application to the Comptroller for an examination by a public officer of the affairs of their company. A director need only own 10 shares of the stock. Rev. Stat. § 5146, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 3463. The directors together need not necessarily own the controlling interest in the bank. Yet it is contended they, or the officers of their choice, may deny stockholders the privilege of inspecting, for legitimate purposes, the property which belongs to them.

But, it is said, the right of the shareholder to inspect the books is cut off by § 5241 (U. S. Comp Stat. 1901, p. 3517), providing "no association shall be subject to any visitorial powers other than such as are authorized by this title, or are vested in the courts of justice." We are unable to find any definition of "visitorial powers" which can be held to include the common-law right of the shareholder to inspect the books of the corporation. "Visitation" is defined by Bouvier (Law Dict. vol. 2, p. 1199) as follows:

"The act of examining into the affairs of a corporation.

"The power of visitation is applicable only to ecclesiastical and eleemosynary corporations. 1 Bl. Com. 480. The visitation of civil corporations is by the government itself, through the medium of the courts of justice. See 2 Kent, Com. 240. In the United States, the legislature is the visitor of all corporations founded by it for public purposes. [Dartmouth College v. Woodward] 4 Wheat. 518, 4 L. ed. 629."

*The origin and nature of "visitorial"[158] power received full discussion in the case cited by Bouvier from 4 Wheaton. See opinion of Mr. Justice Story in Dartmouth College Case, 4 Wheat. 673, 4 L. ed. 668.

The meaning of this section was before Judge Baxter in the case of First Nat. Bank v. Hughes, 6 Fed. 737, and of the meaning of the term "visitorial powers," as used in § 5241, that learned judge said:

"Visitation, in law, is the act of a superior or superintending officer, who visits a corporation to examine into its manner of conducting business, and enforce an observance of its laws and regulations. Burrill defines the word to mean 'inspection; superintendence; direction; regulation.'"

At common law the right of visitation was exercised by the King as to civil corporations, and as to eleemosynary ones, by the founder or donor. 1 Cooley's Bl. Com. 481. "In the United States the legislature is the visitor of all corporations created by it, where there is no individual founder or donor, and may direct judicial proceedings against such corporations for such abuses or neglects as would at common law cause a forfeiture of their charters." 1 Cooley's Bl. Com. 482, note.

In the case before us the supreme court of Utah quotes from Merrill on Mandamus, as follows:

"Visitors of corporations have power to keep them within the legitimate sphere of their operations, and to correct all abuses of authority, and to nullify all irregular proceedings. In America there are very few corporations which have private visitors, and, in the absence of such, the state is the visitor of all corporations."

In no case or authority that we have been able to find has there been a definition of this right which would include the private right of the shareholder to have an examination of the business in which he is interested, and the right of discovery of the methods and means by which the agents of the corporation are conducting its affairs.

[159] The right of visitation *being a public right, existing in the state for the purpose of examining into the conduct of the corporation with a view to keeping it within its legal powers, Congress had in mind, in passing this section, that in other sections of the law it had made full and complete provision for investigation by the Comptroller of the Currency and examiners appointed by him, and authorizing the appointment of a receiver to take possession of the business with a view to winding up the affairs of the bank. It was the intention that this statute should contain a full code of provisions upon the subject, and that no state law or enactment should undertake to exercise the right of visitation over a national corporation. Except in so far as such corporation was liable to control in the courts of justice, this act was to be the full measure of visitorial power.

That the statute did not intend, in withholding visitorial powers, to take away the right to proceed in courts of justice to enforce such recognized rights as are here involved, is evident from the language used. If the right to compel the inspection of books was a well-recognized common-law remedy, as we have no doubt it was, even if included in visitorial powers as the terms are used in the statute, it would belong to that class "vested in courts of justice" which are expressly excepted from the inhibition of the statute.

Finding nothing in the act of Congress limiting the common-law right of the shareholder, we think that, under the circumstances of this case, he was wrongfully denied an inspection of the books and accounts of the bank by its officers, and the judgment of the Supreme Court of Utah is affirmed.

---

*UNION PACIFIC RAILROAD COMPANY, [160 Appt.,
v.
MASON CITY & FORT DODGE RAILROAD COMPANY.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 160–171.)

1. Stare decisis—obiter dictum.—A case is of equal authority upon each of two distinct and sufficient grounds upon which an appellate court rests its affirmance of a judgment, although only one of those grounds was considered in the court below.

2. Railroads—joint use of bridge.—The Union Pacific Railroad Company was required to permit the trains of all roads terminating at the Missouri river at Omaha to use its bridge at that point up to the fair limits of capacity, and upon payment of reasonable compensation, by the act of February 24, 1871 (16 Stat. at L. 430, chap. 67), authorizing the construction of the bridge and providing that for its use and protection the company should be empowered, governed, and limited by the provisions of the act of July 25, 1866 (14 Stat. at L. 244, chap. 246), to authorize the construction of certain bridges, and to establish them as post roads, since it must have been intended by that provision to incorporate not only those provisions of the earlier act in terms applied to all the bridges therein authorized, but also the provision for joint use, applied to substantially all the bridges, although, in reference to a single bridge, other and special directions were made.

NOTE.—On stare decisis—obiter dicta—see note to Union P. R. Co. v. Mason City & Ft. D. R. Co. 64 C. C. A. 361.

3. Mortgage—effect of sale of railroad under foreclosure.—The successor to the Union Pacific Railroad Company by purchase under a foreclosure sale of a first mortgage of the railway property did not take the property free from the obligation, under the act of February 24, 1871 (16 Stat. at L. 430, chap. 67), enacted subsequent to the execution of the mortgage, in the exercise by Congress of its reserved right to alter, amend, or repeal the act incorporating the railroad company, to permit the joint use, by the trains of all railroads terminating at Omaha, of the bridge whose construction at that point by the Union Pacific Railroad Company was authorized by that statute.

[No. 18.]

Argued October 19, 20, 1905. Decided November 6, 1905.

APPEAL from the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Eighth Circuit to review a decree which affirmed a decree of the Circuit Court for the District of Nebraska, requiring the Union Pacific Railroad Company to permit the joint use of a railroad bridge at Omaha by the trains of a railroad terminating at the Missouri river at that point. Affirmed.

See same case below, 64 C. C. A. 348, 128 Fed. 230.

Statement by Mr. Justice Brewer:

On a bill filed by the Mason City & Fort Dodge Railroad Company (hereinafter called the Mason City company), the circuit court of the United States for the district of Nebraska entered a decree, August 19, 1903 (124 Fed. 409), requiring the Union Pacific Railroad Company (hereinafter called the Union Pacific company) to let the plaintiff into the joint use of the railroad bridge between Omaha and Council Bluffs, and the approaches thereto. On ap-[161] peal this decree was affirmed *by the circuit court of appeals for the eighth circuit, February 29, 1904. 64 C. C. A. 348, 128 Fed. 230. Thereupon the Union Pacific company appealed to this court.

Messrs. John N. Baldwin and Maxwell Evarts argued the cause and filed a brief for appellant:

General expressions in an opinion, which are not essential to dispose of a case, are not permitted to control the judgment in subsequent suits.

Cohen v. Virginia, 6 Wheat. 264, 5 L. ed. 257; Harriman v. Northern Securities Co. 197 U. S. 244, 291, 49 L. ed. 739, 761, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 493.

The power to alter, amend, and repeal the charter of the Union Pacific Railroad Company did not give Congress the power to take from the railroad company property acquired by it in the exercise of its franchises and corporate powers; and its roadbed and the use thereof west of Twentieth street, Ohama, could not be taken from it and given to another under the guise of an amendment of its charter.

Sinking Fund Cases, 99 U. S. 700, 720, 25 L. ed. 496, 501; Re Parrott, 1 Fed. 481; United States v. Union P. R. Co. 160 U. S. 1, 33, 40 L. ed. 319, 330, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 190; Rice v. Minnesota & N. W. R. Co. 1 Black, 360, 17 L. ed. 147; Coast Line R. Co. v. Savannah, 30 Fed. 646; Detroit v. Detroit & H. Pl. Road Co. 43 Mich. 140, 5 N. W. 275; People v. O'Brien, 111 N. Y. 1, 2 L.R.A. 255, 7 Am. St. Rep. 684, 18 N. E. 692; Miller v. New York & E. R. Co. 21 Barb. 513; Johnson v. Goodyear Min. Co. 127 Cal. 4, 47 L.R.A. 338, 78 Am. St. Rep. 17, 59 Pac. 304; Orr v. Bracken County, 81 Ky. 593.

The appellant, under the foreclosure of the mortgage of March 1, 1865, acquired the properties of the old company free and clear of any lien, charge, or duty, of or to the United States, under any act of Congress, except as specified in the decree of foreclosure.

Toledo, D. & B. R. Co. v. Hamilton, 134 U. S. 296, 33 L. ed. 905, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 546; Dunham v. Cincinnati, P. & C. R. Co. 1 Wall. 254, 17 L. ed. 584; Galveston, H. & H. R. Co. v. Cowdrey, 11 Wall. 459, 20 L. ed. 199; Sullivan v. Portland & K. R. Co. 94 U. S. 806, 24 L. ed. 324.

Mr. Frank B. Kellogg argued the cause, and, with Messrs. James M. Woolworth, William D. McHugh, and Cordenio A. Severance, filed a brief for appellee:

Where an adjudication is placed upon two or more grounds, the decision of each will be held to be of binding force, and not obiter.

Florida C. R. Co. v. Schutte, 103 U. S. 118, 26 L. ed. 327; Alexander v. Worthington, 5 Md. 489; Jones v. Habersham, 107 U. S. 179, 27 L. ed. 403, 2 Sup. Ct. Rep. 336; Buchner v. Chicago, M. & N. W. R. Co. 60 Wis. 264, 19 N. W. 56; Bouvier, Law Dict. Rawle's Revision, pp. 567, 569; Becker v. Chester, 115 Wis. 90, 91 N. W. 100; Hawes v. Contra Costa Water Co. 5 Sawy. 287, Fed. Cas. No. 6,235; Brown v. Chicago & N. W. R. Co. 102 Wis. 137, 44 L.R.A. 579, 77 N. W. 748, 78 N. W. 771.

The decision in the Rock Island case construing the Union Pacific bridge act became a rule of property, governing the use of the bridge and tracks involved in this case, on which all parties have a right to rely; and it should not now be disturbed.

Harris v. Jex, 55 N. Y. 421, 14 Am. Rep. 285; Levy v. Hitsche, 40 La. Ann. 500, 4 So. 472; Minnesota Min. Co. v. National

Min. Co. 3 Wall. 334, 18 L. ed. 43; Frank v. Evansville & I. R. Co. 111 Ind. 132, 12 N. E. 105; Hines v. Driver, 89 Ind. 342; Paulson v. Portland, 16 Or. 450, 1 L.R.A. 673, 19 Pac. 450; Garth v. Arnold, 53 C. C. A. 200, 115 Fed. 471.

So zealous has this court been to maintain the stability of the law, that it has refused to follow the highest courts of the states in the construction of their statutes, where, after the issue of negotiable securities, the rules of law pertaining to their validity have been changed by the decisions of the Supreme Court.

Mitchell v. Burlington, 4 Wall. 270, 18 L. ed. 350; Gelpcke v. Dubuque, 1 Wall. 202, 17 L. ed. 524; Havemeyer v. Iowa County, 3 Wall. 294, 18 L. ed. 38.

Admitting, for the purpose of this argument, that the question is not stare decisis, the conclusions reached by the court in the Rock Island case were correct.

Union P. R. Co. v. Hall, 91 U. S. 344–346, 23 L. ed. 428, 429; United States v. Union P. R. Co. 91 U. S. 80, 23 L. ed. 228.

The rules of construction which counsel is invoking in this case are too technical to receive the favorable consideration of a court of equity.

Joy v. St. Louis, 138 U. S. 1, 34 L. ed. 843, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 243; Lathrop v. Junction R. Co. 4 Fed. 41.

All possible doubt as to the proper construction to be placed upon the act of Congress and the tripartite agreement contained in the Saunder's deed is removed when we consider what the first Pacific company and this defendant have done under it.

Atty. Gen. v. Drummond, 1 Drury & W. 353; Chicago G. W. R. Co. v. Northern P. R. Co. 42 C. C. A. 25, 101 Fed. 795; Central Trust Co. v. Wabash. St. L. & P. R. Co. 34 Fed. 254; Topliff v. Topliff, 122 U. S. 121, 127, 30 L. ed. 1110, 1112, 7 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1057; Steinbach v. Stewart, 11 Wall. 567, 576, 20 L. ed. 56, 58; Hamm v. San Francisco, 9 Sawy. 31, 17 Fed. 119; Mathews v. Danahy, 26 Mo. App. 660; Jennings v. Whitehead & A. Mach. Co. 138 Mass. 594; District of Columbia v. Gallaher, 124 U. S. 505, 31 L. ed. 526, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 585; Knox County v. Ninth Nat. Bank, 147 U. S. 91, 37 L. ed. 93, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 267; Leavitt v. Windsor Land & Invest. Co. 4 C. C. A. 425, 12 U. S. App. 193, 54 Fed. 439; Metropolitan Nat. Bank v. Benedict Co. 20 C. C. A. 377, 36 U. S. App. 604, 74 Fed. 182.

The act of 1871 was an amendment to the charter of the Union Pacific Railroad Company, granting to it certain franchises and privileges, and providing the manner of the use of a certain part of its property for reasonable compensation.

Sinking Fund Cases, 99 U. S. 700, 25 L. ed. 496; Canada Southern R. Co. v. International Bridge Co. 8 Fed. 192; New York & N. E. R. Co. v. Bristol, 151 U. S. 567, 38 L. ed. 273, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 437; Tomlinson v. Jessup, 15 Wall. 459, 21 L. ed. 206; Miller v. New York, 15 Wall. 498, 21 L. ed. 104; Maine C. R. Co. v. Maine, 96 U. S. 510, 24 L. ed. 840; Pearsall v. Great Northern R. Co. 161 U. S. 646, 656, 40 L. ed. 838, 840, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 705; Union P. R. Co. v. Chicago, R. I. & P. R. Co. 163 U. S. 589, 41 L. ed. 274, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1173.

The property was brought into existence by virtue of the privileges granted by Congress, and by the money raised by the city and the county; and when the first-mortgage bondholders claimed a lien upon it, foreclosed the mortgage, and took the property, they, of necessity, accepted that property burdened with the easements imposed by the donators and by Congress.

Lake Erie & W. R. Co. v. Priest, 131 Ind. 413, 31 N. E. 77; Midland R. Co. v. Fisher, 125 Ind. 19, 8 L.R.A. 604, 21 Am. St. Rep. 189, 24 N. E. 756; Central Trust Co. v. Kneeland, 138 U. S. 414, 34 L. ed. 1014, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 357; St. Joseph Union Depot Co. v. Chicago, R. I. & P. R. Co. 32 C. C. A. 284, 60 U. S. App. 675, 89 Fed. 648; Fosdick v. Schall, 99 U. S. 251, 25 L. ed. 342; United States v. New Orleans & O. R. Co. (New Orleans & O. R. Co. v. Mullen) 12 Wall. 362, 20 L. ed. 434; Bear Lake & River Waterworks & Irrig. Co. v. Garland, 164 U. S. 16, 41 L. ed. 333, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 7; Northern P. R. Co. v. Townsend, 190 U. S. 267, 47 L. ed. 1045, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 671.

To say that a railroad company having imposed upon it certain public duties and obligations can relieve itself of those duties by a reorganization and foreclosure in pursuance of a plan of reorganization like this is, at least, an exceedingly radical doctrine.

Louisville Trust Co. v. Louisville, N. A. & C. R. Co. 174 U. S. 674, 43 L. ed. 1130, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 827; Northern P. R. Co. v. Townsend, supra; Chicago, R. I. & P. R. Co. v. Howard, 7 Wall. 392, 19 L. ed. 117; Central R. Co. v. Paul, 35 C. C. A. 639, 93 Fed. 878; Hill v. Gruell, 42 Ill. App. 411; United Waterworks Co. v. Omaha Water Co. 164 N. Y. 41, 58 N. E. 58.

Conceding, for the purposes of this argument, that the bridge law did impose a burden, and was something more than a mere regulation of the use of the bridge for a reasonable compensation, still Congress, under its reserve power to alter, amend, or repeal this act, could impose this burden.

United States v. Union P. R. Co. 160 U. S. 36, 40 L. ed. 331, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 190; Greenwood v. Union Freight & R. Co. 105 U. S. 13, 26 L. ed. 961; Spring Valley

Waterworks Co. v. Schottler, 110 U. S. 348, 28 L. ed. 174, 4 Sup. Ct. Rep. 48; Hamilton Gaslight & Coke Co. v. Hamilton, 146 U. S. 258, 36 L. ed. 963, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 90; Louisville Water Co. v. Clark, 143 U. S. 1, 36 L. ed. 55, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 346.

Mr. Justice Brewer delivered the opinion of the court:

The Mason City company contends that its right to the use of the bridge and approaches was determined by the decision of this court in Union P. R. Co. v. Chicago, R. I. & P. R. Co. 163 U. S. 564, 41 L. ed. 265, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1173. And further, that if mistaken in this contention, it has that right under the statutes of the United States, and by the terms of a contract between the Union Pacific Railroad Company, on the one hand, and the city of Omaha and [165] county of Douglass, Nebraska, on the *other. The case in 163 U. S. arose on two contracts: one between the Union Pacific Railway Company and the Chicago, Rock Island, & Pacific Railway Company, and the other between the first-named company and the Chicago, Milwaukee, & St. Paul Railway Company. The opinion of the circuit court (47 Fed. 15) considered only the contracts, sustained them, and entered a decree for the plaintiffs, awarding the joint use of the bridge and its approaches. That decree was affirmed by the circuit court of appeals (2 C. C. A. 174, 10 U. S. App. 98, 51 Fed. 309), and the case was thereupon brought on appeal to this court. Here the decision was rested not simply on the contracts, but also on an obligation held to have been imposed on the defendant by the statutes of the United States, the court saying (p. 586, L. ed. p. 273, Sup. Ct. Rep. 1181):

"For the provisions of the Pacific Railroad acts relating to the bridge over the Missouri river, its construction and operation, imposed on the Pacific company the duty of permitting the Rock Island company to run its engines, cars, and trains over the bridge and the tracks between Council Bluffs and Omaha, and, we think, that South Omaha was included."

This was followed by several paragraphs pointing out the statutes imposing the duty. Counsel for the Union Pacific company in the case at bar earnestly contend that so much of that opinion as referred to this statutory obligation was obiter dictum, that the statutes were misconstrued, and also that the status of the present Union Pacific company differs so much from that of the then defendant as to make the ruling inapplicable.

We are unable to yield our assent to these contentions. While the claim of the plaintiffs in that case was founded directly upon contracts, yet, if there were a statutory duty to let them into the joint use of the bridge and its approaches, that was enough to sustain a decree in their favor, and the contracts might be regarded as simply relieving the court of the work of settling minor matters, such as method of use, compensation therefor, and matter of control. Indeed, the alleged invalidity of the contracts was rested largely on the scope of the statutes, *and the duties to[166] the government and the public imposed thereby on the railroad company. Of course, where there are two grounds, upon either of which the judgment of the trial court can be rested, and the appellate court sustains both, the ruling on neither is obiter, but each is the judgment of the court, and of equal validity with the other. Whenever a question fairly arises in the course of a trial, and there is a distinct decision of that question, the ruling of the court in respect thereto can, in no just sense, be called mere dictum. Florida C. R. Co. v. Schutte, 103 U. S. 118, 26 L. ed. 327, in which this court said (p. 143, L. ed. 336):

"It cannot be said that a case is not authority on one point because, although that point was properly presented and decided in the regular course of the consideration of the cause, something else was found in the end which disposed of the whole matter. Here the precise question was properly presented, fully argued, and elaborately considered in the opinion. The decision on this question was as much a part of the judgment of the court as was that on any other of the several matters on which the case as a whole depended."

Further, we see no reason to question the conclusion announced in the former opinion. Chap. 67 of the Laws of Congress, 1871 (16 Stat. at L. 430), granting power to issue bonds for the construction of the bridge, provided that "for the use and protection of said bridge and property, the Union Pacific Railway Company shall be empowered, governed, and limited by the provisions of the act entitled 'An Act to Authorize the Construction of Certain Bridges, and to Establish Them as Post Roads,' approved July twenty-five, eighteen hundred and sixty-six, so far as the same is applicable thereto."

The act referred to in this quotation (14 Stat. at L. 244, chap. 246) authorized the construction of nine bridges, as to the first of which (a bridge across the Mississippi river at Quincy) it was stated that "when constructed, all trains of all roads terminating at said river, at or opposite said point, shall be allowed to cross said bridge for reasonable compensation, to be made to the owners of said bridge."

[167] *To the seven provided for by succeeding sections authority is granted "upon the same terms, in the same manner, under the same restrictions, and with the same privileges, as is provided for in this act in relation to the bridge at Quincy, Illinois." [§ 4.]

The remaining one of the nine bridges (that over the Mississippi river at St. Louis) was to be constructed by the St. Louis & Illinois Bridge Company, "subject to all the conditions contained in said act of incorporation and amendments thereto, and not inconsistent with the following terms and provisions contained in this act." [§ 11.]

It is insisted that the act of 1871 makes applicable to the Omaha bridge only the two or three provisions in the act of 1866 common to all the bridges named therein, and as the section authorizing the bridge at St. Louis contained no direction for its use by terminating railroads, that requirement, although imposed on all the other bridges, was not brought into the act of 1871, and is inapplicable to the Omaha bridge. Counsel for the Union Pacific company have also called our attention to a few statutes authorizing the construction of bridges, which contain no provision in respect to use by other railroad companies. As against this, counsel for the Mason City company have cited over 350 acts, to be found in the several statutes of Congress, from the fifteenth to the thirty-second volume, in each of which there is a direction for use by other companies. Obviously, that was the general policy of Congress, and the few exceptions thereto were dictated by the peculiar circumstances of the cases.

Bearing in mind this general policy of the government, we think it a fair construction of the act of 1871 that, incorporating, as it did, the provisions of the act of 1866, it must have intended to incorporate not merely those in terms applied to all the bridges, but also one in harmony with that general policy and applied to substantially all, and this, although, in reference to a single bridge, other and special directions were made. Aside, therefore, from any reliance upon the doctrine of stare decisis, the act of 1871 must be [168] considered as requiring the *Union Pacific company to permit the trains of all roads terminating at the Missouri river at Omaha to use its bridge up to the fair limits of capacity, and on payment of reasonable compensation.

It may be remarked in passing that it is expressly conceded in this case by the Union Pacific company that there is no question of the reasonableness of the compensation tendered, or the capacity of the bridge and approaches for the service asked by the Mason City company.

The final question is this: Is the status of the present Union Pacific Railroad Company, the appellant, so different from that of the company to which it is a successor as to render inapplicable the decision in the Rock Island case, and to nullify the requirements of the act of 1871?

What are the facts? The acts of Congress, July 1, 1862 (12 Stat. at L. 489, chap. 120), July 2, 1864 (13 Stat. at L. 356, chap. 216), creating the Union Pacific Railroad Company, authorized it to mortgage its road for $16,000 a mile (increased to $48,000 a mile in the mountainous districts), and loaned the credit of the United States for an equal amount, secured by a second lien on the property. The initial point of the main line of the Pacific Railroad was fixed on the Iowa bank of the Missouri river, opposite the city of Omaha. Union P. R. Co. v. Hall, 91 U. S. 343, 23 L. ed. 428. On March 1, 1865, the Union Pacific Railroad Company executed its first mortgage, conveying its entire line from the western boundary of the state of Iowa to its western terminus. This mortgage in terms included the road "heretofore constructed or hereafter to be constructed." The act of 1871 authorized a mortgage of not exceeding two and a half million of dollars to raise money for the construction of the bridge. This mortgage was executed, the money raised, and the bridge built. The act of 1862, § 18, provided that "the better to accomplish the object of this act, namely, to promote the public interest and welfare by the construction of said railroad and telegraph line, . . . Congress may, at any time, having due regard for the rights of said companies *named herein, add [169] to, alter, amend, or repeal this act." The act of 1864, which was an amendment of the act of 1862, in § 22 preserved the right of Congress to at any time "alter, amend, or repeal this act." It also, in § 9, gave express authority to the company to maintain ferries or construct bridges over the Missouri river. The mortgage of 1865 was foreclosed, and the present appellant, the Union Pacific company, a corporation organized under the laws of Utah, became the purchaser. The contention now is that, as this mortgage antedated the act of 1871, the purchaser at the foreclosure thereof took the property freed from any burdens or obligations imposed by that act. It held the bridge as a part of its line, under no obligations to permit its use by any other company.

We shall not stop to inquire whether this foreclosure and sale was anything more than a reorganization under the form of a judicial proceeding, nor whether, if it were in all respects a bona fida sale to an independent third party, such sale took the property out of the jurisdiction of Congress, and prevented that body from further legislation in aid of the purpose of the act, "namely, to promote the public interest and welfare." The question before us is whether an amendment to the act, purely administrative in the character of the burdens imposed, aimed to promote the public interest and welfare, enacted while the title to the property remained in the original company, a corporation chartered by Congress, which preserves intact all the pecuniary rights of the company, and whose privileges are accepted and acted upon by the company, is denuded of vitality by a sale to a new company under foreclosure of a mortgage executed prior to such legislation. That question must be answered in the negative.

The first transcontinental railroad, to wit, the Union Pacific Railroad, was a great public undertaking. Private capital was believed to be and was, in fact, unwilling to attempt it. Congress felt that the public interest required its construction. It sought to interest private capital in the [170] enterprise, and believed *that the work could be better done through the instrumentality of a corporation. At the same time it became practically the sponsor for the enterprise by large donations of government credit and public lands. In so doing it was not seeking to aid a purely private enterprise. What it did was in furtherance of the public interests, and it reserved to itself the right to alter, amend, or repeal the act in so far as was necessary to promote those interests, limiting its action by the single proviso that due regard must be had to the rights of the company. Everyone who purchased the bonds of the company or gave it credit did so with full knowledge that this was a quasi-national enterprise, and that, if deemed necessary by Congress, the interests of the public might be promoted by additional legislation, in so far as the pecuniary rights of the company and its creditors were not sacrificed. The construction of the bridge, doing away, as it did, with the delay and annoyance of transportation across the river by a ferry, added largely, not merely to the value of the entire property, but also to the great convenience of the traveling and shipping public. The act giving authority for a large issue of bonds, thereby insuring the immediate construction of the bridge, was accompanied by a proviso that, upon reasonable compensation. the use of the bridge should be accorded to other companies. Availing itself of the privileges conferred, the company accepted the amendment in its entirety, and is bound by its terms as fully as though it had embodied them in a contract. So long as the full facilities of the Union Pacific company were not interfered with thereby, and a reasonable compensation was paid therefor, it cannot in any just sense be held that its rights were not duly regarded. And it cannot be tolerated that a private individual or a state corporation can, by the purchase at a judicial sale of the property, strike down all the legislation of Congress passed subsequently to the mortgage, for the promotion of the public interests. We cannot assent to the contention that the present owner of the property holds it free from obedience to all such legislation. Now, as before *the foreclosure and sale, the [171] public interests are to be regarded, and not simply private purposes, wishes, or prejudices.

One thing more requires notice. It is contended that the terms of the decree are too broad; that they give to the Mason City company, not merely the use of the bridge and its approaches, including therein connections with Western roads terminating at Omaha, but also the use of all side or spur tracks connecting the Union Pacific Railroad with private industries, and the track extending northward from the main line of the Union Pacific to the old ferry crossing. On the argument counsel for the appellee stated that his company made no claim to a right to use these tracks. If the language of the decree is open to this misconstruction it should be corrected, and the circuit court may make such correction on proper application.

Decree affirmed.

Mr. Justice McKenna took no part in the decision of this case.

NEDERLAND LIFE INSURANCE COMPANY, Limited, Petitioner,

v.

MARY MEINERT.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 171–182.)

Insurance—sufficiency of notice of time for payment of premium.—Prefixing the NOTE.—On forfeiture of life insurance for nonpayment of premium—see notes to Thompson v. Knickerbocker L. Ins. Co. 26 L. ed. U. S. 765, and Gunther v. New Orleans Cotton Exch. Mut. Aid Asso. 2 L.R.A. 118.

On the necessity and sufficiency of notice of insurance premiums, dues, and assessments—see note to Ferrenbach v. Mutual Reserve Fund Life Asso. 59 C. C. A. 317.

words "the conditions of your policy provide" to that part of the notice of the time for payment of the premium which, under N. Y. Laws 1892, chap. 690, § 92, must state that, unless paid by or before the day it falls due, the policy and all payments thereon will become forfeited and void, does not render such notice insufficient as a basis for forfeiture for nonpayment, although the policy in fact provides for a forfeiture only in case of nonpayment of the premium within thirty days after it is due.

[No. 11.]

Argued October 18, 1905. Decided November 6, 1905.

ON WRIT of Certiorari to the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Seventh Circuit to review a judgment which affirmed a judgment of the Circuit Court for the District of Indiana in favor of plaintiff in an action on a policy of life insurance. Judgments of both courts reversed and the cause remanded to the Circuit Court, with instructions to enter judgment for defendant.

See same case below, 62 C. C. A. 377, 127 Fed. 651.

Statement by Mr. Justice Peckham:

Mrs. Meinert, the plaintiff below, filed in the circuit court of the United States for the district of Indiana her amended complaint, by leave of court, against the petitioner, the insurance company, to recover $5,000 on a certain policy of insurance for that sum on the life of her deceased husband, William Meinert. She obtained judgment on the trial before a judge without a jury, which was affirmed in the circuit court of appeals. 62 C. C. A. 377, 127 Fed. 651. This court allowed a writ of certiorari to review that judgment, and the case is now here upon the return to that writ.

The material facts are the following: The company, on the 5th day of March, 1896, issued the policy in suit in consideration of the payment of quarterly premiums of $25.25, each, on or before the 5th days of March, June, September, and December in each year for five years; after that the payments were to be $64.25 for the following fourteen years or until the previous death of the insured, should his death occur before the expiration of the specified period. Four quarterly payments of $25.25 each were made, the last one having been made on or before December 5, 1896. No other instalment of premium was ever paid. The assured died on the 24th day of March, 1900. Over three years and three months had passed, therefore, since the last payment of any premium. Meinert, up to the time of his death, lived at Evansville, Indiana.

On the 15th day of February, 1897, the company sent him by mail a written notice as follows:

*Nederland Life Insurance Co. (Ld.), es-[173]
tablished in Amsterdam (Holland), 1858. United States Branch, 874 Broadway, New York city.

Pursuant to chapter 690 of the insurance law of 1892 of the state of New York, you are hereby notified that the quarterly premium of $25.25 on policy No. 58021 will fall due on the 5th day of March, 1897, if the policy be then in force. The conditions of your policy provide that unless such premium shall be paid at the United States branch office of the company, or to a person authorized to collect such premium, holding the company's receipt therefor, by or before that date, the policy and all payments thereon will be forfeited and void, except as to the right to a cash surrender value or paid-up policy.

L. I. DuBourcq,
President of the U. S. Branch.

If payment is made to the company directly, it can be done by valid draft, check, postal or express money order, made out to the order of the United States Branch of the Nederland Life Insurance Co. (Ld.)

This notice was duly received by the assured February 16, 1897.

On Saturday, April 3, 1897, the company sent him by mail another notice, as follows:

Nederland Life Insurance Co., Limited, established 1858, Amsterdam, Holland. United States Branch, 874 Broadway, New York.

New York, April 3, 1897.

William Meinert,
217 Law ave., Evansville, Indiana.

Dear Sir:—

The premium on your policy which fell due on the 5th March has not been paid, and the policy is therefore *null and void.[174]
I beg to inform you, however, that if the same is paid within ten days your policy will be reinstated.

L. I. DuBourcq.
President.

Policy No. 58021.

This notice was received by him in due course of mail on Monday, April 5, 1897, but he never acknowledged its receipt, and never took any steps to have the policy reinstated. On April 22, 1897, the company entered on the appropriate records of its office the declaration that the policy was forfeited and lapsed for failure to pay instalment of premium.

It was agreed between the company and the assured that the provisions printed or written upon the back of the policy were to be taken as part of it, as fully as if they were set forth at length on its face, and signed by the parties. One of them was article 2, which reads as follows:

"In case of nonpayment of any annual premium or instalment thereof within thirty days after the same shall fall due, this policy shall be null and void, subject, however, to provisions as to cash surrender and paid-up policy values. The company will, however, as a matter of favor, and not of right, mail notice to the insured or the assignee, at the last address furnished by him or them to the company, to the effect that the policy may be re-established by the payment of the annual premium or instalment thereof still due, within ten days after mailing notice."

The application for the insurance, which, by agreement, was also made part of the contract, provided that "this application shall be governed by the laws of the state of New York, the place of said contract to be the principal office in the United States of said company, in the city of New York."

Mr. John L. Cadwalader argued the cause, and, with Messrs. George Coggill and George W. Wickersham, filed a brief for petitioner.

Mr. G. K. Denton argued the cause, and, with Messrs. Larz. A. Whitcomb and Albert J. Beveridge, filed a brief for respondent.

Mr. Justice Peckham, after making the foregoing statement, delivered the opinion of the court:

The judgment in favor of the plaintiff below for the recovery of the amount found due upon the policy in question is based on the above-mentioned facts, the courts holding that the policy was not forfeited, but was in [177] full force because of the *alleged failure of the company to comply with the law of New York in relation to giving the notice provided for therein. The provision in question is found in § 92, chapter 690, of the Laws of New York for 1892. The section is set forth in the margin.†

The alleged failure to comply with the terms of the section consists in prefixing the words, "the conditions of your policy provide," to the notice required by the statute, which provides that the notice shall state that "unless such premium . . . then due shall be paid . . . by or before the day it falls *due" (March 5, 1897), [178] "the policy and all payments thereon will become forfeited and void," etc., whereas, by reference to the policy, article 2, indorsed on the back thereof, it will be seen that if the premium is not paid within thirty days after the same shall fall due, the policy shall be null and void. The notice thus mistakenly states that the policy "by its conditions" will become void, etc., while in truth it is the language of the statute which the notice uses.

The company contends that the law of New York does not, for the reasons stated in the brief of counsel, apply to the particular facts set forth herein, and it also contends that the notice which was in fact given fully complied with the terms of the law. We pass over the first contention without discussion, because we are of opinion that, assuming the New York statute to apply, the notice given by the company was sufficient, and the policy was forfeited long before the death of the plaintiff's husband.

Referring to the statute, it is seen that, by omitting the above-mentioned words, "the conditions of your policy provide," the rest of the notice actually given does comply with the terms of the statute. The notice informed the assured that, unless the premium which would fall due on the 5th of March, 1897, if the policy was then in force, should be paid by or before that date, the policy and all payments thereon would become forfeited and void, except as to the right to a cash surrender value or paid-up policy. This is exactly what the statute required the notice to state. The statute does not require the notice to state that the policy would become forfeited only after the expiration of thirty days after the payment became due, or notice was mailed, in case such payment were not made, but it says distinctly that the notice shall state that †Laws of New York, chap. 690, § 92.

"92. No forfeiture of policy without notice. "No life insurance corporation doing business in this state shall declare forfeited or lapsed any policy hereafter issued or renewed, and not issued upon the payment of monthly or weekly premiums, or unless the same is a term insurance contract for one year or less, nor shall any such policy be forfeited or lapsed by reason of nonpayment when due of any premium, interest, or instalment, or any portion thereof required by the terms of the policy to be paid, unless a written or printed notice stating the amount of such premium, interest, instalment, or portion thereof, due on such policy, the place where it should be paid, and the person to whom the same is payable, shall be duly addressed and mailed to the person whose life is insured, or the assignee of the policy, if notice of the assignment has been given to the corporation, at his or her last known postoffice address, postage paid by the corporation or by an officer thereof, or person appointed by it to collect such premium, at least fifteen, and not more than forty-five, days prior to the day when the same is payable.

"The notice shall also state that unless failure to pay the premium by or before the date it falls due will forfeit the policy and all payments thereon.

Why should the mistaken statement as to the conditions of the policy prove fatal, when the exact language of the statute as to the contents of the notice is used? The [179] error of fact as *to the consequence of a failure to pay, as contained in the notice, would be exactly the same if the words above referred to had been omitted; because the statute provides that the assured shall, nevertheless, have thirty days after mailing the notice before a forfeiture can be asserted. There can be no doubt that the premium did become due on the 5th of March, and the thirty days' extension simply permitted a payment within that time to save a forfeiture.

Now, whether the statement in the notice were incorrect because of a failure to state accurately the conditions of the policy, or because of a failure to tell the assured the subsequent provisions in the statute as to forfeiture, is not in either case material, so long as the notice follows the statute; and if it do that, it is good, even though it contains such a mistake as is set forth herein. The purpose of the statute was to prevent a forfeiture by the nonpayment of the premium when due, because of inadvertence or forgetfulness; and when the assured receives the very notice required by the statute, its purpose is fulfilled, although the notice contains in another respect such a mistake as does this notice. It is most unreasonable to hold that a statement of the consequence of the failure to pay the premium when due, mistakenly attributed in the notice to a provision in the policy, should be held fatal, when the same statement, without attributing it to a provision in the policy, would be a fulfilment of the requirements of the statute. In either case there would be an error as to the time of forfeiture, but there would also be a correct statement, in the very words of the statute, of the time the premium was payable, its amount, and where it could be paid. In such case to assume that an injury might follow is, as we think, to assume an ignorance or carelessness on the part of the assured which is unreasonable as well as improbable. A spark of intelligence on the part of the assured would prompt him to refer to his policy, and he would then see the mistake of fact made in the notice as to the length of the time he had in which to pay in order to prevent a forfeiture. If he thought the notice rightly stated the fact as *to forfeiture, the natural result would be [180] greater care to pay, or some application to extend the time of payment on or before the day when the payment became due. Of that day he had the ample notice provided in the statute. It is scarcely possible to imagine any injury resulting from this error, although extraordinary and wonderful things do sometimes occur. Courts, however, cannot proceed upon the theory that policy holders are non compotes mentis, and that the natural result of such a mistake of fact upon a person of ordinary intelligence cannot be assumed in the case of a holder of a policy of insurance. It cannot reasonably be assumed that the assured might be betrayed into not doing at all what the notice tells him must be done on or before a certain day in order to save a forfeiture, because the notice omits to tell him of the extended time before the forfeiture can really be enforced, nor can such failure be anticipated as the result of the mistake. So long as the assured has in fact the notice required by law, we are of opinion that such a mistake as was made in this case is immaterial.

The cases from the New York courts do not decide contrary to our decision herein. In Phelan v. Northwestern Mut. L. Ins. Co. 113 N. Y. 147, 10 Am. St. Rep. 441, 20 N. E. 827, the notice was not like the one in this case. The notice spoken of there, it was held, did not comply with the statute, because it was not given in its words, and the language actually used was held by the majority of the court to be so far from complying with the statute in a material manner as to render it of no use. The court said that the notice, instead of saying that the policy would become forfeited and void, said that "members neglecting so to pay are carrying their own risks;" and that the latter words, while they might be comprehensive to those versed in the language of insurers, and accustomed to their phrase-such premium, interest, instalment, or portion thereof, then due, shall be paid to the corporation, or to a duly appointed agent or person authorized to collect such premium, by or before the day it falls due, the policy and all payments thereon will become forfeited and void except as to the right to a surrender value or paid-up policy, as in this chapter provided.

"If the payment demanded by such notice shall be made within its time limited therefor, it shall be taken to be in full compliance with the requirements of the policy in respect to the time of such payment; and no such policy shall, in any case, be forfeited or declared forfeited, or lapsed, until the expiration of thirty days after the mailing of such notice.

"The affidavit of any officer, clerk, or agent of the corporation, or of anyone authorized to mail such notice, that the notice required by this section has been duly addressed and mailed by the corporation issuing such policy, shall be presumptive evidence that such notice has been duly given."

ology, were not the language of the statute, and did not embody the notice which the statute required.

The other case (Schad v. Security Mut. Life Asso. 155 N. Y. 640, 49 N. E. 1104) affirmed, without any opinion, the decision of [181] the *appellate division of the supreme court, reported in 11 App. Div. 487, 42 N. Y. Supp. 314, where it was held that a statement that in case of the nonpayment of the premium when it became due the policy would cease to be in force did not comply with the notice required by the statute, that if the premium was not paid when due the policy and all payments thereon would become forfeited and void.

In McDougall v. Provident Sav. Life Assur. Soc. 135 N. Y. 551, 32 N. E. 251, it was held that where the policy was out of the ordinary form, a notice which did not follow literally the words of the statute, but contained a statement reminding the assured of the time and place when and where to make any payments required by the terms of the contract, the amount thereof, and the effect of nonpayment, was sufficient.

A statute of this kind should not be construed so as to make it a trap for either side. Forfeitures, though generally not regarded with favor by courts of equity, yet are necessary, and should be fairly enforced, in cases of life insurance. Promptness of payment is essential in such business. New York L. Ins. Co. v. Statham, 93 U. S. 24–30, 23 L. ed. 789–791.

Where, therefore, the assured has in truth received notice (as provided by statute) of the time of payment of the premium, its amount, and where it can be paid, and a statement is made in the words of the statute itself as to the effect of nonpayment, a mistaken additional statement like the one made here ought not to be held a failure to comply with the terms of the statute, and thus prevent a forfeiture which the assured evidently contemplated.

We are aware of the case of New York L. Ins. Co. v. Dingley, 35 C. C. A. 245, 93 Fed. 153, but we cannot agree with the views therein expressed.

The case before us shows no evidence of any injury to the assured on account of the notice. He received, as the record shows, another notice on the 5th of April, informing him that his policy was forfeited, but that it could be reinstated by the simple payment of the premium within ten days [182] thereafter. *He made no acknowledgment of the receipt of the notice, failed to pay the premium, and asked no extension of time. Finally, on the 22d day of April, the forfeiture was noted on the books of the company. We think that the statute was complied with and that the forfeiture was legal.

The judgments of the Circuit Court of Appeals and the Circuit Court for the District of Indiana must be reversed and the cause remanded to the latter court, with instructions to enter judgment for the defendant.

Reversed.

CORKRAN OIL & DEVELOPMENT COMPANY, Plff. in Err.,
v.
LAURENT ARNAUDET, Arthur Latreille, Eugene Houssiere, et al.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 182–194.)

1. Error to state court—Federal question—when raised in time.—Counsel's inadvertence in relying in the state court on the 5th Amendment to the Federal Constitution as invalidating a provision of the state Constitution is not corrected in time to sustain a writ of error from the Supreme Court of the United States by alleging a violation of the 14th Amendment in a petition for rehearing in the highest state court, which was denied without opinion.

2. Error to state court—the record for jurisdictional purposes.—The petition for writ of error from the Supreme Court of the United States to a state court, and the assignment of errors therein, form no part of the record on which to determine whether a Federal question was decided by the state court.

3. Error to state court—Federal ques-

NOTE.—On the general subject of writs of error from United States Supreme Court to state courts—see notes to Martin v. Hunter, 4 L. ed. U. S. 97; Hamblin v. Western Land Co. 37 L. ed. U. S. 267; Kipley v. Illinois, 42 L. ed. U. S. 998, and Re Buchanan, 39 L. ed. U. S. 884.

On what adjudications of state courts can be brought up for review in the Supreme Court of the United States by writ of error to those courts—see note to Apex Transp. Co. v. Garbade, 62 L.R.A. 513.

On how and when questions must be raised and decided in a state court in order to make a case for a writ of error from the Supreme Court of the United States—see note to Mutual L. Ins. Co. v. McGrew, 63 L.R.A. 33.

On what the record must show respecting the presentation and decision of a Federal question in order to confer jurisdiction on the Supreme Court of the United States on a writ of error to a state court—see note to Hooker v. Los Angeles, 63 L.R.A. 471.

As to what is the record for this purpose—see note to Home for Incurables v. New York, 63 L.R.A. 329.

As to when Federal question is raised in time to sustain the appellate jurisdiction of the Federal Supreme Court over state courts—see note to Chicago, I. & L. R. Co. v. McGuire, 49 L. ed. U. S. 413.

tion—decision on non-Federal ground.—The judgment of a state court denying the right of possession of real property under a title founded on an act of Congress, which rests upon the ground that the title of the adverse party under a tax deed was made good by prescription under the state Constitution, involves no Federal question which will sustain a writ of error from the Supreme Court of the United States.

[No. 22.]

Argued October 24, 25, 1905. Decided November 13, 1905.

IN ERROR to the Supreme Court of the State of Louisiana to review a judgment affirming a judgment of the Eighteenth Judicial District Court for the Parish of Acadia, in that state, in favor of defendants in a petitory action to recover possession of real property. Dismissed for want of jurisdiction.

See same case below, 111 La. 563, 35 So. 747.

Statement by Mr. Chief Justice Fuller:

This was a petitory action commenced by the Corkran Oil & Development Company in the eighteenth judicial district court for the parish of Acadia, Louisiana, on the 6th day of December, A. D. 1901, against Laurent Arnaudet and others, to recover possession of certain real property. Plaintiff alleged that the land was claimed by Anthony Corkran during his lifetime, and by his heirs and legal representatives after his death, and that said claim, known as the "Corkran grant," was finally confirmed to Corkran's [183] heirs and legal *representatives by an act of Congress of February 10, 1897, and a patent was issued to them in accordance with the act. That Corkran died in about the year 1819, and his succession was duly opened in St. Landry parish, where he resided, and where the property was situated, and that petitioner acquired title to said property from Corkran's heirs and descendants by acts of sale on various dates specified, said dates being subsequent to November 10, 1901. That neither Corkran and wife, nor any of his heirs, legal representatives, or descendants, ever sold or disposed of their rights, title, or interests in the land before the sales to petitioner, and petitioner was now the just, true, and legal owner of the property. Notwithstanding which, defendants, without legal right or title, and against petitioner's rights, had entered upon, and now possessed and held, said property, and refused to deliver the same to petitioner as of right.

The act of Congress referred to is as follows (29 Stat. at L. 517, chap. 213):

"Chap. 213. An Act to Quiet Title and Possession with Respect to Certain Unconfirmed and Located Private Land Claims in the State of Louisiana.

"Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That all the right, title, and interest of the United States in and to the lands situated in the state of Louisiana, known as the located but unconfirmed private land claims therein, aggregating about eighty thousand acres, and specifically described in the list or tabular statement accompanying the report, dated February nineteenth, eighteen hundred and eighty, made by the surveyor general of Louisiana to the Commissioner of the General Land Office, under a resolution of the United States Senate of December second, eighteen hundred and seventy-nine, and which report and list were communicated to the Senate by the Secretary of the Interior on March eighth, eighteen hundred and eighty, as Senate Executive Document numbered one hundred and eleven, Forty-sixth Congress, second session, shall be, and the same are hereby, directed to be granted, released, and relinquished *by the United [184] States, in fee simple, to the respective owners of the equitable titles thereto, and to their respective heirs and assigns forever, as fully and completely, in every respect whatever, as could be done by patents issued therefor according to law.

"Sec. 2. That nothing contained in this act shall in any manner abridge, devest, impair, injure, or prejudice any valid right, title, or interest of any person or persons in or to any portion or part of the lands mentioned in said first section, the true intent of this act being to relinquish and abandon, grant, give, and concede, any and all right, interest, and estate, in law or equity, which the United States is or is supposed to be entitled to in said lands, in favor of all persons, estates, firms, or corporations who would be the true and lawful owners of the same under the laws of Louisiana, including the laws of prescription, in the absence of the said interest and estate of the United States.

"Sec. 3. That the Department of the Interior shall cause patents to issue for such lands, and such patents shall issue in the name of the original claimant as appears in the list or schedule aforesaid, and when issued shall be held to be for the use and benefit of the true and lawful owners as provided in sections one and two of this act."

The patent is as follows:

"The United States of America to all to whom these presents shall come, Greeting:

"Whereas, by the act of Congress approved February 10th, A. D. one thousand eight hundred and ninety-seven, entitled 'An Act to Quiet Title and Possession with Respect to Certain Unconfirmed and Located Private Land Claims in the State of Louisiana,' it is provided—

[Here follows the act of February 10, 1897, in full.]

"And whereas, the private land claim of Anthony Corkran appears in the list of claims embraced in the aforesaid Senate Executive Document numbered one hundred [185] and eleven, *and, therefore, stands confirmed and entitled to (a patent under the terms of the) act of Congress hereinbefore recited.

"And whereas, the aforesaid claim has been regularly surveyed as section forty-seven in township nine, south of range two west in the southwestern district of Louisiana, containing five hundred and eighty acres and ninety hundredths of an acre, as appears by the plat and descriptive notes thereof on file in the General Land Office of the United States, duly approved by Chas. F. Dickinson, U. S. surveyor general for the state of Louisiana, on the thirtieth day of October, one thousand eight hundred and ninety-seven, which said plat and descriptive note are herein inserted and made a part of these presents, and are in the words and figures following, to wit:

[Plat and descriptive note.]

"Now know ye, that the United States of America, in consideration of the premises herein set forth, and in conformity with the provisions contained in sections two and three of the aforesaid act of the tenth day of February, one thousand and eight hundred and ninety-seven, has given and granted, and by these presents does give and grant, unto the said Anthony Cockran and to his heirs and assigns, the tract of land embraced and described in the foregoing survey.

"To have and to hold the said tract of land with the appurtenances unto the said Anthony Cockran his heirs, assigns, and successors in interest forever."

Dated November 22, 1897.

The defendants filed exceptions, and also answered, admitting that Anthony Corkran, or Cochran, claimed the land in question, and that it was patented to Corkran and his heirs under and according to the act of February 10, 1897, which was fully set forth in the preamble to the patent; and they asserted that the true intent of said act of Congress fully appeared from the 2d section of the act, and that "under and by virtue of the laws of Louisiana, all the right, title, and interest of Anthony Corkran and his heirs in and to the land claimed by plaintiff, and patented as aforesaid to An-[186] thony *Corkran and his heirs, had been devested long prior to the issuance of the aforesaid patent, and was held in full and complete ownership long prior to the date of said patent by the authors of defendants and by defendants, under valid and perfect titles, by and under the laws of Louisiana, including the laws of prescription."

That the authors of defendants and defendants themselves had acquired by true and valid title all the right, title, interest, and estate at law or in equity in the lands patented to Anthony Corkran and his heirs prior to the issue of the patent, by virtue of the laws of Louisiana providing for the sale of all lands situated within its borders for nonpayment of taxes, by mesne conveyances of said lands from the purchaser at a tax sale December 2, 1882, for unpaid taxes assessed on said realty for the year 1881; and that since said tax sale the real estate in question has always been in the possession of the purchaser at that sale and the authors of defendants and the defendants themselves, and been occupied by them as owners in undisturbed and quiet possession. Defendants further pleaded in bar of the action and in support of their title "the prescription of three, five, and ten years, and that the prescription of three years established by article 233 of the Louisiana Constitution of 1898 is a complete bar to this action." Defendants also asserted that they had paid taxes on said property during the time of their possession, and had placed thereon valuable improvements, amounting in the aggregate to upwards of $20,000. The trial court decided the case on the merits, and found that defendants claimed title to the land in controversy through Henry Gellert, who purchased the land at a tax sale in 1882, for taxes assessed against said land in the name of Anthony Corkran or his heirs, and set forth the facts on which the court held that the land in controversy was subject to such assessment and sale. The trial court held that the defendants were protected by the prescription of three years, provided in article 233 of the Constitution of 1898, as well as the prescription of three and five years pleaded, *and [187] entered judgment for defendants. On appeal, the judgment was affirmed by the supreme court of Louisiana, the case being reported 111 La. 563, 35 So. 747.

That court found as facts that, under the act of February 10, 1897, a patent issued on November 22, 1897, to Anthony Corkran and his heirs and assigns for the lands in controversy in this suit; that there was not in the record any previous application for the land or entry thereof by Anthony Corkran, but that the records of the Land Department showed that, in 1816, the land was surveyed by Deputy United States Surveyor Aborn, by virtue of "an order from the principal deputy surveyor of the western district, state of Louisiana, and in conformity with a certificate, B No. 1151, from the board of commissioners of the said western district" for Anthony Corkran; that this map and procès verbal were approved May 21, 1817, by Gideon Fritz, principal deputy surveyor; that the land was again surveyed in 1875 by P. A. Thibodaux, deputy surveyor, and across his map is written "Claimed by Anthony Corkran—no confirmation found;" that the officers of the United States Land Office refused to dispose of the land under the general land laws of the United States, and finally Congress passed the act of 1897; that on December 27, 1882, the tax collector of the parish of St. Landry executed a deed in favor of Henry Gellert, which was recorded on the same day in the conveyance book of that parish, reciting that on the 2d day of December, 1882, he had adjudicated to said Gellert at public sale the land in controversy, "being the property of Anthony Corkran or his heirs, as per assessment roll of the state of Louisiana of the year 1881, to satisfy a debt due the said state for the unpaid taxes" for said year; and that "the present defendants are admittedly in possession of the land patented to Anthony Corkran or his heirs." And the court held "that the land in controversy was subject to taxation and sale for nonpayment of taxes," and that the objection that it was not so subject was untenable.

As to the objection that the tax deed was [188] invalid because *of indefiniteness of description, the court held that the presumption, after the great lapse of time, was that the assessment roll to which the deed referred was sufficiently precise and definite, and was correct and regular, and that defendants were justified in relying on the presumption of regularity, in the absence of actual attack upon the tax proceedings.

The court held further that the argument of plaintiff that Corkran and his heirs were without right of any kind in the land in controversy would leave the government, so far as they were concerned, free to make such disposition of said land as it might think proper; for the result of such argument would be to throw them out of court for want of interest in the subject-matter, their rights resting exclusively upon the government's acts. The court said:

"If Corkran or his heirs had no claim of character such as could be forced or legally entitled to have been recognized, the government could impose such conditions to the voluntary recognition of the same as it thought proper, and the parties claiming under the act of recognition would be forced to accept them or nothing. . . .

"There is no one before the court claiming rights under the government adverse to the rights acquired by the parties under the government, and whatever rights the government itself might have had, or grounds for objection, it had expressly renounced and waived, not only in favor and behalf of Anthony Corkran or his heirs, but of any other person who would have had legal rights had the government itself had none when those rights attached. This renunciation or waiver could as legally and properly have been made by the government in behalf and in favor of this class of persons as it could have been made in favor of the Corkran heirs; and that this renunciation and waiver was intended to cover and protect the rights of the latter class appears on the face of the act of Congress. . . .

"Grant that the act of Congress was an original grant to the Corkran heirs as of date of its passage; it was none the less *a [189] grant coupled with conditions and charges in favor of third parties, and the Corkran heirs were forced to accept the grant with the conditions attached. They could not accept it as far as it might be favorable to them, and repudiate its effect as to other parties. . . . There are no persons claiming adverse rights, and, the government having expressly renounced and waived her own, plaintiff cannot, through her, urge them."

The court pointed out that counsel, notwithstanding the provisions of article 233 of the Constitution of 1898 as to the prescription of three years barring an action seeking to annul a tax title, had brought a direct petitory action against defendants in actual possession of the property which they claimed. The court continued:

"On the trial of the case, defendants established that they and their authors had been in possession as they had alleged, . . .

"Defendants evidently relied in their pleadings and proof upon article 233 of the Constitution, upon the strength of the defensive position which they would hold when they should have shown an actual corporeal possession of the property claimed by themselves and their authors for nineteen or twenty years as owners, and have traced their rights back to a tax sale.

". . . Defendants do not plead prescription against the petitory, but upon an incidentally raised, action of nullity. The sale referred to was strictly a sale for taxes. The property was proceeded against as property belonging to Anthony Corkran or his heirs, and, as matters have now shaped themselves, it must be taken to have belonged to them at the time of the sale. The defendants and their authors not only had corporeal possession prior to 1898, but it extended (before the institution of this suit) for three years after the adoption of the Constitution of 1898, so that this possession was itself protected permanently from attack by plaintiff by article 233, independently of the merits of the tax title . . .

[190] even *had the property, at the time of the tax sale, not been segregated from the public domain, and even though their title to the property had been void. . . . This permanent protection to possession is equivalent to legal ownership. Pillow v. Roberts, 13 How. 472, 14 L. ed. 228. . . . Plaintiffs had certainly the right, even on their own theory, to attack defendants' tax title after February, 1897. Having failed to institute their proceeding within the three years from the date of the adoption of the Constitution, their right of action was forever barred. Re Lockhart, 109 La. 740, 33 So. 753.

"We think that defendants have sustained their defense under both of the prescriptions invoked,—that of ten years acquirendi causa, and that of three years, under article 233 of the Constitution."

Messrs. Kenneth Baillio and E. B. Dubuisson argued the cause, and, with Mr. Hampden Story, filed a brief for plaintiff in error:

Federal and constitutional questions are presented for review by this court under the writ of error granted in this case.

Martin v. Hunter, 1 Wheat. 304, 4 L. ed. 97; Bagnell v. Broderick, 13 Pet. 436, 10 L. ed. 235; Chouteau v. Eckhart, 2 How. 372, 11 L. ed. 304: Rector v. Ashley, 6 Wall. 142, 18 L. ed. 733; Cunningham v. Ashley, 14 How. 377, 14 L. ed. 462; Hussman v. Durham, 165 U. S. 144, 41 L. ed. 664, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 253.

The record, containing the statement of facts and the decision, presents these questions.

Armstrong v. Athens County, 16 Pet. 285, 10 L. ed. 967; Walker v. Villavaso, 6 Wall. 128, 18 L. ed. 854.

The decision of a state court against a right or title to land set up under an act of Congress is reviewable in the Supreme Court of the United States.

Johnson v. Towsley, 13 Wall. 72, 18 L. ed. 485; Silver v. Ladd, 6 Wall. 440, 18 L. ed. 828; Atherton v. Fowler, 91 U. S. 143, 23 L. ed. 265; Glasgow v. Baker, 128 U. S. 560, 32 L. ed. 513, 9 Sup. Ct. Rep. 154; Minnesota v. Bachelder, 1 Wall. 109, 17 L. ed. 551; Cohen v. Virginia, 6 Wheat. 264, 5 L. ed. 257; Martin v. Hunter, supra; Crowell v. Randell, 10 Pet. 368, 9 L. ed. 458.

This court, therefore, has jurisdiction to review the judgment brought up by the writ of error to ascertain whether that judgment has correctly applied the laws of the state of Louisiana on the subject of prescription to the facts of this case.

Martin v. Hunter, 1 Wheat. 359, 4 L. ed. 111; Smith v. Maryland, 6 Cranch, 286, 3 L. ed. 225.

Messrs. D. Caffery, Jr., and Gilbert L. Dupré argued the cause, and, with Messrs. D. Caffery, J. Sully Martel, and P. J. Chappuis, filed a brief for defendants in error:

A Federal question cannot be raised on a petition for rehearing after judgment in the highest court of the state,—the more so where such petition is denied without opinion.

Taylor, Jurisdiction & Procedure of U. S. Supreme Court, § 244, p. 448; Texas & P. R. Co. v. Southern P. Co. 137 U. S. 48, 34 L. ed. 614, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 10; Bushnell v. Crooke Min. & Smelting Co. 148 U. S. 682, 37 L. ed. 610, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 771; Turner v. Richardson, 180 U. S. 91, 45 L. ed. 440, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 295.

And a petition for the writ forms no part of the record upon which to determine whether a Federal question arose and was decided in the state court.

Taylor, Jurisdiction & Procedure of U. S. Supreme Court, § 243, p. 447; Butler v. Gage, 138 U. S. 52, 34 L. ed. 869, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 235; Clark v. Pennsylvania, 128 U. S. 395, 32 L. ed. 487, 9 Sup. Ct. Rep. 113; Manning v. French, 133 U. S. 186, 33 L. ed. 582, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 258; Telluride Power Transmission Co. v. Rio Grande Western R. Co. 187 U. S. 569, 47 L. ed. 307, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 178; Johnson v. Risk, 137 U. S. 307, 34 L. ed. 686, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 111; Leeper v. Texas, 139 U. S. 462, 35 L. ed. 225, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 577.

A writ of error to a state court is not allowed as a matter of right.

Twitchell v. Pennsylvania, 7 Wall. 321, 19 L. ed. 223; Spies v. Illinois (Ex parte Spies) 123 U. S. 131–143, 31 L. ed. 80, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 21.

To give this court jurisdiction of a writ of error to a state court, it must affirmatively appear not only that a Federal question was presented for decision to the highest court of the state having jurisdiction, but that its decision was necessary to the determination of the cause, and it was actually decided, or that the judgment as rendered could not have been given without deciding it.

Johnson v. Risk, and Leeper v. Texas, supra; Dibble v. Bellingham Bay Land Co. 163 U. S. 63–70, 41 L. ed. 72–74, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 939; De Saussure v. Gaillard, 127 U. S. 216, 32 L. ed. 125, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1053.

When a record shows that two questions are presented by the pleadings, one Federal and one non-Federal, and that the judgment below rested upon a decision of the non-Federal question, this court has no jurisdiction to review the judgment.

Murdock v. Memphis, 20 Wall. 590, 22 L. ed. 429; Eustis v. Bolles, 150 U. S. 361–366, 37 L. ed. 1111, 1112, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 131; Johnson v. Risk, 137 U. S. 300–307, 34 L. ed. 683–686, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 111; Powell v. Brunswick County, 150 U. S. 433, 37 L. ed. 1134, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 166; Dibble v. Bellingham Bay Land Co. 163 U. S. 63–69, 41 L. ed. 72–74, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 939; Castillo v. McConnico, 168 U. S. 678, 679, 42 L. ed. 624, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 229; Taylor, Jurisdiction & Procedure of U. S. Supreme Court, pp. 437, 438; Poppe v. Langford, 104 U. S. 770, 771, 26 L. ed. 922, 923; Lytle v. Arkansas, 22 How. 193, 16 L. ed. 306.

All that was said about the act of Congress of February 10, 1897, was unnecessary, and was not required in the determination of the cause,—the decision finally resting upon a line of decisions (Canter v. Williams, 107 La. 77, 31 So. 627; Ashley Co. v. Bradford, 109 La. 641, 33 So. 634; Re Lockhart, 109 La. 740, 33 So. 753) declared by the court to have conclusively settled the law on the subject; and which, in effect, it announced had become a rule of property in that state.

No rule is more firmly established than that this court will follow the construction given by the supreme court of a state to a statute of limitation of a state.

Leffingwell v. Warren, 2 Black, 599, 17 L. ed. 261; Bauserman v. Blunt, 147 U. S. 652, 37 L. ed. 318, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 466; Dibble v. Bellingham Bay Land Co. 163 U. S. 63–73, 41 L. ed. 72–75, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 939. See also Poppe v. Langford, supra; New Orleans Waterworks Co. v. Louisiana, 185 U. S. 351, 46 L. ed. 944, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 691; Castillo v. McConnico, 168 U. S. 674, 683, 684, 42 L. ed. 622, 625, 626, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 229.

It is well settled that the construction put upon a state statute by the highest court of the state will generally be followed by this court, unless it conflicts with the Constitution, or a Federal statute, or a general rule of commercial law.

Powell v. Brunswick County, 150 U. S. 433, 442, 37 L. ed. 1134, 1137, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 166; Bauserman v. Blunt, 147 U. S. 647, 37 L. ed. 316, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 466; Rippey v. Texas, 193 U. S. 504–509, 48 L. ed. 767–769, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 516; Phœnix Ins. Co. v. The Treasurer (Phœnix Ins. Co. v. Gardiner) 11 Wall. 204, 20 L. ed. 112; Dibble v. Bellingham Bay Land Co. 163 U. S. 63, 41 L. ed. 72, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 939.

In the instant case the plaintiff did complain before judgment that it had been deprived of its property without due process of law, but that this had been done under article 5 of the amended Constitution of the United States. It thereafter, in its application for rehearing, and in its petition for the writ, declared that it had suffered under the 14th Amendment. This declaration, made for the first time after judgment in the state courts, comes too late.

Chapin v. Fye, 179 U. S. 127, 45 L. ed. 119, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 71; Scudder v. Comptroller (Scudder v. Coler) 175 U. S. 33, 44 L. ed. 62, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 26; Miller v. Cornwall R. Co. 168 U. S. 131, 42 L. ed. 409, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 34; Simmerman v. Nebraska, 116 U. S. 54, 29 L. ed. 535, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 333.

The writ forms no part of the record upon which action here is taken.

Leeper v. Texas, 139 U. S. 462, 35 L. ed. 225, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 577; Bushnell v. Crooke Min. & Smelting Co. 148 U. S. 682, 37 L. ed. 610, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 771; Chapin v. Fye, 179 U. S. 127, 130, 45 L. ed. 119, 121, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 71; Miller v. Cornwall R. Co. supra; Taylor, Jurisdiction & Procedure of U. S. Supreme Court, § 244, p. 448.

The general principle which deprives this court of jurisdiction, and cuts off any further investigation into this case after ascertaining that a state prescription was upheld in the supreme court of Louisiana, is that, before it can be said that any right or title under a statute of the United States has been denied, it is necessary to overcome the judgment of the state court upon a question of local or state law.

Poppe v. Langford, 104 U. S. 770, 26 L. ed. 922; Johnson v. Risk, 137 U. S. 309, 34 L. ed. 687, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 111; Lytle v. Arkansas, 22 How. 193, 16 L. ed. 306; Telluride Power Transmission Co. v. Rio Grande Western R. Co. 175 U. S. 639, 44 L. ed. 305, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 245, 187 U. S. 569, 47 L. ed. 307, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 178; Dibble v. Bellingham Bay Land Co. supra.

The Federal question must be considered as not decided when a question of state law intervenes, and is decisive of the case. To give jurisdiction, the Federal question must be necessary to the judgment or decree complained of.

Detroit City R. Co. v. Guthard, 114 U. S. 133, 29 L. ed. 118, 5 Sup. Ct. Rep. 811; Choutcau v. Gibson, 111 U. S. 200, 28 L. ed. 400, 4 Sup. Ct. Rep. 340; Citizens' Bank v. Board of Liquidation (Louisiana ex rel. Citizens' Bank v. Board of Liquidation) 98 U. S. 140, 25 L. ed. 114; McManus v. O'Sullivan, 91 U. S. 578, 23 L. ed. 390; Murdock v. Memphis, 20 Wall. 590, 22 L. ed. 429; Adams County v. Burlington & M.

River R. Co. 112 U. S. 127, 28 L. ed. 680, 5 Sup. Ct. Rep. 77; Chapman v. Goodnow (Chapman v. Crane) 123 U. S. 548, 31 L. ed. 238, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 211; Brooks v. Missouri, 124 U. S. 400, 31 L. ed. 458, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 443; New Orleans Waterworks Co. v. Louisiana Sugar Ref. Co. 125 U. S. 29, 31 L. ed. 612, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 741; De Saussure v. Gaillard, 127 U. S. 234, 32 L. ed. 132, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1053; Israel v. Arthur, 152 U. S. 362, 38 L. ed. 478, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 583; Wailes v. Smith, 157 U. S. 276, 39 L. ed. 700, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 624; Hale v. Akers, 132 U. S. 565, 33 L. ed. 447, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 171; San Francisco v. Itsell, 133 U. S. 67, 33 L. ed. 571, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 241.

Messrs. Frederic D. McKenney, John Spalding Flannery, and James L. Autry filed a separate brief for defendants in error:

The supreme court of Louisiana held that, the prescribed period having elapsed without suit having been brought, art. 233 of the state Constitution guaranteed to defendants the permanency of their possession and that such guaranteed permanency of possession was equivalent, under the state law, to a legal title. This was the real and indisputable ground upon which the judgment of the state court rested. Whether the conclusion reached was correct depends entirely upon the proper construction and application of the provisions of the state Constitution to the facts found. It does not in any wise depend upon the Constitution, or laws, or authority of the United States. A writ of error to review such a judgment will not lie.

Chapman v. Goodnow (Chapman v. Crane) 123 U. S. 540, 31 L. ed. 235, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 211; Wells v. Goodnow (Wells v. Crane) 150 U. S. 84, 37 L. ed. 1007, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 22.

Where the decision of the state supreme court rests on an independent ground of law not involving any Federal question, this court has no jurisdiction.

New Orleans Waterworks Co. v. Louisiana Sugar Ref. Co. 125 U. S. 18, 31 L. ed. 607, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 741.

The ground of the decision in the state courts was independent of any claim of right under the statute of 1897, and its adjudication involved no Federal question. The writ of error should, therefore, be dismissed.

Eustis v. Bolles, 150 U. S. 361, 37 L. ed. 1111, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 131; Carothers v. Mayer, 164 U. S. 325, 41 L. ed. 453, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 106; Moran v. Horsky, 178 U. S. 205, 44 L. ed. 1038, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 856.

If the accident that either one or both of the parties to the controversy claimed title under the United States was to be considered as sufficient to bring it within the jurisdiction of this court, then every controversy involving the title to such lands, whether it involved merely the inheritance, partition, devise, or sale, of it, would, with equal propriety, be subject to examination by this court.

Moreland v. Page, 20 How. 522, 523, 15 L. ed. 1009, 1010.

It is a mistake to suppose that every suit for real estate, in which the parties claiming under the Federal government are at issue as to which of them is entitled to the benefit of that title, necessarily raises a question of Federal cognizance. If this were so, the title to all the vast domain, once vested in the United States, could be brought from the state courts to this tribunal.

Carpenter v. Williams, 9 Wall. 785, 786, 19 L. ed. 827, 828; Martin v. Marks, 97 U. S. 345, 348, 24 L. ed. 940, 941.

The mere averment of the existence of a Federal question is not sufficient to give this court jurisdiction; a real, and not a fictitious, Federal question is essential to give this court jurisdiction over the judgment of state courts; and, when it appears that the alleged Federal question upon which jurisdiction is invoked is wholly without foundation, the writ of error will be dismissed.

Sawyer v. Piper, 189 U. S. 154, 156, 157, 47 L. ed. 757–759, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 633.

The attempt to assert a Federal question for the first time in a petition for rehearing is too late, unless it appears that the court entertained the petition and disposed of the question.

Fullerton v. Texas, 196 U. S. 192, 49 L. ed. 443, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 221.

Apart from the foregoing considerations, the plaintiff in error ought not to receive favorable consideration in this court. Its sole interest in the lands in controversy grows out of champertous agreements, which are contrary to public policy, unlawful, and void.

While the judgment of the supreme court of the state did not turn upon this point, the proof concerning it is indisputable. This court will not be astute to maintain a writ of error in such a case.

Peck v. Heurich, 167 U. S. 624, 630, 632, 42 L. ed. 302, 305, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 927.

Mr. Chief Justice Fuller, having made the foregoing statement, delivered the opinion of the court:

In the progress of the case in the trial court no Federal *question as such was spe- [193] cifically raised, but when it reached the supreme court it was assigned for error that if article 233 of the Constitution of Louisiana of 1898 had the effect of validating the tax sale to Henry Gellert, it was in violation of article 5 of the amendments to the Constitution of the United States. Counsel for plaintiff in error admit that this was a misreference, but contend that it was corrected by the petition for rehearing filed after judgment, which alleged a violation of the 14th Amendment; but this came too late, unless the petition was entertained and the point passed on. Fullerton v. Texas, 196 U. S. 192, 49 L. ed. 443, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 221. And this petition was denied without any observations.

The petition for the writ of error from this court and the assignment of errors herein set up Federal questions, but they form no part of the record on which to determine whether a Federal question was decided by the state court. Leeper v. Texas, 139 U. S. 462, 35 L. ed. 225, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 577; Chapin v. Fye, 179 U. S. 127, 45 L. ed. 119, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 71. And counsel further state "that in so far as the errors assigned are said to have violated the due process of law provision of the 14th Amendment to the Constitution of the United States, they are not pressed."

If it be conceded that plaintiff specially set up and claimed title to the land in controversy under the act of Congress of February 10, 1897, that would not be sufficient to give jurisdiction unless the state courts had decided against such title. But that was not the decision here. What was decided was that the prescribed period having elapsed, article 233 of the Louisiana Constitution operated as the equivalent of legal title through the tax deed. The correctness of this conclusion depended on the proper construction and application of the provisions of the state Constitution on the facts found, and not on the Constitution or laws of the United States.

The state Constitution of 1898 was adopted and went into effect May 12, 1898. La. Const. 1898, p. 88. Article 233 provided:

"No sale of property for taxes shall be [194] set aside for any *cause, except on proof of dual assessment, or of payment of the taxes for which the property was sold prior to the date of the sale, unless the proceeding to annul is instituted . . . within three years from the adoption of this Constitution, as to sales already made." Const. 1898, p. 61.

The record showed that defendants and their authors had been, since 1882, in quiet, peaceable possession of the property in question under a tax title, the validity of which had not been impeached by any direct proceeding; that more than three years had elapsed before the institution of the present action since the adoption of the Constitution (and more than that since the passage of the act of February 10, 1897, and the issue of the patent, November 22, 1897), and that at any time within such three years plaintiff or its authors might have instituted suit against defendants to annul the sale.

And the decision of the state supreme court that, in these circumstances, article 233 made good defendants' title, rested on a ground independent of the act of 1897, and involved no Federal question.

Writ of error dismissed.

UNION REFRIGERATOR TRANSIT COMPANY, Plff. in Err.,

v.

COMMONWEALTH OF KENTUCKY.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 194–211.)

Constitutional law—due process of law—state taxation of tangible personal property in other states.—Due process of law is denied a Kentucky corporation by a tax assessed under the authority of Ky. Stat. § 4020, upon its rolling stock permanently located in other states and employed there in the prosecution of its business.

[No. 84.]

Argued October 13, 16, 1905. Decided November 13, 1905.

IN ERROR to the Court of Appeals of the Commonwealth of Kentucky to review a judgment which, reversing the judgment of the Jefferson Circuit Court, sustained an assessment on the rolling stock of a Kentucky corporation permanently located in other states and employed there in the prosecution of its business. Reversed and remanded for further proceedings.

See same case below, 26 Ky. L. Rep. 23, 80 S. W. 490.

Statement by Mr. Justice Brown:

This proceeding was begun by a statement filed by the revenue agent of the commonwealth in the Jefferson county court, praying that certain personal property belonging to the plaintiff in error be assessed for taxation for state, county, and municipal taxes, and be also adjudged to pay a penalty of 20 per cent on the aggregate amount of the tax.

To this statement the transit company filed certain demurrers and answers, upon which, and upon the deposition of the comptroller of the company in St. Louis, Missouri, the case went to a hearing, and resulted in a finding of facts that the transit company was the owner of 2,000 cars in September, 1897, 1898, 1899, and 1900, to which years the recovery was limited, of the value of $200 each; that its cars were employed by the company by renting them to shippers, who took possession of them from time to time at Milwaukee, Wisconsin, and used them for the carriage of freight in the United States, Canada, and Mexico, the company being paid by the railroads in proportion to the mileage made over their lines; that the correct method of ascertaining the number of cars which should be assessed for taxation was to ascertain and list such a proportion of its cars as, under a system of averages upon their gross earnings, were shown to be used in the state of Kentucky during the fiscal year, the court finding by [196] this method that *there were subject to assessment in Kentucky 28 cars for the year 1897, 29 for the year 1898, 40 for the year 1899, and 67 for 1900.

NOTE.—On the situs, for taxing purposes, of tangible personal property of domestic corporations in the United States—see note to Teagan Transp. Co. v. Board of Assessors, 69 L.R.A. 431.

The court also found that the cars other than those mentioned were not liable to assessment.

The order of the county court was affirmed by the circuit court, and an appeal taken to the court of appeals of Kentucky, which reversed the judgment of the court below, and found that the company was liable to taxation upon its entire number of 2,000 cars, and directed the court below to enter judgment against it for the taxes appropriate to this number. 26 Ky. L. Rep. 23, 80 S. W. 490.

To review this judgment this writ of error was sued out.

Messrs. William H. Field and Alexander Pope Humphrey argued the cause, and, with Mr. Frederick Forcht, Jr., filed a brief for plaintiff in error:

The legislature of Kentucky had no power to authorize the assessment of tangible personal property which has acquired a taxable situs outside the territorial limits of the state.

Western U. Teleg. Co. v. Taggart, 163 U. S. 1, 41 L. ed. 49, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1054; Adams Exp. Co. v. Ohio State Auditor, 165 U. S. 194, 41 L. ed. 683, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 305; Adams Exp. Co. v. Kentucky, 166 U. S. 172, 41 L. ed. 961, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 527; Hays v. Pacific Mail S. S. Co. 17 How. 596, 15 L. ed. 254; Morgan v. Parham, 16 Wall. 471, 21 L. ed. 303; St. Louis v. Wiggins Ferry Co. 11 Wall. 423, 20 L. ed. 192; Gloucester Ferry Co. v. Pennsylvania, 114 U. S. 196, 29 L. ed. 158, 1 Inters. Com. Rep. 382, 5 Sup. Ct. Rep. 826; Old Dominion S. S. Co. v. Virginia, 198 U. S. 299, 49 L. ed. 1059, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 687; State Tax on Foreign-held Bonds, 15 Wall. 300, 21 L. ed. 179; Blackstone v. Miller, 188 U. S. 202, 47 L. ed. 443, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 277; Coe v. Errol, 116 U. S. 524, 29 L. ed. 717, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 475; Diamond Match Co. v. Ontonagon, 188 U. S. 96, 47 L. ed. 399, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 266; Brown v. Houston, 114 U. S. 622, 29 L. ed. 257, 5 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1091; Pittsburg & S. Coal Co. v. Bates, 156 U. S. 577, 39 L. ed. 538, 5 Inters. Com. Rep. 30, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 415; New Orleans v. Stempel, 175 U. S. 309, 44 L. ed. 174, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 110; Bristol v. Washington County, 177 U. S. 145, 44 L. ed. 707, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 585; Pullman's Palace Car Co. v. Pennsylvania, 141 U. S. 22, 35 L. ed. 616, 3 Inters. Com. Rep. 595, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 876; American Refrigerator Transit Co. v. Hall, 174 U. S. 70, 43 L. ed. 899, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 599; Union Refrigerator Transit Co. v. Lynch, 177 U. S. 149, 44 L. ed. 708, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 631; Billings v. Illinois, 188 U. S. 104, 47 L. ed. 403, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 272; Kelley v. Rhoads, 188 U. S. 1, 47 L. ed. 359, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 259; Louisville & J. Ferry Co. v. Kentucky, 188 U. S. 399, 47 L. ed. 519, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 468; Delaware, L. & W. R. Co. v. Pennsylvania, 198 U. S. 341, 49 L. ed. 1077, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 669; 1 Cooley, Taxn. 3d ed. 2, 22, 27, 84, 249; Rorer, Inter-State Law, 204; State v. Falkinburge, 15 N. J. L. 320; Wilkey v. Pekin, 19 Ill. 160; People ex rel. Kennedy v. Tax Comrs. 35 N. Y. 441; Pullman's Palace Car Co. v. Twombly, 29 Fed. 658; Baldwin v. Shine, 84 Ky. 502, 2 S. W. 164; Marye v. Baltimore & O. R. Co. 127 U. S. 117, 32 L. ed. 94, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1037; Com. v. American Dredging Co. 122 Pa. 386, 1 L.R.A. 237, 2 Inters. Com. Rep. 221, 9 Am. St. Rep. 116, 15 Atl. 443.

Mr. Henry L. Stone argued the cause, and, with Messrs. Samuel B. Kirby and Robert W. Bingham, filed a brief for defendant in error:

The general assembly of the state of Kentucky had power and jurisdiction to provide that the personal property of all residents of that state, or of corporations organized under the laws of that state, whether in or out of that state, should be taxed in that state.

1 Cooley, Taxn. 3d ed. pp. 86, 644, 673, 674; Com. v. Hays, 8 B. Mon. 1; Barret v. Henderson, 4 Bush, 255; Boyd v. Selma, 96 Ala. 150, 16 L.R.A. 729, 11 So. 393; Kirtland v. Hotchkiss, 100 U. S. 491, 25 L. ed. 558; Goldgart v. People, 106 Ill. 25; Foresman v. Byrns, 68 Ind. 247; Lose v. State, 72 Ind. 285; Griffith v. Watson, 19 Kan. 23; Frothingham v. Shaw, 175 Mass. 59, 78 Am. St. Rep. 475, 55 N. E. 623; Horne v. Green, 52 Miss. 452, 25 Am. & Eng. Enc. Law, p. 152; Burroughs, Taxn. p. 186; Pullman's Palace Car Co. v. Pennsylvania, 141 U. S. 18–36, 35 L. ed. 613–621, 3 Inters. Com. Rep.

595, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 876; Pacific Nat. Bank v. Pierce County, 20 Wash. 675, 50 Pac. 936; State, Fish, Prosecutor, v. Branin, 23 N. J. L. 484; People ex rel. New York C. & H. R. R. Co. v. Roberts, 32 App. Div. 113, 52 N. Y. Supp. 859; Tennessee v. Whitworth, 117 U. S. 136, 29 L. ed. 832, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 645; People ex rel. Savings Bank v. Coleman, 135 N. Y. 231, 31 N. E. 1022; Bradley v. Bauder, 36 Ohio St. 28, 38 Am. Rep. 547; Griggsby Constr. Co. v. Freeman, 108 La. 435, 58 L.R.A. 349, 32 So. 399; Indiana ex rel. Wolf v. Pullman Palace Car Co. 16 Fed. 193; Pullman Southern Car Co. v. Nolan, 19 Cent. L. J. 369, 22 Fed. 276; Irvin v. New Orleans, St. L. & C. R. Co. 94 Ill. 105, 34 Am. Rep. 208; Appeal Tax Court v. Pullman Palace Car Co. 50 Md. 452; State ex rel. Armour Packing Co. v. Stephens, 146 Mo. 662, 69 Am. St. Rep. 625, 48 S. W. 929; American Refrigerator Transit Co. v. Hall, 174 U. S. 70–82, 43 L. ed. 899–904, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 599; Union Refrigerator Transit Co. v. Lynch, 177 U. S. 149, 44 L. ed. 708, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 631; Norfolk & W. R. Co. v. Board of Public Works, 97 Va. 23, 32 S. E. 779; Com. v. American Dredging Co. 122 Pa. 386, 1 L.R.A. 237, 2 Inters. Com. Rep. 221, 9 Am. St. Rep. 116, 15 Atl. 443; Re Swift, 137 N. Y. 77, 18 L.R.A. 709, 32 N. E. 1096; Leonard v. New Bedford, 16 Gray, 292; Appeal Tax Court v. Western Maryland R. Co. 50 Md. 274; Appeal Tax Court v. Northern C. R. Co. 50 Md. 417; Union Refrigerator Transit Co. v. Lynch, 18 Utah, 378, 48 L.R.A. 790, 55 Pac. 639.

The plaintiff in error is not deprived of its property without due process of law, or denied the equal protection of the laws, by § 4020 of the Kentucky statutes, within the meaning of the 14th Amendment to the Federal Constitution.

Florida C. & P. R. Co. v. Reynolds, 183 U. S. 474, 46 L. ed. 285, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 176; King v. Mullins, 171 U. S. 436, 43 L. ed. 226, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 925; Judson, Taxn. § 437, p. 562; Head Money Cases (Edye v. Robertson) 112 U. S. 595, 28 L. ed. 802, 5 Sup. Ct. Rep. 247; Bells Gap R. Co. v. Pennsylvania, 134 U. S. 233, 33 L. ed. 894, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 533; Merchants' & M. Nat. Bank v. Pennsylvania, 167 U. S. 464, 42 L. ed. 238, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 829; Columbus Southern R. Co. v. Wright, 151 U. S. 478, 38 L. ed. 242, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 396; Kentucky Railroad Tax Cases, 115 U. S. 321, 29 L. ed. 414, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 57; Charlotte, C. & A. R. Co. v. Gibbes, 142 U. S. 386, 35 L. ed. 1051, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 255; Louisville & N. R. Co. v. Louisville, 16 Ky. L. Rep. 796, 29 S. W. 865; Kidd v. Alabama, 188 U. S. 730–733, 47 L. ed. 669–673, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 401; Wright v. Louisville & N. R. Co. 195 U. S. 219, 49 L. ed. 167, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 16; Kirtland v. Hotchkiss, 100 U. S. 491, 25 L. ed. 558; State Railroad Tax Cases, 92 U. S. 607, 608, 23 L. ed. 671, 672; Marye v. Baltimore & O. R. Co. 127 U. S. 117, 32 L. ed. 94, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1037; Pullman's Palace Car Co. v. Pennsylvania, 141 U. S. 29, 35 L. ed. 618, 3 Inters. Com. Rep. 595, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 876; Davidson v. New Orleans, 96 U. S. 97, 106, 24 L. ed. 616, 620; Dyer v. Osborne, 11 R. I. 321, 23 Am. Rep. 460; People v. Home Ins. Co. 92 N. Y. 347, 119 U. S. 129, 30 L. ed. 350, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1385; Louisville & N. R. Co. v. Kentucky, 183 U. S. 512, 46 L. ed. 304, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 95; Blackstone v. Miller, 188 U. S. 189, 47 L. ed. 439, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 277; Louisville & J. Ferry Co. v. Kentucky, 188 U. S. 385, 47 L. ed. 513, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 463; Delaware, L. & W. R. Co. v. Pennsylvania, 198 U. S. 343, 49 L. ed. 1077, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 669; Com. v. Delaware, L. & W. R. Co. 145 Pa. 96, 22 Atl. 157; Com. v. American Dredging Co. supra; San Mateo County v. Southern P. R. Co. 7 Sawy. 517, 13 Fed. 722; Santa Clara County v. Southern P. R. Co. 9 Sawy. 165, 18 Fed. 385; Northern P. R. Co. v. Walker, 47 Fed. 681; Olcott v. Fond du Lac County, 16 Wall. 678, 695, 21 L. ed. 382, 388; McHenry v. Alford, 168 U. S. 651, 42 L. ed. 614, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 242.

Mr. Justice Brown delivered the opinion of the court:

In this case the question is directly presented whether a corporation organized under the laws of Kentucky is subject to taxation upon its tangible personal property permanently located in other states, and employed there in the prosecution of its business. Such taxation is charged to be a violation of the due process of law clause of the 14th Amendment.

Section 4020 of the Kentucky statutes, under which this assessment was made, provides that "all real and personal estate within this state, and all personal estate of persons residing *in this state, and of all [202] corporations organized under the laws of this state, whether the property be in or out of this state, . . . shall be subject to taxation, unless the same be exempt from taxation by the Constitution, and shall be assessed at its fair cash value, estimated at the price it would bring at a fair voluntary sale."

That the property taxed is within this description is beyond controversy. The constitutionality of the section was attacked not only upon the ground that it denied to the transit company due process of law, but also the equal protection of the laws, in the fact that railroad companies were only taxed upon the value of their rolling stock used within the state, which was determined by the proportion which the number of miles of the railroad in the state bears to the whole number of miles operated by the company.

The power of taxation, indispensable to the existence of every civilized government, is exercised upon the assumption of an equivalent rendered to the taxpayer in the protection of his person and property, in adding to the value of such property, or in the creation and maintenance of public conveniences in which he shares,—such, for instance, as roads, bridges, sidewalks, pavements, and schools for the education of his children. If the taxing power be in no position to render these services, or otherwise to benefit the person or property taxed, and such property be wholly within the taxing power of another state, to which it may be said to owe an allegiance, and to which it looks for protection, the taxation of such property within the domicil of the owner partakes rather of the nature of an extortion than a tax, and has been repeatedly held by this court to be beyond the power of the legislature, and a taking of property without due process of law. Northern C. R. Co. v. Jackson, 7 Wall. 262, 19 L. ed. 88; State Tax on Foreign-held Bonds, 15 Wall. 300, 21 L. ed. 179; Tappan v. Merchants' Nat. Bank, 19 Wall. 490–499, 22 L. ed. 189–193; Delaware, L. & W. R. Co. v. Pennsylvania, 198 U. S. 341, 358, 49 L. ed. 1077, 1083, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 669. In Chicago, B. & Q. R. Co. v. Chicago, 166 U. S. 226, 41 L. ed. 979, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 581, it was held, after full consideration, that the taking of pri-
[203] vate property *without compensation was a denial of due process within the 14th Amendment. See also Davidson v. New Orleans, 96 U. S. 97, 102, 24 L. ed. 616, 618; Missouri P. R. Co. v. Nebraska, 164 U. S. 403, 417, 41 L. ed. 489, 495, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 130; Mt. Hope Cemetery v. Boston, 158 Mass. 509, 519, 35 Am. St. Rep. 515, 33 N. E. 695.

Most modern legislation upon this subject has been directed (1) to the requirement that every citizen shall disclose the amount of his property subject to taxation, and shall contribute in proportion to such amount; and (2) to the avoidance of double taxation. As said by Adam Smith in his Wealth of Nations, Book V. chap. 2, pt. 2, p. 371: "The subjects of every state ought to contribute towards the support of the government as nearly as possible in proportion to their respective abilities; that is, in proportion to the revenue which they respectively enjoy under the protection of the state. The expense of government to the individuals of a great nation is like the expense of management to the joint tenants of a great estate, who are all obliged to contribute in proportion to their respective interests in the estate. In the observation or neglect of this maxim consists what is called the equality or inequality of taxation."

But notwithstanding the rule of uniformity lying at the basis of every just system of taxation, there are doubtless many individual cases where the weight of a tax falls unequally upon the owners of the property taxed. This is almost unavoidable under every system of direct taxation. But the tax is not rendered illegal by such discrimination. Thus, every citizen is bound to pay his proportion of a school tax, though he have no children; of a police tax, though he have no buildings or personal property to be guarded; or of a road tax, though he never use the road. In other words, a general tax cannot be dissected to show that, as to certain constituent parts, the taxpayer receives no benefit. Even in case of special assessments imposed for the improvement of property within certain limits, the fact that it is extremely doubtful whether a particular lot can receive any benefit from the improvement does not invalidate the tax with respect to such lot. Kelly v. Pittsburgh, *104 U. S. 78, 26 L. ed.[204] 658; Amesbury Nail Factory Co. v. Weed, 17 Mass. 53; Thomas v. Gay, 169 U. S. 264, 42 L. ed. 740, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 340; Louisville & N. R. Co. v. Barber Asphalt Paving Co. 197 U. S. 430, 49 L. ed. 819, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 466. Subject to these individual exceptions, the rule is that in classifying property for taxation, some benefit to the property taxed is a controlling consideration, and a plain abuse of this power will sometimes justify a judicial interference. Norwood v. Baker, 172 U. S. 269, 43 L. ed. 443, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 187. It is often said protection and payment of taxes are correlative obligations.

It is also essential to the validity of a tax that the property shall be within the territorial jurisdiction of the taxing power. Not only is the operation of state laws limited to persons and property within the boundaries of the state, but property which is wholly and exclusively within the jurisdiction of another state receives none of the protection for which the tax is supposed to be the compensation. This rule receives its most familiar illustration in the cases of land, which, to be taxable, must be within the limits of the state. Indeed, we know of no case where a legislature has assumed to impose a tax upon land within the jurisdiction of another state; much less where such action has been defended by any court. It is said by this court in the State Tax on Foreign-held Bonds Case, 15 Wall. 300–

319, 21 L. ed. 179–187, that no adjudication should be necessary to establish so obvious a proposition as that property lying beyond the jurisdiction of a state is not a subject upon which her taxing power can be legitimately exercised.

The argument against the taxability of land within the jurisdiction of another state applies with equal cogency to tangible personal property beyond the jurisdiction. It is not only beyond the sovereignty of the taxing state, but does not and cannot receive protection under its laws. True, a resident owner may receive an income from such property, but the same may be said of real estate within a foreign jurisdiction. Whatever be the rights of the state with respect to the taxation of such income, it is clearly beyond its power to tax the land from which the income is derived. As we said [205] in *Louisville & J. Ferry Co. v. Kentucky, 188 U. S. 385–396, 47 L. ed. 513–518, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 463: "While the mode, form, and extent of taxation are, speaking generally, limited only by the wisdom of the legislature, that power is limited by a principle inhering in the very nature of constitutional government,—namely, that the taxation imposed must have relation to a subject within the jurisdiction of the taxing government." See also M'Culloch v. Maryland, 4 Wheat. 316–429, 4 L. ed. 579–607; Hays v. Pacific Mail S. S. Co. 17 How. 596–599, 15 L. ed. 254, 255; St. Louis v. Wiggins Ferry Co. 11 Wall. 423, 429, 431, 20 L. ed. 192, 194, 195; Morgan v. Parham, 16 Wall. 471–476, 21 L. ed. 303, 304.

Respecting this, there is an obvious distinction between tangible and intangible property, in the fact that the latter is held secretly; that there is no method by which its existence or ownership can be ascertained in the state of its situs except, perhaps, in the case of mortgages or shares of stock. So if the owner be discovered, there is no way by which he can be reached by process in a state other than that of his domicil, or the collection of the tax otherwise enforced. In this class of cases the tendency of modern authorities is to apply the maxim mobilia sequuntur personam, and to hold that the property may be taxed at the domicil of the owner as the real situs of the debt, and also, more particularly in the case of mortgages, in the state where the property is retained. Such have been the repeated rulings of this court. Tappan v. Merchants' Nat. Bank, 19 Wall. 490, 22 L. ed. 189; Kirtland v. Hotchkiss, 100 U. S. 491, 25 L. ed. 558; Bonaparte v. Appeal Tax Court, 104 U. S. 592, 26 L. ed. 845; Sturges v. Carter, 114 U. S. 511, 29 L. ed. 240, 5 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1014; Kidd v. Alabama, 188 U. S. 730, 47 L. ed. 669, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 401; Blackstone v. Miller, 188 U. S. 189, 47 L. ed. 439, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 277.

If this occasionally results in double taxation, it much oftener happens that this class of property escapes altogether. In the case of intangible property, the law does not look for absolute equality, but to the much more practical consideration of collecting the tax upon such property, either in the state of the domicil or the situs. Of course, we do not enter into a consideration of the question, so much discussed by political economists, of the double taxation involved in taxing the property from *which [206] these securities arise, and also the burdens upon such property, such as mortgages, shares of stock, and the like,—the securities themselves.

The arguments in favor of the taxation of intangible property at the domicil of the owner have no application to tangible property. The fact that such property is visible, easily found, and difficult to conceal, and the tax readily collectible, is so cogent an argument for its taxation at its situs, that of late there is a general consensus of opinion that it is taxable in the state where it is permanently located and employed, and where it receives its entire protection, irrespective of the domicil of the owner. We have, ourselves, held in a number of cases that such property, permanently located in a state other than that of its owner, is taxable there. Brown v. Houston, 114 U. S. 622, 29 L. ed. 257, 5 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1091; Coe v. Errol, 116 U. S. 517, 29 L. ed. 715, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 475; Pullman's Palace Car Co. v. Pennsylvania, 141 U. S. 18, 35 L. ed. 613, 3 Inters. Com. Rep. 595, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 876; Western U. Teleg. Co. v. Atty. Gen. 125 U. S. 530, 31 L. ed. 790, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 961; Union P. R. Co. v. Peniston, 18 Wall. 5, 21 L. ed. 787; American Refrigerator Transit Co. v. Hall, 174 U. S. 70, 43 L. ed. 899, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 599; Pittsburg & S. Coal Co. v. Bates, 156 U. S. 577, 39 L. ed. 538, 5 Inters. Com. Rep. 30, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 415; Old Dominion S. S. Co. v. Virginia, 198 U. S. 299, 49 L. ed. 1059, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 686. We have also held that, if a corporation be engaged in running railroad cars into, through, and out of the state, and having at all times a large number of cars within the state, it may be taxed by taking as the basis of assessment such proportion of its capital stock as the number of miles of railroad over which its cars are run within the state bears to the whole number of miles in all the states over which its cars are run. Pullman's Palace Car Co. v. Pennsylvania, 141 U. S. 18, 35 L. ed. 613, 3 Inters. Com. Rep. 595, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 876.

There are doubtless cases in the state reports announcing the principle that the ancient maxim of mobilia sequuntur personam still applies to personal property, and that it may be taxed at the domicil of the owner; but upon examination they all, or nearly all, relate to intangible property, such as stocks, bonds, notes, and other choses in action. We are cited to none applying this rule to tangible property, and, after a careful examination, have not been able to find [207] any wherein the question *is squarely presented, unless it be that of Wheaton v. Mickel, 63 N. J. L. 525, 42 Atl. 843, where a resident of New Jersey was taxed for certain coastwise and seagoing vessels located in Pennsylvania. It did not appear, however, that they were permanently located there. The case turned upon the construction of a state statute, and the question of constitutionality was not raised. If there are any other cases holding that the maxim applies to tangible personal property, they are wholly exceptional, and were decided at a time when personal property was comparatively of small amount, and consisted principally of stocks in trade, horses, cattle, vehicles, and vessels engaged in navigation. But in view of the enormous increase of such property since the introduction of railways and the growth of manufactures, the tendency has been in recent years to treat it as having a situs of its own for the purpose of taxation, and correlatively to exempt at the domicil of its owner. The cases in the state reports upon this subject usually turn upon the construction of local statutes granting or withholding the right to tax extraterritorial property, and do not involve the constitutional principle here invoked. Many of them, such, for instance, as Blood v. Sayre, 17 Vt. 609; Preston v. Boston, 12 Pick. 12; Pease v. Whitney, 8 Mass. 93; Gray v. Kettell, 12 Mass. 161, turn upon the taxability of property where the owner is located in one, and the property in another, of two jurisdictions within the same state, sometimes even involving double taxation, and are not in point here.

One of the most valuable of the state cases is that of People ex rel. Hoyt v. Tax & A. Comrs. 23 N. Y. 224, where, under the New York statute, it was held that the tangible property of a resident, actually situated in another state or county, was not to be included in the assessment against him. The statute declared that "all lands and all personal estate within this state" were liable for taxation, and it was said in a most instructive opinion by Chief Judge Comstock that the language could not be obscured by the introduction of a legal fic-[208] tion about the *situs of personal estate. It was said that this fiction involved the necessary consequence that "goods and chattels actually within this state are not here in any legal sense, or for any legal purpose, if the owner resides abroad;" and that the maxim mobilia sequuntur personam may only be resorted to when convenience and justice so require. The proper use of legal fiction is to prevent injustice, according to the maxim In fictione juris semper æquitas existit. See Eidman v. Martinez, 184 U. S. 581, 46 L. ed. 700, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 515; Blackstone v. Miller, 188 U. S. 189, 206, 47 L. ed. 439, 445, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 277. "No fiction," says Blackstone, "shall extend to work an injury; its proper operation being to prevent a mischief or remedy an inconvenience, that might result from the general rule of law." [3 Bl. Com. 43.] The opinion argues with great force against the injustice of taxing extraterritorial property when it is also taxable in the state where it is located. Similar cases to the same effect are People ex rel. Jefferson v. Smith, 88 N. Y. 585; New Albany v. Meekin, 3 Ind. 481, 56 Am. Dec. 522; Wilkey v. Pekin, 19 Ill. 160; Johnson v. Lexington, 14 B. Mon. 648; Catlin v. Hull, 21 Vt. 152; Nashua Sav. Bank v. Nashua, 46 N. H. 389.

In Weaver v. State, 110 Iowa, 328, 81 N. W. 603, it was held by the supreme court of Iowa that a herd of cattle within the state of Missouri, belonging to a resident of Iowa, was not subject to an inheritance tax upon his decease. In Com. v. American Dredging Co. 122 Pa. 386, 1 L. R. A. 237, 2 Inters. Com. Rep. 221, 9 Am. St. Rep. 116, 15 Atl. 443, it was held that a Pennsylvania corporation was taxable in respect to certain dredges and other similar vessels which were built, but not permanently retained, outside of the state. It was said that the nontaxability of tangible personal property located permanently outside of the state was not "because of the technical principle that the situs of personal property is where the domicil of the owner is found. This rule is doubtless true as to intangible property, such as bonds, mortgages, and other evidences of debt. But the better opinion seems to be that it does not hold in the case of visible tangible personal property permanently located in another state. In such cases it is taxable within the jurisdiction where found, and is exempt *at the domicil [209] of the owner." The property in that case, however, was held not to be permanently outside of the state, and therefore not exempt from taxation. The rule, however, seems to be well settled in Pennsylvania, that so much of the tangible property of a corporation as is situated in another state, and there employed in its corporate business, is not taxable in Pennsylvania. Com. v. Montgomery Lead & Zinc Min. Co. 5 Pa.

Co. Ct. 89; Com. v. Delaware, L. & W. R. Co. 145 Pa. 96, 22 Atl. 157; Com. v. Westinghouse Electric Mfg. Co. 151 Pa. 265, 24 Atl. 1107, 1111; Com. v. Standard Oil Co. 101 Pa. 119. The rule is the same in New York. People ex rel. Pacific Mail S. S. Co. v. Tax & A. Comrs. 46 How. Pr. 315.

But there are two recent cases in this court which we think completely cover the question under consideration, and require the reversal of the judgment of the state court. The first of these is that of the Louisville & J. Ferry Co. v. Kentucky, 188 U. S. 385, 47 L. ed. 513, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 463. That was an action to recover certain taxes imposed upon the corporate franchise of the defendant company, which was organized to establish and maintain a ferry between Kentucky and Indiana. The defendant was also licensed by the state of Indiana. We held that the fact that such franchise had been granted by the commonwealth of Kentucky did not bring within the jurisdiction of Kentucky, for the purpose of taxation, the franchise granted to the same company by Indiana, and which we held to be an incorporeal hereditament, derived from and having its legal situs in that state. It was adjudged that such taxation amounted to a deprivation of property without due process of law, in violation of the 14th Amendment; as much so as if the state taxed the land owned by that company; and that the officers of the state had exceeded their power in taxing the whole franchise without making a deduction for that obtained from Indiana, the two being distinct, "although the enjoyment of both are essential to a complete ferry right for the transportation of persons and property across the river both ways."

The other and more recent case is that of [210]the *Delaware, L. & W. R. Co. v. Pennsylvania, 198 U. S. 341, 49 L. ed. 1077, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 669. That was an assessment upon the capital stock of the railroad company, wherein it was contended that the assessor should have deducted from the value of such stock certain coal mined in Pennsylvania and owned by it, but stored in New York, there awaiting sale, and beyond the jurisdiction of the commonwealth at the time appraisement was made. This coal was taxable, and in fact was taxed, in the state where it rested for the purposes of sale at the time when the appraisement in question was made. Both this court and the supreme court of Pennsylvania had held that a tax on the corporate stock is a tax on the assets of the corporation issuing such stock. The two courts agreed in the general proposition that tangible property permanently outside of the state, and having no situs within the state, could not be taxed. But they differed upon the question whether the coal involved was permanently outside of the state. In delivering the opinion it was said: "However temporary the stay of the coal might be in the particular foreign states where it was resting at the time of the appraisement, it was definitely and forever beyond the jurisdiction of Pennsylvania. And it was within the jurisdiction of the foreign states for purposes of taxation, and, in truth, it was there taxed. We regard this tax as, in substance and in fact, though not in form, a tax specifically levied upon the property of the corporation, and part of that property is outside and beyond the jurisdiction of the state which thus assumes to tax it." The decision in that case was really broader than the exigencies of the case under consideration require, as the tax was not upon the personal property itself, but upon the capital stock of a Pennsylvania corporation, a part of which stock was represented by the coal, the value of which was held should have been deducted.

The adoption of a general rule that tangible personal property in other states may be taxed at the domicil of the owner involves possibilities of an extremely serious character. Not only would it authorize the taxation of furniture and other *property kept[211] at country houses in other states or even in foreign countries, of stocks of goods and merchandise kept at branch establishments, when already taxed at the state of their situs, but of that enormous mass of personal property belonging to railways and other corporations, which might be taxed in the state where they are incorporated, though their charter contemplated the construction and operation of roads wholly outside the state, and sometimes across the continent; and when, in no other particular, they are subject to its laws and entitled to its protection. The propriety of such incorporations, where no business is done within the state, is open to grave doubt; but it is possible that legislation alone can furnish a remedy.

Our conclusion upon this branch of the case renders it unnecessary to decide the second question, viz., whether the transit company was denied the equal protection of the laws.

It is unnecessary to say that this case does not involve the question of the taxation of intangible personal property, or of inheritance or succession taxes, or of questions arising between different municipalities or taxing districts within the same state, which are controlled by different considerations.

We are of opinion that the cars in question, so far as they were located and employed in other states than Kentucky, were not subject to the taxing power of that commonwealth, and that the judgment of the Court of Appeals must be reversed, and the case remanded to that court for further proceedings not inconsistent with this opinion.

Mr. Justice White concurred in the result.

Mr. Justice Holmes:

It seems to me that the result reached by the court probably is a desirable one, but I hardly understand how it can be deduced from the 14th Amendment; and as the Chief Justice feels the same difficulty, I think it proper to say that my doubt has not been removed.

---

[212] *WILLIAM MARVIN, Plff. in Err.,
v.
BELLE B. TROUT.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 212-228.)

1. Constitutional law—due process of law—subjecting premises to judgment for money lost there at play.—The owner of a building which he knowingly permits to be used for gaming purposes is not deprived of his property without due process of law by Ohio Rev. Stat. § 4275, which authorizes an action to subject such building to the payment of a judgment obtained by an informer for the recovery of money lost there at play.

2. Constitutional law—due process of law—necessity of jury trial.—A judgment founded upon a state statute is not wanting in due process of law because the statute does not provide for or permit a trial by jury.

3. Constitutional law—due process of law—who may raise question.—The objection that due process of law is not afforded an owner of property used for gaming purposes by Ohio Rev. Stat. § 4275, under which a judgment against those who won money there at gambling, when not impeached for fraud or collusion, is made conclusive evidence of the amount of money lost in an action to charge the property of the owner, is not open to such an owner where there is proof outside the record of the judgment, showing the amount of money lost, given against his objection that the fact was not in issue.

[Nos. 19, 20.]

NOTE.—As to what constitutes due process of law—see Kuntz v. Sumption, 2 L.R.A. 655, and note; Re Gannon, 5 L.R.A. 359, and note; Ulman v. Baltimore, 11 L.R.A. 224, and note; and Gilman v. Tucker, 13 L.R.A. 304, and note. And see notes to People v. O'Brien, 2 L.R.A. 255; Pearson v. Yewdall, 24 L. ed. U. S. 436; and Wilson v. North Carolina, 42 L. ed. U. S. 865.

Argued October 20, 23, 1905. Decided November 13, 1905.

IN ERROR to the Supreme Court of the State of Ohio to review two judgments affirming judgments of the Circuit Court of Hancock County, in that state, in favor of plaintiff in actions to subject the property of the owner of the building where gaming was carried on, with his knowledge and assent, to the payment of judgments for the recovery of money lost there at play. Affirmed.

See same case below, 70 Ohio St. 437, 72 N. E. 1161, 1162; on first writ of error, 62 Ohio St. 132, 56 N. E. 655.

Statement by Mr. Justice Peckham:

The plaintiff in error in these cases seeks to review the judgments of the supreme court of Ohio, affirming judgments recovered against him by the defendant in error in one of the circuit courts of Ohio. The two cases involve the same question, which relates to the validity of the sections of the statute of the state of Ohio in regard to gambling, known as §§ 4270, 4273, and 4275 of the Revised Statutes of that state. The sections are set forth in the margin.†

†Sec. 4270. If any person, by playing at any game, or by means of any bet or wager, loses to any other person any sum of money or other thing of value, and pays or delivers the same, or any part thereof, to the winner, the person who so loses and pays or delivers may, at any time within six months next after such loss and payment or delivery, sue for and recover the money or thing of value so lost and paid or delivered, or any part thereof, from the winner thereof, with costs of suit, by civil action founded on this chapter, before any court of competent jurisdiction.

"Sec. 4273. If the person losing such money or thing of value as provided in § 4270 does not, within the time therein specified, without collusion or deceit, sue, and with effect prosecute, for the money or thing of value so lost and paid or delivered, any person may sue for and recover the same, with costs of suit, against any winner as aforesaid, for the use of the person prosecuting the same.

"Sec. 4275. The property, both real and personal, of a defendant against whom a judgment is rendered under this chapter, either for fines, costs, or to recover money or other thing of value, lost or paid, shall be liable therefor, without exemption, and such judgment shall be a lien thereon until paid; if the owner of the building in which the money was lost knowingly permits it to be used for gaming purposes, such building and the real estate upon which it stands shall be liable therefor in the same manner; and the guardian or trustee of a minor, insane person, or idiot, who permits any property under his charge to be used for gaming purposes, and the same becomes liable on account thereof, shall be liable to his ward for the amount thereof."

[213] *The defendant in error commenced these actions in the court of common pleas of Hancock county, under § 4275, for the purpose of making certain judgments, recovered by her against other parties, a lien on the property of the plaintiff in error to the extent of those judgments. The defendant demurred to the petition in each case. One of the grounds of demurrer was that the petition showed a former judgment in favor of defendant for the same cause of action. The demurrers were sustained, and judgments to that effect were affirmed on error by the circuit court; but the supreme court reversed them and remanded the cases for further proceedings. 62 Ohio St. 132, 56 N. E. 655. The defendant then answered, and the cases went to trial in the common pleas, where plaintiff recovered judgments in her favor. On appeal in each case, to the circuit court of Hancock county, a trial was had de novo, which resulted in judgments in favor of plaintiff (24 Ohio C. C. 333), which were affirmed, without any opinion, by the supreme court of Ohio. 70 Ohio St. 437, 72 N. E. 1161, 1162. The defendant below has brought the cases here by writs of error.

The following are the facts upon which [214] the questions arise: *At the March term, 1895, of the court of common pleas for Hancock county, the defendant in error brought her action under the above § 4273, to recover from the defendants in that suit, who were named Clifford, Gassman, and Marvin (the last named being this plaintiff in error), moneys alleged to have been lost by the plaintiff's husband in gambling (and won by them) between the 20th day of March, 1893, and the 19th day of March, 1894. She subsequently brought another action at the September term, 1896, in the same court of common pleas, against the same parties, to recover moneys alleged to have been so lost and won between March 19 and June 19, 1894. In the first action she recovered $3,473 and costs against all three defendants, and in the second she recovered $1,300 and costs against the same defendants. Those judgments were subsequently reversed on error, by the circuit court, as to Marvin, and affirmed as to the other defendants.

The plaintiff below then commenced these actions in the court of common pleas of Hancock county against the defendant Marvin as the owner of the premises in which the gambling was carried on, to make the judgments theretofore obtained by her against Clifford and Gassman a lien upon the building of which Marvin, the defendant, was the owner, on the ground that he knowingly permitted the same to be used by them for gambling purposes. The petition in each case stated in substance the ownership by defendant Marvin of the property where the gambling was carried on; that Clifford and Gassman carried on gambling there in violation of law; that the defendant knowingly permitted his building to be so used. The petition then alleged the recovery of a judgment by plaintiff against the defendants Clifford, Gassman, and Marvin, for the amount stated in the judgment; that the action was brought pursuant to § 4273 of the Revised Statutes of Ohio, to recover from the defendants money staked and betted by plaintiff's husband, and the judgment recovered was for the amount found by the court to have been staked and betted *by [215] plaintiff's husband and won by the defendants; that the judgment was, on error, reversed as to Marvin, but affirmed as to the other defendants, and that the judgment remained in full force as to them, and was wholly unpaid; that the said games of chance, "on which said money was staked and betted and lost" by plaintiff's husband, to the defendants Clifford and Gassman, were played at the rooms in defendant Marvin's building, and while defendant knowingly permitted the same to be used by them for such purpose. The prayer was to have the judgment declared a lien on the building, and that it be sold, etc.

The defendant, in his answer in each case, admitted the ownership of the premises at the times alleged in the petition, and also the recovery of the judgment as stated in the petition, and that such judgment as to the defendant Marvin was reversed, and the defendant denied the other allegations in the petition. He subsequently filed an amended answer setting up the Ohio statute of limitations. The cases were tried substantially as one case in the common pleas, and resulted in judgments in favor of the plaintiff. Upon appeal to the circuit court a retrial of the case was had. 24 Ohio C. C. 333. On that trial it was admitted that at the times mentioned in the petition the premises described therein were used for gambling purposes by Clifford and Gassman, that they are the same premises in which the money described in judgment or represented by the judgments set up in the petition are claimed to have been lost, but, not admitting that plaintiff's husband, in fact, gambled with Clifford and Gassman between March 19, 1893, and June 20, 1894, it is admitted, for the purposes of this action, that if he did, such gambling was done in the building and upon the premises of the defendant described in the petition. It was also conceded that the judgments were rendered against Clifford and Gassman, and that they occupied no other premises, and conducted no gambling during the periods specified in the petition except upon the premises described in the petition.

[216] *In the course of the trial, the judgments against Clifford and Gassman were offered and received in evidence, under a general objection on the part of the defendant Marvin.

The plaintiff also proved, outside the record of the Clifford and Gassman judgments, by a witness called by her, the fact of the gambling, and the amount lost, and the place where it was lost. The witness having stated that he had lost the money to the full amount represented by the judgments, in gambling, was asked to state whether he had lost it at Clifford and Gassman's. This question was objected to at the very moment that the witness answered that he had, the objection being as follows: "Counsel on behalf of defendant Marvin objected to the above answer and moved the court to strike out so much of the answer as relates to the fact and the extent of the loss, on the ground that it is not alleged in the petition, and is not an issue of fact in the case. Which motion the court overruled, to which ruling of the court the defendant then and there excepted."

The witness then again stated, under this objection, that the moneys were lost at gaming in this building, and were represented by these judgments, and that the moneys were lost as stated in the petition and at Clifford and Gassman's.

There was also evidence given on the trial tending to prove that the premises were not only used by Clifford and Gassman for gambling purposes during the times mentioned in the petition, but that such user was with the knowledge of the defendant Marvin, and that he knowingly permitted the same.

Upon the trial the defendant gave no evidence.

The circuit court, in giving judgment for the plaintiff, found these facts, and stated (24 Ohio C. C. 333) that in an action under § 4275, to subject the premises where the gaming was carried on and the money lost, to the payment of a judgment recovered against the winner, such judgment, when not impeached for fraud or collusion, was conclusive that the moneys lost and winnings secured, which caused the plaintiff's injury, were lost in gaming, and were [217] won by the *defendant in the judgment; that the same were won and lost in violation of law, and that the plaintiff, in consequence thereof, sustained damages to the amount of the judgment; that such judgments as to these facts are not open to dispute by the owner of the premises, in an action against him under that section.

The defendant Marvin then brought the cases by writs of error to the supreme court of the state for review, where they were affirmed, without any opinion; but some weeks after the mandate to the court below had been issued from the supreme court, that court, on motion of the plaintiff in error, ordered what is termed a "journal entry" to be made, as follows:

Journal Entry.

Whereupon, on motion of said plaintiff in error, William Marvin, the court order it to be certified and made part of the record of this case and of the judgment of affirmance heretofore entered herein, that this action is founded upon sections forty-two hundred and seventy-three (4273) and forty-two hundred and seventy-five (4275) of the Revised Statutes of Ohio on the subject of gaming.

It is further certified that said plaintiff in error set up in his petition in error, asking the reversal of the judgment of the circuit court of Hancock county, Ohio, that said sections of said statutes and the proceedings of said circuit court had thereunder were repugnant to section one, article fourteen of the amendments to the Constitution of the United States, and repugnant to article one, section nine, and article one, section ten, and section three of article three of said United States Constitution. Also that said sections of said statutes and the proceedings had thereunder were claimed and set up by plaintiff in error to be an invasion of his private right of property, in violation of said Constitution and amendments. That said judgment of affirmance was in favor of the validity of said statutes and of said proceedings had thereunder, and *that they were not repugnant to any [218] of the provisions of said Constitution or of the amendments thereto.

Mr. George F. Pendleton argued the cause and filed a brief for plaintiff in error:

The legislature and the courts cannot take the private property of one person and give it to another.

Chicago & E. R. Co. v. Keith, 67 Ohio St. 279, 60 L.R.A. 525, 65 N. E. 1020; Bowman v. Middleton, 1 Bay, 252; Cooley, Const. Lim. 6th ed. p. 198; Taylor v. Ross County, 23 Ohio St. 22.

Making this judgment conclusive violated Mr. Marvin's right of property under the Constitution.

2 Tiedeman, State & Federal Control of Persons & Property, § 178, p. 871.

If a statute purporting to have been enacted to protect the public health, the public morals, or the public safety, has no real or substantial relation to those objects, or is a palpable invasion of rights secured by the fundamental law, it is the duty of the court to so adjudge and thereby give effect to the Constitution.

1 Tiedeman, State & Federal Control of Persons & Property, p. 17; Marbury v. Madison, 1 Cranch, 137, 2 L. ed. 60; Minnesota v. Barber, 136 U. S. 319, 34 L. ed. 457, 3 Inters. Com. Rep. 185, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 862.

If the crime of gambling on the real estate of the owner with his knowledge and consent is such an egregious wrong to the good morals of the state as to require rigorous measures to correct the wrong, the state has ample power to correct it, and to prevent its repetition. It can find no justification within the 14th Amendment when it seeks to destroy or confiscate the real estate of the owner of the property where the gambling is done.

2 Tiedeman, State & Federal Control of Persons & Property, § 152, p. 763; Welch v. Stowell, 2 Dougl. (Mich.) 332; State ex rel. Rhodes v. Saunders, 66 N. H. 39, 18 L.R.A. 646, 25 Atl. 588.

So, the taking of the property from the owner as a punishment for allowing an illegal business to be conducted in some of the rooms, and giving it as a gratuity to another person, can find no justification, in view of the protection, to the owner, of his private property, guaranteed to him by the 14th Amendment.

Cooley, Const. Lim. 6th ed. pp. 208, 707; United States v. Reese, 92 U. S. 214, 23 L. ed. 563; United States v. Cruikshank, 92 U. S. 542, 23 L. ed. 588; Lawton v. Steele, 152 U. S. 133, 38 L. ed. 385, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 499; Edson v. Crangle, 62 Ohio St. 49, 56 N. E. 647.

Every exercise of the police power of the state, to be valid, must be reasonable.

State v. Marble, 72 Ohio St. 33, 70 L.R.A. 35, 106 Am. St. Rep. 570, 73 N. E. 1063; Freund, Pol. Powers, § 63; Rideout v. Knox, 148 Mass. 368, 2 L.R.A. 81, 12 Am. St. Rep. 560, 19 N. E. 390; Lawton v. Steele, supra; Plessy v. Ferguson, 163 U. S. 537, 41 L. ed. 256, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1138; Wisconsin, M. & P. R. Co. v. Jacobson, 179 U. S. 287, 45 L. ed. 194, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 115; Dobbins v. Los Angeles, 195 U. S. 223, 49 L. ed. 169, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 18; Chicago & E. R. Co. v. Keith, supra; Booth v. Illinois, 184 U. S. 425, 428, 429, 46 L. ed. 623, 625, 626, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 425; Allgeyer v. Louisiana, 165 U. S. 578, 579, 591, 41 L. ed. 832, 836, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 427; Minnesota v. Barber, 136 U. S. 319, 34 L. ed. 457, 3 Inters. Com. Rep. 185, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 862; Holden v. Hardy, 169 U. S. 366, 398, 42 L. ed. 780, 793, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 383; Yick Wo v. Hopkins, 118 U. S. 356, 30 L. ed. 220, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1064; Connolly v. Union Sewer Pipe Co. 184 U. S. 540, 558–560, 563, 46 L. ed. 679, 689–691, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 431.

William Marvin is not bound by the judgment obtained by Belle B. Trout against Clifford and Gassman. He, not being a party thereto, is not personally bound by it; and neither could it be made the basis of a claim against his real estate in the petition described.

Iron Cliffs Co. v. Negaunee Iron Co. 197 U. S. 463, 471, 49 L. ed. 836, 840, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 474; New Orleans Waterworks Co. v. New Orleans, 164 U. S. 471, 480, 41 L. ed. 518, 523, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 161; Scott v. McNeal, 154 U. S. 34, 46, 38 L. ed. 896, 901, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1108; Pennoyer v. Neff, 95 U. S. 714, 733, 24 L. ed. 565, 572; Windsor v. McVeigh, 93 U. S. 274, 277, 23 L. ed. 914, 915; Finley v. Bank of United States, 11 Wheat. 304, 307, 6 L. ed. 480.

Mr. John Poe argued the cause and filed a brief for defendant in error:

This court would not assume jurisdiction of these cases because of the complaint here, that the holding of the Ohio courts deprives Mr. Marvin of any rights guaranteed to him by the 5th, 6th, 7th, 8th, or 9th Amendment referred to, for these were not intended to limit the powers of the states in respect to their own people, but to operate on the national government only.

Spies v. Illinois (Ex parte Spies) 123 U. S. 131, 132, 166, 31 L. ed. 80, 86, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 21.

The claim here sought to be made is that the statutes of Ohio, referred to, are repugnant to the Constitution of the United States; but, as no such claim was set up or made in the trial courts of Ohio, it follows that this court would have no jurisdiction to entertain these cases for that reason.

Spies v. Illinois (Ex parte Spies) 123 U. S. 131, 132, 181, 31 L. ed. 80, 91, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 21; Brooks v. Missouri, 124 U. S. 394, 395, 31 L. ed. 454, 456, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 443; French v. Hopkins, 124 U. S. 524, 31 L. ed. 536, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 589; Powell v. Brunswick County, 150 U. S. 433, 439, 37 L. ed. 1134, 1136, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 166; Morrison v. Watson, 154 U. S. 111–115, 38 L. ed. 928, 929, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 995; Miller v. Texas, 153 U. S. 535, 538, 539, 38 L. ed. 812–814, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 874; Sayward v. Denny, 158 U. S. 180–184, 39 L. ed. 941, 942, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 777; Giles v. Teasley, 193 U. S. 146–160, 48 L. ed. 655–658, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 359.

Ohio is not the only state where like statutes are sustained by the highest courts.

Polk County v. Hierb, 37 Iowa, 361; La France v. Krayer, 42 Iowa, 147; Bertholf v.

O'Reilly, 74 N. Y. 509, 30 Am. Rep. 323; Bell v. Cassem, 158 Ill. 45, 29 L.R.A. 571, 41 N. E. 1089; Booth v. People, 186 Ill. 43, 50 L.R.A. 762, 57 N. E. 798.

The liability to seizure attaches to the thing. If a man uses his property for the purposes of the violation of the laws, he loses his right to have it at all.

Dobbins's Distillery v. United States, 96 U. S. 395, 400, 401, 24 L. ed. 637–639; The Palmyra, 12 Wheat. 1, 6 L. ed. 531; United States v. The Malek Adhel, 2 How. 210, 11 L. ed. 239; Munn v. Illinois, 94 U. S. 114, 24 L. ed. 77; The Ann, 9 Cranch, 289, 3 L. ed. 734; United States v. The Little Charles, 1 Brock. 380, Fed. Cas. No. 15,612; United States v. A Distillery, 2 Abb. (U. S.) 192, Fed. Cas. No. 14,965.

Due process of law does not imply or require a jury trial.

Adler v. Whitbeck, 44 Ohio St. 568, 9 N. E. 672.

Mr. Justice Peckham, after making the foregoing statement, delivered the opinion of the court:

The plaintiff in error seeks to reverse the judgments herein, based on the gaming statute of Ohio, because, as he insists, that statute is unconstitutional on several different grounds: First, because it is (as he avers) an unconstitutional extension of the police power of the state, resulting in the taking of the property of the plaintiff in error for the benefit of the defendant in error; or, in other words, it results in the taking of the property of the plaintiff in error without his consent, for a private purpose, and that it is an invasion of his private right of property, in violation of the Federal Constitution; second, because the statute denies or does not provide for an exercise of the right of trial by jury, and, therefore, a judgment founded upon it is obtained without due process of law; third, because the judgment first obtained against the persons who actually won the money is made conclusive evidence against the plaintiff in error of the amount of money thus lost, although he was neither a party nor privy to that judgment, as it was reversed as to him, and he was thereupon dismissed from the case.

A reference to the record does not show that any one of these questions was raised, either by the pleadings or on the trial of the case. The only evidence that any ques-[223] tion was *raised in the supreme court, assailing the validity of the statute as a violation of any provision of the Federal Constitution, consists of a statement in the petition in error to the supreme court, that the statute was a violation of certain sections of the Federal Constitution, and in the certificate of the supreme court of Ohio, which that court ordered to be made a part of the record, and which is above set forth. It is a certificate from the court, as distinguished from one by an individual judge.

The petition in error does not show that any question involving the Federal Constitution was actually argued or brought to the attention of the supreme court. It is well settled in this court that a certificate from a presiding judge of the state court, made after the decision of the case in that court, to the effect that a Federal question was considered, and decided by the court adversely to the plaintiff in error, cannot confer jurisdiction on this court, where the record does not otherwise show it to exist; that the effect of such a certificate is to make more certain and specific what is too general and indefinite in the record itself, but it is incompetent to originate the Federal question. Dibble v. Bellingham Bay Land Co. 163 U. S. 63, 41 L. ed. 72, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 939; Henkel v. Cincinnati, 177 U. S. 170, 44 L. ed. 720, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 573; Fullerton v. Texas, 196 U. S. 192, 49 L. ed. 443, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 221. As the certificate in the case at bar was made by the court, and was ordered by it to be attached to and form part of the record itself, it is perhaps sufficient to show that some questions of a Federal nature were before that court, and decided by it. It is true the certificate is quite loose in its statement as to what was the nature or character of these questions. It is certified that the plaintiff in error contended that the sections of the statute and the proceedings of the circuit court had thereunder were repugnant to those sections of the Constitution of the United States referred to in the certificate. By reference to them it will be seen that § 1, article 14, contains several provisions quite distinct from, and having no relation to, each other, and the certificate does not state which one of the provisions of that section was claimed *to have been violated by [224] the statute in question. Section 9 of article 1 has itself seven subdivisions, and it would be difficult even to guess which particular provision the plaintiff in error claimed was violated by the statute. Section 10 of the same article is also referred to as having been violated by the statute; also article 3, § 3, which relates to the trial of all crimes by jury. Then there is stated to have been made by the plaintiff in error a general contention that the statute and proceedings thereunder were an invasion of his private right of property in violation of the Federal Constitution and its amendments.

A more general statement of the presentation of the Federal questions to a state court could scarcely be made. It is almost impossible to determine from such certificate what Federal question was decided in the case. We have heretofore held that an objection very similar to this raised no Federal question. Clarke v. McDade, 165 U. S. 168, 41 L. ed. 673, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 284.

Assuming, however, that by reference to the 1st section of the 14th Amendment, the question of the illegal extension of the police power of the state may be raised, under the claim that a judgment founded upon the statute would permit the taking of the property of the plaintiff in error without due process of law, we are of opinion that the objection is without merit. For a great many years past gambling has been very generally in this country regarded as a vice, to be prevented and suppressed in the interest of the public morals and the public welfare. The power of the state to enact laws to suppress gambling cannot be doubted; and, as a means to that end, we have no doubt of its power to provide that the owner of the building in which gambling is conducted, who knowingly looks on and permits such gambling, can be made liable in his property which is thus used, to pay a judgment against those who won the money, as is provided in the statute in question. That statute, or one somewhat similar to it (without the conclusive feature of the judgment as evidence in the action to charge the property of the owner of the building [225]*where the gambling was carried on), has been in force in Ohio ever since, at least, 1831, and similar legislation is found upon that subject or upon that of the regulation of the sale of liquor, in most of the states of the Union. The plain object of this legislation is to discourage and, if possible, prevent gambling. The liability of the owner of the building to make good the loss sustained under the circumstances set forth in the statute was clearly part of the means resorted to by the legislature for the purpose of suppressing the evil in the interest of the public morals and welfare. We are aware of no provision in the Federal Constitution which prevents this kind of legislation in a state for such a purpose. To say that it must be limited to a provision allowing a recovery of the money by the one who lost it, would be in effect to hold invalid all legislation providing for proceedings in the nature of qui tam actions. Statutes providing for actions by a common informer, who himself had no interest whatever in the controversy other than that given by statute, have been in existence for hundreds of years in England, and in this country ever since the foundation of our government. The right to recover the penalty or forfeiture granted by statute is frequently given to the first common informer who brings the action, although he has no interest in the matter whatever except as such informer. 3 Bl. Com. chap. 9, m. p. 161; 2 Bl. Com. chap. 29, m. p. 437; 2 Hawk. P. C. 8th ed. 368; 1 Selwyn, N. P. 621; Dozier v. Williams, 47 Miss. 605; Beadleston v. Sprague (1810) 6 Johns. 101; Caswell v. Allen, 10 Johns. 118; Parker v. Colcord (1819) 2 N. H. 36; Pike v. Madbury (1841) 12 N. H. 262; Com. v. Churchill (1809) 5 Mass. 180.

Legislation giving an interest in the forfeiture to a common informer has been frequent in congressional legislation relating to revenue cases. It is referred to in the act of March 3, 1797 (1 Stat. at L. 506, chap. 13, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 3604), and cases arising under its provisions are to be found in 10 Wheat. 246, 6 L. ed. 314, United States v. Morris, and 6 Pet. 404, 8 L. ed. 443, M'Lane v. United States.

*And in 1861, in 12 Stat. at L. 292, 296, [226]chap. 45, § 11, one moiety of the forfeiture is given "to him who shall first sue for the same."

There can be no doubt of the right of the government to give the whole instead of a moiety of the forfeiture to the informer.

Second. The contention on the part of the plaintiff in error, that the statute violates the Federal Constitution because it does not provide for or permit trial by jury, is equally without merit. Maxwell v. Dow, 176 U. S. 581, 44 L. ed. 597, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 448, 494.

Third. The contention that the statute violates the 1st section of the 14th Amendment, because under it, as is averred, a judgment against those who won the money at gambling, when not impeached for fraud or collusion, is conclusive evidence of the amount lost in an action against the owner of the property where the money was lost, who was neither party nor privy to such judgment, cannot, in the state of this record, be here raised. Upon the trial the defendant in error offered the judgment against Clifford and Gassman in evidence, and it was received under a general objection made by the plaintiff in error. By reference to the record it appears that the plaintiff in error on the trial conceded that the judgment was rendered against Clifford and Gassman. The formal putting in evidence of a judgment, the existence of which was conceded, can raise no question whatever. At a subsequent stage of the trial oral evidence was given outside of the record of the judgments (under objection by the plaintiff in error that there was no such issue in the case) of the amount of money that was in fact lost at play, and that it was represented by, and was as large as, the amount stated in the judgment offered in evidence.

One of the grounds of objection to the evidence, made by the plaintiff in error, was that neither the fact nor the extent of the loss was alleged in the petition or was an issue in the case. The petition in substance contained both averments and the answer denied them. There was such an issue, although defendant, in his objection, overlooked it. The objection *was overruled and [227] the evidence given. It surely cannot now be pretended that the plaintiff in error was thereby harmed. Can he now be heard to say that the statute is void because of the conclusive character which he avers is therein given to the judgment, when there was proof outside the record (given against his own objection and averment that the fact was not in issue) showing the amount of money lost? If the statute do mean that such prior judgment is conclusive, what legal interest has the plaintiff in error in the question when there is other evidence in his case, although given against his objection that there was no issue on that fact? The whole statute is not void, even if it mean that the judgment is conclusive; and when other evidence is given, the (alleged) invalid provision is eliminated in such case, and the party who insists there is no issue as to loss, not being harmed, cannot raise the question. Albany County v. Stanley, 105 U. S. 305, 311, 26 L. ed. 1044, 1049; Clark v. Kansas City, 176 U. S. 114, 118, 44 L. ed. 392, 396, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 284. The statement of the circuit court as to the conclusive character of a judgment was, as applied to the plaintiff in error, a mere abstraction. It does not appear, even by the certificate of the supreme court, that the plaintiff in error claimed the protection of the 1st section of the 14th Amendment on the ground of the alleged erroneous decision of the court below on this question, nor does it appear that the supreme court itself gave any opinion upon or determined it. These facts must appear in the record. Dewey v. Des Moines, 173 U. S. 193, 197, 43 L. ed. 665, 666, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 379; Chapin v. Fye, 179 U. S. 127, 45 L. ed. 119, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 71. The certificate that the plaintiff in error claimed the protection of that section is fully satisfied by treating it as raising the question of the invalidity of the statute on the ground of an illegal extension of the police power, and also because it did not permit a trial by jury, and thereby, as contended, denying due process of law. These grounds we have already considered. We cannot and ought not to assume that the supreme court, in this state of the record, took cognizance of the question of the conclusiveness of the judgment, and the certificate does not show that the court did so.

*In what has been said we do not wish it [228] to be understood that this court intimates an opinion upon the alleged invalidity of the statute upon the above ground. We simply say that the plaintiff in error cannot raise that question.

The judgments of the Supreme Court of Ohio are affirmed.

GEORGE C. RANKIN, Receiver of the Hutchinson National Bank, Plff. in Err., v.
EDWARD E. BARTON.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 228–232.)

1. Error to state court—Federal question.—A decision of a state court that the statute of limitations applicable to the right to enforce the individual liability of stockholders in national banks is put in motion by a delay of the Comptroller of the Currency in making an assessment involves a Federal question which will sustain a writ of error from the Supreme Court of the United States.
2. Limitation of actions—enforcement of liability of stockholders in national banks.—A state statute of limitations does not begin to run against the right to enforce the individual liability of stockholders in a national bank until the amount of such liability has been ascertained and assessed by the Comptroller of the Currency.

[No. 125.]

NOTE.—On limitation of actions to enforce liability of stockholder—see notes to United States v. Stanford, 40 L. ed. U. S. 751; and Platt v. Wilmot, 48 L. ed. U. S. 809.

Error to state court in cases involving questions under the national banking law.

Parties setting up as a defense title in a third party under the national banking law, and not claiming for themselves any title, right, privilege, or immunity given by that law, are not entitled to have a judgment of a state court adverse to their contention reviewed in the Supreme Court of the United States. Miller v. National Bank, 106 U. S. 542, 27 L. ed. 289, 1 Sup. Ct. Rep. 536.

Where a national bank organized from a state bank is held liable by a state court to pay bills issued by such state bank, and the national bank claims immunity from such liability by reason of its organization under the national banking act, the Supreme Court of the United States has jurisdiction to review the state decision. Metropolitan Nat. Bank v. Claggett, 141 U. S. 520, 35 L. ed. 841, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 60.

A question as to the power of a national bank to become a stockholder in a savings bank is a Federal one. California Nat. Bank v. Kennedy, 167 U. S. 363, 42 L. ed. 198, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 831.

And so is the question whether a national bank has power to discount a note on real-

Submitted October 17, 1905. Decided November 13, 1905.

IN ERROR to the Supreme Court of the State of Kansas to review a judgment which affirmed a judgment of the District Court of Reno County, in that state, sustaining the defense of the statute of limitations in an action to enforce the individual liability of a shareholder in a national bank. Reversed and remanded for further proceedings.

See same case below, 69 Kan. 629, 77 Pac. 531.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Mr. H. Whiteside submitted the cause for plaintiff in error:

The exercise of the judgment and authority of the Comptroller is indispensable whenever the personal liability of the stockholder is sought to be enforced; and it must precede the institution of the suit by the receiver.

Kennedy v. Gibson, 8 Wall. 498, 19 L. ed. 476; Casey v. Galli, 94 U. S. 673, 24 L. ed. 168; United States v. Knox, 102 U. S. 422, 26 L. ed. 216; Germanica Nat. Bank v. Case, 131 U. S. exliv. Appx. and 23 L. ed. 961; Bushnell v. Leland, 164 U. S. 684, 41 L. ed. 598, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 209; Aldrich v. Yates, 95 Fed. 78; Aldrich v. Campbell, 38 C. C. A. 347, 97 Fed. 663; De Weese v. Smith, 97 Fed. 309; Studebaker v. Perry, 43 C. C. A. 69, 102 Fed. 947.

Mr. George A. Vandeveer submitted the cause for defendant in error. Mr. F. L. Martin was on the brief:

There is no Federal statute of limitations applicable to this class of actions, and the statute of limitations of the state in which the action is brought controls.

Campbell v. Haverhill, 155 U. S. 610, 39 L. ed. 280, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 217; Price v. Yates, 2 Browne, Nat. Bank Cas. 204.

A statute of a state is whatever the court of last resort in such state construes it to be.

M'Elmoyle v. Cohen, 13 Pet. 312, 10 L. ed. 177; Bauserman v. Blunt, 147 U. S. 647, 37 L. ed. 316, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 466; Metcalf v. Watertown, 153 U. S. 671, 38 L. ed. 862, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 947; Balkam v. Woodstock Iron Co. 154 U. S. 177, 38 L. ed. 953, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1010.

In Kansas the rule is that the bar of the statute cannot be postponed by the failure estate security. Swope v. Leffingwell, 105 U. S. 3, 26 L. ed. 939.

---

A claim by a national bank, of an exemption from liability on a contract because the contract was one which it had no power, under the national banking law, to make, involves a Federal question. Logan County Nat. Bank v. Townsend, 139 U. S. 67, 35 L. ed. 107, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 496.

The decision of a state court that a claim against a national bank was an existing demand at the date of its suspension does not involve a Federal question. Chemical Nat. Bank v. Hartford Deposit Co. 161 U. S. 1, 40 L. ed. 595, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 439.

Whether, by reason of a false assumption of corporate authority, the officers, directors, and shareholders of what purported to be a national bank, but which never attained legal authority to do business, became liable as partners, on the principle of agency, for contracts entered into in the name of the corporation, is not a Federal question, but only a question of general law. Seeberger v. McCormick, 175 U. S. 274, 44 L. ed. 161, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 128.

But whether or not a recovery can be had on a lease made by a national banking association not then authorized to commence business, but which had made and filed its articles of association, by virtue of the exception made by U. S. Rev. Stat. § 5136, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 3455, as to incidental and preliminary business, and because the prohibition of business by that section did not make prohibited contracts invalid, is a Federal question. McCormick v. Market Nat. Bank, 165 U. S. 538, 41 L. ed. 817, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 433.

A claim against a purchaser of shares of stock of a national bank which subsequently became insolvent, for a loss incurred by his failure to insert his name, or that of some other responsible person, in the blank transfer signed on the books of the bank, presents no Federal question which will give the Supreme Court of the United States jurisdiction to review a judgment of a state court overruling such contention. The purchaser's obligation, if any, grows out of his contract, and not out of the banking law. Le Sassier v. Kennedy, 123 U. S. 521, 31 L. ed. 262, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 244.

A decision by a state court that, under a state statute, a national bank could not recover from a corporation interest in excess of the statutory rate, although corporations are prohibited from pleading the defense of usury, does not present a Federal question, where it rests upon a determination of the state court of the meaning of the state law as applied to all creditors, without denying the equality of right to the bank. Union Nat. Bank v. Louisville, N. A. & C. R. Co. 163 U. S. 325, 41 L. ed. 177, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1039.

A controversy merely as to which of the parties has the superior equity to shares of stock in a national bank, and in which the national banking act is only collaterally involved, does not raise a Federal question. Leyson v. Davis, 170 U. S. 36, 42 L. ed. 939, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 500.

An action to recover back usurious interest from a national bank, expressly based on an act of Congress, presents a Federal question. Talbot v. First Nat. Bank, 185 U. S. 172, 46 L. ed. 857, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 612; Talbot v. Sioux Nat. Bank, 185 U. S. 182, 46 L. ed. 862, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 621.

See also note to Apex Transp. Co. v. Garbade, 62 L.R.A. 513, on What adjudications of state courts can be brought up for review in the Supreme Court of the United States.

An exception to the action of a state court in overruling an objection to the introduction of any evidence under a petition in a suit to of the creditor to avail himself of any means within his power to prosecute, or to preserve, his claim; and that action must be taken within a reasonable time; and that, in no event, will such reasonable time be extended beyond the statutory period of limitation.

Atchison, T. & S. F. R. Co. v. Burlingame Twp. 36 Kan. 628, 59 Am. Rep. 578, 14 Pac. 271; Rork v. Douglas County, 46 Kan. 176, 26 Pac. 391; Bauserman v. Charlott, 46 Kan. 480, 26 Pac. 1051; Kulp v. Kulp, 51 Kan. 341, 21 L.R.A. 550, 32 Pac. 1118.

And this is the general rule recognized by this court.

Bauserman v. Blunt, supra; Rankin v. Barton, 69 Kan. 629, 77 Pac. 531; West v. Topeka Sav. Bank, 66 Kan. 527, 63 L.R.A. 137, 97 Am. St. Rep. 385, 72 Pac. 252.

The validity of a statute or treaty of the United States is not drawn in question, within the meaning of this section, every time rights claimed under a statute or treaty are controvertible; nor is the validity of an authority every time an act done by an authority is disputed.

Kennard v. Nebraska, 186 U. S. 304, 46 L. ed. 1175, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 879; Florida C. & P. R. Co. v. Bell, 176 U. S. 321, 44 L. ed. 486, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 399; Blackburn v. Portland Gold Min. Co. 175 U. S. 571, 44 L. ed. 276, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 222; Telluride Power Transmission Co. v. Rio Grande Western R. Co. 175 U. S. 639, 44 L. ed. 305, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 245; Columbia Water Power Co. v. Columbia Electric Street R. Light & P. Co. 172 U. S. 488, 43 L. ed. 525, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 247; Borgmeyer v. Idler, 159 U. S. 408, 40 L. ed. 199, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 34; Bushnell v. Crooke Min. & Smelting Co. 148 U. S. 682, 37 L. ed. 610, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 771; Ferry v. King County, 141 U. S. 668, 35 L. ed. 895, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 128; Cook County v. Calumet & C. Canal & Dock Co. 138 U. S. 635, 34 L. ed. 1110, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 435; Baltimore & P. R. Co. v. Hopkins, 130 U. S. 210, 32 L. ed. 908, 9 Sup. Ct. Rep. 503.

This court will not review the decision of the state court construing its own statute of limitations.

Great Western Teleg. Co. v. Purdy, 162 U. S. 329, 40 L. ed. 986, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 810; Walsh v. Columbus, H. Valley & A. R. Co. 176 U. S. 469, 44 L. ed. 548, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 393; Hamblin v. Western Land

---

recover the penalty imposed by the laws of the United States upon national banks for knowingly contracting for and receiving usurious interest, on the ground that the compiaint was insufficient, does not indicate that the attention of the state court was directed to the proposition that, by its decision, it might deny some title, right, privilege, or immunity, arising under such laws. Schuyler Nat. Bank v. Bellong, 150 U. S. 85, 37 L. ed. 1008, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 24.

A ground assigned for a motion for a new trial in the state court, that the judgment holding a receiver of a national bank to be a trustee was "contrary to law," is insufficient to raise a question of the denial of a right claimed under an act of Congress. Capital Nat. Bank v. First Nat. Bank, 172 U. S. 425, 43 L. ed. 502, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 202.

A judgment of the state court against the cashier of a national bank for his failure to comply with certain requirements of a state law is reviewable in the Supreme Court of the United States where his defense was that he was amenable to no law but a law of Congress, and that a state legislature had no power to prescribe his duty; as the judgment could not have been rendered without holding, and in effect deciding, that this plea was bad. Waite v. Dowley, 94 U. S. 527, 24 L. ed. 181.

A judgment for plaintiff in a suit against a national bank on a contract which the bank claimed it had no power, under the national banking law, to make, and was consequently exempt from liability thereon, necessarily determined, adversely to the bank, that it had no such exemption or immunity as asserted under that act, although the state court may have held the bank liable independently of that question. Logan County Nat. Bank v. Townsend, 139 U. S. 67, 35 L. ed. 107, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 496.

A decision by the highest court of a state in favor of the claim that a lease made by a national banking association, not then authorized to commence business, but which had made and filed its articles of association, was invalid, under U. S. Rev. Stat. § 5136, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 3455, is subject to review by writ of error from the Supreme Court of the United States, where the lessor specially set up and claimed a right to recover on the lease on the ground that it was within the exception to that section as to incidental and preliminary business, and also that the prohibition of business by that section did not make prohibited contracts invalid as between the parties. McCormick v. Market Nat. Bank, 165 U. S. 538, 41 L. ed. 817, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 433.

See also note to Mutual L. Ins. Co. v. McGrew, 63 L.R.A. 33, on How and when questions must be raised and decided in a state court in order to make a case for writ of error from the Supreme Court of the United States.

Other notes not hereinbefore referred to, involving questions respecting the appellate jurisdiction of the Supreme Court of the United States over state courts are: What the record must show respecting the presentation and decision of a Federal question in order to confer such jurisdiction,—Hooker v. Los Angeles, 63 L.R.A. 471; The record for this purpose,—Home for Incurables v. New York, 63 L.R.A. 329; What questions the Federal Supreme Court will consider in reviewing the judgments of state courts,—Missouri ex rel. Hill v. Dockery, 63 L.R.A. 571; Practice and procedure governing the transfer of causes to the Federal Supreme Court on writ of error or appeal,—Wedding v. Meyler, 66 L.R.A. 833.

Co. 147 U. S. 531, 37 L. ed. 267, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 353; New Orleans v. New Orleans Waterworks Co. 142 U. S. 79, 35 L. ed. 943, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 142; Harrison v. Myer, 92 U. S. 111, 23 L. ed. 606.

Where a state law is admitted to be valid, and the only question is whether it has been correctly construed, the Supreme Court of the United States has no jurisdiction.

Congdon v. Goodman, 2 Black, 574, 17 L. ed. 257; Scott v. Jones, 5 How. 343, 12 L. ed. 181; Commercial Bank v. Buckingham, 5 How. 317, 12 L. ed. 169.

A decision of the state court resting upon the construction, and not upon the validity, of a state statute, does not present a Federal question.

Grand Gulf R. & Bkg. Co. v. Marshall, 12 How. 165, 13 L. ed. 938; Ferry v. King County, supra; Snell v. Chicago, 152 U. S. 191, 38 L. ed. 408, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 489.

Decisions based on local laws not involving constitutional questions are not reviewable here.

Hibben v. Smith, 191 U. S. 310, 48 L. ed. 195, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 88; Smith v. Indiana, 191 U. S. 138, 48 L. ed. 125, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 51.

Mr. Justice McKenna delivered the opinion of the court:

The question in this case is the application of the statute of limitations of a state to the liability of a stockholder of a national bank before the amount of such liability has been ascertained and assessed by the Comptroller of the Currency. The trial court held the statute applicable, and its judgment was affirmed by the supreme court of the state.

The petition was filed November 13, 1902, and averred that the Hutchinson National Bank became insolvent in 1893, and plaintiff in error was appointed its receiver. On July 9, 1894, the Comptroller of the Currency ordered an assessment of $75,000 upon the individual liability of the stockholders, being $75 on each share, to pay the [231] debts of the bank. After *application of the amounts collected, and after further accounting, it was found necessary to make another assessment, and on November 20, 1900, the Comptroller of the Currency made another assessment of $19,000, being $19 upon each share. It was averred "that said assessment was made just as soon as discovered, in the exercise of diligence, to be necessary, and just as soon as it was ascertained that the first assessment and assets of the bank were insufficient." The amount due from defendant in error was $627, for which judgment was prayed. A demurrer was sustained to the petition on the ground that it showed on its face that the cause of the action was barred by the statute of limitations of the state. In sustaining this ruling, the supreme court of the state said: (1) That although the cause of action arose under the act of Congress, which prescribed no limitation on the remedy against stockholders, the statute of the state applied; and (2) the statute commenced to run, not when the assessment was made against a stockholder, but was put in motion by delay in making the assessment. Prior decisions of the supreme court of the state were relied on for this conclusion. They established the local law to be, it was said, that when an act to be done is wholly within the control of the party suing, he must perform it within a reasonable time, and such time cannot extend the period within which the action would be barred if no such preliminary step were necessary. And it was decided that the averment of the petition, that the second assessment was made as soon as it was discovered to be necessary, was a mere conclusion of the pleader, which was countervailed by the facts alleged.

We think the court overlooked the official character and power of the Comptroller of the Currency, and the decisions of this court declaring them. A national bank is an instrumentality of the United States; its circulating notes are guaranteed by the United States; and if the United States should be compelled to pay them, the United States has a paramount lien on the assets of the bank for reimbursement. The administration of the bank's assets is, therefore, vested in the Comptroller *of the Currency [232] as an officer of the United States. He appoints the receiver, and directs his acts. The individual liability of a stockholder can only be enforced by his order. The provision is as much for the benefit of the stockholders as for the United States, and it is indispensable to the bringing of a suit against the stockholder. In other words, the liability dates from the order of the Comptroller. It was said in Kennedy v. Gibson, 8 Wall. 498, 505, 19 L. ed. 476, 478: "It is for the Comptroller to decide when it is necessary to institute proceedings against the stockholders to enforce their personal liability, and whether the whole or part, and, if only a part, how much, shall be collected. These questions are referred to his judgment and discretion, and his determination is conclusive. The stockholders cannot controvert it. It is not to be questioned in the litigation that may ensue. He may make it at such time as he may deem proper, and upon such data as shall be satisfactory to him. This action on his part is indispensable whenever the personal liability of the stockholders is sought to be enforced, and must precede the institution of suit by the receiver. The fact must be distinctly averred in all such cases, and, if put in issue, must be proved." Subsequent cases have reiterated the doctrine. McDonald v. Thompson, 184 U. S. 71, 46 L. ed. 437, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 297; Studebaker v. Perry, 184 U. S. 258, 46 L. ed. 528, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 463. As the power of the Comptroller is derived from a statute of the United States, it cannot be controlled or limited by state statutes.

A motion is made by defendant in error to dismiss the writ of error for want of jurisdiction in this court. It is manifest from what we have said that the motion is without foundation.

Judgment reversed and cause remanded for further proceedings not inconsistent with this opinion.

---

[233]*ATTORNEY GENERAL OF THE STATE OF MICHIGAN upon the Relation of L. E. KIES et al., Plff. in Err.,

v.

THOMAS J. LOWREY, H. S. Walworth, C. H. Manzer, et al.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 233–240.)

1. Error to state court—Federal question—decision on Non-Federal grounds.—The Supreme Court of the United States is not without jurisdiction to review, by writ of error, a decision of a state court sustaining a state statute claimed to impair contract obligations, because the state court rests its conclusion of the nonexistence of the contract upon a construction of the state Constitution and laws.

2. Contracts—impairment of obligation—legislative alteration of school districts.—Contract obligations are not impaired by the creation by Mich. Laws 1901, local acts No. 315, of a new school district, to which was given the property within its limits which had belonged to the districts from which it was created.

3. Constitutional law—due process of law—legislative alteration of school districts.—The property of a school district is not taken without due process of law by the creation, by Mich. Laws 1901, local acts No. 315, of a new district, to which was given the property within its limits which had belonged to the districts from which it was created.

4. Constitutional law—guaranty of republican form of government—legislative alteration of school districts.—Legislative creation and alteration of school districts and division and apportionment of the property of such districts is compatible with the republican form of government guaranteed by U. S. Const. art. 4, § 4, even assuming that this provision applies to the creation of, or the powers or the rights of property of, subordinate municipalities of a state.

[No. 21.]

Argued October 23, 24, 1905. Decided November 13, 1905.

IN ERROR to the Supreme Court of the State of Michigan to review a judgment which, reversing the judgment of the Circuit Court for the County of Hillsdale, in that state, in proceedings in the nature of quo warranto, sustained the validity of a state statute creating a new school district and giving it the property within its limits which had belonged to the districts from which it was created. Affirmed.

See same case below, 131 Mich. 639, 92 N. W. 289.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Mr. Frank A. Lyon argued the cause and filed a brief for plaintiff in error:

School districts are municipal corporations.

Seeley v. Board of Education, 39 Mich. 486, note; School Dist. No. 4 v. Gage, 39 Mich. 484, 33 Am. Rep. 421; People ex rel. Park Comrs. v. Detroit, 28 Mich. 250, 15 Am. Rep. 202.

The right of local self-government by these municipalities and local institutions is an absolute and vested right which the state cannot take away.

Mechem, Pub. Off. § 123; People ex rel. LeRoy v. Hurlbut, 24 Mich. 44, 9 Am. Rep. 103; People ex rel. Atty. Gen. v. Detroit, 29 Mich. 110; People ex rel. Park Comrs. v. Detroit, 28 Mich. 228, 15 Am. Rep. 202; Atty. Gen. v. Detroit, 58 Mich. 213, 55 Am.

NOTE.—On how and when questions must be raised and decided in a state court in order to make a case for a writ of error from the Supreme Court of the United States—see note to Mutual L. Ins. Co. v. McGrew, 63 L.R.A. 33.

On what the record must show respecting the presentation and decision of a Federal question in order to confer jurisdiction on the Supreme Court of the United Staes on a writ of error to a state court—see note to Hooker v. Los Angeles, 63 L.R.A. 471.

As to what laws are void as impairing obligation of contracts—see notes to Franklin County Grammar School v. Bailey, 10 L.R.A. 405; Fletcher v. Peck, 3 L. ed. U. S. 162; McCanna & F. Co. v. Citizens' Trust & Surety Co. 24 C. C. A. 20; and Montana Ore-Purchasing Co. v. Boston & M. Consol. Copper & S. Min. Co. 35 C. C. A. 12.

As to what constitutes due process of law—see Kuntz v. Sumption, 2 L.R.A. 655, and note; Ulman v. Baltimore, 11 L.R.A. 224, and note; Re Gannon, 5 L.R.A. 359, and note; and Gilman v. Tucker, 13 L.R.A. 304, and note. And see notes to People v. O'Brien, 2 L.R.A. 255; Pearson v. Yewdall, 24 L. ed. U. S. 436; and Wilson v. North Carolina, 42 L. ed. U. S. 865.

Rep. 675, 24 N. W. 887; Moreland v. Millen, 126 Mich. 381, 85 N. W. 882; Maynard v. First Representative District, 84 Mich. 228, 11 L.R.A. 332, 47 N. W. 756; Stuart v. School Dist. No. 1, 30 Mich. 69; Belles v. Burr, 76 Mich. 1, 43 N. W. 24; State ex rel. Holt v. Denny, 118 Ind. 449, 4 L.R.A. 65, 21 N. E. 274; Evansville v. State, 118 Ind. 426, 4 L.R.A. 93, 21 N. E. 267; Clinton v. Cedar Rapids & M. River R. Co. 24 Iowa, 455; State ex rel. Atty. Gen. v. Moores (State ex rel. Smyth v. Moores), 55 Neb. 480, 41 L.R.A. 624, 76 N. W. 175; Cincinnati, W. & Z. R. Co. v. Clinton County, 1 Ohio St. 77; Parker v. Com. 6 Pa. 511, 47 Am. Dec. 480; People ex rel. Bolton v. Albertson, 55 N. Y. 50; Rathbone v. Wirth, 150 N. Y. 459, 34 L.R.A. 408, 45 N. E. 15; Benson v. New York, 10 Barb. 223; State v. Constantine, 42 Ohio St. 437, 51 Am. Rep. 833; West Point Water Power & Land Improv. Co. v. State, 49 Neb. 218, 66 N. W. 6; People ex rel. McCagg v. Chicago, 51 Ill. 17; People v. Lynch, 51 Cal. 15, 21 Am. Rep. 677; Grogan v. San Francisco, 18 Cal. 590; Cooley, Const. Lim. 5th ed. 45, 203, 209, 225, 228, 291–294; Dill. Mun. Corp. 4th ed. §§ 9, 65–74; Von Holst, Const. Law, 271; Dartmouth College v. Woodward, 4 Wheat. 518, 4 L. ed. 629; Milwaukee v. Milwaukee, 12 Wis. 100; Pearson v. State, 56 Ark. 148, 35 Am. St. Rep. 91, 19 S. W. 499; Mt. Hope Cemetery v. Boston, 158 Mass. 509, 35 Am. St. Rep. 515, 33 N. E. 695; Warren v. Lyons City, 22 Iowa, 351; Tippecanoe County v. Lucas, 93 U. S. 108, 23 L. ed. 822; Bristol v. New Chester, 3 N. H. 524; People ex rel. Fountain v. Westchester County, 4 Barb. 64; State ex rel. Board of Education v. Haben, 22 Wis. 660.

We have a right here to consult the opinion of the supreme court of Michigan to ascertain what points were made and considered by that court.

Murdock v. Memphis, 20 Wall. 590–633, 22 L. ed. 429–443; McManus v. O'Sullivan, 91 U. S. 578, 23 L. ed. 390; Gross v. United States Mortg. Co. 108 U. S. 481–487, 27 L. ed. 796–798, 2 Sup. Ct. Rep. 940; Adams County v. Burlington & M. River R. Co. 112 U. S. 123, 129, 28 L. ed. 678, 680, 5 Sup. Ct. Rep. 77; Detroit City R. Co. v. Guthard, 114 U. S. 133–137, 29 L. ed. 118, 119, 5 Sup. Ct. Rep. 811; Jacks v. Helena, 115 U. S. 288, 29 L. ed. 392, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 39; Fire Asso. of Philadelphia v. New York, 119 U. S. 110, 30 L. ed. 342, 7 Sup. Ct. Rep. 108; Kreiger v. Shelby R. Co. 125 U. S. 39–45, 31 L. ed. 675–678, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 752.

Counsel has failed to keep in mind the difference between the decision and the opinion of the court. The decision of the court is its judgment, while the opinion is simply the reasons given for that judgment.

Houston v. Williams, 13 Cal. 27, 73 Am. Dec. 565.

Mr. Henry B. Graves argued the cause and filed a brief for defendants in error:

School districts have been called municipal corporations.

Belles v. Burr, 76 Mich. 1, 43 N. W. 24; School Dist. No. 4 v. Gage, 39 Mich. 484, 33 Am. Rep. 421.

But, more properly, perhaps, they may be called quasi-municipal corporations.

25 Am. & Eng. Enc. Law, 2d ed. p. 31; Bush v. Shipman, 5 Ill. 186; People ex rel. Cairo & St. L. R. Co. v. Dupuyt, 71 Ill. 651; Littlewort v. Davis, 50 Miss. 403; Johnson v. Dole, 4 N. H. 478; Stroud v. Stevens Point, 37 Wis. 367; Rawson v. Spencer, 113 Mass. 40; Harris v. School Dist. No. 10, 28 N. H. 58; Rogers v. People, 68 Ill. 154; Heller v. Strommel, 52 Mo. 309; School Dist. No. 11 v. Williams, 38 Ark. 454; Beach v. Leahy, 11 Kan. 23.

The charter of a municipal corporation is in no sense a contract, and the property acquired by the municipality is not acquired by virtue of any contract with the creator of the municipality.

Dartmouth College v. Woodward, 4 Wheat. 518, 4 L. ed. 629; East Hartford v. Hartford Bridge Co. 10 How. 511, 13 L. ed. 518; Aspinwall v. Daviess County, 22 How. 364, 16 L. ed. 296.

Municipal corporations are mere creatures of the state, brought into existence to perform for the state certain public functions. The property of municipal corporations is simply the tools which the state authorizes the municipalities to acquire wherewith to perform these public functions. In some cases municipalities may acquire private property incidental to the performance of their public functions. Such property is usually received by grant from the bounty of public-spirited citizens; and in such case it is beyond the power of the state to divert the grant, or deprive the inhabitants of the municipality of the subject of the grant without due process of law.

Worcester v. Worcester Consol. Street R. Co. 196 U. S. 539, 49 L. ed. 591, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 327; East Hartford v. Hartford Bridge Co. supra; United States v. Baltimore & O. R. Co. 17 Wall. 322, 21 L. ed. 597; Laramie County v. Albany County, 92 U. S. 307, 23 L. ed. 552; Tippecanoe County v. Lucas, 93 U. S. 108, 23 L. ed. 822; Mt. Pleasant v. Beckwith, 100 U. S. 514, 25 L. ed. 699; New Orleans v. New Orleans Waterworks Co. 142 U. S. 79, 35 L. ed. 943, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 142; Newton v. Mahoning County, 100 U. S. 548, 25 L. ed. 710; Essex Public Road Board v. Skinkle, 140 U.

S. 334, 35 L. ed. 446, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 790; Mt. Hope Cemetery v. Boston, 158 Mass. 509, 35 Am. St. Rep. 515, 33 N. E. 695; Whitney v. Stow, 111 Mass. 368.

The abolished school districts were public corporations, and neither owed their existence, nor held their property, through any contract with the state.

2 Comp. Laws Mich. 1897, § 4652; Rawson v. Spencer; Dartmouth College v. Woodward; East Hartford v. Hartford Bridge Co.; Aspinwall v. Daviess County; United States v. Baltimore & O. R. Co.; Laramie County v. Albany County; Tippecanoe County v. Lucas; Mt. Pleasant v. Beckwith; Newton v. Mahoning County; Essex Public Road Board v. Skinkle, and Worcester v. Worcester Consol. Street R. Co., supra.

No Federal question was raised in the Hillsdale circuit court, all references being to the Constitution of Michigan.

Porter v. Foley, 24 How. 415, 16 L. ed. 740; Endowment Benev. Asso. v. Kansas, 120 U. S. 103, 30 L. ed. 593, 7 Sup. Ct. Rep. 499; Miller v. Cornwall R. Co. 168 U. S. 131, 42 L. ed. 409, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 34; Kipley v. Illinois, 170 U. S. 182–187, 42 L. ed. 998–1002, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 550; Jacobi v. Alabama, 187 U. S. 133, 47 L. ed. 106, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 48.

It is doubtful whether this court will examine the opinions of the judges of the supreme court of Michigan to ascertain what was decided in that court, because it is doubtful whether such opinions are part of the record.

Murdock v. Memphis, 20 Wall. 590, 22 L. ed. 429; Gross v. United States Mortg. Co. 108 U. S. 477, 27 L. ed. 795, 2 Sup. Ct. Rep. 940; Sayward v. Denny, 158 U. S. 180, 39 L. ed. 941, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 777; Dibble v. Bellingham Bay Land Co. 163 U. S. 63, 41 L. ed. 72, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 939.

But, if this court will examine the opinions of the supreme court of Michigan, no opinion of that court was ever rendered in this case, because no opinion was ever handed down, concurred in by a majority of the judges sitting in the case.

Dubuque v. Illinois C. R. Co. 39 Iowa, 56; Whiting v. West Point, 88 Va. 905, 15 L.R.A. 860, 29 Am. St. Rep. 750, 14 S. E. 698; Grier's Estate, 171 Pa. 412, 33 Atl. 375; People ex rel. Lyon v. Circuit Judge, 37 Mich. 377; Boyle v. Zacharie, 6 Pet. 348, 8 L. ed. 423; Durant v. Essex Co. 7 Wall. 107, 19 L. ed. 154.

If it can be said that the question of the taking of property without due process of law under the 14th Amendment was raised in the Hillsdale circuit court (which we deny), this question was abandoned in the supreme court of Michigan.

Harding v. Illinois, 196 U. S. 78, 49 L. ed. 394, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 176.

The briefs of counsel in the court below are not part of the record, except, possibly, where referred to in the opinions.

Ibid.

The burden is on the plaintiff in error affirmatively to show that the supreme court of Michigan decided a Federal question.

Chicago, I. & L. R. Co. v. McGuire, 196 U. S. 128, 49 L. ed. 413, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 200.

Mr. Fred H. Stone also argued the cause and filed a brief for defendants in error.

Mr. Justice McKenna delivered the opinion of the court:

The Constitution of the state of Michigan requires the legislature to establish and provide a system of public schools, whereby a school shall be kept open at least three months in each year in every school district in the state. In fulfilment of this requirement legislation was enacted from time to time providing for the formation of school districts. Under this legislation (1881) four school districts were organized in the townships of Somerset and Moscow, county of Hillsdale. In 1901 the legislature passed an act known as "Act Number 315 of the Local Acts of the State of Michigan for the Year 1901," entitled "An Act to Incorporate the Public Schools of the Village of Jerome, Hillsdale County, Michigan; Define the Boundaries Thereof, Provide for the Election of Trustees and Fix their Powers and Duties, and Provide for the Distribution of the Territory of the Disorganized Districts." By this act one of the districts formed in the townships of Somerset and Moscow, in which the village of Jerome is situated, and portions of other districts, were set off and incorporated in one school district, to be known as "the public schools of the village of Jerome." The act appointed defendants in error trustees of the new district, to continue in office until their successors should be elected, as provided in the act. The act gave to the new district *the property within its limits which had [238] belonged to the districts from which it was created, and required the new district to assume and pay the debts and obligations of the old districts. The new district did not include all of the lands of the old districts.

On the 7th of October, 1901, an information was filed in the nature of a quo warranto by the attorney general of the state upon the relation of L. E. Kies, W. E. Alley, J. B. Strong, and Stephen McCleary, charging defendants in error with usurping, intruding into, and unlawfully claiming to exercise "a false, fictitious, and pretended public office, to wit, trustees and officers of the pretended school district known as 'the public schools of the village of Jerome,' and ex officio 'the board of school inspectors of the public schools of the village of Jerome,' to wit, at the county of Hillsdale aforesaid, in contempt of the people of the state of Michigan, and to their great damage and prejudice."

The circuit court rendered a judgment of ouster against defendants in error. The supreme court entered the following judgment: "The judgment of ouster should be affirmed as to such officers as now hold under the legislative appointment, if there be any thus holding. As to others, if any, it will be reversed."

The grounds of attack upon the validity of the act creating the new district in the supreme court of the state were as follows:

First. It deprives this school district or municipality of the right of local self-government, guaranteed to all municipalities by the Constitution.

Second. The title to the act indicates, and the act itself embraces, more than one object.

Third. The act is broader than the title; the body of the act embraces many objects not covered by the title.

Fourth. The act as passed impairs the obligation of contracts, within the meaning of the Constitution of the United States and the Constitution of the state of Michigan.

[239] *With the first three grounds we have no concern. They present strictly local questions. We are concerned with the fourth ground only in so far as it invokes the Constitution of the United States. The supreme court disposed of this ground as follows: "We have already shown that the obligation of contracts is not impaired. The districts did not hold this property under any contract with the state, but as a public agency." In other words, the nonexistence of a contract was rested on the construction of the Constitution and laws of the state, and hence defendant in error contends that the decision of the court did not involve a Federal question. This, however, overlooks the power and duty of this court to determine for itself the existence or nonexistence of a contract. Other grounds in support of the motion to dismiss are urged which, we think, are also untenable. The motion is therefore denied.

Plaintiff in error broadened in this court his objections to the act, based on the Constitution of the United States. He urges, besides the contract clause of the Constitution, that provision of the 14th Amendment which protects private property from deprivation without due process of law, and § 4, article 4, which provides: "The United States shall guarantee to every state in this Union a republican form of government." But the grounds all depend ultimately upon the same arguments. If the legislature of the state has the power to create and alter school districts, and divide and apportion the property of such district, no contract can arise, no property of a district can be said to be taken, and the action of the legislature is compatible with a republican form of government even if it be admitted that § 4, article 4, of the Constitution, applies to the creation of, or the powers or rights of property of, the subordinate municipalities of the state. We may omit, therefore, that section and article from further consideration. The decision of the other grounds urged we may rest upon the opinion of the supreme court of the state and the case of Lamarie County v. Albany County, 92 U. S. 307, 23 L. ed. 552. It is there said in many ways, with citation of *many supporting cases, that the legisla- [240] ture of the state has absolute power to make and change subordinate municipalities. The following quotation meets exactly the contentions of plaintiff in error:

"Institutions of the kind, whether called counties or towns, are the auxiliaries of the state in the important business of municipal rule, and cannot have the least pretension to sustain their privileges or their existence upon anything like a contract between them and the legislature of the state, because there is not, and cannot be, any reciprocity of stipulation, and their objects and duties are utterly incompatible with everything of the nature of compact. Instead of that, the constant practice is to divide large counties and towns, and to consolidate small ones, to meet the wishes of the residents, or to promote the public interests as understood by those who control the action of the legislature. Opposition is sometimes manifested, but it is everywhere acknowledged that the legislature possesses the power to divide counties and towns at their pleasure, and to apportion the common property and the common burdens in such manner as to them may seem reasonable and equitable." Many cases are cited. See also Worcester v. Worcester Consol. Street R. Co. 196 U. S. 539, 49 L. ed. 591, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 327.

Judgment affirmed.

---

*TAMPA WATERWORKS COMPANY, [241]
Plff. in Err.,
v.
CITY OF TAMPA.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 241–247.)

1. Error to state court—questions reviewable — statutory construction. — The decision of a state court construing a state statute so as to remove any question of its repugnancy to the Federal Constitution cannot be reviewed by the Supreme Court of the United States on writ of error to the state court.

2. Constitutional law — self-executing provisions.—A provision of a state Constitution giving the legislature full power to correct abuses, and prevent unjust discrimination and excessive charges, is self-executing to the extent that contracts made after it went into effect are subject to the possibility of the exercise of such power.

3. Error to state court—following state court decisions.—The decision of a state court that a municipality could not, by a contract with a water company, deprive itself of the right to establish reasonable maximum water rates, conformably to a state statute adopted to carry into effect a provision of the state Constitution in force when the contract was made, which invests the legislature with full power to pass laws to correct abuses and prevent excessive charges by "persons and corporations engaged as common carriers in transporting persons and property, or performing other services of a public nature," and declares that the legislature "shall provide for enforcing such laws by adequate penalties or forfeitures," is not so clearly erroneous as to require reversal on a writ of error from the Supreme Court of the United States.

[No. 29.]

Argued and submitted October 27, 1905. Decided November 13, 1905.

IN ERROR to the Supreme Court of the State of Florida to review a decree affirming a decree of the Circuit Court for Hillsborough County, in that state, which dismissed on demurrer a bill to enjoin the enforcement of an ordinance fixing maximum water rates, on the ground that such ordinance impaired the obligation of a contract between the municipality and the water company. Affirmed.

See same case below (Fla.), 36 So. 174, on former appeal, 34 So. 631.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Mr. William A. Carter argued the cause, and, with Messrs. Stephen M. Sparkman, Edward L. Sparkman, and Peter O. Knight, filed a brief for plaintiff in error:

The city of Tampa, at the time said contract was entered into and the amendments thereto made, possessed ample power to contract with the plaintiff in error for a public and private supply of water.

Los Angeles City Water Co. v. Los Angeles, 88 Fed. 720; Santa Ana Water Co. v. San Buenaventura, 56 Fed. 339; Wells v. Atlanta, 43 Ga. 67; Atlantic City Waterworks Co. v. Atlantic City, 48 N. J. L. 378, 6 Atl. 24; Indianapolis v. Indianapolis Gaslight & Coke Co. 66 Ind. 396; 1 Dill. Mun. Corp. §§ 91, 443.

The city of Tampa likewise had the power, in such contract, to fix the rates for a public and private supply of water for said city and its inhabitants during the entire contract period, and so to bind any future council from altering or interfering in any way with the same.

McQuillin, Mun. Ord. § 584; Detroit v. Detroit Citizens' Street R. Co. 184 U. S. 368, 46 L. ed. 592, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 410; New Orleans Gaslight Co. v. Louisiana Light & H. P. & Mfg. Co. 115 U. S. 650, 29 L. ed. 516, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 252; New Orleans Waterworks Co. v. Rivers, 115 U. S. 683, 29 L. ed. 528, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 273; St. Tammany Waterworks Co. v. New Orleans Waterworks Co. 120 U. S. 64, 30 L. ed. 563, 7 Sup. Ct. Rep. 405; Los Angeles City Water Co. v. Los Angeles, 88 Fed. 720, 177 U. S. 558, 44 L. ed. 886, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 736; Walla Walla v. Walla Walla Water Co. 172 U. S. 1, 9, 43 L. ed. 341, 345, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 77; Pingree v. Michigan C. R. Co. 118 Mich. 314, 53 L.R.A. 274, 76 N. W. 635; Atlantic City Waterworks Co. v. Atlantic City, supra; Illinois Trust & Sav. Bank v. Arkansas City, 34 L.R.A. 518, 22 C. C. A. 171, 40 U. S. App. 257, 76 Fed. 271; Greenville v. Greenville Waterworks Co. 125 Ala. 625, 27 So. 764; Vincennes v. Citizens' Gaslight Co. 132 Ind. 114, 16 L.R.A. 485, 31 N. E. 573; Indianapolis v. Indianapolis Gaslight & Coke Co. supra; Newport v. Newport Light Co. 84 Ky. 168; Fergus Falls Water Co. v. Fergus Falls, 65 Fed. 591.

The constitutional provision relied upon by defendant in error conferred no power upon the legislature. This is manifest upon the face of the provision. It is only declaratory of a power that already existed.

State ex rel. Lamar v. Jacksonville Terminal Co. 41 Fla. 377, 27 So. 225.

It is a power inherent in every American state legislature, and does not require to be expressed in order that the legislature may pass laws for the correction of abuses, or to prevent excessive charges by persons or corporations performing services of a public nature where contract rights do not intervene.

NOTE.—On what questions the Federal Supreme Court will consider in reviewing the judgments of state courts—see note to Missouri ex rel. Hill v. Dockery, 63 L.R.A. 571.

On self-executing constitutional provisions—see note to Willis v. St. Paul Sanitation Co. 16 L.R.A. 281.

As to state decisions and laws as rules of decision in Federal courts—see notes to Wilson v. Perrin, 11 C. C. A. 71; Hill v. Hite, 29 C. C. A. 553; and Griffin v. Overman Wheel Co. 9 C. C. A. 548; Elmendorf v. Taylor, 6 L. ed. U. S. 290; Jackson ex dem. St. John v. Chew, 6 L. ed. U. S. 583; United States ex rel. Butz v. Muscatine, 19 L. ed. U. S. 490; Clark v. Graham, 5 L. ed. U. S. 334; and Forepaugh v. Delaware, L. & W. R. Co. 5 L. R.A. 508.

McWhorter v. Pensacola & A. R. Co. 24 Fla. 417, 2 L.R.A. 504, 12 Am. St. Rep. 220, 5 So. 129; Munn v. Illinois, 94 U. S. 113, 24 L. ed. 77; Chicago, B. & Q. R. Co. v. Iowa (Chicago, B. & Q. R. Co. v. Cutts) 94 U. S. 155, 24 L. ed. 94; Cooley, Const. Lim. 7th ed. 870.

The constitutional provision was not self-executing. It was dormant, requiring the action of the legislature to vitalize it, and, until this was done, could not form a part of, or be written by implication into, any contract.

Cooley, Const. Lim. 119–121; 6 Am. & Eng. Enc. Law, 2d ed. p. 919; Sharp v. National Biscuit Co. 179 Mo. 553, 78 S. W. 787.

The right to abolish, to alter and amend, does not give to a municipality the right to interfere with vested rights. These cannot be affected by legislative action, either directly or indirectly.

Beach, Pub. Corp. §§ 110–112.

The ordinance in question impairs the obligation of the contract between the city of Tampa and plaintiff in error, constitutes a taking of its property without due process of law, and denies to it the equal protection of the law.

Scott v. Toledo, 1 L.R.A. 688, 36 Fed. 395; Chicago, B. & Q. R. Co. v. Chicago, 166 U. S. 226, 41 L. ed. 979, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 581; Mt. Hope Cemetery v. Boston, 158 Mass. 509, 35 Am. St. Rep. 515, 33 N. E. 695; Gardner v. Newburgh, 2 Johns. Ch. 162, 7 Am. Dec. 526; Sinnickson v. Johnson, 17 N. J. L. 129, 34 Am. Dec. 184; Harness v. Chesapeake & O. Canal Co. 1 Md. Ch. 249; Henderson v. Central Pass. R. Co. 21 Fed. 358; Baker v. Norwood, 74 Fed. 997; Davidson v. New Orleans, 96 U. S. 102, 24 L. ed. 618; Kentucky Railroad Tax Cases, 115 U. S. 331, 29 L. ed. 416, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 57; New Memphis Gas & Light Co. v. Memphis, 72 Fed. 952; Lake View v. Rose Hill Cemetery Co. 70 Ill. 198, 22 Am. Rep. 71; Board of Education v. Bakewell, 122 Ill. 348, 10 N. E. 378; Rigney v. Chicago, 102 Ill. 77; Chicago & W. I. R. Co. v. Englewood Connecting R. Co. 115 Ill. 385, 56 Am. Rep. 173, 4 N. E. 246.

Messrs. Hugh C. Macfarlane and James F. Glen submitted the cause for defendant in error. Mr. John P. Wall was with them on the brief:

The provision of the Florida Constitution in question is a self-executing limitation upon legislative power.

Davis v. Burke, 179 U. S. 399, 45 L. ed. 249, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 210.

There can be no complaint that the exercise of such reserved power impairs the obligation of a contract, or deprives a party of property without due process of law, subject to the suggested qualification that there might be such an abuse of the power under the guise of its exercise as to call for interference.

Stanislaus County v. San Joaquin & K. River Canal & Irrig. Co. 192 U. S. 201, 48 L. ed. 406, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 241; Knoxville Water Co. v. Knoxville, 189 U. S. 434, 47 L. ed. 887, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 531; Northern C. R. Co. v. Maryland, 187 U. S. 258, 47 L. ed. 167, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 62; Citizens' Sav. Bank v. Owensboro, 173 U. S. 636, 43 L. ed. 840, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 530; Louisville & N. R. Co. v. Kentucky, 183 U. S. 503, 46 L. ed. 298, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 95; Covington v. Kentucky, 173 U. S. 231, 43 L. ed. 679, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 383; Sioux City Street R. Co. v. Sioux City, 138 U. S. 98, 34 L. ed. 898, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 226; United States v. Union P. R. Co. 160 U. S. 1, 40 L. ed. 319, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 190; Louisville Water Co. v. Clark, 143 U. S. 1, 36 L. ed. 55, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 346; Gibbs v. Consolidated Gas Co. 130 U. S. 396, 32 L. ed. 979, 9 Sup. Ct. Rep. 553; Spring Valley Waterworks v. Schottler, 110 U. S. 347, 28 L. ed. 173, 4 Sup. Ct. Rep. 48; Greenwood v. Union Freight R. Co. 105 U. S. 13, 26 L. ed. 961; Pennsylvania College Cases (Jefferson College v. Washington & J. College) 13 Wall. 190, 20 L. ed. 550.

A Constitution is not a grant of power, but a limitation, and, in the nature of things, every such limitation, as a limitation, is self-executing or inherently effective. The provisions of a state Constitution are designed, in and of themselves, to be restrictions in so far as they either expressly or by implication prohibit legislation in derogation thereof. Legislation may be necessary, as it often is, to carry into effect the mandate of a constitutional provision, but none the less is the constitutional provision a presently operative limitation upon legislative power.

Cooley, Const. Lim. 7th ed. p. 120, note 5; pp. 127 et seq.

Mr. Justice Holmes delivered the opinion of the court:

This case comes here by writ of error to a decree dismissing the bill of the plaintiff in error upon demurrer. 45 Fla. 600, 34 So. 631, 36 So. 174. The bill alleges a contract between the plaintiff water company and the city of Tampa, by which the former was to erect waterworks and to *have the [242] right to charge certain rates for the use of its water for thirty years, with various other terms, not necessary to mention. By a subsequent ordinance the city fixed lower rates as the highest to be charged by any person or corporation furnishing water to the city or its inhabitants, and imposed a penalty on violation of this ordinance or refusal to furnish water in compliance with its terms. The bill sets up that this ordinance impairs the obligation of the plaintiff's contract, and takes its property without due process of law, contrary to the Constitution of the United States. The city justified under § 30, article 16, of the state Constitution in force when the contract was made, and under an act approved May 31, 1901, chap. 5070, after the date of the contract. The supreme court of the state held the justification sufficient, and dismissed the bill.

We assume for the purpose of decision that the contract made was within the powers of the city, subject to whatever qualification or inherent weakness the Constitution created or imposed. We assume also that the case shows more than a mere breach of contract by the city if its justification fails, and pass at once to the merits of the justification.

The clause of the state Constitution is as follows: "The legislature is invested with full power to pass laws for the correction of abuses and to prevent unjust discrimination and excessive charges by persons and corporations engaged as common carriers in transporting persons and property, or performing other services of a public nature, and shall provide for enforcing such laws by adequate penalties or forfeitures."

In pursuance of this clause in the Constitution the legislature passed the act referred to above. By this act the corporate authorities of cities, towns, and villages were empowered to prescribe by ordinance maximum charges for water. "Such charges to be just and reasonable: Provided, that this act shall not be so construed as to impair the validity of any valid contract heretofore entered into between any city, town, or village and any person, firm, or corporation for [243] the supply of water to *such city, town, or village or its inhabitants. But this act shall not be held to validate any contract heretofore made." This act was construed by the supreme court of Florida, as we understand it, to mean that cities might establish reasonable maxima in any case where they could do so without impairing the obligation of contracts. Therefore the act was held to authorize the ordinance complained of unless the ordinance was open to constitutional objection. This construction of the statute is a very slight extension of the direct meaning of the words used, and seems to us reasonable even if a somewhat different one could be conceived. Of course it removes any question of constitutionality from the statute, and therefore there seems to be no ground for reviewing the decision upon that point. Central Land Co. v. Laidley, 159 U. S. 103, 40 L. ed. 91, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 80; Weber v. Rogan, 188 U. S. 10, 47 L. ed. 363, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 263.

We turn to the construction of the Constitution of the state. There was some argument that the clause was not self-executing. But so far as it expressed a power of the legislature, of course, as soon as the Constitution went into effect, that power existed at once, and contracts afterwards were made subject to the possibility of its exercise, as it was exercised by the subsequent statute. Spring Valley Waterworks v. Schottler, 110 U. S. 347, 355, 28 L. ed. 173, 176, 4 Sup. Ct. Rep. 48; Bienville Water Supply Co. v. Mobile, 186 U. S. 212, 46 L. ed. 1132, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 820. The only question then is, how far the clause of the Constitution goes. When the contract was made there had been no judicial construction of the clause which withdrew the contract from its operation, nor has there been since, so far as we are aware. There is no ground for the application of the doctrine of Muhlker v. New York & H. R. Co. 197 U. S. 544, 49 L. ed. 872, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 522, or Gelpcke v. Dubuque, 1 Wall. 175, 17 L. ed. 520. In such circumstances, although we construe the Constitution for ourselves, and determine the existence or nonexistence of the contract set up, and whether its obligation has been impaired by the state enactment (Douglas v. Kentucky, 168 U. S. 488, 502, 42 L. ed. 553, 557, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 199), "the Federal courts will lean towards an agreement of views with the state courts if the question seems to them balanced *with [244] doubt,"—a principle reinforced by the later cases. Burgess v. Seligman, 107 U. S. 20, 34, 27 L. ed. 359, 365, 2 Sup. Ct. Rep. 10; Wilson v. Standefer, 184 U. S. 399, 412, 46 L. ed. 612, 618, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 384; Bienville Water Supply Co. v. Mobile, 186 U. S. 212, 220, 46 L. ed. 1132, 1135, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 820; Chicago Theological Seminary v. Illinois, 188 U. S. 662, 674, 675, 677, 47 L. ed. 641, 649, 650, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 386.

It cannot be said that the interpretation adopted is not a possible one. Water companies are corporations performing services of a public nature quite as much as common carriers, and, therefore, are within the words of the clause which is not confined to common carriers. A natural method of preventing excessive charges is the passage by the cities or towns within which the services are performed, of ordinances establishing reasonable rates and punishing noncompliance. Therefore the power to prevent excessive charges, given to the legislature, properly was exercised by a law granting cities authority to pass ordinances of the kind supposed.

So much probably would be admitted; but it is said that the clause is merely declaratory of powers which the legislature would have had without it, and which, with or without it, the legislature could cut down by contract. The argument is not without force, but it did not prevail in this case, and we are not prepared to overrule the Florida courts in their interpretation of their own laws. It is entirely possible to read the words as conferring a power which, by their very form, they were meant to make inalienable. No doubt some sort of a legislature would exist, Constitution or no Constitution; and presumably would have power to regulate rates charged by companies performing public services, or to restrict that power by a constitutionally binding contract. But the actual legislature derives its being, its form as a senate and house of representatives, and its powers, from the instrument in force. When the Constitution says that the legislature "is invested" with a certain power, it invests it with that power; and does so none the less that, in the absence of those words, a more or less similar power would be implied by more general expressions in the same instrument. It says that the power shall be [245]"full *power;" and the adjective may be read as meaning a power which cannot be cut down. When it goes on to require that the legislature "shall" provide for enforcing the laws which it is expected to pass for the correction of abuses and the prevention of excessive charges, the argument is strengthened that it means to impose a duty which the legislature is not at liberty to give up. Such was the opinion of the supreme court of Florida, and we have yielded to the judgment of the state court upon more doubtful questions than this.

The case stands on the single ground of contract. There is no allegation that the rates fixed by the new ordinances are unreasonable, or that their effect will be to destroy or considerably impair the value of the plaintiff's property. Although the 14th Amendment is invoked, no case is made out under it on any other ground than that the obligation of a binding contract is impaired. The single question is whether the city of Tampa is bound for thirty years from the date of its agreement to permit certain specified rates to be charged, even if they have ceased to be reasonable. We are not prepared to say that the supreme court of Florida was wrong in deciding that it is not bound, under the Florida Constitution and laws. The effect of a former decree dismissing a bill brought by the city, which is set up in this bill, cannot be reargued here.

Decree affirmed.

Mr. Justice Brown, with whom was Mr. Justice Peckham, dissenting:

In September, 1887, the waterworks company made a contract with the city for the establishment of waterworks, in which it was agreed that the contract should continue in force for thirty years from the time the works were completed and ready for duty, and that the owners might charge and collect quarterly, in advance, for water furnished to private consumers, prices not to exceed certain maximum rates fixed by the contract.

*At this time there was in force the fol- [246] lowing constitutional provision in Florida:

"The legislature is invested with full power to pass laws for the correction of abuses and to prevent unjust discrimination and excessive charges by persons and corporations engaged as common carriers in transporting persons and property, or performing other services of a public nature, and shall provide for enforcing such laws by adequate penalties or forfeitures."

By an act of the legislature passed May 31, 1901 (chap. 5070), the corporate authorities of any city were empowered to prescribe by ordinance maximum rates and charges for the supply of water, such charges to be just and reasonable; provided, "that this act shall not be so construed as to impair the validity of any valid contract heretofore entered into . . . for the supply of water to such city," "but this act shall not be held to validate any contract heretofore made."

On December 20, 1901, the city council of Tampa passed the ordinance complained of (No. 274), which provided that "it shall be unlawful for any individual, company, or corporation furnishing water to the city of Tampa or its inhabitants, to charge any higher rates for water than those hereinafter specified." The ordinance made a large deduction in the rates fixed by the original ordinance or contract, and thereby, as it is alleged, impaired its obligation.

The constitutional provision was evidently not self-executing, though it vested full power in the legislature to prevent excessive charges for the performance of public services. The legislature did not see fit to exercise this power to its full extent. But in authorizing corporate authorities in any city, etc., to fix rates, provided that the act should not be so construed as to impair the validity of any valid contract. This it had the right to do. It was not bound to exercise the whole power vested in it by the Constitution, but might grant so much of such power to the corporate authorities as it deemed best for the public interests. This we have repeatedly held with respect to parceling out the power vested in Congress by [247] the Constitution. *M'Intire v. Wood, 7 Cranch, 504, 3 L. ed. 420; Kendall v. United States, 12 Pet. 524–616, 9 L. ed. 1181–1217; Cary v. Curtis, 3 How. 236–245, 11 L. ed. 576–581.

It follows that if the ordinance of 1901 impaired the original contract between the waterworks and the city, it exceeded its powers under the act of the legislature.

In its opinion the supreme court of Florida assumed, without deciding, that "the powers granted to the city were sufficient to authorize it to contract with the water company for a public and private supply of water," and were also sufficient to enable the city to insert clauses fixing the rates and obligating the city to pay these rates for water used by it during the entire contract period, and that the same powers existed of fixing the rates for water supply to individuals.

Now, as the Constitution only delegated to the legislature the power to authorize the corporate authorities to reduce rates, and the legislature delegated that power only in cases where it did not impair the validity of any contract, it seems to me clear that the city council of Tampa exceeded its authority in reducing rates protected by a contract, and must be held to have impaired its obligation.

CHESAPEAKE BEACH RAILWAY COMPANY, Plff. in Err.,

v.

WASHINGTON, POTOMAC, & CHESAPEAKE RAILROAD COMPANY.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 247–252.)

1. Deeds—certainty in description.—The vagueness of the descriptive language in a deed when considered alone is not material if, when taken in connection with the plats to which it refers, it is sufficiently certain to identify the land.

2. Evidence—presumption of continued possession.—Possession of a railway roadbed will be presumed, in ejectment, to have followed the title until the dispossession by defendant took place, where the railway tracks were on the land, and the plaintiff railway company claimed under a series of deeds purporting to convey the property.

3. Trusts—deed from trustee—effect of recital of foreclosure decree on title conveyed.—The deed from a trustee in a mortgage conveys whatever title he had, although it recites a decree of foreclosure; since it will not be assumed from this recital that the trustee acted only by virtue of the power which the decree conferred.

4. Railroads—conveyance of roadbed—effect of grantee's lack of legislative authority to extend its line over the roadbed.—The lack of any congressional authority in the successive grantees of a railway roadbed lying in the District of Columbia to extend their lines into that District could not affect their title if the original grantor had such authority.

5. Deeds—necessity of seisin.—A conveyance by a disseisee is valid in the District of Columbia.

[No. 35.]

Argued October 31, November 1, 1905. Decided November 13, 1905.

IN ERROR to the Court of Appeals of the District of Columbia to review a judgment which affirmed a judgment of the Supreme Court of that District in favor of plaintiff in an action of ejectment to recover a railway roadbed. Affirmed.

See same case below, 23 App. D. C. 587.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Mr. Frederic D. McKenney argued the cause, and, with Mr. John Spalding Flannery, filed a brief for plaintiff in error:

The making of a crop is not sufficient basis upon which to predicate a claim of possession (Conn v. Franklin [Tex.] 19 S. W. 126), nor is the causing of surveying to be done (Thompson v. Burhans, 61 N. Y. 52; Greenleaf v. Brooklyn, F. & C. I. R. Co. 141 N. Y. 395, 36 N. E. 393).

In the absence of proof of actual ouster of the plaintiff or its grantors by the defendant, it was incumbent upon the plaintiff to show continuous possession on its part, and that of its grantors, to date of supposed ouster, or, at least, that the supposed possession of the Southern Maryland Railroad Company has never been abandoned.

Sabariego v. Maverick, 124 U. S. 297, 31 L. ed. 445, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 461; Bradshaw v. Ashley, 180 U. S. 59, 64, 45 L. ed. 423, 429, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 297.

The defendant below was not a party to the Central Trust Company suit, and consequently cannot be bound by the recitals of the decree or the deed made pursuant to it.

Carver v. Jackson, 4 Pet. 82, 7 L. ed. 790; Martindale, Conveyancing, §§ 73, 515.

The limitation of the grantor's powers, as well as the scope of its intention, is clearly defined by the recitals of the trust deed; and with no less certainty is the capacity in which the grantor was acting declared there-

NOTE.—As to certainty in description in deed—see note to O'Hara v. United States, 10 L. ed. U. S. 737.

As to the effect of reference in a deed to a recorded map or plat—see notes to Kenyon v. Knipe, 13 L.R.A. 142; and M'Iver v. Walker, 3 L. ed. U. S. 696.

in; and yet, because the grantee named in the deed caused it to be recorded in the District of Columbia, this court is asked to hold that the grantee thereby became entitled to take and hold the lands, although they were not comprehended by the decree under which the grantor acted, nor intended to be conveyed thereby; the title to the lands in the District being vested in the grantor in a capacity different from that in which it purported to be acting when conveying the Maryland lands.

Titcomb v. Currier, 4 Cush. 591; Devlin, Deeds, § 455; Hitz v. Jenks, 185 U. S. 155, 46 L. ed. 851, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 598; Batchelor v. Brereton, 112 U. S. 396, 404, 28 L. ed. 748, 750, 5 Sup. Ct. Rep. 150; Agricultural Bank v. Rice, 4 How. 225, 11 L. ed. 949.

It is well settled that the defendant in an action of ejectment may avail himself of a weakness in the plaintiff's title without asserting his own (Simmons v. Wagner, 101 U. S. 260, 262, 25 L. ed. 910, 911) and that the defendant may defeat the plaintiff's right to recover in ejectment by showing an outstanding legal title in other parties (Hanrick v. Patrick, 119 U. S. 156, 30 L. ed. 396, 7 Sup. Ct. Rep. 147). A fortiori, he may defeat the plaintiff by an admission made in his or its pleadings showing the existence of an adverse outstanding title in another.

It is the law of Maryland, in force in the District of Columbia, that, in order to maintain an action of ejectment where the plaintiff relies upon title, he must show that he has both the right of possession and the legal title to the land in dispute; and, to establish the latter, he must trace his title back to the state, or to the United States, or some other primary source, unless both parties are claiming title from a common source.

Mitchell v. Mitchell, 1 Md. 44; Anderson v. Smith, 2 Mackey, 275; Peck v. Heurich, 6 App. D. C. 283.

In the absence of title in either party, if the plaintiff rests his right to prevail upon prior possession he must show either an actual ouster by defendant on the day named, or that the asserted prior possession had been continuous, and had not been abandoned.

Bradshaw v. Ashley, 180 U. S. 59, 45 L. ed. 423, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 297.

And in such case the possession relied upon must be clearly and unequivocally made out.

Lea v. Hernandez, 10 Tex. 137.

And it must appear to have been substantial, and not casual or sporadic.

Sabariego v. Maverick, 124 U. S. 261, 31 L. ed. 430, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 461.

Defendant's possession, both at the origin of plaintiff and at the institution of the suit, having been established by plaintiff's witnesses, it was entitled to rely upon the presumption that, until proved otherwise, its possession was lawful and was accompanied by title. To overcome this presumption, it was necessary for plaintiff, not only to show plainly and distinctly the prior possession by the Southern Maryland Railroad Company, but also that such possession had been continuous, and had not been abandoned prior to the alleged ouster and entry into possession on the part of defendant.

Ibid.; Akin v. Byrd, 153 Pa. 23, 25 Atl. 866; Wilson v. Palmer, 18 Tex. 592.

A plaintiff claiming under a judgment grantee must be able to show prior possession in himself to recover from a defendant in actual possession (Greenleaf v. Brooklyn, F. & C. I. R. Co. 141 N. Y. 395, 36 N. E. 393); and this rule would seem to be also applicable to the case of a vendee at foreclosure sale.

Messrs. Samuel A. Putnam and Charles Poe argued the cause and filed a brief for defendant in error:

The court, in determining its jurisdiction, looks not at the remote, ulterior, or contingent effect of its judgment, but considers whether it has the right to entertain jurisdiction and render any judgment at all.

Grant ex dem. Meredith v. McKee, 1 Pet. 248, 7 L. ed. 131; Farmers' Bank v. Hooff, 7 Pet. 168, 8 L. ed. 646; Ross v. Prentiss, 3 How. 771, 11 L. ed. 824; Troy v. Evans, 97 U. S. 1, 24 L. ed. 941; Elgin v. Marshall, 106 U. S. 578, 27 L. ed. 249, 1 Sup. Ct. Rep. 484; New Jersey Zinc Co. v. Trotter, 108 U. S. 564, 27 L. ed. 828, 2 Sup. Ct. Rep. 875; Opelika City v. Daniel, 109 U. S. 108, 27 L. ed. 873, 3 Sup. Ct. Rep. 70; Bruce v. Manchester & K. R. Co. 117 U. S. 514, 29 L. ed. 990, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 849; Gibson v. Shufeldt, 122 U. S. 27, 30 L. ed. 1083, 7 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1066; New England Mortg. Secur. Co. v. Gay, 145 U. S. 123, 36 L. ed. 646, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 815; Hollander v. Fechheimer, 162 U. S. 326, 40 L. ed. 985, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 795; Willis v. Eastern Trust & Bkg. Co. 167 U. S. 76, 42 L. ed. 83, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 739.

Where the value of the property in dispute is an issuable fact, this court will not sit to weigh the value of the opinions of experts shown by ex parte affidavits and counter affidavits, but will dismiss the writ of error, unless, upon the face of the record, it appears that the amount in dispute is large enough to confer jurisdiction.

Red River Cattle Co. v. Needham, 137 U. S. 632, 34 L. ed. 799, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 208.

As against a trespasser and intruder, it is not necessary for a plaintiff in ejectment to go to the trouble and expense of tracing its title back to a patent.

Bradshaw v. Ashley, 14 App. D. C. 485, 180 U. S. 59, 45 L. ed. 423, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 297.

Even if the locus in quo, as set forth in the declaration, were not identical with that shown by the proof, the defense should have been interposed by the disclaimer, and cannot be taken under the general issue plea of not guilty.

Crandall v. Lynch, 20 App. D. C. 73; Greer v. Mezes, 24 How. 268, 277, 16 L. ed. 661, 664.

The legal title to the property, and not a mere power of sale, was vested in the Union Trust Company of Philadelphia, trustee.

Williams v. Jackson, 107 U. S. 478, 27 L. ed. 529, 2 Sup. Ct. Rep. 814.

An irregular judicial sale made at the suit of a mortgagee, even though no bar to the equity of redemption, passes to the purchaser at such sale all the rights of the mortgagee as such.

Brobst v. Brock (Doe ex dem. Brobst v. Brock) 10 Wall. 519, 19 L. ed. 1002; Bryan v. Brasius, 162 U. S. 415, 40 L. ed. 1022, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 803; Jones v. Mack, 53 Mo. 147; Brown v. Smith, 116 Mass. 108.

Mr. Justice Holmes delivered the opinion of the court:

This is an action of ejectment in which the defendant in error, the original plaintiff, recovered judgment for the land in suit in the supreme court of the District. The judgment was affirmed by the court of appeals (23 App. D. C. 587), and the case was brought here.

There was a motion to dismiss upon the ground that it affirmatively appears from the record that the matter in dispute, exclusive of costs, does not exceed the sum of $5,000. But the reasonable inference from the record is the other way (Harris v. Barber, 129 U. S. 366, 32 L. ed. 697, 9 Sup. Ct. Rep. 314), and affidavits are submitted which sustain the inference which we should draw (Red River Cattle Co. v. Needham, 137 U. S. 632, 34 L. ed. 799, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 208).

At the trial the defendant presented no evidence, but asked the judge to direct a verdict in his favor, relying on somewhat technical criticisms of the plaintiff's case, and saving its rights by exceptions. We shall state such facts as are material.

The declaration contains nine counts, for nine parcels of land, which the plaintiff (de-[249] fendant in error) contends were *formerly part of the roadbed of the Southern Maryland Railroad Company, and now are part of its own. The plaintiff sought to prove its title by putting in deeds of each of these parcels made to the last-named company in 1884, and evidence of possession on the part of the same, together with subsequent deeds finally conveying the land to the plaintiff. Of course this would be sufficient if made out. It is argued that the description in the first deeds is too vague to identify the land, and the argument is fortified by the testimony of a surveyor that "the deed is not definite enough to place it on the ground." But the deed was accompanied by plats to which they referred, and the same surveyor testified that "the plats are as near identical [with the witness's survey of the locus] as it is possible to make them," and more to the same effect. It is evident that the former words refer to the descriptive language of the deeds alone; and that when the descriptions are taken, as they should be, in connection with the plats, there is no difficulty with the deeds.

Next it is said that there was no evidence of possession on the part of the Southern Maryland Railroad. But the same surveyor testified that he knew the old Southern Maryland Railroad tracks out there, and had known them for thirteen years; and another surveyor testified that he was employed by that company in laying out its roadbed in 1886, that he remembered the line of this right of way, that the right of way of the Southern Maryland was 66 feet wide, and that the Chesapeake Beach Railway uses the right of way of the old Southern Maryland Railroad clear to the District of Columbia line. Without going into further detail or answering every minute criticism, we are of opinion that the judge was right in leaving the question to the jury, and that the jury were warranted in finding as they did. It is said that it must appear that the possession, if any, of the Maryland company, was not abandoned. Sabariego v. Maverick, 124 U. S. 261, 31 L. ed. 430, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 461. But in a case like the present, at least, where the tracks of the railroad were on the land, and when the plaintiff exhibits a *series of deeds pur-[250] porting to convey the property, the last one to itself, it is to be presumed that possession followed the title until the dispossession by the defendant took place. Lazarus v. Phelps, 156 U. S. 202, 204, 205, 39 L. ed. 397, 398, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 271. See Bradshaw v. Ashley, 180 U. S. 59, 62, 66, 45 L. ed. 423, 428, 430, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 297. The defendant did not hold for such a length of time, free from dispute, that abandonment to it by the plaintiff could be inferred. The suit was begun on January 13, 1902, and the possession of the defendant is not carried back beyond 1898, if so far.

The subsequent steps in the plaintiff's title are as follows: A decree of the supreme court of the District of Columbia, foreclosing a mortgage recited to have been made by the Southern Maryland Railroad, and to cover all its property then or thereafter acquired; a sale and conveyance in pursuance of the decree to one Gregory by a trustee appointed by the court; a certificate of the incorporation of the Washington & Potomac Railroad Company, reciting the foreclosure and sale of all the property of the Southern Maryland Railroad, and incorporating Gregory and others to take over the railroad; a conveyance of the property by Gregory to the new company, and a mortgage by it of the same property to the Union Trust Company of Philadelphia, both dated April 1, 1886, the date of its incorporation; a certificate of the incorporation of the plaintiff on July 24, 1901, reciting a decree of the United States circuit court for the district of Maryland, which foreclosed the last-named mortgage; reciting also a sale in pursuance of the decree, and incorporating the purchaser and others to take over the railroad; and, finally, a deed to the plaintiff, by the Union Trust Company, the trustee of the mortgage last mentioned.

The main objection urged to the title is that, as the record of the last foreclosure proceedings was not put in, it does not appear that the court attempted to foreclose property in the District of Columbia, and that as the decree is recited, it must be taken that the trustee was acting only by virtue of the power which the decree conferred. [251] But the trustee had the *legal title, and purported to convey all the property which it held. The source of its title was a conveyance to it by the owner. The decree of the court only determined a foreclosure and established the right of the trustee to convey without a breach of trust. Even if it is not to be inferred that the decree was as broad as it is recited to have been (see Muller v. Dows, 94 U. S. 444, 24 L. ed. 207), the deed of the Union Trust Company conveyed whatever title it had (Williams v. Jackson, 107 U. S. 478, 27 L. ed. 529, 2 Sup. Ct. Rep. 814). The suggestion that the instrument must be read as limiting itself by pure implication to rights conferred by the decree, and as excluding the only source of the grantor's title, does not merit extended discussion, but it may be mentioned that there is a covenant for future assurances, in general terms, not limited to any particular source. It is observed in one of the cases cited for the defendant that "the recital in the deed cannot enlarge or control the words of the grant." Titcomb v. Currier, 4 Cush. 591, 592. Still less can such a recital as this be taken to eliminate the only title which the grantor held. See further Brobst v. Brock (Doe ex dem. Brobst v. Brock) 10 Wall. 519, 19 L. ed. 1002; Bryan v. Brasius, 162 U. S. 415, 40 L. ed. 1022, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 803.

Other purely technical attempts to upset the verdict, so far as they need remark, may be disposed of in a few words. For some unexplained reason the plaintiff, in four of its counts, after describing the land, and identifying it by the above-mentioned conveyance to the Southern Maryland Railroad, identified it further as conveyed by the commissioners of the district on a certain date,—we presume on a tax sale. It was objected that the latter allegation disclosed a title outstanding in third persons. No evidence was gone into upon the subject. Of course the meaning of the count was not to allege or admit such an outstanding title in someone else when the main allegation was that the plaintiff "was lawfully seised" at the date of the defendant's entry. We shall not spend argument upon that.

The Southern Maryland road was authorized to extend into the District of Columbia by act of Congress. Whether the *later [252] roads had authority or not would not affect the title to the land.

The land seems to have been conveyed to the defendant in error after the plaintiff in error had taken possession; but that is immaterial. In the District of Columbia a conveyance by a disseisee is valid. Matthews v. Hevner, 2 App. D. C. 349, 357; Roberts v. Cooper, 20 How. 467, 483, 15 L. ed. 969, 974; Peck v. Heurich, 167 U. S. 624, 629, 630, 42 L. ed. 302, 304, 305, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 927. A question is raised as to improvements; but it was not raised below, and is not open here.

Judgment affirmed.

FRANCIS B. SWEENEY and Halbert J. Porterfield, Partners as Sweeney & Porterfield, Plffs. in Err.,

v.

CARTER OIL COMPANY.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 252–259.)

Courts—diverse citizenship as ground

NOTE.—As to diverse citizenship as ground of Federal jurisdiction—see Shipp v. Williams, 10 C. C. A. 247, and note; Mason v. Dullagham, 27 C. C. A. 296, and note; Seddon v. Virginia, T. & C. Steel & I. Co. 1 L.R.A. 108, and note; and Myers v. Murray, N. & Co. 11 L.R.A. 216, and note. And see note to Roberts v. Lewis, 36 L. ed. U. S. 579; Emory v. Greenough, 1 L. ed. U. S. 640; Strawbridge v. Curtiss, 2 L. ed. U. S. 435; and M'Donald v. Smalley, 7 L. ed. U. S. 287.

for Federal jurisdiction.—Two citizens of different states may maintain an action against a citizen of a third state in the Federal circuit court for the district of the latter's residence under the act of March 3, 1887 (24 Stat. at L. 552, chap. 373), as corrected by the act of August 13, 1888 (25 Stat. at L. 433, chap. 866, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 508), conferring original jurisdiction on the circuit courts of suits in which there is a controversy between citizens of different states, to be brought in the district of the residence of either the plaintiff or the defendant.

[No. 32.]

Submitted October 30, 1905. Decided November 27, 1905.

IN ERROR to the Circuit Court of the United States for the Northern District of West Virginia to review a judgment dismissing, for want of jurisdiction, an action brought in that court against a citizen of that state, and domiciled in that district, by a citizen of the state of New York and a citizen of the state of Pennsylvania. Reversed and remanded for further proceedings.

Statement by Mr. Chief Justice Fuller:

This was an action of assumpsit brought in the circuit court of the United States for the northern district of West Virginia by, as described in the summons, "Francis B. Sweeney, a resident in and citizen of the state of New York, and Halbert J. Porterfield, a resident in and citizen of the state of Pennsylvania, partners, doing business under the firm name and style of Sweeney & Porterfield," against "Carter Oil Company, a corporation created, organized, and existing under and by virtue of the laws of West Virginia, and as such a citizen thereof," to recover damages in the sum of $20,000.

The declaration, filed May 4, 1903, fol-
[253] lowed the summons *as to the citizenship of the parties, and contained ten special counts, most of them laying the damages at $20,000, and the common counts. An account stated was annexed, giving items, running from 1900 to 1901, aggregating $20,912.42.

The record discloses that on February 3, 1904, the court entered an order overruling a motion "to dismiss this action for the want of jurisdiction, apparent upon the face of the proceedings in this, that the plaintiffs are residents of different states, seeking to sue a defendant of another state." On February 15, 1904, the court set aside that order, sustained the motion to dismiss, and entered judgment for defendant. May 10, 1904, the judge holding the circuit court filed a certificate "that the judgment of dismissal made in this cause on February 15, 1904, at the present term of this court, is based solely on the ground that the record does not show that the controversy is one, in my opinion, between citizens of different states, but that it appears from the record that one of the plaintiffs, to wit, Francis B. Sweeney, is a resident in and citizen of the state of New York, and that Halbert J. Porterfield is a resident in and citizen of the state of Pennsylvania, while the defendant is a corporation created and existing under and by virtue of the laws of the state of West Virginia, and domiciled in the northern district of West Virginia, and no other ground of jurisdiction appears from the record; and the case is dismissed only for the reason above stated; that is, that the controversy is not between citizens of different states, as is required by the Federal statutes to confer jurisdiction on this court, but one of the plaintiffs being a citizen of one state, to wit, the state of New York, and the other plaintiff being a citizen of the state of Pennsylvania, cannot, in my judgment, be joined as plaintiffs and sue in this court a defendant residing in the northern district of West Virginia, and consequently the proper citizenship of different states does not exist, and that the circuit court of the United States for the northern district of West Virginia has no jurisdiction." This writ of error was granted the same day.

Mr. V. B. Archer submitted the cause for plaintiffs in error. Mr. W. S. Chesley was with him on the brief.

Mr. George L. Roberts submitted the cause for defendant in error. Messrs. Reese Blizzard and Charles Gibbs Carter were with him on the brief.

Mr. Chief Justice Fuller delivered the opinion of the court:

The circuit court dismissed the case for want of jurisdiction in that the controversy was not between citizens of different states, within the meaning of the statute, because plaintiffs were citizens of different states as between themselves, and could not be joined in an action against a citizen of West *Vir-[255] ginia. That was the sole point determined below, and the correctness of the conclusion is the sole question for determination here.

Defendant does indeed argue that the judgment should be affirmed because the declaration, though stating a sum of money to be due plaintiffs in excess of $2,000, did not aver that this was "exclusive of interest and costs;" and did not aver that defendant was "a resident or inhabitant of the northern district of West Virginia," nor was that fact "apparent from the record;" and because the citizenship of plaintiffs and defendant was not averred with sufficient directness. None of these points was raised below, and, as the record stands, they call for no consideration.

The judicial power under the Constitution extends to "controversies between citizens of different states."

The 1st section of the act of March 3, 1887 [24 Stat. at L. 552, chap. 373], as corrected by that of August 13, 1888 (25 Stat. at L. 433, chap. 866, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 508), provides "that the circuit courts of the United States shall have original cognizance, concurrent with the courts of the several states, of all suits of a civil nature, at common law or in equity, where the matter in dispute exceeds, exclusive of interest and costs, the sum or value of two thousand dollars, . . . or in which there shall be a controversy between citizens of different states, in which the matter in dispute exceeds, exclusive of interest and costs, the sum or value aforesaid, . . . and no civil suit shall be brought before either of said courts against any person by any original process or proceeding in any other district than that whereof he is an inhabitant, but where the jurisdiction is founded only on the fact that the action is between citizens of different states, suit shall be brought only in the district of the residence of either the plaintiff or the defendant."

The controversy here was "between citizens of different states;" the jurisdiction of the circuit court was founded on diversity of citizenship; and the suit was brought in the district of the residence of the defendant.

[256] *We do not feel warranted in construing the words "controversy between citizens of different states" to mean "controversy between citizens of the same state and citizens of another state," and unless that is done this judgment must be reversed.

In our opinion, defendant, being a citizen of West Virginia, and a resident of the district in which it was sued, and plaintiffs being citizens of other states than West Virginia, the circuit court had jurisdiction.

The general subject was considered in Smith v. Lyon, 133 U. S. 315, 33 L. ed. 635, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 303, the opinion of the court being delivered by Mr. Justice Miller. In that opinion it is pointed out that the first clause of the act of 1887 describes the jurisdiction common to all the circuit courts of the United States as regards the subject-matter of the suit, and as regards the character of the parties who, by reason of such character, may, either as plaintiffs or defendants, sustain suits in circuit courts; while the next sentence in the same section undertakes to define the jurisdiction of each one of the several circuit courts of the United States with reference to its territorial limits; and, after quoting the latter clause in full, Mr. Justice Miller said:

"In the case before us, one of the plaintiffs is a citizen of the state where the suit is brought, namely, the state of Missouri, and the defendant is a citizen of the state of Texas. But one of the plaintiffs is a citizen of the state of Arkansas. The suit, so far as he is concerned, is not brought in the state of which he is a citizen. Neither as plaintiff nor as defendant is he a citizen of the district where the suit is brought. The argument in support of the error assigned is that it is sufficient if the suit is brought in a state where one of the defendants or one of the plaintiffs is a citizen. This would be true if there were but one plaintiff or one defendant. But the statute makes no provision, in terms, for the case of two defendants or two plaintiffs who are citizens of different states. In the present case, there being two plaintiffs, citizens of different states, there does not seem to be, in the language of the statute, *any provision that [257] both plaintiffs may unite in one suit in a state of which either of them is a citizen."

Referring to the language of §11 of the judiciary act of 1789 [1 Stat. at L. 78, chap. 20], giving jurisdiction to the circuit courts, where "the suit is between a citizen of the state where the suit is brought and a citizen of another state," the following from the opinion of Chief Justice Marshall in Strawbridge v. Curtiss, 3 Cranch, 267, 2 L. ed. 435, was quoted: "The court understands these expressions to mean that each distinct interest should be represented by persons, all of whom are entitled to sue, or may be sued, in the Federal courts. That is, that where the interest is joint, each of the persons concerned in that interest must be competent to sue, or liable to be sued, in those courts;" which construction, it was said, has been adhered to from that day to this, notwithstanding the statute has been re-enacted and recast several times since that decision. New Orleans v. Winter, 1 Wheat. 91, 4 L. ed. 44; Susquehanna & W. Valley R. & Coal Co. v. Blatchford, 11 Wall. 172, 20 L. ed. 179; Sewing Mach. Cos.' Case (Grover & B. Sewing-Mach. Co. v. Florence Sewing-Mach. Co.) 18 Wall. 553, 21 L. ed. 914; and Peninsular Iron Co. v. Stone, 121 U. S. 631, 30 L. ed. 1020, 7 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1010,—were cited in reiteration of the rule that "if there are several coplaintiffs, the intention of the act is that each plaintiff must be competent to sue; and if there are several codefendants, each defendant must be liable to be sued, or the jurisdiction cannot be entertained." And the rule was held applicable under the act of 1887, especially in view of the fact that that act was mainly designed to restrict the jurisdiction of the circuit courts.

But if these citizens of Missouri and Arkansas had sued the defendant, a citizen of Texas, in the circuit court of the United States for the district of his residence in Texas, we perceive no reason why that court would not have had jurisdiction.

And this would be so if that defendant had sued those plaintiffs in his district in Texas, if he there obtained service of process upon them.

In McCormick Harvesting Mach. Co. v. Walthers, 134 U. S. 41, 44, 33 L. ed. 833, 834, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 485, 486, we said:
[258] "The judiciary act of 1789 provided 'that no civil suit should be brought before the circuit or district courts against an inhabitant of the United States by any original process in any other district than that whereof he was an inhabitant or in which he should be found at the time of serving the writ,—1 Stat. at L. 79, chap. 20, § 12,—and the act of 1875 (18 Stat. at L. 470, chap. 137, § 1, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 508) contained a similar provision. This liability of the defendant to be sued in a district where he might be found at the time of serving process was omitted in the act of 1887, but he still remained liable to suit in the district of the residence of the plaintiff as well as in his own district; and as he could not be sued anywhere else, we held in Smith v. Lyon, 133 U. S. 315, 33 L. ed. 635, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 303, that where there were two plaintiffs, citizens of different states, the defendant, being a citizen of another state, could not be sued in the state of either of the plaintiffs. Mr. Justice Miller points out, in delivering the opinion of the court, that the evident purpose of Congress in the act of 1887 was to restrict rather than enlarge the jurisdiction of the circuit court, 'while,' he says, 'at the same time, a suit is permitted to be brought in any district where either plaintiff or defendant resides.'" In that case plaintiff was a citizen of Nebraska and brought suit in the circuit court of the district of Nebraska against an Illinois corporation, service being made on defendant's managing agent in Nebraska, as provided by the state statute. Defendant answered and then on leave withdrew the answer, and filed a plea to the jurisdiction. The plea was overruled, and thereupon defendant went to trial on the merits, upon issue joined on that answer. It was held that the objection to the jurisdiction, if it could be urged at all, must be confined to want of power to entertain the suit outside of defendant's own district, and that it was without merit.

Many decisions in respect of removal of cases of diverse citizenship are to the same effect. Thus in Removal Cases, 100 U. S. 457, 25 L. ed. 593, the provision of the act of 1875 that as to suits "in which there shall be a controversy between citizens of different states, . . . either party may remove said suit *into the circuit court of the [259] United States for the proper district," was construed to mean "that when the controversy about which a suit in the state court is brought is between citizens of one or more states on one side, and citizens of other states on the other side, either party to the controversy may remove the suit to the circuit court without regard to the position they occupy in the pleadings as plaintiffs or defendants. For the purposes of a removal the matter in dispute may be ascertained, and, according to the facts, the parties to the suit arranged on opposite sides of that dispute. If, in such an arrangement, it appears that those on one side, being all citizens of different states from those on the other, desire a removal, the suit may be removed." Young v. Parker (Young v. Ewart) 132 U. S. 267, 33 L. ed. 352, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 75; Ballin v. Lehr, 24 Fed. 193; Pitkin County Min. Co. v. Markell, 33 Fed. 386; Roberts v. Pacific & A. R. & Nav. Co. 104 Fed. 577.

The contention in the present case seems to be that because defendant could not sue plaintiffs in the circuit court of New York, or that of Pennsylvania, therefore plaintiffs could not sue defendant in the circuit court for the northern district of West Virginia. But this does not follow from the terms of the statute by which jurisdiction is conferred generally where plaintiffs are residents and citizens of states different from that of the residence and citizenship of defendant; and, moreover, defendant could, if it had a cause of action, have sued plaintiffs in the circuit court for the northern district of West Virginia, and proceeded with the action if they were served with process in such district. The clause vesting jurisdiction should not be confounded with the clause determining the particular courts in which the jurisdiction must be exercised.

Judgment reversed and cause remanded, to be proceeded in according to law.

[260] *JOHN J. COCHRAN and Fidelity & Deposit Company of Maryland, Plffs. in Err., v.
COUNTY OF MONTGOMERY. (No. 37.)

JOHN J. COCHRAN et al., Petitioners,
v.
COUNTY OF MONTGOMERY. (No. 112.)

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 260-274.)

1. Error to circuit court of appeals—cases of diverse citizenship.—The jurisdiction of the Federal circuit court depended entirely upon diversity of citizenship within the meaning of the act of March 3, 1891 (26 Stat. at L. 828, chap. 517, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 550), § 6, making the circuit court of appeals the court of last resort in such cases, where the cause was removed for prejudice or local influence from a state court, under the provision of the act of March 3, 1887 (24 Stat. at L. 553, chap. 373, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 508), as corrected by the act of August 13, 1888, (25 Stat. at L. 433, chap. 866, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 508), grounds of suits embracing a controversy between a citizen of the state in which the suit is brought and a citizen of another state, by "any defendant, being such citizen of another state."

2. Removal of causes—local prejudice or influence.—A suit in which one of two defendants is a citizen of the same state as the plaintiff cannot be removed by the other defendant for prejudice or local influence from a state to a Federal circuit court, under the act of March 3, 1887, as corrected by the act of August 13, 1888, providing for removals on those grounds of suits embracing a controversy between a citizen of the state in which the suit is brought and a citizen of another state, by "any defendant, being such citizen of another state," since to hold otherwise would bring this provision into conflict with the rule that suits, to be removable, must be within the original jurisdiction of the circuit court.

[Nos. 37, 112.]

Argued November 2, 1905. Decided November 27, 1905.

IN ERROR and on Writ of Certiorari to the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Fifth Circuit to review a judgment which affirmed a judgment of the Circuit Court for the Middle District of Alabama in favor of plaintiff in a suit which had been removed to that court from the City Court of Montgomery, in that state. Writ of error dismissed for want of jurisdiction. Judgment reversed on certiorari, and the cause remanded to the Circuit Court, with directions to remand to the state court.

See same case below, 62 C. C. A. 680, 128 Fed. 1019. For opinions on prior appeals, see 57 C. C. A. 261, 121 Fed. 17, 62 C. C. A. 70, 126 Fed. 456.

Statement by Mr. Chief Justice Fuller:

This action was brought January 21, 1902, in the city court of Montgomery, Alabama, by the county of Montgomery, one of the counties of the state of Alabama, against John J. Cochran, a citizen of that county and state, and the Fidelity & Deposit Company of Maryland, a corporation *of the [261] state of Maryland, Cochran being the treasurer of the plaintiff county, and the Fidelity & Trust Company of Maryland being the sole surety on the official bond of said Cochran as such county treasurer, to recover damages for certain alleged breaches of said official bond. Cochran was charged with the conversion of amounts belonging to the general fund of the county, and of amounts belonging to the road and bridge fund. Demurrers to the complaint were severally filed by defendants in the state court.

February 15, 1902, the Fidelity & Deposit Company presented to the district judge of the United States for the middle district of Alabama, holding the circuit court, its petition for the removal of the cause into the circuit court of the United States for that district, alleging, among other things, that the matter in dispute exceeded the sum of $2,000 exclusive of interest and costs, and that the said controversy is between citizens of different states, in that the plaintiff was, at the time of the commencement of said suit, and still is, a citizen of the state of Alabama, and your petitioner, The Fidelity & Deposit Company of Maryland, was, at the time of the commencement of said suit, and still is, a citizen of the state of Maryland, and of no other state, having its principal office in the city of Baltimore, in the state of Maryland, and that your petitioner desires to remove this suit, which is now pending and undetermined in said state court, before the trial thereof, into the circuit court of the United States to be held in the middle district of Alabama.

The petition then averred that from prejudice or local influence in favor of the plaintiff, and adverse to this defendant, it will not be able to obtain justice in said court or in any other state court to which the defendant may, under the laws of this state, have the right to remove said cause, on account of said prejudice or local influence; that the suit was against John J. Cochran, the treasurer of said county, and petitioner, a surety company and a surety on the official bond of said Cochran as such treasurer, to recover the sum of $120,000, [262]*the full penalty of the bond; and that by reason of the nature of said suit, all the residents and citizens of said Montgomery county have a direct interest in the recovery by the said plaintiff of the amount claimed.

NOTE.—On removal of causes for prejudice or local influence—see notes to Gaines v. Fuentes, 23 L. ed. U. S. 524; Butler v. National Home for Disabled Volunteer Soldiers, 36 L. ed. U. S. 346; Torrence v. Shedd, 36 L. ed. U. S. 528; Whelan v. New York, L. E. & W. R. Co. 1 L.R.A. 65; Huskins v. Cincinnati, N. O. & T. P. R. Co. 3 L.R.A. 545; Bierbower v. Miller, 9 L.R.A. 228; and Brodhead v. Shoemaker, 11 L.R.A. 567.

It was further alleged that Cochran was "practically financially irresponsible" and therefore "practically only a nominal party to the suit," because the surety company "would be obliged to meet practically the whole claim should judgment be rendered against defendants;" and then set forth certain circumstances tending to show that there was local prejudice against the surety company "in any county in the state of Alabama in which said case should be tried." On the filing of the petition the judge entered an order finding that it appeared to the court "that from local prejudice or local influence" the surety company would not be able to obtain justice in the city court of Montgomery, or in any other state court to which the company might have the right to remove the cause, and that the court was of opinion that it should be removed to the circuit court on the giving of bond in the penalty of $1,000, and ordered the removal of the cause accordingly. The case came on to be heard in the circuit court at the May term, 1902, when the plaintiff moved to remand upon the ground that the Federal court was without jurisdiction, one of the defendants being a citizen of the same state as the plaintiff. This motion was overruled. 116 Fed. 985. On the trial the plaintiff amended the complaint by adding four additional counts, to which demurrers were sustained; and the case was tried on the original complaint and the general issue and certain special pleas interposed by defendants. The result was a judgment in favor of plaintiff for the amount of the general fund converted, but, under the rulings of the court, there was no recovery on account of the road and bridge fund. On writ of error sued out by plaintiff this judgment was reversed and a new trial ordered by the court of appeals. 57 C. C. A. 261, 121 Fed. 17. On a second trial, May 28, 1903, the complaint was [263]amended in certain particulars *and three new counts added. The second trial resulted in a judgment in favor of plaintiff for an amount less than the amount claimed. On this judgment cross writs of error were sued out from the circuit court of appeals, and the judgment reversed on the writ brought by plaintiff, and a new trial ordered. 62 C. C. A. 70, 126 Fed. 456. The third trial, February 3, 1904, resulted in a judgment in favor of plaintiff for the full amount of the road and bridge fund converted by Cochran, with interest, less certain admitted payments made by him, and not including the amount of the general fund, which had been, in the meantime, voluntarily paid by the company. On this last judgment, defendants sued out a writ of error to the court of appeals, and the judgment was affirmed. 62 C. C. A. 680, 128 Fed. 1019. And thereupon the present writ of error was allowed. The case is numbered 37. Application for certiorari was made, and is numbered 112.

Mr. Edward H. Gans argued the cause, and, with Mr. Thomas A. Whelan, filed a brief for plaintiffs in error and petitioners:

A nonresident of the state in which the suit is brought may remove the suit to another state for prejudice and local influence, even though sued with a resident defendant.

Fisk v. Henarie, 32 Fed. 417; Whelan v. New York, L. E. & W. R. Co. 1 L.R.A. 65, 35 Fed. 849; Huskins v. Cincinnati, N. O. & T. P. R. Co. 3 L.R.A. 545, 37 Fed. 507; Wilder v. Virginia, T. & C. Steel & I. Co. 46 Fed. 676; Adelbert College v. Toledo, W. & W. R. Co. 47 Fed. 836; Hall v. Chattanooga, 48 Fed. 599; Detroit v. Detroit City R. Co. 54 Fed. 1; Haire v. Rome R. Co. 57 Fed. 321; Gann v. Northeastern R. Co. 57 Fed. 417; Jackson & S. Co. v. Pearson, 60 Fed. 113; Bonner v. Meikle, 77 Fed. 489; Bartlett v. Gates, 117 Fed. 363; Holmes v. Southern R. Co. 125 Fed. 301; Seaboard Air Line R. Co. v. North Carolina R. Co. 123 Fed. 629.

If any suits are not removable under the 4th clause of the act of August 13, 1888, because one defendant is a citizen of the state in which the suit is brought and another a citizen of another state, the same rule, by virtue of the equivalent introductory language, should apply to the 3d clause.

But it has been held by an unbroken current of authority that, under the 3d clause, there may be a removal, even though one defendant is a citizen of the state in which suit is brought and another a citizen of another state.

Chesapeake & O. R. Co. v. Dixon, 179 U. S. 131, 45 L. ed. 121, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 67; Connell v. Smiley, 156 U. S. 335, 39 L. ed. 443, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 353; Carothers v. McKinley Min. & Smelting Co. 116 Fed. 951; First Nat. Bank v. Bridgeport Trust Co.

117 Fed. 969; Sugar Creek, P. B. & P. C. R. Co. v. McKell, 75 Fed. 34; Lake Street Elev. R. Co. v. Farmers' Loan & T. Co. 72 Fed. 804; Vinal v. Continental Constr. & Improv. Co. 34 Fed. 228.

Mr. William L. Martin argued the cause, and, with Messrs. John G. Finley and Jesse F. Stallings, filed a brief for defendant in error and respondent:

It is thoroughly settled that the circuit court of the United States has no judisdiction, either original or by removal from a state court, of a suit as one arising under the Constitution, laws, or treaties of the United States, unless that appears by the plaintiff's statement to be a necessary part of his claim; and that, if it does not appear at the outset that the suit is one of which the circuit court at the time its jurisdiction is invoked could properly take cognizance, the lack of jurisdiction cannot be supplied by anything set up in the application for removal, or in the defense interposed.

Colorado Cent. Consol. Min. Co. v. Turck, 150 U. S. 138, 37 L. ed. 1030, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 35; Tennessee v. Union & Planters' Bank, 152 U. S. 454, 38 L. ed. 511, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 654; Chappell v. Waterworth, 155 U. S. 102, 39 L. ed. 85, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 34; Postal Teleg. Cable Co. v. United States (Postal Teleg. Cable Co. v. Alabama) 155 U. S. 482, 39 L. ed. 231, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 192; East Lake Land Co. v. Brown, 155 U. S. 488, 39 L. ed. 233, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 357; Borgmeyer v. Idler, 159 U. S. 408, 40 L. ed. 199, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 34; Oregon Short Line & U. N. R. Co. v. Skottowe, 162 U. S. 490, 40 L. ed. 1048, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 869; Hanford v. Davies, 163 U. S. 273, 41 L. ed. 157, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1051; Walker v. Collins, 167 U. S. 57, 42 L. ed. 76, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 738; Third Street & Suburban R. Co. v. Lewis, 173 U. S. 457, 43 L. ed. 766, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 451; Arkansas v. Kansas & T. Coal Co. 183 U. S. 185, 46 L. ed. 144, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 47; Spencer v. Duplan Silk Co. 191 U. S. 526, 48 L. ed. 287, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 174; Minnesota v. Northern Securities Co. 194 U. S. 48, 63, 64, 48 L. ed. 870, 877, 878, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 598.

It is also settled that, when a suit does not really and substantially involve a dispute or controversy as to the effect or construction of the Constitution or laws of the United States, upon the determination of which the result depends, it is not a suit arising under the Constitution and laws.

Western U. Teleg. Co. v. Ann Arbor R. Co. 178 U. S. 239, 243, 244, 44 L. ed. 1052, 1054, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 867; Lampasas v. Bell, 180 U. S. 276, 45 L. ed. 527, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 368; Northern P. R. Co. v. Soderberg, 188 U. S. 526, 528, 47 L. ed. 575, 580, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 365; Defiance Water Co. v. Defiance, 191 U. S. 184, 190, 191, 48 L. ed. 140, 142, 143, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 63; Bankers' Mut. Casualty Co. v. Minneapolis, St. P. & S. Ste. M. R. Co. 192 U. S. 371, 385, 48 L. ed. 484, 490, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 325; Cosmopolitan Min. Co. v. Walsh, 193 U. S. 460, 48 L. ed. 749, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 489; Sloan v. United States, 193 U. S. 614, 48 L. ed. 814, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 570.

And when the jurisdiction of the circuit court is invoked on the ground of diverse citizenship, the judgment of the circuit court of appeals is final, even though another ground for jurisdiction in the circuit court may be developed in the course of the subsequent proceedings in the case.

Colorado Cent. Consol. Min. Co. v. Turck, and Borgmeyer v. Idler, supra; Press Pub. Co. v. Monroe, 164 U. S. 105, 41 L. ed. 367, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 40; Ex parte Jones, 164 U. S. 691, 41 L. ed. 601, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 222; Spencer v. Duplan Silk Co. supra.

To avoid the finality of the judgment of the circuit court of appeals, some other distinct ground of Federal jurisdiction than diversity of citizenship must have existed, and must have been relied on.

Benjamin v. New Orleans, 169 U. S. 161, 164, 42 L. ed. 700, 702, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 298.

The jurisdiction of the circuit court was none the less "dependent entirely" upon diverse citizenship because of the fact that the removal was upon the ground of prejudice or local influence.

Re Pennsylvania Co. 137 U. S. 451, 456, 34 L. ed. 738, 741, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 141.

There was no possible ground of jurisdiction in the circuit court other than diversity of citizenship. Upon that ground Federal jurisdiction was necessarily invoked and assumed,—whether correctly or erroneously is not conceived to be a pertinent inquiry to the consideration of this motion. The judgment of the circuit court of appeals is therefore final under § 6 of the act creating the circuit courts of appeals, and the writ of error should be dismissed for want of jurisdiction.

Colorado Cent. Consol. Min. Co. v. Turck, Borgmeyer v. Idler, Press Pub. Co. v. Monroe, and Ex parte Jones, supra; Pope v. Louisville, N. A. & C. R. Co. 173 U. S. 573, 43 L. ed. 814, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 500; Huguley Mfg. Co. v. Galeton Cotton Mills, 184 U. S. 290, 46 L. ed. 546, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 452; Spencer v. Duplan Silk Co. supra; Bankers' Mut. Casualty Co. v. Minneapolis, St. P. & S. Ste. M. R. Co. 192 U. S. 371, 48 L. ed. 484, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 325.

The requisite diverse citizenship precludes a common citizenship of opposing parties.

Strawbridge v. Curtiss, 3 Cranch, 267, 2 L. ed. 435; New Orleans v. Winter, 1 Wheat. 91, 4 L. ed. 44; Susquehanna & W. Valley R. & Coal Co. v. Blatchford, 11 Wall. 172, 174, 20 L. ed. 179, 180; Sewing Mach. Co.'s Case (Grover & B. Sewing Mach. Co. v. Florence Sewing Mach. Co.) 18 Wall. 553, 574, 21 L. ed. 914, 918; Peninsular Iron Co. v. Stone, 121 U. S. 631, 30 L. ed. 1020, 7 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1010; Smith v. Lyon, 133 U. S. 315, 317, 33 L. ed. 635, 636, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 303; Hooe v. Jamieson, 166 U. S. 395, 397, 41 L. ed. 1049, 1050, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 596; Florida C. & P. R. Co. v. Bell, 176 U. S. 321, 332, 333, 44 L. ed. 486, 491, 492, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 399.

The phrase in the local prejudice act of 1867, "a suit in which there is a controversy between a citizen of the state in which the suit is brought and a citizen of another state," was construed to have the same meaning as the shorter description, in the act of 1789, of "a suit between" such parties; and it was held that each term implied a proceeding in a court of justice by a party plaintiff against a party defendant; and, consequently, that all the defendants must be citizens of other states from that of any of the plaintiffs, and that one of several defendants could not remove the suit.

Hanrick v. Hanrick, 153 U. S. 192, 195, 38 L. ed. 685, 687, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 835; Sewing Mach. Co.'s Case (Grover & B. Sewing-Mach. Co. v. Florence Sewing Mach. Co.) 18 Wall. 553, 585, 21 L. ed. 914, 922; Vonnevar v. Bryant, 21 Wall. 41, 22 L. ed. 476.

The words of the act of 1867, "in which there is a controversy," were omitted from U. S. Rev. Stat. § 639, clause 3, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 520, thereby returning to the shorter description contained in the act of 1789, "a suit between a citizen of the state in which it is brought and a citizen of another state," and were likewise held to require that all the necessary parties on one side of the suit should be citizens of different states from those on the other, and not to permit a removal because of a separate controversy between one of the defendants and the plaintiff.

Hanrick v. Hanrick, 153 U. S. 192, 196, 38 L. ed. 685, 687, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 835; American Bible Soc. v. Price, 110 U. S. 61, 28 L. ed. 70, 3 Sup. Ct. Rep. 440; Cambria Iron Co. v. Ashburn, 118 U. S. 54, 30 L. ed. 60, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 929; Hancock v. Holbrook, 119 U. S. 586, 30 L. ed. 538, 7 Sup. Ct. Rep. 341; Young v. Parker (Young v. Ewart) 132 U. S. 267, 270, 271, 33 L. ed. 352, 353, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 75; Myers v. Swann, 107 U. S. 546, 27 L. ed. 583, 2 Sup. Ct. Rep. 685.

Under the provisions of the act of 1875, for the removal of a controversy which is wholly between citizens of different states, it was held that the whole subject-matter of the suit must be capable of being finally determined between them, and complete relief afforded as to the separate causes of action, without the presence of other persons originally made parties to the suit; and that, when there was but one indivisible controversy between the plaintiffs and the defendants, as in the case of a suit for partition, the suit could not be removed by one of several plaintiffs or defendants.

Hanrick v. Hanrick, supra; Blake v. McKim, 103 U. S. 336, 26 L. ed. 563; Torrence v. Shedd, 144 U. S. 527, 36 L. ed. 528, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 726; Bellaire v. Baltimore & O. R. Co. 146 U. S. 117, 36 L. ed. 910, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 16; Wilson v. Oswego Twp. 151 U. S. 56, 38 L. ed. 70, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 259; Merchants' Cotton Press & Storage Co. v. Insurance Co. of N. A. 151 U. S. 368, 385, 38 L. ed. 195, 204, 4 Inters. Com. Rep. 499, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 367.

We have here no separable controversy. Torrence v. Shedd, 144 U. S. 527, 530, 36 L. ed. 528, 531, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 726; Wilson v. Oswego Twp. 151 U. S. 56, 66, 38 L. ed. 70, 75, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 259; Chicago, R. I. & P. R. Co. v. Martin, 178 U. S. 245, 248, 44 L. ed. 1055, 1056, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 854; Chesapeake & O. R. Co. v. Dixon, 179 U. S. 131, 138, 45 L. ed. 121, 125, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 67; Western U. Teleg. Co. v. Brown, 32 Fed. 337; Mutual Reserve Fund Life Asso. v. Farmer, 23 C. C. A. 574, 36 U. S. App. 771, 77 Fed. 929; Deere v. Chicago, M. & St. P. R. Co. 85 Fed. 876.

The right of removal is expressly limited to cases of which the circuit courts are given original jurisdiction.

Re Pennsylvania Co. 137 U. S. 451, 454, 34 L. ed. 738, 740, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 141; Mexican Nat. R. Co. v. Davidson, 157 U. S. 201, 208, 39 L. ed. 672, 675, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 563; Tennessee v. Union & Planters' Bank, 152 U. S. 454, 461, 38 L. ed. 511, 514, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 654; Texas & P. R. Co. v. Cody, 166 U. S. 606, 609, 41 L. ed. 1132, 1134, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 703; Arkansas v. Kansas & T. Coal Co. 183 U. S. 185, 189, 190, 46 L. ed. 144, 146, 147, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 47; Minnesota v. Northern Securities Co. 194 U. S. 48, 63, 48 L. ed. 870, 877, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 598; Madisonville Traction Co. v. St. Bernard Min. Co. 196 U. S. 239, 49 L. ed. 462, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 251; Reed v. Reed, 31 Fed. 49, 51; Laird v. Indemnity Mut. Marine Assur. Co. 44 Fed. 712; Dey v. Chicago, M. & St. P. R. Co. 45 Fed. 82; Anderson v. Bowers, 43 Fed. 321; Terre Haute v. Evansville & T. H. R. Co. 106

Fed. 545; Campbell v. Milliken, 119 Fed. 982; Weldon v. Fritzlen, 128 Fed. 608.

[267] *Mr. Chief Justice Fuller, after making the foregoing statement, delivered the opinion of the court:

The first question is whether this court can entertain jurisdiction of this writ of error, and this must be answered in the negative if the ground on which the jurisdiction of the circuit court was invoked was "dependent entirely upon the opposite parties to the suit or controversy being . . . citizens of different states," because in such case the judgment of the circuit court of appeals was final. Act of March 3, 1891 (26 Stat. at L. 828, chap. 517, § 6, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 550).

By § 1 of the judiciary act of 1887 [24 Stat. at L. 552, chap. 373], as corrected in 1888 (25 Stat. at L. 433, chap. 866, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 508), the circuit courts of the United States are given "original cognizance, concurrent with the courts of the several states, of all suits of a civil nature, at common law or in equity, where the matter in dispute exceeds, exclusive of interest and costs, the sum or value of two thousand dollars, and [1] arising under the Constitution or laws of the United States, or treaties made, or which shall be made, under their authority; or [2] in which controversy the United States are plaintiffs or petitioners; or [3] in which there shall be a controversy between citizens of different states, in which the matter in dispute exceeds, exclusive of interest and costs, the sum or value aforesaid; or [4] a controversy between citizens of the same state claiming lands under grants of different states; or [5] a controversy between citizens of a state and foreign states, citizens, or subjects, in which the matter in dispute exceeds, exclusive of interest and costs, the sum or value aforesaid, . . . and no civil suit shall be brought before either of said courts against any person by any original process or proceeding in any other district than that whereof he is an inhabitant, but where the jurisdiction is founded only on the fact that the action is between citizens of different states, suit shall be brought only in the district of the residence of either the plaintiff or the defendant."

[268] *Section 2 (U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 509) of the act provides for the removal of causes, as follows:

"That any suit of a civil nature, at law or in equity, arising under the Constitution or laws of the United States, or treaties made, or which shall be made, under their authority, of which the circuit courts of the United States are given original jurisdiction by the preceding section, which may now be pending, or which may hereafter be brought, in any state court, may be removed by the defendant or defendants therein to the circuit court of the United States for the proper district.

"Any other suit of a civil nature, at law or in equity, of which the circuit courts of the United States are given jurisdiction by the preceding section, and which are now pending, or which may hereafter be brought, in any state court, may be removed into the circuit court of the United States for the proper district by the defendant or defendants therein, being nonresidents of that state.

"And when, in any suit mentioned in this section, there shall be a controversy which is wholly between citizens of different states, and which can be fully determined as between them, then either one or more of the defendants actually interested in such controversy may remove said suit into the circuit court of the United States for the proper district.

"And where a suit is now pending, or may be hereafter brought, in any state court, in which there is a controversy between a citizen of the state in which the suit is brought and a citizen of another state, any defendant, being such citizen of another state, may remove such suit into the circuit court of the United States for the proper district, at any time before the trial thereof, when it shall be made to appear to said circuit court that, from prejudice or local influence, he will not be able to obtain justice in such state court, or in any other state court to which the said defendant may, under the laws of the state, have the right, on account of such prejudice or local influence, to remove said cause:

"Provided, That if it further appear that said suit can be fully and justly determined as to the other defendants in the state court, without *being affected by such prejudice or [269] local influence, and that no party to the suit will be prejudiced by a separation of the parties, said circuit court may direct the suit to be remanded, so far as relates to such other defendants, to the state court, to be proceeded with therein."

Section 3 (U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 510) of the act provides that, under the first three clauses of § 2, the petition for removal must be filed in the state court at the time or any time before the defendant is required, by the laws of the state or the rule of the state court in which such suit is brought, to answer or plead to the declaration or complaint.

In Smith v. Rhines, 2 Sumn. 338, Fed. Cas. No. 13,100, Mr. Justice Story held that under the judiciary act of 1789 [1 Stat.

at L. 73, chap. 20] such cases were only liable to removal from a state to the circuit court "as might, under the law, or, at all events, under the Constitution, have been brought before the circuit court by original process." And Mr. Justice Washington in Beardsley v. Torrey, 4 Wash. C. C. 286, Fed. Cas. No. 1,190, and Mr. Justice Thompson in Ward v. Arredondo, 1 Paine, 410, Fed. Cas. No. 17,148, expressed views to the same effect. In Gaines v. Fuentes, 92 U. S. 10, 23 L. ed. 524, it was ruled that this was otherwise under the act of March 2, 1867 [14 Stat. at L. 558, chap. 196].

But the act of 1887 restored the rule of 1789, and, as we have heretofore decided, those suits only can be removed of which the circuit courts are given original jurisdiction. Mexican Nat. R. Co. v. Davidson, 157 U. S. 201, 39 L. ed. 672, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 563; Tennessee v. Union & Planters' Bank, 152 U. S. 454, 461, 38 L. ed. 511, 514, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 654. And on the face of this record it is apparent that the jurisdiction of the circuit court, as invoked, could only rest on diversity of citizenship. The case does not come within any other ground of original jurisdiction as defined by the act. It is true that one of the defendants was a citizen of the same state as the county of Montgomery, but the learned judge below held that where removal was sought on the ground of prejudice or local influence, the right of removal was not affected by another defendant and plaintiff being citizens of the same state as that where the suit was brought. 116 Fed. 985.

[270] *Whether that view was correct or not, jurisdiction was exercised as resting on diversity of citizenship; that is, as between the plaintiff and the removing defendant.

But while the judgment of the circuit court of appeals must be regarded as final, and the writ of error dismissed, we deem it our duty to grant the writ of certiorari, to which the record on the writ of error may stand as a return, in order to pass upon the question of the jurisdiction of the circuit court, in the exercise of one of the essential functions of this court,—the determination of the jurisdiction of the courts below. Defiance Water Co. v. Defiance, 191 U. S. 184, 195, 48 L. ed. 140, 143, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 63.

In applications for removal under clauses 1 and 2 of § 2 of the act of 1887, all the defendants were required to join in the application. Chicago, R. I. & P. R. Co. v. Martin, 178 U. S. 245, 44 L. ed. 1055, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 854; Gableman v. Peoria, D. & E. R. Co. 179 U. S. 335, 45 L. ed. 220, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 171. Under clause 3, relating to cases of separable controversy, and clause 4, all the defendants need not join. But the 4th clause, treating of removals because of prejudice or local influence, does not furnish a separate and independent ground of Federal jurisdiction, and, as Mr. Justice Bradley said in Re Pennsylvania Co. 137 U. S. 451, 456, 34 L. ed. 738, 741, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 141, "describes only a special case comprised in the preceding clauses." In that case we referred to the opinion of Mr. Justice Harlan in Malone v. Richmond & D. R. Co. 35 Fed. 625, as expressing the correct view of the law. The question was whether the pecuniary limit was applicable under the 4th clause, and that involved consideration of the other clauses. Mr. Justice Harlan there said:

"It is clear from the above clauses, construing them all together, that the right of removal, at any time before trial, on the ground of prejudice or local influence, is restricted, by the act of 1887, to suits in which there is a controversy between citizens of different states; also that such right, in suits of that character, involving no Federal question, now belongs only to the defendant who is a citizen, or to the defendants who are citizens, of a state other than that in which the suit is brought. *And [271] I think it is equally clear that the right of removal on the ground of prejudice or local influence does not exist in any case unless the sum or value of the matter in dispute exceeds $2,000, exclusive of interest and costs. The clauses of the 2d section of the act of 1887, defining the different kinds of suits that may be removed, preserve the same element of the value of the matter in dispute as is found in the 1st section, relating to the original jurisdiction of circuit courts. This is done by the provision giving the right of removal in suits 'of which the circuit courts of the United States are given original jurisdiction by the preceding [1st] section.' . . . The subsequent clause, relating to prejudice and local influence, does not describe a new class of suits, removable from the state courts, but only specifies a distinct ground for removing one class of the suits previously defined; namely, that class in which there is a controversy between citizens of different states. And that ground the defendant is at liberty to set up 'at any time before the trial;' whereas, by the 3d section of the act, the right to remove upon any other ground will be lost if not exercised at the time or before 'the defendant is required by the laws of the state or the rule of the state court' in which the suit is brought 'to answer or plead to the declaration or complaint of the plaintiff.' The clause prescribing prejudice or local influence as ground for the removal of a suit 'in which there is a controversy between a citizen of the state in which the suit is brought and a citizen of another state' cannot well be separated, in the process of interpretation, from the preceding clause in the same section, which, by referring to the 1st section, requires as a condition of the removal of a suit because of diverse citizenship—the only kind of suit in which the existence of prejudice or local influence, as affecting the right of removal, is of any consequence—that the matter in dispute shall exceed in value $2,000, exclusive of interest and costs."

The 1st subdivision of § 639 of the Revised Statutes was a re-enactment of the [272]12th section of the judiciary act; *the 2d subdivision, of the act of July 27, 1866 [14 Stat. at L. 306, chap. 288]; and the 3d subdivision, of the act of March 2, 1867. The act of March 3, 1875 [18 Stat. at L. 470, chap. 137, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 508], repealed the 1st and 2d subdivisions, but left subdivision 3 unrepealed. Baltimore & O. R. Co. v. Bates, 119 U. S. 464, 467, 30 L. ed. 436, 438, 7 Sup. Ct. Rep. 285. The act of March 3, 1887, repealed the act of 1867, or subdivision 3 of § 639. Fisk v. Henarie, 142 U. S. 467, 35 L. ed. 1082, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 207. In describing the class of suits removable on the ground of prejudice or local influence, the language in the act of 1887 is identical with that of 1867; that is, suits "in which there is a controversy between a citizen of the state in which the suit is brought and a citizen of another state." The settled construction of the language of the act of 1867 and of the Revised Statutes was that the clause included cases wherein the controversy was between citizens of the state wherein the suit was pending and citizens of other states. The use of the identical language in the act of 1887–1888 showed that Congress intended the same construction should be applied, although, under the act of 1887, the plaintiff could not remove a cause, while any defendant, being a citizen of a state other than that in which the suit was pending, might.

The circuit court was of opinion that the words "any defendant, being such citizen of another state, may remove," etc., implied that there might be defendants who were not citizens of another state and yet the cause be removable; but while the words, standing alone, are susceptible of that construction, we think it was not intended to change the meaning of the terms as previously determined (by the decisions under the act of 1789, and so on down), and that the class of cases removable on the ground of prejudice and local influence is confined to those in which there is a controversy between a citizen or citizens of the state in which the suit is pending and a citizen or citizens of another or other states, and that the clause did not include cases wherein the controversy was partly between citizens of the same state. To hold otherwise brings the language of the clause into conflict with the rule *that a suit, to be re-[273] movable, must be within the original jurisdiction of the circuit court, departs from the settled former construction, and ignores the main purpose of the act of 1887, which was to restrict the jurisdiction of the circuit court. Hanrick v. Hanrick, 153 U. S. 192, 38 L. ed. 685, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 835; Anderson v. Bowers, 43 Fed. 321; Moon, Removal of Causes, § 189 and notes.

And there does not seem to be any escape from this conclusion in view of the provision of the 1st section of the act of 1887, that when the jurisdiction is founded solely on diversity of citizenship, suit can be brought "only in the district of the plaintiff or the defendant."

If brought in the district of the plaintiff or plaintiffs, the defendant or defendants (the singular embraces the plural) must necessarily be a citizen or citizens of another state than that of plaintiff or plaintiffs. If brought in the district of defendant or defendants no removal can be had, because it is only defendants who are "nonresidents" who can remove under clause 2, or under clause 4, prejudice or local influence not being an independent ground of jurisdiction. But in order that a defendant entitled to remove might not be cut off from the exercise of that right by his codefendants declining to join in the application, the 4th clause provided that "any defendant" might remove, and out of abundant caution the words were added, "being such citizen of another state," apparently to prevent misconstruction of the words "any defendant," in possible enlargement of the jurisdiction.

The main purpose of the act of 1887 was, as has been repeatedly said, to restrict the jurisdiction; and this was largely accomplished in the matter of removals by withholding the right from plaintiffs, and only according it to defendants when sued in plaintiffs' district.

In the present case suit was brought in the plaintiff's state against Cochran, a citizen of the same state, who was a necessary party, and the surety company, a citizen of Maryland. It could not have been brought in the circuit court for the *middle[274] district of Alabama. Sweeney v. Carter Oil Co. 199 U S. 252, ante, 178, 26 Sup. Ct. Rep. 55.

And this being so, the case was improvidently removed, and should have been remanded.

As the removal was made on the application of the surety company, that company must pay the costs of this court and of the circuit court.

Writ of error dismissed; certiorari granted, record on writ of error to stand as return to certiorari; judgment reversed, and cause remanded to Circuit Court with a direction to remand to the state court; costs of this court and of the Circuit Court to be paid by the Fidelity & Deposit Company.

HENRY FRENCH (Substituted in place of Sarah Woodward and John H. McGraw, as Administrator of the Estate of Henry S. Woodward, Deceased), Plff. in Err.,

v.

H. C. TAYLOR and Lida R. Taylor, His Wife, and J. W. McConnaughey, D. F. McConnaughey, and C. K. McConnaughey.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 274–279.)

Error to state court—Federal question—statutory construction.—A decision of a state court that the formalities required by the tax laws were fully observed does not present a Federal question, where the contention is not that the statutes are unconstitutional, but that the manner of their observance was a denial of due process of law.

[No. 57.]

Argued November 8, 1905. Decided November 27, 1905.

IN ERROR to the Supreme Court of the State of Washington to review a judgment which affirmed a decree of the Superior Court of King County, in that state, dismissing a suit to quiet title to real estate. Dismissed for want of jurisdiction.

See same case below, 33 Wash. 1, 73 Pac. 785; on rehearing, 33 Wash. 11, 75 Pac. 646.

Statement by Mr. Chief Justice Fuller:

This was a suit to quiet title to certain real estate, brought in the superior court of King county, Washington, by Sarah Woodward and Sarah Woodward as executrix of Henry S. Woodward, against H. C. Taylor and others. Sarah Woodward resigned her letters as executrix and John H. McGraw was appointed administrator with the will annexed, and thereupon was made a coplaintiff. The superior court entered *a decree of [275] dismissal and plaintiffs took the cause by appeal to the supreme court of Washington, which affirmed the judgment. 33 Wash. 1, 73 Pac. 785. A petition for rehearing was filed and denied. 33 Wash. 11, 75 Pac. 646. Henry French was substituted as appellant, and he brought this writ of error.

The case is stated by the supreme court thus:

"Several causes of action are alleged in the complaint. Each cause is to set aside a separate deed to the property in question. It is necessary to notice only the first cause alleged. For some time prior to the year 1891, Sarah Woodward was a nonresident of the state of Washington, and is still such nonresident. She was the owner of lot 8, in block 11, Maynard's plat to the city of Seattle. This property was assessed for general, state, and county taxes for the year 1891, in the name of C. Winehill. It does not appear that the taxing officers knew, when the assessment was made, that the property belonged to Mrs. Woodward. Subsequently the taxes for that year became delinquent, and the property was sold in 1894, under the provisions of the revenue act of 1893. . . . The county of King became the purchaser. Subsequently the county transferred the certificate of sale to the respondents, who thereafter obtained a tax deed. At the trial of the cause the lower court held that this tax deed conveyed a valid title, and dismissed the action. The points relied upon by appellants to secure a reversal are that the property was not assessed in the name of the owner, that no notice of the sale, or of the expiration of the time of redemption, or of the application for a deed, was given to the owner, and that, therefore the respondents acquired no title to the land by virtue of the sale and tax deed."

Mr. Twyman O. Abbott argued the cause and filed a brief for plaintiff in error:

A decision of the highest court of the

NOTE.—On the general subject of writs of error from United States Supreme Court to state courts—see notes to Martin v. Hunter, 4 L. ed. U. S. 97; Hamblin v. Western Land Co. 37 L. ed. U. S. 267; Re Buchanan, 39 L. ed. U. S. 884; and Kipley v. Illinois, 42 L. ed. U. S. 998.

On what adjudications of state courts can be brought up for review in the Supreme Court of the United States by writ of error to those courts—see note to Apex Transp. Co. v. Garbade, 62 L.R.A. 513.

On how and when questions must be raised and decided in a state court in order to make a case for a writ of error from the Supreme Court of the United States—see note to Mutual L. Ins. Co. v. McGrew, 63 L.R.A. 33.

On what the record must show respecting the presentation and decision of a Federal question in order to confer jurisdiction on the Supreme Court of the United States of a writ of error to a state court—see note to Hooker v. Los Angeles, 63 L.R.A. 471.

As to what is the record for this purpose—see note to Home for Incurables v. New York, 63 L.R.A. 329.

state may as effectually deprive a citizen of the protection of the 14th Amendment as may an act of the legislature.

Scott v. McNeal, 154 U. S. 34, 38 L. ed. 896, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1108; Chicago, B. & Q. R. Co. v. Chicago, 166 U. S. 226, 41 L. ed. 979, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 581.

The Federal question was properly raised.

Bellingham Bay & B. C. R. Co. v. New Whatcom, 172 U. S. 314, 43 L. ed. 460, 9 Sup. Ct. Rep. 205; Dewey v. Des Moines, 173 U. S. 193, 43 L. ed. 665, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 379; Abbott v. National Bank of Commerce, 175 U. S. 409, 44 L. ed. 217, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 153; Williams v. Bruffy, 102 U. S. 249, 26 L. ed. 135.

A decision of the Federal question in terms is not essential. If a decision of such question was necessarily involved in the judgment rendered, it is not a matter of importance that the state court avoided all reference to the question.

Mutual L. Ins. Co. v. McGrew, 63 L.R.A. 42, note, 188 U. S. 291, 47 L. ed. 480, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 375; Chapman v. Goodnow (Chapman v. Crane) 123 U. S. 540, 31 L. ed. 235, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 211; Chicago L. Ins. Co. v. Needles, 113 U. S. 574, 28 L. ed. 1084, 5 Sup. Ct. Rep. 681; Bell's Gap R. Co. v. Pennsylvania, 134 U. S. 232, 33 L. ed. 892, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 533; St. Louis Consol. Coal Co. v. Illinois, 185 U. S. 203, 46 L. ed. 872, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 616; Chicago, B. & Q. R. Co. v. Chicago, 166 U. S. 226, 41 L. ed. 979, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 581.

We do not doubt that, when this court is considering an appeal directly from one of the Federal courts, it will be governed in its decision concerning matters relating to taxation by the rule adopted in the state court; but even to this broad rule there are exceptions.

Lewis v. Monson, 151 U. S. 545, 38 L. ed. 265, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 424.

If, however, the decisions of the state court concerning the validity of the assessment under the statute complained of are of any force in this court, we have abundance of authority from that court sustaining the position taken by the plaintiff in error, namely: That the name of the owner is a necessary prerequisite to a valid assessment.

Baer v. Choir, 7 Wash. 631, 32 Pac. 776, 36 Pac. 286; Vestal v. Morris, 11 Wash. 451, 39 Pac. 560; Coolidge v. Pierce County, 28 Wash. 95, 68 Pac. 391.

This rule has been followed and adopted in the Federal court in the following cases:

Northern P. R. Co. v. Galvin, 85 Fed. 811; State Trust Co. v. Chehalis County, 24 C. C. A. 282, 48 U. S. App. 190, 79 Fed. 282.

The rules of Federal decision where the opinion of the state court is a matter of importance are: 1. If the state decisions are conflicting, the Federal courts will follow their own judgment. 2. Even if the rule of the state court is settled, but was announced after the rights in question attached, the state decisions will not be binding.

Stutsman County v. Wallace, 142 U. S. 293, 35 L. ed. 1018, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 227; Burgess v. Seligman, 107 U. S. 20, 27 L. ed. 359, 2 Sup. Ct. Rep. 10; Anderson v. Santa Anna Twp. 116 U. S. 356, 29 L. ed. 633, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 413.

Mr. Richard Saxe Jones argued the cause, and, with Messrs. Jefferson Chandler and William H. Brinker, filed a brief for defendants in error:

The authority conferred on a court to hear and determine cases in a state is not the kind of authority referred to in § 25 of the judiciary act of 1789; otherwise every judgment of the supreme court of a state would be re-examinable under the section.

Bethell v. Demaret, 10 Wall. 537, 19 L. ed. 1007; New Orleans Waterworks Co. v. Louisiana Sugar Ref. Co. 125 U. S. 18, 31 L. ed. 607, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 741.

The judgment or decree of a state court cannot be re-examined in this court simply because a Federal question was presented to the state court for determination, but that court must also have decided it.

Crowell v. Randell, 10 Pet. 368, 9 L. ed. 458. See also note to Mutual L. Ins. Co. v. McGrew, 63 L.R.A. 42, div. III.

And in cases which seem to have varied from this rule this court has still held that the decision of the Federal question must necessarily have been involved in the judgment rendered.

Chapman v. Goodnow (Chapman v. Crane) 123 U. S. 540, 31 L. ed. 235, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 211.

See also note to Mutual L. Ins. Co. v. McGrew, supra.

The state court decided this case on local grounds alone, as it had no suggestion before it that a Federal question was involved.

Telluride Power Transmission Co. v. Rio Grande Western R. Co. 187 U. S. 569, 47 L. ed. 307, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 178.

Where the decision of the supreme court of a state may have been based upon some other than the constitutional question, and the constitutional question does not clearly appear to have been determined by the supreme court of a state, a writ of error will be dismissed.

Ibid.

There was no Federal question involved in this case.

Leigh v. Green, 193 U. S. 79, 48 L. ed. 623, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 390; State ex rel. Hill v. Dockery, 191 U. S. 165, 48 L. ed. 133, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 53, 63 L.R.A. 571.

Various notes in the Lawyers' Reports Annotated completely cover the questions involved.

Mutual L. Ins. Co. v. McGrew, 63 L.R.A. 33, note; Home for Incurables v. New York, 63 L.R.A. 329, note; State ex rel. Hill v. Dockery, 63 L.R.A. 571, note; Hooker v. Los Angeles, 63 L.R.A. 471, note; and Apex Transp. Co. v. Garbade, 62 L.R.A. 513, note.

No contention is made that the tax law itself is unconstitutional.

Bethell v. Demaret, and New Orleans Waterworks Co. v. Louisiana, supra.

A Federal question cannot be first raised in a petition for rehearing so as to give this court jurisdiction.

Capital Nat. Bank v. First Nat. Bank, 172 U. S. 425, 43 L. ed. 502, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 202; F. G. Oxley Stave Co. v. Butler County, 166 U. S. 648, 41 L. ed. 1149, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 709; Citizens' Sav. Bank v. Owensboro, 173 U. S. 636, 43 L. ed. 840, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 530; Simmerman v. Nebraska, 116 U. S. 54, 29 L. ed. 535, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 333; Susquehanna Boom Co. v. West Branch Boom Co. 110 U. S. 57, 28 L. ed. 69, 3 Sup. Ct. Rep. 408; Fowler v. Lamson, 164 U. S. 252, 41 L. ed. 424, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 112: Mutual L. Ins. Co. v. McGrew, 188 U. S. 291, 47 L. ed. 480, 63 L.R.A. 33, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 375.

Unless it is decided upon the petition, or necessarily involved in the decision thereon. This is not true in the case at bar.

Mallett v. North Carolina, 181 U. S. 589, 45 L. ed. 1015, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 730; Leigh v. Green, supra; Chicago, I. & L. R. Co. v. McGuire, 196 U. S. 128, 49 L. ed. 413, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 200; Fullerton v. Texas, 196 U. S. 192, 49 L. ed. 443, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 221; Dewey v. Des Moines, 173 U. S. 193, 43 L. ed. 665, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 379.

There is no Federal question in this cause decided by the state court. The decision is that taxation in Washington is in rem; its process is against the land, and not against the person. This is purely local law, and involves no Federal issue.

Wood v. Brady, 150 U. S. 18, 37 L. ed. 981, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 6.

The state court decided, also, that as a matter of fact, under the evidence before it the state law had been substantially complied with, and the court, having jurisdiction of the res, could lawfully sell. This is no Federal question.

Layton v. Missouri, 187 U. S. 356, 47 L. ed. 214, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 137; Smiley v. Kansas, 196 U. S. 447, 49 L. ed. 546, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 289; Telluride Power Transmission Co. v. Rio Grande Western R. Co. 187 U. S. 569, 47 L. ed. 307, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 178.

If the decision of the state court might have been on any other than a Federal ground, jurisdiction fails.

Capital Nat. Bank v. First Nat. Bank, supra; Allen v. Arguimbau, 198 U. S. 154, 49 L. ed. 993, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 622; Telluride Power Transmission Co. v. Rio Grande Western R. Co. supra.

*Mr. Chief Justice Fuller delivered the [276] opinion of the court:

We understand it to be conceded, as it must be, that no Federal question was raised on the record prior to judgment unless by the 11th clause of paragraph 5 of the first cause of action set forth in the complaint. The paragraph asserted in substance the invalidity of the tax deed in that the names of the real owners of the property were not given and the name of a person was given as owner who was not such; that the return of the assessor was insufficient; that the certificate of the county auditor was not attached to each book containing the tax list; that the delivery of the assessment rolls to the county treasurer was not strictly in compliance with law; that the names of the real owners were not given in the "Tax Judgment Sales, Redemption, and Forfeiture Record;" that the certificate of purchase was insufficient; that personal notice of the application for the tax deed was not given; that the affidavit of notice was insufficient; that Taylor had not paid all the previous taxes; that the signature to the tax deed was not sufficient. Copies of certificates, affidavit, etc., were set out with these specifications.

Then followed subdivision 11: "That all the proceedings in this paragraph hereinbefore enumerated was and were in violation of article 5 and the 1st section of article 14 of the Amendments to the Constitution of the United States, and of § 11 of article 1 of the Constitution of the state of Washington, in this: That they constituted an attempt to deprive plaintiffs of their property without due process of law."

The second class of cases in which the judgments and decrees of state courts may be re-examined here under § 709, Rev. Stat. (U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 575), consists of those "where is drawn in question the validity of a statute of, or an authority exercised under, any state on the ground of their being repugnant to the Constitution, treaties, or laws of the United States, and the decision is in favor of *their validity." [277]

Clause 11, thrown into paragraph 5, does not allege that the tax acts of the state of Washington for 1889, 1890, 1891, or 1893 are in themselves in conflict with the Constitution of the United States. Their validity was not drawn in question. Nor was the validity of an authority exercised under the state of Washington, for the power to hear and determine cases is not the kind of authority referred to. Bethell v. Demaret, 10 Wall. 537, 19 L. ed. 1007. It is certain acts of county officers and of defendants in error that are attacked by the clause as unconstitutional.

Indeed, counsel for plaintiff in error says in his brief that he does not contend "that the act itself is not sufficient to give due process," but he insists "that the manner of observance of that act is want of due process;" in other words, that the statutes had not been complied with. But the state supreme court held that the acts provided for taxation in rem; that notice was given as required; that giving the name of the owner was not essential to the validity of the assessment, and that the county officers and defendants in error had fully complied with the laws. So that subdivision 11, in attacking the proceedings, only objects to the determination of questions of local law or of fact, not in themselves reviewable here. Castillo v. McConnico, 168 U. S. 674, 683, 42 L. ed. 622, 625, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 229; Leigh v. Green, 193 U. S. 79, 48 L. ed. 623, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 390.

In Castillo v. McConnico, in which it was held that it was not the province of the court to interfere with the policy of the revenue laws of the states, nor with the interpretation given to them by their courts, and that an assessment could not be regarded as not constituting due process of law within the 14th Amendment because of error as to the name of the owner, if the state law might have dispensed with any requirement of mention of the name, Mr. Justice White said:

"The vice which underlies the entire argument of the plaintiff in error arises from a failure to distinguish between the essentials of due process of law under the 14th Amendment, and matters which may or may not be essential under the terms of a state as-[278] sessing or taxing law. The two are *neither correlative nor coterminous. The first—due process of law—must be found in the state statute, and cannot be departed from without violating the Constitution of the United States. The other depends on the lawmaking power of the state; and, as it is solely the result of such authority, may vary or change as the legislative will of the state sees fit to ordain. It follows that to determine the existence of the one—due process of law—is the final province of this court, whilst the ascertainment of the other, that is, what is merely essential under the state statute, is a state question, within the final jurisdiction of courts of last resort of the several states. When, then, a state court decides that a particular formality was or was not essential under the state statute, such decision presents no Federal question, providing always that the statute as thus construed does not violate the Constitution of the United States by depriving of property without due process of law. This paramount requirement being fulfilled, as to other matters the state interpretation of its own law is controlling and decisive."

In Leigh v. Green, it was held that a statute providing for taxation in rem was constitutional; that summary methods of seizure and sale could be had; that the court, having jurisdiction over the res, might proceed to adjudicate the right to the property; that the same could be sold and that a tax deed issued thereunder would be valid; and that such proceedings did not abridge the protection guaranteed by the Constitution against the taking of property without due process of law.

And this being so, it cannot be successfully contended that the right to due process of law under the 14th Amendment was specially set up or claimed by this 11th clause, and denied by the state supreme court.

It is said that Federal questions were raised on a petition for rehearing; but this is denied, and the petition is not in the record. But if it were true, the suggestion came too late, though if the supreme court had considered and decided such alleged Federal questions, we could take jurisdiction: but the *court did not do so. So as to the [279] petition for writ of error from this court, or the assignments of error here. They form no part of the record on which it is to be ascertained whether the state court decided a Federal question.

We are of opinion that no Federal question was raised at the proper time and in the proper way, and, moreover, that no Federal question was involved or decided.

Writ of error dismissed.

HARRY DONOVAN, George Callahan, Charles Lewis, M. M. Lee, Joseph Ward, W. H. Ashley, R. L. Taylor, I. Ganthier, I. Vaughn, et al., Petitioners,

v.

PENNSYLVANIA COMPANY.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 279-305.)

1. Carriers—excluding hackmen from

NOTE.—On use of carrier's premises by cabmen, hackmen, etc.—see notes to Cole v. Row-railway station and grounds.—A railway company which has made an arrangement with a transfer company to furnish at its passenger station all the vehicles necessary for the accommodation of the passengers arriving there on its trains or on the trains of other railroad companies using the station may legally exclude from the station and depot grounds all other hackmen or cabmen seeking entrance for the purpose of soliciting for themselves the custom or patronage of passengers.

2. Carriers—interference by hackmen with passengers entering or leaving railway station.—Licensed hackmen or cabmen, when not forbidden by valid municipal regulations, may, within reasonable limits, use the public sidewalk in front of, adjacent to, or about the main entrance to a railway passenger station in prosecuting their calling, but are not entitled to congregate upon such sidewalk so as to interfere with the ingress and egress of passengers and employees.

3. Injunction—adequate remedy at law—continuous injury.—The inadequacy of any remedy at law justifies injunctive relief against the constant, unlawful attempt of hackmen and cabmen to enter a railway passenger station and depot grounds to solicit patronage, and their use of the sidewalk in front of the station so as to interfere unduly with the ingress and egress of passengers.

[No. 5.]

Argued January 6, 1905. Decided November 27, 1905.

ON WRIT of Certiorari to the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Seventh Circuit to review a decree which affirmed a decree of the Circuit Court for the Northern District of Illinois, Northern Division, enjoining cabmen from entering a railway station and grounds to solicit custom, and from congregating upon the sidewalk in front of the station so as to interfere with the ingress and egress of passengers and employees. Affirmed.

See same case below, 60 C. C. A. 168, 124 Fed. 1016. On first appeal, 61 L. R. A. 140, 57 C. C. A. 362, 120 Fed. 215.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Messrs. Richard J. Cooney and James R. Ward, for petitioners:

No corporation or individual can acquire an exclusive right to the use of city streets for merely private purposes, and ordinances governing such use must be reasonable, not oppressive, or such as will create a monopoly or grant special privileges, or are in their nature class legislation, and must not be against public policy. They must operate impartially and they cannot discriminate between the same class, but must be uniform and apply to all alike.

Trotter v. Chicago, 33 Ill. App. 206, 136 Ill. 430, 26 N. E. 359; Chicago Dock & Canal Co. v. Garrity, 115 Ill. 155, 3 N. E. 448; Tugman v. Chicago, 78 Ill. 405; Chicago v. Rumpff, 45 Ill. 90, 92 Am. Dec. 200; Kinmundy v. Mahan, 72 Ill. 462; East St. Louis v. Wehrung, 50 Ill. 28; Danville v. Noone, 103 Ill. App. 290.

The occupations of hackmen, expressmen, and hotel runners are under the immediate control and supervision of the city of Chicago, and it is exclusively within its power to regulate and control these occupations.

Lindsay v. Anniston, 104 Ala. 257, 27 L.R.A. 436, 53 Am. St. Rep. 44, 16 So. 545.

The use of the street with the consent and acquiescence of the municipal authorities cannot be enjoined at the suit of an abutting property owner.

Doane v. Lake Street Elev. R. Co. 165 Ill. 510, 36 L.R.A. 97, 56 Am. St. Rep. 265, 46 N. E. 520; Murphy v. Chicago, 29 Ill. 279, 81 Am. Dec. 307; Stetson v. Chicago & E. R. Co. 75 Ill. 74; Patterson v. Chicago, D. & V. R. Co. 75 Ill. 588; Chicago, B. & Q. R. Co. v. McGinnis, 79 Ill. 269; Peoria & R. I. R. Co. v. Schertz, 84 Ill. 135; Penn Mut. L. Ins. Co. v. Heiss, 141 Ill. 35, 33 Am. St. Rep. 273, 31 N. E. 138; Corcoran v. Chicago, M. & N. R. Co. 149 Ill. 291, 37 N. E. 68; White v. Metropolitan West Side Elev. R. Co. 154 Ill. 620, 39 N. E. 270; Pittsburgh, C. C. & St. L. R. Co. v. Backus, 154 U. S. 421, 38 L. ed. 1031, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1114; Truesdale v. Peoria Grape Sugar Co. 101 Ill. 561; Dunning v. Aurora, 40 Ill. 481; Bliss v. Kennedy, 43 Ill. 67; Cook County v. Great Western R. Co. 119 Ill. 218, 10 N. E. 564; Tibbetts v. West & South Town Street R. Co. 54 Ill. App. 180; Chicago v. Union Bldg. Asso. 102 Ill. 380, 40 Am. Rep. 598; Clark v. Donaldson, 104 Ill. 639; Union Coal Co. v. La Salle, 136 Ill. 119, 12 L.R.A. 326, 26 N. E. 506; Hesing v. Scott, 107 Ill. 600; Miller v. Webster, 94 Iowa, 162, 62 N. W. 648; General Electric R. Co. v. Chicago City R. Co. 66 Ill. App. 362; Pennsylvania Co. v. Chicago, 181 Ill. 289, 53 L.R.A. 223, 54 N. E. 825.

The respondent, in coming into the state of Illinois seeking to do business here, owes obedience to the Constitution and the laws of the state and the ordinances of the city of Chicago enacted in pursuance thereof, and is answerable, according to the laws of the state of Illinois and the ordinances of the city of Chicago, for acts of nonfeasance or of misfeasance committed in such city.

---

en, 13 L.R.A. 848; and Donovan v. Pennsylvania Co. 57 C. C. A. 367.

On the jurisdiction of equity where remedy at law exists—see notes to Meldrum v. Meldrum, 11 L. R. A. 65; Delaware, L. & W. R. Co. v. Central Stock Yards & Transit Co. 6 L. R. A. 855; and Tyler v. Savage, 36 L. ed. U. S. 83.

St. Louis v. Western U. Teleg. Co. 148 U. S. 102, 37 L. ed. 384, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 485; New Orleans Waterworks Co. v. New Orleans, 164 U. S. 481, 41 L. ed. 523, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 161; Chicago, M. & St. P. R. Co. v. Solan, 169 U. S. 137, 42 L. ed. 692, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 289.

To permit the respondent to exercise the power and privilege, and enjoy an immunity, denied to other common carriers, would be beyond the power of the general assembly.

Noel v. People, 187 Ill. 594, 52 L.R.A. 287, 79 Am. St. Rep. 238, 58 N. E. 616; Horwich v. Walker-Gordon Laboratory Co. 205 Ill. 497, 98 Am. St. Rep. 254, 68 N. E. 938.

The title to the sidewalks, and the fee of the streets and control thereof, at the entrance to and abutting the Union Passenger Station of the Pennsylvania Company, are vested exclusively in the city of Chicago for public use.

Pennsylvania Co. v. Chicago, 181 Ill. 296, 53 L.R.A. 223, 54 N. E. 825; Barnes v. District of Columbia, 91 U. S. 547, 23 L. ed. 442.

The respondent devotes its property to a use in which the public has an interest. It, in effect, grants to the public an interest in that use, and subjects its property to be controlled by such regulations as may be prescribed by law by the legislative authorities of the state, and the city of Chicago, to whom are delegated by the state the power and authority to enact and enforce such regulations.

Cotting v. Kansas City Stock Yards Co. (Cotting v. Godard) 183 U. S. 84, 46 L. ed. 99, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 30; Brass v. North Dakota, 153 U. S. 400, 38 L. ed. 760, 4 Inters. Com. Rep. 670, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 857; Budd v. New York, 143 U. S. 531, 36 L. ed. 251, 4 Inters. Com. Rep. 45, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 468; Munn v. Illinois, 94 U. S. 113, 24 L. ed. 77; Illinois C. R. Co. v. Willenborg, 117 Ill. 209, 57 Am. Rep. 862, 7 N. E. 698.

The Pennsylvania Company could not lawfully, under the Constitution and laws of the state of Illinois, exclude from its Union Passenger Station in said city cabmen and carriage men duly licensed as such by the city of Chicago, and prohibit them from soliciting custom for their vehicles in said passenger station, such places being public highways and free to all persons, and, by contract, bestow the privilege upon the Parmelee Transfer Company, denied by it to petitioners, and thereby institute a partial hack service of its own, and discriminate against them, and build up a monopoly in the business, and directly or indirectly derive a profit from the maintenance of such monopoly.

Kalamazoo Hack & Bus Co. v. Sootsma, 84 Mich. 194, 10 L.R.A. 819, 22 Am. St. Rep. 693, 47 N. W. 667; Montana Union R. Co. v. Langlois, 9 Mont. 419, 8 L.R.A. 753, 18 Am. St. Rep. 745, 24 Pac. 209; McConnell v. Pedigo, 92 Ky. 465, 18 S. W. 15; Indianapolis Union R. Co. v. Dohn, 153 Ind. 10, 45 L.R.A. 427, 74 Am. St. Rep. 274, 53 N. E. 937; Cravens v. Rodgers, 101 Mo. 247, 14 S. W. 106; Lindsay v. Anniston, 104 Ala. 257, 27 L.R.A. 436, 53 Am. St. Rep. 44, 16 So. 545.

A court of equity is not open to the litigant whose acts are violations of law and opposed to public policy and the organic statute law of the state, and who seeks its sanction and aid to enforce a contract ultra vires, and maintain a monopoly. It will not grant such relief under such circumstances.

McConnell v. Pedigo, Montana Union R. Co. v. Langlois, Indianapolis Union R. Co. v. Dohn, Cravens v. Rodgers, and Kalamazoo Hack & Bus Co. v. Sootsma, supra.

The relation of carrier and passenger is not involved in this case, nor is it exercised upon this record; but the exercise of police power, and the authority to prevent and regulate monopolies, and regulate sidewalks and traffic on the same, are involved,—attributes of state sovereignty which belong exclusively to the state and its political subdivisions and agents.

United States v. E. C. Knight Co. 156 U. S. 11, 39 L. ed. 328, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 249; Barnes v. District of Columbia, 91 U. S. 547, 23 L. ed. 442; Slaughter House Cases, 16 Wall. 63, 21 L. ed. 404; New York v. Miln, 11 Pet. 139, 9 L. ed. 662.

If respondent is so injured that it has a right to complain, it has an adequate remedy at law, which precludes relief in equity.

Richards v. Lake Shore & M. S. R. Co. 124 Ill. 516, 16 N. E. 909; Chicago, M. & St. P. R. Co. v. Darke, 148 Ill. 226, 35 N. E. 750; Lake Erie & W. R. Co. v. Scott, 132 Ill. 429, 8 L.R.A. 330, 24 N. E. 78; Chicago & A. R. Co. v. Robbins, 159 Ill. 598, 43 N. E. 332; Galt v. Chicago & N. W. R. Co. 157 Ill. 125, 41 N. E. 643; Rigney v. Chicago, 102 Ill. 64; Chicago & W. I. R. Co. v. Ayres, 106 Ill. 511; Pittsburg, Ft. W. & C. R. Co. v. Reich, 101 Ill. 157; Chicago, R. I. & P. R. Co. v. Stein, 75 Ill. 41; Ottawa Gaslight & Coke Co. v. Graham, 28 Ill. 73, 81 Am. Dec. 263; Illinois C. R. Co. v. Grabill, 50 Ill. 242.

Where the relief prayed for, if granted, would be of great injury to the petitioners, and not of a corresponding benefit to the respondent, an injunction will be denied.

Pratt v. New York C. & H. R. R. Co. 90 Hun, 83, 35 N. Y. Supp. 577; Gray v. Man- hattan R. Co. 128 N. Y. 509, 28 N. E. 498; Harlan & H. Co. v. Paschall, 5 Del. Ch. 435; Fobes v. Rome, W. & O. R. Co. 121 N. Y. 505, 8 L.R.A. 453, 24 N. E. 919; Jacksonville, T. & K. W. R. Co. v. Adams, 28 Fla. 656, 14 L.R.A. 533, 10 So. 465; Amerman v. Deane, 132 N. Y. 355, 28 Am. St. Rep. 584, 30 N. E. 741; Interstate Commerce Commission v. Cincinnati, N. O. & T. P. R. Co. 5 Inters. Com. Rep. 131, 64 Fed. 981; Wason v. Sanborn, 45 N. H. 171; High, Inj. 596.

The outside facilities at a depot must be equal; there can be no privileges shown there.

Godbout v. St. Paul Union Depot Co. 79 Minn. 188, 47 L.R.A. 532, 81 N. W. 835.

A railroad company or depot cannot make arbitrary rules discriminating as to who may occupy cab stands, and as to who shall solicit passengers therefrom.

Ray. Pass. Carr. §§ 113–115; 1 Fetter, Carr. Pass. § 245, p. 638; 26 Am. & Eng. Enc. Law, 2d ed. p. 505; Montana Union R. Co. v. Langlois, 9 Mont. 419, 8 L.R.A. 753, and note, 18 Am. St. Rep. 745, 24 Pac. 209; Markham v. Brown, 8 N. H. 523, 31 Am. Dec. 209; Cravens v. Rodgers, 101 Mo. 247, 14 S. W. 106; Kalamazoo Hack & Bus Co. v. Sootsma, 84 Mich. 194, 10 L.R.A. 819, 22 Am. St. Rep. 693, 47 N. W. 667; Marriott v. London & S. W. R. Co. 1 C. B. N. S. 499; Palmer v. London, B. & S. C. R. Co. L. R. 6 C. P. 194; Camblos v. Philadelphia & R. R. Co. 9 Phila. 411, Fed. Cas No. 2,331; New England Exp. Co. v. Maine C. R. Co. 57 Me. 188, 2 Am. Rep. 31; Summitt v. State, 8 Lea, 413, 41 Am. Rep. 637; State v. Reed, 76 Miss. 211, 43 L.R.A. 134, 71 Am. St. Rep. 528, 24 So. 308; Indianapolis Union R. Co. v. Dohn, 153 Ind. 10, 45 L.R.A. 427, 74 Am. St. Rep. 274, 53 N. E. 937; Lucas v. Herbert, 148 Ind. 64, 37 L.R.A. 376, 47 N. E. 146; Cole v. Rowen, 88 Mich. 219, 13 L.R.A. 848, 50 N. W. 138; McConnell v. Pedigo, 92 Ky. 465, 18 S. W. 15; Pennsylvania Co. v. Chicago, 181 Ill. 289, 53 L.R.A. 223, 54 N. E. 825; Lindsay v. Anniston, 104 Ala. 257, 27 L.R.A. 436, 53 Am. St. Rep. 44, 16 So. 545; Indian River S. B. Co. v. East Coast Transp. Co. 28 Fla. 387, 29 Am. St. Rep. 258, 10 So. 480.

Messrs. Frank J. Loesch, Edgar A. Bancroft, and Charles F. Loesch for respondent:

Cabmen and expressmen have no right to enter a railroad station for the purpose of soliciting patronage there without the consent of the railroad company. The stations, like the railroads, are impressed with a public use, and are open to all having contractual relations with the company or its passengers; but this does not embrace the right to carry on any private business in any station or train without the consent of the company. It may grant an exclusive license to one person to solicit custom of incoming passengers in its station, and exclude all others from the like privilege.

Jencks v. Coleman, 2 Sumn. 221, Fed. Cas. No. 7,258; Com. v. Power, 7 Met. 596, 41 Am. Dec. 465; Barker v. Midland R. Co. 18 C. B. 46; Marriott v. London & S. W. R. Co. 1 C. B. N. S. 499; Beadell v. Eastern Counties R. Co. 2 C. B. N. S. 509; Painter v. London, B. & S. C. R. Co. 2 C. B. N. S. 702; The D. R. Martin, 11 Blatchf. 234, Fed. Cas. No. 1,030; Barney v. Oyster Bay & H. S. B. Co. 67 N. Y. 301, 23 Am. Rep. 115; Express Cases, 117 U. S. 1, 29 L. ed. 791, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 542, 628; Old Colony R. Co. v. Tripp, 147 Mass. 35, 9 Am. St. Rep. 661, 17 N. E. 89; Com. v. Carey, 147 Mass. 40, note, 17 N. E. 97; Fluker v. Georgia R. & Bkg. Co. 81 Ga. 461, 2 L.R.A. 843, 12 Am. St. Rep. 328, 8 S. E. 529; Griswold v. Webb, 16 R. I. 649, 7 L.R.A. 302, 19 Atl. 143; Chicago, St. L. & N. O. R. Co. v. Pullman Southern Car Co. 139 U. S. 79, 35 L. ed. 97, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 490; Smith v. New York, L. E. & W. R. Co. 149 Pa. 249, 24 Atl. 304; New York C. & H. R. R. Co. v. Flynn, 74 Hun, 124, 26 N. Y. Supp. 859; New York C. & H. R. R. Co. v. Sheeley, 57 N. Y. S. R. 766, 27 N. Y. Supp. 185; Brown v. New York C. & H. R. R. Co. 75 Hun, 355, 27 N. Y. Supp. 69, Affirmed in 151 N. Y. 674, 46 N. E. 1145; Summitt v. State, 8 Lea, 413, 41 Am. Rep. 637; Lucas v. Herbert 148 Ind. 64, 37 L.R.A. 376, 47 N. E. 146 New York, N. H. & H. R. Co. v. Scovil 71 Conn. 136, 42 L.R.A. 157, 71 Am. S. Rep. 159, 41 Atl. 246; Snyder v. Union Depot Co. 19 Ohio C. C. 368; Kates v. Atlanta Baggage & Cab Co. 107 Ga. 636, 46 L.R.A. 431, 34 S. E. 372; Godbout v. St. Paul Union Depot Co. 79 Minn. 188, 47 L.R.A. 532, 81 N. W. 835; New York C. & H. R. R. Co. v. Warren, 31 Misc. 571, 64 N. Y. Supp. 781; Boston & A. R. Co. v. Brown, 177 Mass. 65, 52 L.R.A. 418, 58 N. E. 189; Boston & M. R. Co. v. Sullivan, 177 Mass. 230, 83 Am. St. Rep. 275, 58 N. E. 689; New York, N. H. & H. R. Co. v. Bork, 23 R. I. 218, 49 Atl. 965; St. Louis Drayage Co. v. Louisville & N. R. Co. 5 Inters. Com. Rep. 137, 65 Fed. 39; Donovan v. Pennsylvania Co. 61 L.R.A. 140, 57 C. C. A. 362, 120 Fed. 215; Hedding v. Gallagher. 72 N. H. 377, 64 L.R.A. 811, 57 Atl. 225.

Respondent has the legal right to free and unobstructed entrance to its passenger station from Canal street. Such right is a property right; and the obstruction of such entrance by the petitioners gathering there in large numbers to ply their vocations is a private nuisance. The allegations of respondent's bill are fully sustained by the proof.

Benjamin v. Storr, L. R. 9 C. P. 400; Lyon v. Fishmongers Co. L. R. 1. App. Cas. 662; Fritz v. Hobson, L. R. 14 Ch. Div. 542; Jaques v. National Exhibit Co. 15 Abb. N. C. 250; Hallock v. Scheyer, 33 Hun, 111; Flynn v. Taylor, 53 Hun, 167, 6 N. Y. Supp. 96, 127 N. Y. 596, 14 L.R.A. 556, 28 N. E. 418; Callanan v. Gilman, 107 N. Y. 360, 1 Am. St. Rep. 831, 14 N. E. 264; Cohen v. New York, 113 N. Y. 532, 4 L.R.A. 406, 10 Am. St. Rep. 506, 21 N. E. 700; Carter v. Chicago, 57 Ill. 283; Field v. Barling, 149 Ill. 557, 24 L.R.A. 406, 41 Am. St. Rep. 311, 37 N. E. 850; Newell v. Sass, 142 Ill. 104, 31 N. E. 176; Hart v. Buckner, 5 C. C. A. 1, 2 U. S. App. 488, 54 Fed. 925; McDonald v. Newark, 42 N. J. Eq. 136, 7 Atl. 855; 2 Dill. Mun. Corp. 4th ed. § 587, note, 656a; 1 Lewis, Em. Dom. 2d ed. pp. 170–196; McQuaid v. Portland & V. R. Co. 18 Or. 237, 22 Pac. 899; 1 Am. & Eng. Enc. Law, 2d ed. pp. 225, 238; Elliott, Roads & Streets, 2d ed. p. 761; Branahan v. Cincinnati Hotel Co. 39 Ohio St. 333, 48 Am. Rep. 457; Lahr v. Metropolitan Elev. R. Co. 104 N. Y. 268, 10 N. E. 528; Hedding v. Gallagher, 72 N. H. 377, 64 L.R.A. 811, 57 Atl. 225.

Injunction is the only adequate remedy in the case at bar.

1 Spelling, Inj. & Extr. Rem. 2d ed. §§ 338, 340; 1 Am. & Eng. Enc. Law, 2d ed. p. 225; 2 Lewis, Em. Dom. 2d ed. § 638; 1 High, Inj. §§ 816, 820; Hilliard, Inj. 2d ed. § 328; 2 Dill. Mun. Corp. 4th ed. § 661; Elliott, Roads & Streets, 2d ed. § 709; Pennsylvania Co. v. Chicago, 181 Ill. 289, 53 L.R.A. 223, 54 N. E. 825; Carter v. Chicago, 57 Ill. 283; Edwards v. Haeger, 180 Ill. 99, 54 N. E. 176; Lowery v. Pekin, 186 Ill. 387, 51 L.R.A. 301, 57 N. E. 1062; Chicago General R. Co. v. Chicago, B. & Q. R. Co. 181 Ill. 605, 54 N. E. 1026; London & N. W. R. Co. v. Lancashire & Y. R. Co. L. R. 4 Eq. 174; New York C. & H. R. R. Co. v. Flynn, 74 Hun, 124, 26 N. Y. Supp. 859; Brown v. New York C. & H. R. R. Co. 75 Hun, 355, 27 N. Y. Supp. 69; New York C. & H. R. R. Co. v. Sheeley, 57 N. Y. S. R. 766, 27 N. Y. Supp. 185; New York C. & H. R. R. Co. v. Warren, 31 Misc. 571, 64 N. Y. Supp. 781; Snyder v. Union Depot Co. 19 Ohio C. C. 368; New York, N. H. & H. R. Co. v. Scovill, 71 Conn. 136, 42 L.R.A. 157, 71 Am. St. Rep. 159, 41 Atl. 246; Boston & M. R. Co. v. Sullivan, 177 Mass. 230, 83 Am. St. Rep. 275, 58 N. E. 189; Goodson v. Richardson, L. R. 9 Ch. 221; Seattle Gas & Electric Co. v. Citizens' Light & P. Co. 123 Fed. 588.

Mr. Justice Harlan delivered the opinion of the court:

This suit involves some questions as to the relative rights of the parties in the use of a railroad passenger station and depot grounds, and in the use of the public sidewalk and street adjacent to such station and grounds.

The facts out of which the controversy has arisen are clearly established, and may thus be summarized:

By a lease executed in 1871 the Pennsylvania Company, a corporation of Pennsylvania, engaged in transporting passengers and freight by railroad, acquired the possession and control of the Pittsburg, Fort Wayne, & Chicago Railway and all its rolling stock and property,—the latter railway extending from Pittsburg to a passenger station at or near the corner of Canal and Adams streets, in Chicago.

In 1880 the lessee company erected on the leased premises a new passenger house, now known as the Union Passenger Station, which ever since has been and is now occupied and used by it and its tenants, the Chicago & Alton Railway Company, the Chicago, Burlington, & Quincy Railway Company, the Chicago, Milwaukee, & St. Paul Railway Company, and the Pittsburg, Cincinnati, Chicago, & St. Louis Railway Company. The companies just named occupy and use that station under a perpetual lease by which the Pennsylvania Company, as between it and its tenants, has charge of the station, with authority to control and manage all trains therein as well as all watchmen and employees in the business there transacted.

*This passenger station is the only termi-[281] nus in Chicago of each of those lines of railway, and through that station alone can the several companies using it conduct an exchange of passengers and baggage and the transportation and handling of the United States mail and express parcels.

The extent of the business done at that station is indicated by the statement that the Chicago & Alton Railway Company controls and operates in the transaction of what is commonly called interstate business over 1,000 miles of railway; the Chicago, Burlington, & Quincy Railway Company, over 7,000 miles; the Chicago, Milwaukee, & St. Paul Railway Company, over 6,000 miles; the Pittsburg, Cincinnati, Chicago, & St. Louis Railway Company, over 1,400 miles; and the Pennsylvania Company, over 1,000 miles.

At this station the average number of passengers arriving and departing is over 30,000 each day; the average number of parcels of baggage daily received and delivered is over 2,200, and the average number of tons of United States mail daily received and delivered is over 250. Passenger trains to the number of 250 arrive and depart each day. This statement does not include the large number of express parcels daily handled at the station.

All tickets of interstate passengers arriving and departing from this station, known as through tickets, have attached to each a check or coupon for conveyance through Chicago to the station of the connecting line of railroad designated on such tickets, and not running into or out of the passenger depot of the Pennsylvania Company. The latter company and the other companies named have contracts for the use of a line of omnibuses or conveyances for the performance of the services called for by such coupons or checks, and those omnibuses or conveyances form the only regular connecting lines of transportation between the Pennsylvania Company's station and the stations of other railways in Chicago.

[282] *Besides the Pennsylvania Company's station there are five other railway stations in Chicago.

The main entrance to and exits from the Pennsylvania Company's station for passengers, for employees, and for the public using the station, is on Canal street, about 100 feet north of Adams street. Substantially all passengers, whether arriving or departing, pass through that entrance, which is at the head of a flight of stairs leading down to and up from the station platform upon which trains arrive and depart.

The present suit was instituted by the Pennsylvania Company against the defendant Donovan and others, citizens of Illinois, for the purpose of protecting that company in the enjoyment of certain alleged rights and privileges in respect of its passenger station and depot grounds in Chicago. The plaintiff alleged that those rights had been violated by the defendants, and, unless enjoined from so doing, they would continue to violate them, to its great damage.

After referring to its efforts for many years to protect incoming and outgoing passengers from extortion and annoyance practised by local hackmen, expressmen, and hotel runners congregating about its station, and noisily soliciting the patronage of passengers, the plaintiff, besides stating the above facts, alleged that it was compelled, in 1894, to institute a partial hack service of its own; and, for the purpose of protecting the rights of passengers, it made, on the 31st day of December, 1894, an arrangement, or contract, with one Eighme for the purpose of furnishing sufficient carriage and cab service to passengers arriving at its station, and gave to him for a carriage stand a small piece of ground, about 32 feet wide and about 10 feet long, in the northwest corner of its passenger station, at the corner of Madison street, near its power house, requiring him to keep at all times clean vehicles, carriages, and cabs with uniformed, honest, and competent drivers, who would be satisfactory to the company; to make charges for the use of such carriages and cabs only in accordance with the ordinances of the city of Chicago; that Eighme *had [283] been allowed to place an agent inside the company's station to notify passengers that suitable cabs and carriages could be obtained from such agent; that, by means of such arrangement, the company made full provision for the wants of incoming passengers desiring cabs or carriages for transportation from its station to any part of Chicago. The arrangement or agreement with Eighme was terminated by the company on the 31st day of January, A. D. 1902, and a similar arrangement was made with the Parmelee Transfer Company, which thereafter succeeded Eighme in the same business, and now carried it on in the same manner.

The plaintiff charged a conspiracy and confederation among the defendants—hack drivers and members of the Chicago Hack, Coupé, & Cab Drivers' Union—to injure its business and property rights, alleging that they daily gathered in numbers from eight to twenty men at a time, in rows and groups, upon the sidewalk in front of its main entrance, entered the company's station at its main entrance by twos and threes at a time, without plaintiff's consent and against its express objections, and in loud and boisterous voices and manner solicited incoming passengers and baggage for their vehicles; that defendants, by their numbers and noisy calls, harassed and annoyed passengers, sometimes forcibly laying hold of them when leaving the station in order to secure their patronage, to the annoyance and confusion of passengers, and to the injury and damage of the plaintiffs; that the number of the defendants, upon the arrival of each train at the entrance and within the station, soliciting businesses, had become so great that by their boisterous actions and obstruction of the sidewalk and the interior of plaintiff's station, without its consent, they had in large part deprived plaintiff of its lawful property rights in the street frontage, and of the free and full use of its station and property, and thereby created and continued a private nuisance damaging to the plaintiff's property, depriving it of the full, lawful, beneficial use of its station and street frontage, and of the main entrance thereto, and had prevented *and now daily pre- [284] vented it from securing to passengers a free and uninterrupted passage from and to its station and to arriving and departing trains; and that by such acts of the defendants great and substantial damages were inflicted upon plaintiff's property, different in kind and degree from that suffered by the general public, incapable of computation, and which could not be compensated at law.

It was further averred in the bill that the defendants asserted the right—and acted upon that claim and assertion—to enter the station of the plaintiff at all times, in such numbers as suited their purposes, to remain there and occupy such portions of the station as they saw fit in soliciting the custom of incoming passengers, regardless of the consent or the regulations of the plaintiff, or the use to which its property is lawfully devoted, and to the prejudice of its duties and business as a common carrier, and by their actions largely deprived the plaintiff of the control of its property, to its irreparable loss and damage.

Alleging that its rights could not be effectively protected except by the decree of a court of equity, the plaintiff prayed that the defendants be perpetually enjoined from "entering the station" of the plaintiff "for the purpose of soliciting the custom of incoming passengers for cabs, carriages, express wagons, or hotels, respectively; and that the occupation of the sidewalk and street abutting the main entrance of your orator's said station by said defendants for the purpose of soliciting custom of passengers for their said cabs, carriages, express wagons, and hotels be decreed to be a nuisance to your orator, and damaging to its property; and that said defendants and each of them, and all persons acting in concert with them, whose names are unknown to your orator, may be perpetually enjoined from congregating singly or in larger numbers upon the said sidewalk at the main or any other entrance of your orator's said station for the purpose of plying their respective vocations as hackmen, cabmen, expressmen, or hotel runners, and from interfering with or soliciting the custom of any of the [285] passengers *upon the sidewalk adjoining said station at any main or other entrance to said station; and that your orator may have such other and further relief in the premises as the nature of its case may require, and to your honors shall seem meet."

The defendants filed an answer, putting in issue the material allegations of the bill, and insisting upon their legal right to have their vehicles in the public street in front of the company's station, and to go upon the plaintiff's depot grounds or into its station, as well as to stand upon the sidewalk in front of the main entrance to the station, for the purpose of soliciting the business of incoming or outgoing passengers.

A motion for an injunction against the defendants was heard upon the pleadings and upon affidavits filed by the respective parties. The circuit court granted a preliminary injunction to the effect that the defendants and all persons claiming to act under their authority, direction, or control, or to whom notice of the court's order or injunction should come, refrain "from entering the passenger station of complainant at the corner of Adams and Canal streets, in the city of Chicago, to solicit custom of the incoming passengers for cabs, carriages, express wagons, or hotels, and do absolutely desist and refrain from congregating upon the sidewalk in front of, adjacent to, or about such entrances to said passenger station, and from soliciting the custom of passengers for cabs, carriages, express wagons, or hotels until the further order of the court in the premises."

The defendants appealed from that order, and it was affirmed in the circuit court of appeals, except the last clause thereof, which was modified by restraining the defendants "from congregating upon the sidewalk in front of, adjacent to, or about the entrances of appellee's [company's] passenger station . . . and from there soliciting the custom of passengers, so as to interfere with the ingress and egress of passengers and employees." 61 L. R. A. 140, 57 C. C. A. 362, 120 Fed. 215. Subsequently, a final decree was passed in the circuit court in conformity with the above order of the circuit court of appeals. *That decree, [286] upon appeal by the defendants, was affirmed in the latter court, and the case is now before this court upon writ of certiorari, sued out by the defendants.

As this case is before us on writ of certiorari, we can dispose of all questions arising on the record.

Upon the pleadings two principal inquiries arise: First, whether the Pennsylvania Company, having made an arrangement with the Parmelee Transfer Company to furnish, at its passenger station, from time to time, all vehicles necessary for the accommodation of passengers arriving there on its trains or on the trains of other railroad companies, may legally exclude from its depot grounds or passenger station all hackmen or expressmen coming to either for the purpose only of soliciting for themselves the custom or patronage of passengers. Second, whether, in virtue of its ownership of the passenger station and depot grounds in question, the railroad company is entitled, in prosecuting its business, to any greater privileges in respect of the use of the sidewalk and street in front of the main entrance to such station than belonged to the defendants in the prosecution of their business.

Much has been said in argument as to the functions and duties of railroad companies. Under the decisions of this court there can be no doubt as to the nature of those functions or duties. In New Jersey Steam Nav. Co. v. Merchants' Bank, 6 How. 344, 382, 12 L. ed. 465, 482, this court held that a corporation engaged, under legislative authority, in the transportation of passengers and freight over navigable waters, was "in the exercise of a sort of public office, and has public duties to perform." In Olcott v. Fond du Lac County, 16 Wall. 678, 694, 695, 21 L. ed. 382, 388, it was adjudged that a railroad, whether constructed by a private corporation or by in-[293] dividuals under the authority of a *legislative grant, or by the state itself, was a public highway, and that the function performed by the corporation was that of the state, and the uses to which its property was devoted were of a public nature. In Queensbury v. Culver, 19 Wall. 83, 91, 22 L. ed. 100, 104, it was said that the construction or maintenance of a public highway was "for the promotion of a public use." So in Pine Grove Twp. v. Talcott, 19 Wall. 666, 676, 22 L. ed. 227, 233, which involved the validity of taxation, under legislative authority, to aid in the construction of a railroad by a corporation: "Though the corporation was private, its work was public, as much so as if it were to be constructed by the state." Again, in Cherokee Nation v. Southern Kansas R. Co. 135 U. S. 641, 657, 34 L. ed. 295, 302, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 965, 971: "The question is no longer an open one, as to whether a railroad is a public highway, established primarily for the convenience of the people, and to subserve public ends, and therefore subject to governmental control and regulation. It is because it is a public highway, and subject to such control, that the corporation by which it is constructed, and by which it is to be maintained, may be permitted, under legislative sanction, to appropriate private property for the purposes of a right of way, upon making just compensation to the owner in the mode prescribed by law." To the same effect are United States v. Trans-Missouri Freight Asso. 166 U. S. 290, 332, 41 L. ed. 1007, 1024, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 540; Smyth v. Ames, 169 U. S. 466, 544, 42 L. ed. 819, 848, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 418; Lake Shore & M. S. R. Co. v. Ohio, 173 U. S. 285, 301, 43 L. ed. 702, 708, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 465. Necessarily, the same principles apply in reference to the use of the company's station house and depot grounds; for they are held in the same right as are its road, its locomotives, and other property or appliances employed in the transportation of passengers and freight, and must be devoted primarily to public use to the extent necessary for the public objects intended to be accomplished by the construction and maintenance of the railroad as a highway.

It by no means follows, however, that the company may not establish such reasonable rules, in respect of the use of its property, as the public convenience and its interests may suggest, provided only that such rules are consistent with the *ends for which the[294] corporation was created, and not inconsistent with public regulations legally established for the conduct of its business. Although its functions are public in their nature, the company holds the legal title to the property which it has undertaken to employ in the discharge of those functions. And, as incident to ownership, it may use the property for the purposes of making profit for itself; such use, however, being always subject to the condition that the property must be devoted primarily to public objects, without discrimination among passengers and shippers, and not be so managed as to defeat these objects. It is required, under all circumstances, to do what may be reasonably necessary and suitable for the accommodation of passengers and shippers. But it is under no obligation to refrain from using its property to the best advantage of the public and of itself. It is not bound to so use its property that others, having no business with it, may make profit to themselves. Its property is to be deemed, in every legal sense, private property as between it and those of the general public who have no occasion to use it for purposes of transportation. In Western U. Teleg. Co. v. Pennsylvania R. Co. 195 U. S. 540, 49 L. ed. 312, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 133, the court considered the nature of the interest which a railroad company had in its right of way. It was there said: "A railroad's right of way has, therefore, the substantiality of the fee, and it is private property even to the public in all else but an interest and benefit in its uses. It cannot be invaded without guilt of trespass. It cannot be appropriated in whole or part except upon the payment of compensation. In other words, it is entitled to the protection of the Constitution, and in the precise manner in which protection is given." In that case the court referred, with approval, to the observation of the supreme court of Pennsylvania in Philadelphia & R. R. Co. v. Hummell, 44 Pa. 375, 84 Am. Dec. 457, to the effect "that a railroad company is a purchaser, in consideration of public accommodation and convenience, of the exclusive possession of the ground paid for to the proprietors of it." So, in *Pittsburgh, Ft. W. & C. R. Co.[295] v. Bingham, 29 Ohio St. 370, 371, 23 Am. Rep. 751, the supreme court of Ohio said that "for all purposes not connected with the operation of its road, the right of the company to the exclusive use and enjoyment of the corporate property is as perfect and absolute as is that of an owner of real property not burdened with public or private easements or servitudes."

Applying these principles to the case before us, it would seem to be clear that the Pennsylvania Company had the right—if it was not its legal duty—to erect and maintain a passenger station and depot buildings in Chicago for the accommodation of passengers and shippers as well as for its own benefit; and that it was its duty to manage that station so as to subserve, primarily, the convenience, comfort, and safety of passengers and the wants of shippers. It was therefore its duty to see to it that passengers were not annoyed, disturbed, or obstructed in the use either of its station house or of the grounds over which such passengers, whether arriving or departing, would pass. It was to that end—primarily, as we may assume from the record—that the Pennsylvania Company made an arrangement with a single company to supply all vehicles necessary for passengers. We cannot say that that arrangement was either unnccessary, unreasonable, or arbitrary; on the contrary, it is easy to see how, in a great city, and in a constantly crowded railway station, such an arrangement might promote the comfort and convenicnce of passengers arriving and departing, as well as the efficient conduct of the company's business. The record does not show that the arrangement referred to was inadequate for the accommodation of passengers. But if inadequate, or if the transfer company was allowed to charge exorbitant prices, it was for passengers to complain of neglect of duty by the railroad company, and for the constituted authorities to take steps to compel the company to perform its public functions with due regard to the rights of passengers. The question of any failure of the company to properly care for the convenience of pas-[296] sengers *was not one that, in any legal aspect, concerned the defendants as licensed hackmen and cabmen. It was not for them to vindicate the rights of passengers. They only sought to use the property of the railroad company to make profit in the prosecution of their particular business. A hackman, in nowise connected with the railroad company, cannot, of right and against the objections of the company, go upon its grounds or into its station or cars for the purpose simply of soliciting the custom of passengers; but, of course, a passenger, upon arriving at the station, in whatever vehicle, is entitled to have such facilities for his entering the company's depot as may be necessary.

Here the defendants press the suggestion that they are entitled to the same rights as were accorded by special arrangement to the Parmelee Transfer Company. They insist, in effect, that, as carriers of passengers, they are entitled to transact their business at any place which, under the authority of law, is devoted primarily to public uses,—certainly, at any place open to another carrier engaged in the same kind of business. But this contention, when applied to the present case, cannot be sustained. The railroad company was not bound to accord this particular privilege to the defendants simply because it had accorded a like privilege to the Parmelee Transfer Company; for it had no contractual relations with the defendants, and owed them, as hackmen, no duty to aid them in their special calling. The defendants did not have, or profess to have, any business of their own with the company. In meeting their obligations to the public, whatever the nature of those obligations, the defendants could use any property owned by them, but they could not, of right, use the property of others against their consent. In maintaining a highway, under the authority of the state, the first and paramount obligation of the railroad company was, as we have already said, to consult the comfort and convenience of the public who used that highway. To that end it could use all suitable means that were not forbidden by law. In its discretion it *could accept the aid or [297] stipulate for the services of others. But, after providing fully for the wants of passengers and shippers, it did not undertake, expressly or by implication, to so use its property as to benefit those who had no business or connection with it. It is true that by its arrangement with the railroad company the Parmelee company was given an opportunity to control, to a great extent, the business of carrying passengers from the Union Passengers' Depot to other railway stations and to hotels or private houses in Chicago. But in a real, substantial, legal sense, that arrangement cannot be regarded as a monopoly in the odious sense of that word, nor does it involve an improper use by the railroad company of its property. That arrangement is to be deemed, not unreasonably, a means devised for the convenience of passengers and of the railroad company, and as involving such use by the company of its property as is consistent with the proper performance of its public duties and its ownership of the property in question. If the company, by such use of its property, also derived pecuniary profit for itself, that was a matter of no concern to the defendants, and gave them no ground of complaint.

This question is not controlled by any statute of Illinois. Reference has been made to the Illinois act as amended in 1883, by which it is provided that every railroad in that state shall, "at all junctions with other railroads, at all depots where said railroad companies stop their trains regularly to receive and discharge passengers in cities and villages, for at least one-half hour before the arrival of, and one-half hour after the arrival of, any passenger train, cause their respective depots to be open for the reception of passengers; said depots to be kept well lighted and warmed for the space of time aforesaid;" also, to the act of 1877, as amended in 1895, by which it is provided, "that all railroads in this state carrying passengers or freight shall, and they are hereby required to, build and maintain depots for the comfort of passengers and for the protection of shippers of freight, where such [298] railroad *companies are in the practice of receiving and delivering passengers and freight, at all towns and villages having a population of two hundred or more, on the line of their roads and roads leased and operated by them." Hurd's Rev. Stat. (Ill.) 1901, pp. 1378, 1385. Clearly, these statutes have nothing to do with the matter before us. They relate only to the comfort and convenience of passengers and shippers of freight, and do not confer or assume to confer any rights on hackmen or cabmen who seek to enter the depot grounds and station of the railroad company merely to solicit business for themselves. It does not appear that the state has undertaken by any statute to compel the railroad company to share the use of its depot grounds and station with hackmen and cabmen seeking to use them only to solicit custom for themselves. Whether such a statute would be valid, we need not now consider or determine.

In the Express Cases, 117 U. S. 1, 24, 29 L. ed. 791, 801, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 542, 554, 628, which involved a general inquiry as to the respective rights of railroad and express companies in respect of the use of railroads for the transportation of express parcels, this court said: "So long as the public are served to their reasonable satisfaction, it is a matter of no importance who serves them. The railroad company performs its whole duty to the public at large and to each individual when it affords the public all reasonable express accommodations. If this is done, the railroad company owes no duty to the public as to the particular agencies it shall select for that purpose. The public require the carriage, but the company may choose its own appropriate means of carriage, always provided they are such as to insure reasonable promptness and security."

In Chicago, St. L. & N. O. R. Co. v. Pullman Southern Car Co. 139 U. S. 79, 87, 35 L. ed. 97, 100, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 490, one of the questions was as to the validity of a contract between a railroad company and the Pullman company, whereby the latter was given the exclusive right for fifteen years to furnish drawing-room and sleeping cars to be used by the former, and whereby, also, the railroad company stipulated *that during that term it would not con- [299] tract to give a like privilege to other sleeping-car companies. That contract was assailed as one in restraint of trade and as being against public policy. This court said: "The authorities cited in support of this contention have no application to such a contract as the one before us. The defendant was under a duty arising from the public nature of its employment to furnish for the use of passengers on its lines such accommodations as were reasonably required by the existing conditions of passenger traffic. Its duty as a carrier of passengers was to make suitable provisions for their comfort and safety. Instead of furnishing its own drawing-room and sleeping cars, as it might have done, it employed the plaintiff, whose special business was to provide cars of that character, to supply as many as were necessary to meet the requirements of travel. It thus used the instrumentality of another corporation in order that it might properly discharge its duty to the public. So long as the defendant's lines were supplied with the requisite number of drawing-room and sleeping cars, it was a matter of indifference to the public who owned them. Express Cases, 117 U. S. 1, 29 L. ed. 791, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 542, 628."

The views we have expressed find more or less support in numerous adjudged cases, some of which are cited in the margin.† There are cases to the contrary, but, in our opinion, the better view—the one sustained by the clear weight of *authority and [300] by sound reason and public policy—is that which we have expressed.

The defendants cite, as supporting their contention, Pennsylvania Co. v. Chicago, 181 Ill. 289, 53 L. R. A. 223, 54 N. E. 825. But that case did not involve any question as to the right of licensed cabmen to enter the station house of a railroad company, against its objection, solely for the purpose of soliciting the custom of passengers. What appears in the opinion of the majority, and in the particular cases cited by the learned †Jencks v. Coleman, 2 Sumn. 221, Fed. Cas. No. 7,258; The D. R. Martin, 11 Blatchf. 233, Fed. Cas. No. 1,030; Com. v. Power, 7 Met. 596, 41 Am. Dec. 465; Barney v. Oyster Bay S. B. Co. 67 N. Y. 301; Old Colony R. Co. v. Tripp, 147 Mass. 35, 9 Am. St. Rep. 661, 17 N. E. 89; Com.

state court, on that point, was, we feel constrained to say, outside of the issues presented, and cannot be deemed authoritative upon the question now being considered. The sole issue in that case was as to the validity of certain ordinances of the city of Chicago relating to the use by hackmen of the public street and sidewalk in front of the company's station,—a question wholly different from the one relating to the special arrangement between the railroad company and the Parmelee Transfer Company. If the question had been before the state court, and it had adjudged that a railroad corporation could not grant to one person or company the exclusive right within its station to solicit the custom of passengers (the subject not being covered by any valid statute), then it would have been necessary to consider whether the subject was not one of general law, in respect of which the courts of the United States were entitled to exercise their independent judgment, in light of the settled principles that must always control the determination of the legal rights of parties. No such question is now presented.

The next question to be examined is that which involves the respective rights of the parties in the use of the public street and sidewalk in front of the company's passenger station.

We have seen that the original temporary restraining order of the circuit court was, in general terms, to the effect that the defendants desist from congregating upon the sidewalk in front of, adjacent to, or about the entrance to the company's passenger station, and from soliciting the cus-[301]tom of passengers *for cabs, etc., until the further order of the court; and that this order was so modified in the circuit court of appeals as to restrain only such congregating by defendants upon the sidewalk as would interfere with the ingress and egress of passengers and employees. We take it that the final decree recognized the right of the defendants in prosecuting their business to congregate, in reasonable numbers, upon the sidewalks in front of, adjacent to, or about the entrance of the company's station, and from there soliciting the custom of passengers, providing such use of the sidewalks did not obstruct the ingress and egress of passengers and employees.

As the railroad company did not appeal from the final decree of the circuit court, it cannot, upon this appeal, complain of any of its provisions. The defendants did appeal, and they object to the decree relating to the use of the sidewalk and street in front of the main entrance to the passenger depot.

That the railroad company, by its agents and employees, are entitled, in prosecuting its business, to use, in all appropriate ways, the sidewalk and street in front of its station and depot grounds, cannot be doubted,—that right being appurtenant to the lands upon which its station house and depot grounds stand. Passengers may, therefore, in their own right, as well as in right of the company, use the sidewalk in order to gain access to the depot grounds and station, or to reach the public street when leaving the station.

Referring to the rights of abutting owners, the supreme court of Illinois, in Field v. Barling, 149 Ill. 556, 571, 24 L. R. A. 406, 411, 41 Am. St. Rep. 311, 37 N. E. 850, said: "The dedication of the street by the plat, the sale of lots with reference to it, conveyance of abutting lots, and the payment of the money for the conveyances, were elements sufficient to create the right. The right may be regarded in the nature of an incorporeal hereditament. It becomes appurtenant to the lots. As to the rights secured, they are plain: to have the street kept open, so that free access may be had to and from lots abutting on the street." In the later case of Pennsylvania Co. v. Chicago, 181 Ill. 289, 53 L. R. A. 223, 54 N. E. 825, above *cited, that court adjudged[302] that the title to the streets in Chicago was vested in the city, and "it has the conservation, control, management, and supervision of such trust property, and it is its duty to defend and protect the title to such trust estate. The city has no power or authority to grant the exclusive use of its streets to any private person or for any private purposes; but must hold and control the possession exclusively for public use, for purposes of travel and the like." The general doctrine is correctly stated in Dillon on Municipal Corporations: "For example, v. Carey, 147 Mass. 40, note, 17 N. E. 97; State ex rel. Sheets v. Union Depot Co. 71 Ohio St. 379, 68 L. R. A. 792, 73 N. E. 633; Norfolk & W. R. Co. v. Old Dominion Baggage Transfer Co. 99 Va. 111, 50 L. R. A. 722, 37 S. E. 784; Fluker v. Georgia R. & Bkg. Co. 81 Ga. 461, 2 L. R. A. 843, 12 Am. St. Rep. 328, 8 S. E. 529; Griswold v. Webb. 16 R. I. 649; 7 L. R. A. 302, 19 Atl. 143; Summitt v. State, 8 Lea, 413, 41 Am. Rep. 637; New York, N. H. & H. R. Co. v. Scovill, 71 Conn. 136, 42 L. R. A. 157, 71 Am. St. Rep. 159, 41 Atl. 246; Kates v. Alabama Baggage & Cab. Co. 107 Ga. 636, 46 L. R. A. 431, 34 S. E. 372; Godbout v. St. Paul Union Depot Co. 79 Minn. 188, 47 L. R. A. 532, 81 N. W. 835; Boston & A. R. Co. v. Brown, 177 Mass. 65, 52 L. R. A. 418, 58 N. E. 189; Boston & M. R. Co. v. Sullivan, 177 Mass. 230, 83 Am. St. Rep. 275, 58 N. E. 689; New York, N. H. & H. R. Co. v. Bork, 23 R. I. 218, 49 Atl. 965; St. Louis Drayage Co. v. Louisville & N. R. Co. 5 Inters. Com. Rep. 137, 65 Fed. 39; Hedding v. Gallagher, 72 N. H. 377, 64 L. R. A. 811, 57 Atl. 225.

an abutting owner's right of access to and from the street, subject only to legitimate public regulation, is as much his property as his right to the soil within his boundary lines. . . . When he is deprived of such right of access, or of any other easement connected with the use and enjoyment of his property, other than by the exercise of legitimate public regulation, he is deprived of his property." Again: "But it was further seen that he had rights not shared by the public at large, special and peculiar to himself, and which arose out of the very relation of his lot to the street in front of it, and that these rights, whether the bare fee of the streets was in the lot owner or in the city, were rights of property, and as such ought to be and were as sacred from legislative invasion as his right to the lot itself." 2 Dill. Mun. Corp. 4th ed. §§ 587*b*. 656*a*. So, in Lewis on Eminent Domain, where the adjudged cases are referred to and examined: "When the owner of a tract of land lays the same out into lots and streets, and sells the lots, the purchasers of such lots acquire, as appurtenant thereto, a private right of way and access over the streets. This private right arises without any express grant, and in the absence of any statute. The law presumes that the parties had in mind the advantages to be derived from the use of the proposed streets, and implies a right to such use as a part of the grant. . . . Therefore, in the case of such a grant, there arises by operation of law a private right to use the streets in connection with the lots of each proprietor, which is as inviolable as any other right of property. . . . The existence of these [303] private rights *and easements is, therefore, entirely independent of the mode in which the highway is established, or of the estate or interest which the public acquires in the soil of the street, whether a fee or less." Lewis, Em. Dom. 2d ed. § 91*f* and authorities cited in notes. See also Newell v. Sass, 142 Ill. 104, 31 N. E. 176.

But the right of the railroad company, as abutting owner, and the rights of passengers, are not, in their nature, paramount to the rights of others of the general public to use the sidewalk in question in legitimate ways and for legitimate purposes. Licensed hackmen and cabmen, unless forbidden by valid local regulations, may, within reasonable limits, use a public sidewalk in prosecuting their calling, provided such use is not materially obstructive in its nature; that is, of such exclusive character as, in a substantial sense, to prevent others from also using it upon equal terms, for legitimate purposes. Generally speaking, public sidewalks and streets are for use by all, upon equal terms, for any purpose consistent with the object for which such sidewalks and streets are established; subject, of course, to such valid regulations as may be prescribed by the constituted authorities for the public convenience; this, to the end that, as far as possible, the rights of all may be conserved without undue discrimination.

By the Illinois statutes it is provided that the city council in cities may regulate the use of streets and sidewalks, and license, tax, and regulate hackmen, omnibus drivers, carters, cabmen, porters, expressmen, and all others pursuing like occupations, and to prescribe their compensation. Hurd's Rev. Stat. (Ill.) 1901, pp. 285, 287. And by ordinance of the city council of Chicago it is provided that "any licensed hackney, coach, cab, or other vehicles for the conveyance of passengers, may stand, while waiting for employment, at the following places, and for the period of time hereinafter provided: . . . Stand No. 4. The east side of Canal street, occupying 110 feet between Adams and Madison streets, as the superintendent of police shall direct . . . Stand No. 6. *At all rail- [304] road depots ten minutes previous to the arrival of all passenger trains." Rev. Code of Chicago, § 498. The validity of this ordinance has been sustained by the supreme court of Illinois. Pennsylvania Co. v. Chicago, 181 Ill. 299, 53 L. R. A. 223, 54 N. E. 825. Perceiving nothing in the above provisions inconsistent with any right secured by the Constitution of the United States, we accept the decision of the state court as authoritative upon this point. When, therefore, licensed hackmen and cabmen, at appropriate times, placed their vehicles in the public street, next to the sidewalk, in front of the company's passenger house, they did not violate the regulations established by the city council. Nor, so far as the plaintiff is concerned, did they violate such regulations, when, leaving their vehicles in the public street, at the appointed places, they stood near by them for a reasonable time upon the sidewalk, awaiting the coming of passengers from the station house. What they could not legally do—what the final decree properly forbade them to do—was to congregate upon the sidewalk in front of, adjacent to, or about the passenger house, so as to interfere with the ingress and egress of passengers. Of course, any use of the sidewalk in whatever way that would unnecessarily or unduly obstruct and interfere with passengers in their going or coming would be inconsistent with the rights of such passengers as well as an infringement of the right of the company, as abutting property owner, to have, by its agents and employees, for the purposes of its business, reasonable access to and from the sidewalk and the public street.

It only remains to inquire as to the competency of a court of equity to give the railroad company the relief it sought. The defendants insist that equity cannot properly interfere. But the inadequacy of a legal remedy in such a case as this one is quite apparent. According to the record the attempt of the defendants, despite the objections of the company, to use its station house and depot grounds for the purpose of meeting passengers and soliciting their patronage, was of constant, daily, almost hourly occurrence. The case was one of a [305] continuing *trespass, involving injury of a permanent nature. A suit at law could only have determined the particular wrong occurring on a particular occasion, and would not reach other wrongs of like character that would occur almost every hour of each day, as passengers arrived at the station of the company. The same state of things existed in reference to such use of the sidewalk in front of the passenger station as unduly interfered with the rights of passengers arriving and departing. Only a court of equity was competent to meet such an unusual emergency, and by a comprehensive decree determine finally and once for all the entire controversy between the parties, thus avoiding a multiplicity of suits, and conserving the public interests. No remedy at law would be so complete or efficacious as a suit in equity in such a case as this one. Coosaw Min. Co. v. South Carolina, 144 U. S. 550, 36 L. ed. 537, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 689; Smyth v. Ames, 169 U. S. 466, 517, 42 L. ed. 819, 838, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 418. The supreme court of Illinois well said in Chicago General R. Co. v. Chicago, B. & Q. R. Co. 181 Ill. 605, 611, 54 N. E. 1026: "When irreparable injury is spoken of, it is not meant that the injury is beyond the possibility of repair, or beyond the possibility of compensation in damages, but it must be of such constant and frequent recurrence that no fair or reasonable redress can be had therefor in a court of law." See also Newell v. Sass, 142 Ill. 104, 115, 116, 31 N. E. 176; Carpenter v. Capital Electric Co. 178 Ill. 29, 36, 43 L. R. A. 645, 69 Am. St. Rep. 286, 52 N. E. 973; Lowery v. Pekin, 186 Ill. 387, 398, 51 L. R. A. 301, 57 N. E. 1062.

The decree of the Circuit Court of Appeals is affirmed.

*CALIFORNIA REDUCTION COMPANY [306] et al., Petitioners,
v.
SANITARY REDUCTION WORKS OF SAN FRANCISCO.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 306–325.)

1. Municipal corporations — sanitary regulations—disposal of garbage.— The adoption of ordinances granting an exclusive privilege for fifty years to dispose of garbage and refuse matter by cremation or reduction, and requiring the delivery of all such material at the crematory or reduction plant, there to be destroyed at the expense of the person, company, or corporation conveying the same, was within the authority of the board of supervisors of the city and county of San Francisco—under Cal. Const. 1879, art. 11, § 11, Cal. Stat. 1863, p. 540, Cal. Stat. 1893, p. 288—to make and enforce, within the city and county, all such reasonable sanitary and other regulations as are not in conflict with any general statute or with the Constitution, and which have for their object the preservation of the public health.

2. Constitutional law—due process of law—municipal disposal of garbage.— Municipal ordinances requiring all garbage and other refuse matter to be delivered at a specified crematory or reduction plant, there to be cremated or destroyed at the expense

NOTE.—On municipal power over nuisances affecting highways and waters—see note to Hagerstown v. Witmer, 39 L.R.A. 649.

As to what constitutes due process of law—see Kuntz v. Sumption, 2 L.R.A. 655, and note; Re Gannon, 5 L.R.A. 359, and note; Ulman v. Baltimore, 11 L.R.A. 224, and note; and Gilman v. Tucker, 13 L.R.A. 304, and note. And see notes to People v. O'Brien, 2 L.R.A. 255; Pearson v. Yewdall, 24 L. ed. U. S. 436; and Wilson v. North Carolina, 42 L. ed. U. S. 865.

Monopoly in contract or ordinance for removal of garbage.

The weight of authority is decidedly to the effect that a municipal ordinance or contract conferring an exclusive privilege to remove garbage and filth is a valid exercise of the police power. Re Vandine, 6 Pick. 187, 17 Am. Dec. 351; Walker v. Jameson, 140 Ind. 591, 28 L.R.A. 679, 37 N. E. 402, 39 N. E. 869; Morgan v. Cincinnati, 12 Ohio L. J. 41; State v. Robb (Me.) 60 Atl. 874; State v. Orr, 68 Conn. 101, 34 L.R.A. 279, 35 Atl. 770; Grand Rapids v. De Vries, 123 Mich. 570, 82 N. W. 269; California Reduction Co. v. Sanitary Reduction Works, 61 C. C. A. 91, 126 Fed. 38; Dupont v. District of Columbia, 20 App. D. C. 477; Gardner v. Michigan, 199 U. S. 325, post, 212, 26 Sup. Ct. Rep. 106; Smiley v. MacDonald, 42 Neb. 5, 27 L.R.A. 540, 49 Am. St. Rep. 684, 60 N. W. 355. And see note to the case last cited in 27 L.R.A. 540.

The gathering of garbage is not a trade, business, or occupation in any proper sense; and such employment does not come under the doctrine respecting monopolies or legislation of the person, company, or corporation conveying the same, are not wanting in the due process of law required by U. S. Const., 14th Amend., as taking private property for public use without compensation, even if some of the substances so destroyed may have had some elements of value.

[No. 25.]

Argued October 26, 27, 1905. Decided November 27, 1905.

ON WRIT of Certiorari to the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Ninth Circuit to review a decree which affirmed a decree of the Circuit Court for the Northern District of California, enjoining violations of municipal ordinances for the disposal of garbage. Affirmed.

See same case below, 61 C. C. A. 91, 126 Fed. 29.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Mr. Richard T. Harding argued the cause, and, with Messrs. Garret W. McEnerney, Charles Page, and Edward J. McCutchen, filed a brief for petitioners.

Ordinances like the one here involved are unconstitutional because they involve a confiscation of property.

State v. Robbins, 124 Ind. 308, 8 L.R.A. 438, 24 N. E. 978; Meyer v. Jones, 20 Ky. L. Rep. 1632, 49 S. W. 809; Iler v. Ross, 64 Neb. 710, 57 L.R.A. 895, 97 Am. St. Rep. 676, 90 N. W. 869; River Rendering Co. v. Behr, 77 Mo. 91, 46 Am. Rep. 6; Knauer v. Louisville, 20 Ky. L. Rep. 193, 41 L.R.A. 219, 45 S. W. 510, 46 S. W. 701; State v. Morris, 47 La. Ann. 1664, 18 So. 710; Underwood v. Green, 42 N. Y. 140; Schoen v. Atlanta, 97 Ga. 697, 33 L.R.A. 804, 25 S. E. 380; Gregory v. New York, 40 N. Y. 273.

Authority to grant a franchise never carries with it power to grant an exclusive franchise.

Minturn v. Larue, 23 How. 435, 16 L. ed. 574; Detroit Citizens' Street R. Co. v. Detroit R. Co. 171 U. S. 48, 43 L. ed. 67, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 732.

Wherever an incorporated company in any action asserts a right against another person, based upon an assumed franchise or power, the person against whom the right is so asserted may, as a defense, deny the existence of such franchise or power.

Zanesville v. Zanesville Gaslight Co. 47 Ohio St. 1, 23 N. E. 55; 4 Thomp. Corp. § 5340; Waterloo Turnp. Road Co. v. Cole, 51 Cal. 386.

Scavenger work has a well accepted and defined meaning, and the occupation or business, lowly though it be, has existed and has been recognized and regulated for ages.

Iler v. Ross, supra.

To justify the exercise of the police power, the public interest must require the interference and the measures adopted must be reasonably necessary for the accomplishment of the purpose.

Lawton v. Steele, 152 U. S. 133, 38 L. ed. 385, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 499.

The right to follow any of the common occupations of life is an inalienable right.

Allgeyer v. Louisiana, 165 U. S. 578–589, 41 L. ed. 832–835, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 427.

Messrs. Sheldon G. Kellogg and Aldis B. Browne argued the cause, and, with Messrs. C. L. Tilden and Alexander Britton, filed a brief for respondent:

The action of the board of supervisors was a valid exercise of the police power.

Slaughter-House Cases, 16 Wall, 36, 62, 21 L. ed. 394, 404; Hannibal & St. J. R. Co.

---

in restraint of trade. Grand Rapids v. De Vries, supra.

Holding the contrary view is Re Lowe, 54 Kan. 757, 27 L.R.A. 545, 39 Pac. 710, where an ordinance making it unlawful to engage in the business of a scavenger without having a license, and giving to licensed scavengers, two or more of whom shall be appointed by the mayor, the exclusive privilege of removing garbage from private premises as well as from the streets, was held invalid as an attempt to create a monopoly of a lawful calling, the state Constitution providing that special privileges or immunities shall not be granted by any tribunal or agency except the legislature.

And a municipal ordinance directing the proper officers to enter a contract with one or more persons for the collection and disposal of garbage at the expense of the owners, and prohibiting, under penalty, all persons not having such a contract from engaging in the business, was held invalid as tending to create a monopoly, in Kussel v. Erie, 8 Pa. Dist. R. 105.

So, in State v. Hill, 126 N. C. 1139, 50 L. R.A. 473, 36 S. E. 326, an ordinance requiring a license for doing scavenger work in the city, and providing that all persons proposing to do such work must submit bids, and that the board of health shall decide who are competent bidders, and fixing the times at which closets shall be cleaned, was held void as in derogation of common right.

A distinction between noxious and unwholesome substances which are a nuisance per se and a menace to public health, and such innoxious substances as ashes, cinders, stable manure, or other substances not in themselves nuisances, though if allowed to accumulate in unreasonable quantities they would become such, or which may be utilized for some beneficial purpose, is drawn in Iler v. Ross, 64 Neb. 710, 57 L.R.A. 895, 97 Am. St. Rep. 676, 90 N. W. 869, which holds that, while an exclusive privilege to one person to remove substances of the class first described may be granted by a city as an exercise of the police power, a city cannot grant a monopoly to one individual by contract to enter upon the private premises of the city's inhabitants, and, at their expense, collect and remove substances of the second class mentioned.

v. Husen, 95 U. S. 465, 24 L. ed. 527; Lawton v. Steele, 152 U. S. 133, 136, 38 L. ed. 385, 388, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 499; Dupont v. District of Columbia, 20 App. D. C. 477; Dill. Mun. Corp. § 141; Harrington v. Providence, 20 R. I. 235, 38 L.R.A. 305, 38 Atl. 1; Ex parte Tuttle, 91 Cal. 589, 27 Pac. 933; Ex parte Lacey, 108 Cal. 326, 38 L.R.A. 640, 49 Am. St. Rep. 93, 41 Pac. 411; Tenement House Department v. Moeschen, 179 N. Y. 325, 103 Am. St. Rep. 910, 72 N. E. 231.

In the city and county of San Francisco the board of supervisors was and is the body or board which formed the legislative department of the government of that municipality.

McDonald v. Dodge, 97 Cal. 112, 31 Pac. 909; Harrison v. Roberts, 145 Cal. 173, 78 Pac. 537; Ex parte Shrader, 33 Cal. 279.

There can certainly be no question that the police power of a state may be delegated to a city so far as it is necessary to protect the health of its inhabitants.

Norfolk v. Flynn, 101 Va. 473, 62 L.R.A. 771, 99 Am. St. Rep. 918, 44 S. E. 717.

An examination of the so-called dead-animal cases demonstrates that the principles underlying all these decisions are in no respect violated by the San Francisco orders.

Iler v. Ross, 64 Neb. 710, 57 L.R.A. 895, 97 Am. St. Rep. 676, 90 N. W. 869; Knauer v. Louisville, 20 Ky. L. Rep. 193, 41 L.R.A. 219, 45 S. W. 510, 46 S. W. 701; Meyer v. Jones, 20 Ky. L. Rep. 1632, 49 S. W. 809; River Rendering Co. v. Behr, 77 Mo. 91, 46 Am. Rep. 6; State v. Morris, 47 La. Ann. 1660, 18 So. 710; Schoen v. Atlanta, 97 Ga. 697, 33 L.R.A. 804, 25 S. E. 380; Campbell v. District of Columbia, 19 App. D. C. 131; Dupont v. District of Columbia, supra; Alpers v. San Francisco, 32 Fed. 503; National Fertilizer Co. v. Lambert, 48 Fed. 458.

The following cases relating to garbage contracts and ordinances indicate a remarkable unanimity of opinion on the main questions now before this court:

Walker v. Jameson, 140 Ind. 591, 28 L. R.A. 679, 49 Am. St. Rep. 222, 37 N. E. 402, 39 N. E. 869; Grand Rapids v. De Vries, 123 Mich. 570, 82 N. W. 269; Dupont v. District of Columbia, supra; People v. Gardner, 136 Mich. 693, 100 N. W. 126; State v. Orr, 68 Conn. 101, 34 L.R.A. 279, 35 Atl. 770; Ex parte Casinello, 62 Cal. 538; Kilvington v. Superior, 83 Wis. 222, 18 L.R.A. 45, 53 N. W. 487; State v. Robb (Me.) 60 Atl. 874; Re Zhizhuzza (Cal.) 81 Pac. 955.

Exclusive garbage contracts were upheld in the following cases:

Grand Rapids v. De Vries, Walker v. Jameson, and Dupont v. District of Columbia, supra; Smiley v. MacDonald, 42 Neb. 5, 27 L.R.A. 540, 47 Am. St. Rep. 684, 60 N. W. 355; Coombs v. MacDonald, 43 Neb. 632, 62 N. W. 41; People v. Gardner, supra; State v. Payssan, 47 La. Ann. 1029, 49 Am. St. Rep. 390, 17 So. 481; State v. Orr, supra. See also Re Vandine, 6 Pick. 187, 17 Am. Dec. 351; Bancroft v. Thayer, 5 Sawy. 502, Fed. Cas. No. 835; Dickinson v. Cunningham, 140 Ala. 527, 37 So. 345; Leeper v. State, 103 Tenn. 500, 48 L.R.A. 167, 53 S. W. 962; Cooley, Const. Lim. 5th ed. 225, note 1.

And exclusive dead-animal contracts have been upheld in the following cases:

Alpers v. San Francisco, and National Fertilizer Co. v. Lambert, supra; Louisville v. Wible, 84 Ky. 290, 1 S. W. 605.

Private property is not taken without compensation.

People v. Gardner, Dupont v. District of Columbia, National Fertilizer Co. v. Lambert, and State v. Orr, supra; Harrington v. Providence, 20 R. I. 235, 38 L.R.A. 305, 38 Atl. 1; Baker v. Boston, 12 Pick. 183, 22 Am. Dec. 421; Lawton v. Steele, 152 U. S. 133, 136, 38 L. ed. 385, 388, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 499; Mugler v. Kansas, 123 U. S. 623, 661, 31 L. ed. 205, 210, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 273; Powell v. Pennsylvania, 127 U. S. 678, 685, 32 L. ed. 253, 256, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 992, 1257; Barbier v. Connolly, 113 U. S. 27, 28 L. ed. 923, 5 Sup. Ct. Rep. 357; Chicago, B. & Q. R. Co. v. Chicago, 166 U. S. 226, 255, 41 L. ed. 979, 991, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 581.

There is no interference with the occupation of scavengers.

Grand Rapids v. De Vries, supra; River Rendering Co. v. Behr, 7 Mo. App. 345.

There is no valid objection to the charge authorized to be made upon those delivering the garbage.

Slaughter-House Cases, 16 Wall. 36, 21 L. ed. 394; Raymond v. Fish, 51 Conn. 80, 50 Am. Rep. 3; King v. Davenport, 98 Ill. 305, 38 Am. Rep. 89; Walker v. Jameson, supra; Meyer v. Jones, 20 Ky. L. Rep. 1632, 49 S. W. 809; Smiley v. MacDonald, Dupont v. District of Columbia, and People v. Gardner, supra; Willis v. Standard Oil Co. 50 Minn. 290, 52 N. W. 652. See also Norfolk v. Flynn, 101 Va. 473, 62 L.R.A. 771, 99 Am. St. Rep. 918, 44 S. E. 717; Morgan's L. & T. R. & S. S. Co. v. Board of Health, 118 U. S. 455, 30 L. ed. 237, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1114.

The term of fifty years was within the discretion of the municipality to grant.

Slaughter-House Cases, Smiley v. MacDonald, and Dupont v. District of Columbia, supra.

A municipality has the same right to exercise the police power in matters within its jurisdiction as the state.

Louisville v. Wible, and Barbier v. Connolly, supra; Yick Wo v. Hopkins, 118 U. S. 370, 30 L. ed. 226, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1064; Ex parte Lacey, 108 Cal. 326, 38 L.R.A. 640, 49 Am. St. Rep. 93, 41 Pac. 411; Ex parte Tuttle, 91 Cal. 589, 27 Pac. 933; Ex parte Shrader, 33 Cal. 279.

Mr. Justice Harlan delivered the opinion of the court:

The board of supervisors of the city and county of San Francisco, by ordinance adopted February 17th, 1896, and known [307]*as order No. 2965, granted to F. E. Sharon, his associates and assigns, the sole and exclusive right and privilege, for a term of fifty years, to cremate and destroy, within that city and county, by crematories or by a process of reduction, house refuse, dirt, ashes, cinders, sludge, crockery, tins, bones, and other like matter, dead animals (not provided for by contract or franchise theretofore granted), putrid vegetable matter, fish, flesh, and food condemned by the board of health of the city and county as unfit for human food,—the grantees, their associates and assigns, having the right to charge and collect therefor not exceeding the sum of 20 cents per load.

The grantees, their associates and assigns, were required to have in operation, within two years after the granting of the above privilege or franchise, a suitable building or buildings, with necessary crematories, machinery, tools, and appliances necessary to cremate and destroy by cremation, or by a process of reduction, all obnoxious germs and elements contained in house refuse and other substances above mentioned,—the works to be such as would suffice for the cremation or reduction of at least 300 tons per day of such substances.

By the same ordinance it was made unlawful, after erection of such works, for any person or corporation to remove through the public streets from any houses, hotels, markets, hospitals, factories, restaurants, stores, or other like building or place, in the city and county, any of the substances above specified, except in closed vehicles and wagons constructed so as to conceal the contents from public view, and to effectually prevent any smell escaping therefrom, as well as to prevent the dropping of any portion of such material or substances on the public streets,—such vehicles and wagons to be constructed in accordance with specifications approved by the board of health of the city and county.

The ordinance also made it unlawful, after the buildings referred to had been constructed, for any person or corporation
[308]*to dump or place upon any land, water, or water ways within the city and county, any such substances, and required that they should be forthwith delivered to the above crematory, "and there, at the expense of the person or corporation so conveying the same, be cremated or destroyed, or subjected to such disposition and treatment as will at once secure and effect a complete combustion of all gases and odors arising therefrom."

The grantees, their associates and assigns, were required, within twenty-four hours after receiving any of the material or substances above specified, to "cremate or reduce the same, or shall subject the same to such process as will secure the complete combustion of all gases or odors arising therefrom," and to maintain and operate their plant and crematories, or other apparatus, "so as to prevent any obnoxious smells or gases being emitted either from the deposits of such matter or substances on their premises, or from the process of cremation or other treatment thereof, or from the residuum remaining after cremation or treatment as aforesaid; also, that in the operation of said works, no smoke or soot shall be emitted so as to constitute a nuisance."

The ordinance further provided that the grantees, their associates and assigns, should, from and after December 1st, 1902, have the sole and exclusive right and privilege, during the remainder of the term of their franchise, "to remove and dispose of all dogs killed at the public pound, and all animals impounded and not redeemed by the owners thereof, and which are valueless and cannot be sold; also, to remove and dispose of the carcasses of all dead animals in said city and county not slain for human food, which shall not be removed and disposed of by the owners thereof, so as not to become a nuisance, within six hours after the death of the same."

It was further provided that the grantees, their associates and assigns, should be subject to all health and sanitary regulations in force during the existence of said franchises; and should receive no compensation whatever from the city and *county for [309] services performed by them in disposing of the specified material and substances.

For the privileges or franchise granted by this ordinance, Sharon and his associates paid the sum of $2,510 in cash, and stipulated to pay for fifteen years 2 per centum, and for the remaining term of thirty-five years 5 per centum, of the gross amount of their receipts from the business.

The Sanitary Reduction Works, a corporation of California, became the assignee and successor in interest of the franchise or privileges granted to Sharon, his associates and assigns, and notified the board of supervisors of the completion of their works, and of their readiness to receive, cremate, and destroy all such substances as were specified in order No. 2965. The cost of such works, the present plaintiff alleged, exceeded the sum of $200,000.

Thereupon the board of supervisors, on November 1st, 1897, adopted order No. 12 (second series), which provided that no person, company, or corporation should, on or after November 8th, 1897, deposit, dump, or cause to be dumped or deposited upon any street, lot, land, water, or water ways within the city and county or from any wharf or bulkhead on the water front of the city and county, any of the above substances or material, and that all such substances or matter should be delivered at and to the crematory of the Sanitary Reduction Works, "and there, at the expense of the person, company, or corporation so conveying the same, be cremated and destroyed, or subjected to such disposition and treatment as will secure and effect a complete combustion of all gases and odors arising therefrom." Any violation of that order was declared to be a misdemeanor, punishable by a fine of not exceeding $250, or by imprisonment for a term not exceeding one hundred days, or by both such fine and imprisonment.

The present suit was brought by the Sanitary Reduction Company against the California Reduction Company, and about one hundred and fifty individuals.

[310] *The defendant corporation was organized under the laws of Colorado, at the instance of certain citizens of California, for the purpose, we may assume from the record, of removing, by boats and barges, large quantities of the material and substances specified in the orders of the board of supervisors from the city and county of San Francisco, and depositing them on lands in the county of San Mateo and elsewhere than at the works of the Sanitary Reduction Company, thereby preventing the same from being delivered to, and incinerated and destroyed by, the latter company, under its contract with the city and county of San Francisco.

The individual defendants are subjects of the Kingdom of Italy, and owners of licensed wagons used in their calling as scavengers in the city and county of San Francisco. It seems that a very few of them—not more than about a half dozen—are householders in that city and county.

Between the California Reduction Company and the individual defendants there is a written agreement, dated November 22d, 1898, requiring the former, within thirty days thereafter, to provide one or more suitable buildings, wharves, or other places, for the reception from the latter "of all garbage, ashes, refuse, butchers' offal, dirt, sludge, crockery, tins, or other like matter, or any putrid animal or vegetable matter, or any fish, flesh, or food, or any dead animals; which said buildings, wharves, or other place or places shall be so located that the average travel to the same shall not exceed the average haul to the Sanitary Reduction Works by more than a quarter of a mile." By that agreement the individual defendants bound themselves to deliver at the buildings or places provided by the defendant corporation all such material or substances gathered by them from time to time in the city and county. The individual defendants also stipulated in the agreement that they would not deliver any of the above material or substances to any other party than the California Reduction Company, nor at any other place than the one designated and chosen by that company.

*The pleadings and the evidence in the [311] cause show that the defendants had entered upon the execution of their agreement and the transaction of the business to which it related. No question is made as to the right of the plaintiff to exercise whatever privileges had been legally granted to Sharon, his associates and assigns.

The object of the suit by the plaintiff corporation was to obtain a decree restraining the defendants, by injunction, from removing from the city and county of San Francisco, or depositing or dumping at any other place than at the works of the plaintiff, any of the garbage or other materials specified in the orders of the board of supervisors, or from infringing, directly or indirectly, the exclusive rights, privileges, and franchises secured to the plaintiff as above stated.

The circuit court, Judge Morrow presiding, passed a decree giving the relief asked. 94 Fed. 693. That decree was affirmed in the circuit court of appeals, Judge Hawley delivering the opinion of the court. 61 C. C. A. 91, 126 Fed. 29.

The defendants insist that the ordinances in question are invalid for the want of power in the board of supervisors to adopt them. This objection does not seem to be well taken. By the California Constitution of 1849 it was provided that "the legislature shall have power to provide for the election of a board of supervisors in each county, and these supervisors shall jointly and individually perform such duties as may be prescribed by law." [Art. 10, § 5.] Subsequently, by an act approved April 25th, 1863, it was provided that "the board of supervisors of the *city and county of San [316] Francisco shall have power, by regulation or order, . . . to authorize and direct the summary abatement of nuisances; to make all regulations which may be necessary or expedient for the preservation of the public health and the prevention of contagious diseases; to provide, by regulation, for the prevention of contagious diseases; to provide, by regulation, for the prevention and summary removal of all nuisances and obstructions in the streets, alleys, highways, and public grounds of said city and county," etc. Cal. Stat. 1863, p. 540. Again, in the state Constitution of 1879, it was provided that "any county, city, town, or township may make and enforce within its limits all such local police, sanitary, and other regulations as are not in conflict with general laws." Art. 11, § 11. Further, by an act approved March 23d, 1893, it was provided, among other things, that every franchise or privilege to erect or lay telegraph or telephone wires, to construct or operate railroads along or upon any public street or highway, or "to exercise any other privilege whatever hereafter proposed to be granted by the board of supervisors, common council, or other governing or legislative body of any county, city and county, city, town, or district, shall be granted upon the conditions in this act provided, and not otherwise." One of those conditions was that the fact that such franchise or privilege had been made, together with a statement that it was proposed to grant the same, should be advertised,—the franchise or privilege to be awarded to the highest bidder. Cal. Stat. 1893, p. 288.

It may be here observed that, under the charter of San Francisco, the board of supervisors for the city and county of San Francisco constituted the legislative department for that municipality. McDonald v. Dodge, 97 Cal. 112, 114, 31 Pac. 909; Harrison v. Roberts, 145 Cal. 173, 78 Pac. 537.

In the above constitutional and statutory provisions is found full authority for the board to make and enforce, within the city and county of San Francisco, all such reasonable sanitary and other regulations as [317] are not in conflict with any general *statute or with the Constitution, and which have for their object the preservation of the public health, by whatever cause endangered. It was substantially so ruled in the circuit court of the United States, northern district of California, in Alpers v. San Francisco, 32 Fed. 503, Mr. Justice Field delivering the opinion of the court. The ruling in that case was followed in National Fertilizer Co. v. Lambert, 48 Fed. 458. See also People ex rel. Dean v. Contra Costa County, 122 Cal. 421, 55 Pac. 131.

It is said that the grant to Sharon, his associates and assigns, was, in no sense, a franchise. It is true that the title of the act of 1893 refers only to franchises. But the body of the act shows that the legislature intended to embrace privileges exercised under public authority, and not alone what may be, strictly, franchises. The right which was granted to Sharon, his associates and assigns, was certainly a privilege, and the board of supervisors had power to grant it in order to protect the public health. But, independently of the above statutes, the board had power, under the Constitution of the state, to make such sanitary regulations as were not inconsistent with the general laws, and that broad power carried with it the power, by contract and ordinance, to guard the public health in all reasonable ways.

The defendants criticize the ordinances because they give the exclusive privileges in question for a period of fifty years. But whether the period during which such privileges might be exercised should be long or short was a matter in the wise discretion of the board, and determinable wholly upon grounds of public policy. It may be that grants by public authority of privileges to be exercised for the benefit or in behalf of the public ought never to be for long periods. But it suffices to say that no such consideration can control the action of the judiciary.

The defendants insist that the ordinances in question are in violation of the 14th Amendment of the Constitution, in that they deprive the householders of San Francisco of property *of value, by transferring [318] it to the Sanitary Reduction Works, without requiring compensation to be made; this, it is contended, being in violation of the 14th Amendment. Chicago, B. & Q. R. Co. v. Chicago, 166 U. S. 226, 41 L. ed. 979, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 581.

We do not perceive that the defendant corporation of Colorado and the individual defendants who are not householders are entitled to raise any such question. If householders do not complain, but by silence assent to what the board did, it is not for others to say that the property of householders is taken for public use without compensation; for householders, if so minded, may waive any right they have to compensation for their property destroyed to protect the public health. The individual defendants, in their answer, claim to be householders in San Francisco. But it seems that only about six of them are householders. The presence, however, of that number as defendants makes it appropriate to consider the objection just stated upon its merits.

In determining the validity of the ordinances in question it may be taken as firmly established in the jurisprudence of this court that the states possess, because they have never surrendered, the power—and therefore municipal bodies, under legislative sanction, may exercise the power—to prescribe such regulations as may be reasonable, necessary, and appropriate for the protection of the public health and comfort; and that no person has an absolute right "to be at all times and in all circumstances wholly freed from restraint;" but "persons and property are subject to all kinds of restraints and burdens, in order to secure the general comfort, health, and general prosperity of the state,"—the public, as represented by its constituted authorities, taking care always that no regulation, although adopted for those ends, shall violate rights secured by the fundamental law, nor interfere with the enjoyment of individual rights beyond the necessities of the case. Equally well settled is the principle that if a regulation enacted by competent public authority avowedly for the protection of the public health has a real, substantial relation to that object, [319]*the courts will not strike it down upon grounds merely of public policy or expediency. Hannibal & St. J. R. Co. v. Husen, 95 U. S. 465, 470, 471, 24 L. ed. 527, 529, 530; Mugler v. Kansas, 123 U. S. 623, 661, 31 L. ed. 205, 210, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 273; Lawton v. Steele, 152 U. S. 133, 136, 38 L. ed. 385, 388, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 499; Atkin v. Kansas, 191 U. S. 207, 223, 48 L. ed. 148, 158, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 124; Jacobson v. Massachusetts, 197 U. S. 11, 27, 49 L. ed. 643, 650, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 358. In the recent case of Dobbins v. Los Angeles, 195 U. S. 223, 235, 49 L. ed. 169, 174, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 18, 20, this court said that "every intendment is to be made in favor of the lawfulness of the exercise of municipal power making regulations to promote the public health and safety, and that it is not the province of courts, except in clear cases, to interfere with the exercise of the power reposed by law in municipal corporations for the protection of local rights and the health and welfare of the people in the community."

The record abundantly discloses the grounds upon which the board of supervisors proceeded, in adopting the ordinances in question.

The preamble to order No. 2965 shows that, in the judgment of the board, the only effective mode to dispose of house refuse, butchers' offal, garbage, putrid or offensive animal or vegetable matter, refuse, ashes, or other like matter, and to prevent such substances from being deposited in or upon the lots, lands, and public streets of the city and county, or in the waters of the bay, to the prejudice of the public health, was by cremation or by some process of chemical reduction. The conviction of the board that decided action on the subject was imperatively demanded for the general good seems to have strengthened; for order No. 12, adopted a year later, stated in its preamble that, from time to time, during previous years, the dumping of garbage, dirt, offal, house refuse, matter, ashes, cinders, sludge, acids, or like matter, to fill in lots, and particularly in filling in water lots, had become so objectionable and deleterious to the public health that the attempt was made to mitigate such nuisances by covering them over with sand; that it had, however, become apparent that lots so filled and covered had thrown off obnoxious gases, deleterious to the public health, and, when epidemic diseases were prevalent, would become a *fruitful source of danger to [320] the sanitary wellbeing of citizens; and that the board of health had called attention to and condemned the disposing of garbage and refuse matter for the purpose of filling in lots. Such were the reasons which moved the board of supervisors to adopt that order making it unlawful to deposit any of such substances upon streets, lots, or lands, or in any water or water way, within the city and county, and requiring that they be delivered at the plaintiff's works, to be there cremated and destroyed, or subjected to such disposition and treatment as would effect a complete combustion of all gases and odors arising therefrom.

We perceive no ground to doubt the good faith of the board of supervisors; nor can we say that the mode adopted for the suppression of the evils in question was arbitrary, or did not have a real, substantial relation to the protection of the public health.

Many of the questions involved in municipal sanitation have proved to be difficult of solution. There is no mode of disposing of garbage and refuse matter, as found in cities and dense populations, which is universally followed. In some cities garbage receptacles, properly covered, are provided, sometimes by the householder, sometimes by the municipal authorities or the garbage collector. But even such devices often prove to be worthless for want of proper attention to them by householders. Then, the question arises for the consideration of the municipal authorities as to the frequency of the removal of garbage. The practice is not at all uniform. In some cities, it is collected seven times a week; in others, six, four, and three times a week. Again, questions arise as to the mode in which garbage should be collected; and the statement is made by those who have investigated the subject, that while "there appears a well-nigh unanimous demand on the part of health officers, and oftentimes of the public generally, for the municipal collection of garbage," the "problem of garbage disposal has not been solved." Chapin, Municipal Sanitation in the United States, [321] p. 670. Similar observations *might be made in reference to what is commonly called "dry refuse," which, in many cities, includes ashes and all the rubbish accumulated in private houses, stores, market houses, and like places.

These references to the different methods employed to dispose of garbage and refuse have been made in order to show that the board had before them a most difficult problem—unsolved by experience or science—as to the best or most appropriate method of protecting the public health in the matter of the disposal of the garbage, refuse, and other materials found on private premises, and in hotels, restaurants, and like places. The state, charged with the duty of safeguarding the health of its people, committed the subject to the wisdom and discretion of the board of supervisors. The conclusion it reached appears in the ordinances in question, and the courts must accept it, unless these ordinances are, in some essential particular, repugnant to the fundamental law. The general result which the board of supervisors sought to bring about was by cremation, or by such other treatment of the materials as would effect a complete combustion of all gases and odors arising therefrom. "Cremation," it is said, "is exclusively employed for getting rid of the garbage in England and on the continent of Europe, and is rapidly coming into use in the United States,"—the destruction by fire being theoretically "an ideal way, from a sanitary standpoint, for the disposal of garbage." Chapin, Municipal Sanitation in the United States, p. 714.

The defendants insist that the requirement that the substances mentioned should be delivered at the plaintiff's works for cremation or destruction, at the expense of the person, company, or corporation conveying the same, was a taking of private property for public use without compensation. We cannot assent to this view. It is the duty, primarily, of a person on whose premises are garbage and refuse material, to see to it, by proper diligence, that no nuisance arises therefrom which endangers the public health. The householder may be compelled to submit even to an inspection of his [322] *premises, at his own expense, and forbidden to keep them, or allow them to be kept, in such condition as to create disease. He may, therefore, have been required, at his own expense, to make, from time to time, such disposition of obnoxious substances originating on premises occupied by him as would be necessary in order to guard the public health. If the householder himself removed them from his premises, it must have been at his own expense; and the scavenger who took to the crematory the material from the premises of origin, under some arrangement with the householder, was, in effect, the representative, in that matter, of the householder, and was performing a duty resting upon the householder. So that if the requirement that the person conveying the material should pay a given price for having it cremated or destroyed, in effect put some expense on the householder, that gave him no ground for complaint; for it was his duty to see to the removal of garbage and house refuse having its origin on his premises. Still less has the licensed scavenger a right to complain; for his right to convey garbage and refuse through the public streets, in covered wagons, was derived from the public, and he was subject to such regulations as the constituted authorities, in their exercise of the police power, might adopt. The whole arrangement may be fairly regarded as one in the interest and for the convenience of the householder. He gets his proportionate benefit of any revenue derived by the city, and at the same time shares the protection given to him by the community. Nor did the destruction of garbage and refuse, at an approved crematory, amount, in itself, and under the circumstances disclosed, to a taking of private property for public use without compensation, even if some of the substances destroyed at the crematory had a value for certain purposes. The authorities were not bound, prior to the removal of such substances from the premises on which they were found, to separate those that were confessedly worthless from those which might be utilized. The garbage and refuse matter were all together, on the same premises, and, as a *whole or in the mass,[323] they constituted a nuisance which the public could abate or require to be abated, and to the continuance of which the community was not bound to submit. And when the obnoxious garbage and refuse was removed from the place of their origin, and put in covered wagons to be carried away, the municipal authorities might well have doubted whether the substances that were per se dangerous or worthless would be separated from such as could be utilized, and whether the former would be deposited by the scavenger at some place that would not endanger the public health. They might well have thought that the safety of the community could not be assured unless the entire mass of garbage and refuse constituting the nuisance, from which the danger came, was carried to a crematory, where it could be promptly destroyed by fire, and thus minimize the danger to the public health.

Be all this as it may, the cremation and destruction of garbage and house refuse, under the authority of the municipal authorities, proceeding upon reasonable grounds, and at a place designated by law, as a means for the protection of the public health, cannot be properly regarded, within the meaning of the Constitution, as a taking of private property for public use without compensation, simply because such garbage and house refuse may have had, at the time of its destruction, some element of value for certain purposes. With the knowledge of the householder the scavenger receives the garbage and refuse matter; that which, if separated, might have value, being mingled with that which is, in itself, noxious and worthless. The entire mass goes into the same covered wagon, and the authorities are not bound, before its destruction at the crematory, to cause the good to be separated, from the bad, but could require, as the ordinances in question did, that the substances be promptly conveyed to the designated crematory and destroyed by fire. Such a disposition of the contents cannot be regarded as a taking of private property for public use without compensation.

[324] *This court has said that "the possession and enjoyment of all rights are subject to such reasonable conditions as may be deemed by the governing authority of the country essential to the safety, health, peace, good order, and morals of the community. Even liberty itself, the greatest of all rights, is not unrestricted license to act according to one's own will." Crowley v. Christensen, 137 U. S. 86, 89, 34 L. ed. 620, 621, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 13. In Mugler v. Kansas, 123 U. S. 623, 664, 31 L. ed. 205, 211, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 273, it appeared that certain distillery property in Kansas was purchased at a time when it was lawful in that state to manufacture and sell spirituous liquors, but which property, by reason of the subsequent prohibition of such manufacture and sale, had become of no value, or had materially diminished in value. The owner insisted that, by the necessary operation of the prohibitory statute, his property was, in whole or in part, taken for public use without compensation. But this court said: "The power which the states have of prohibiting such use by individuals of their property as will be prejudicial to the health, the morals, or the safety of the public, is not—and, consistently with the existence and safety of organized society, cannot be—burdened with the condition that the state must compensate such individual owners for pecuniary losses they may sustain by reason of their not being permitted, by a noxious use of their property, to inflict injury upon the community. The exercise of the police power by the destruction of property which is itself a public nuisance, or the prohibition of its use in a particular way, whereby its value becomes depreciated, is very different from taking property for public use, or from depriving a person of his property without due process of law. In the one case, a nuisance only is abated; in the other, unoffending property is taken away from an innocent owner." In Sedgwick's Treatise on Statutory and Constitutional Law the author says that "the clause prohibiting the taking of private property without compensation is not intended as a limitation . . . of those police powers which are necessary to the tranquillity of every well-ordered community, nor of that general *power over private property [325] which is necessary for the orderly existence of all governments. It has always been held that the legislature may make police regulations, although they may interfere with the full enjoyment of private property, and though no compensation is given." Pp. 434, 435.

Without further discussion we hold, for the reasons stated, that the circuit court and circuit court of appeals properly refused to adjudge that these ordinances were invalid.

Other questions have been discussed by counsel, but they do not require special notice at our hands. We are content with the disposition made of them in the courts below.

The decree of the Circuit Court of Appeals is affirmed.

Mr. Justice Brewer and Mr. Justice Peckham dissented.

JAMES GARDNER, Plff. in Err.,
v.
PEOPLE OF THE STATE OF MICHIGAN.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 325–335.)

1. Constitutional law—due process of law—municipal disposal of garbage.—An ordinance conferring on a city contractor the exclusive right to collect and dispose of garbage is not, so far as it relates to the

NOTE.—On municipal power over nuisances affecting highways and waters—see note to Hagerstown v. Witmer, 39 L.R.A. 649.

As to what constitutes due process of law—refuse from the tables of hotels, wanting in the due process of law required by U. S. Const., 14th Amend., as depriving the owner of his property without compensation, although such refuse may be valuable as food for swine, or for the manufacture of merchantable grease and other products.

2. Constitutional law—equal protection of the laws—local regulations for the selection of jurors.— Litigants and persons accused of crime in Wayne county, Michigan, are not denied the equal protection of the laws by Mich. Pub. Acts 1893, p. 337, as amended by Pub. Acts 1895, p. 69, under which the jury lists are made up and returned by a board of jury commissioners appointed by the governor with the consent of the senate, and may include persons whose names do not appear on the assessment roll, while, by the general laws of the state, the officers authorized to make and return the jury lists are elected by the people in their several townships and in city wards, and the jurors must be of those who are assessed on the assessment roll.

[No. 62.]

Submitted November 9, 1905. Decided November 27, 1905.

IN ERROR to the Supreme Court of the State of Michigan to review a judgment affirming a conviction in the Recorder's Court in the city of Detroit, in that state, of a violation of an ordinance relating to the collection and disposal of garbage. Affirmed.

See same case below, 136 Mich. 693, 100 N. W. 126.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Mr. Fred A. Baker submitted the cause for plaintiff in error:

The record in this case shows that the refuse from the kitchens and tables of residences, hotels, and restaurants is valuable (1) as food for swine, and (2) for the manufacture of merchantable grease and other products. These facts are also a part of the common knowledge of the country, and of which this court will take judicial notice.

Schollenberger v. Pennsylvania (Paul v. Pennsylvania), 171 U. S. 1, 7, 8, 43 L. ed. 49, 51, 52, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 757.

The ordinance is in excess of and beyond the police power of the state because it does not discriminate between those who properly care for and transport garbage and those who do not.

Smith v. St. Louis & S. W. R. Co. 181 U. S. 248, 255, 45 L. ed. 847, 850, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 603.

In the following cases this court held state quarantine or inspection laws void as going beyond the police power:

Henderson v. New York (Henderson v. Wickham), 92 U. S. 259, 23 L. ed. 543; Hannibal & St. J. R. Co. v. Husen, 95 U. S. 465, 24 L. ed. 527.

In Minnesota v. Barber, 136 U. S. 313, 34 L. ed. 455, 3 Inters. Com. Rep. 185, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 862, a statute was held void which provided that no fresh meats should be sold in the state, unless the animals from which they were taken were inspected in the state before they were slaughtered.

In Schollenberger v. Pennsylvania (Paul v. Pennsylvania) 171 U. S. 1, 43 L. ed. 49, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 757, a state statute which prohibited the manufacture or sale within the state of oleomargarine was held invalid.

Every exercise of the police power must be reasonable, and extend only to such laws as are enacted in good faith for the promotion of the public good, and not for the annoyance or oppression of a particular class.

Plessy v. Ferguson, 163 U. S. 537, 550, 41 L. ed. 256, 261, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1138.

The case is within the rule laid down in Lochner v. New York, 198 U. S. 45, 49 L. ed. 937, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 539.

In Re Lowe, 54 Kan. 757, 27 L.R.A. 545, 39 Pac. 710, an ordinance of the city of Topeka authorized the mayor, with the consent of the council, to appoint and license two or more suitable persons, corporations, or firms, to act as city scavengers, and prohibited any other person from engaging in the business without procuring an appointment and license therefor. The court held the ordinance void because it attempted to create a monopoly of a lawful calling, and was in restraint of trade.

See also Gregory v. New York, 40 N. Y. 273; State, Nicoulin, Prosecutor, v. Lowery, 49 N. J. L. 391, 8 Atl. 513; Richmond v. Dudley, 129 Ind. 112, 13 L.R.A. 587, 28 Am. St. Rep. 180, 28 N. E. 312; Re Nash, 33 U. C. Q. B. 181; Reg. v. Johnston, 38 U. C. Q. B. 549.

In Iler v. Ross, 64 Neb. 710, 57 L.R.A. 895, 97 Am. St. Rep. 676, 90 N. W. 869, an ordinance of the city of Omaha gave the exclusive right to a city contractor to remove dead animals, garbage, ashes, filth, offal, or other refuse matter from the city, and it was held void.

A dead horse is not per se a nuisance, and an owner who will make proper dis-

---

see Kuntz v. Sumption, 2 L.R.A. 655, and note; Re Gannon, 5 L.R.A. 359, and note; Ulman v. Baltimore, 11 L.R.A. 224, and note; and Gilman v. Tucker, 13 L.R.A. 304, and note. And see notes to People v. O'Brien, 2 L.R.A. 255; Pearson v. Yewdall, 24 L. ed. U. S. 436; and Wilson v. North Carolina, 42 L. ed. U. S. 865.

On monopoly in contract or ordinance for removal of garbage—see note to California Reduction Co. v. Sanitary Reduction Works, ante, 204.

position of the carcass cannot be deprived of his property right.

Campbell v. District of Columbia, 19 App. D. C. 131.

The act of the Michigan legislature creating the board of jury commissioners for the county of Wayne denies to accused persons and other litigants in that county the equal protection of the laws.

Connolly v. Union Sewer Pipe Co. 184 U. S. 540, 46 L. ed. 679, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 431; Hayes v. Missouri, 120 U. S. 68, 30 L. ed. 578, 7 Sup. Ct. Rep. 350.

Messrs. T. E. Tarsney and John B. Corliss submitted the cause for defendant in error. Messrs. Corliss, Leete, & Joslyn were on the brief:

The city may seize, control, remove, and dispose of all garbage, or it may enter into a contract with one or more persons to do it. Such action is not objectionable as creating a monopoly or infringing the rights of property. Such action by municipalities is not a violation of the constitutional inhibitions against the taking of, or injury to, private property without compensation, or without due process of law.

Re Vandine, 6 Pick. 187, 17 Am. Dec. 351; State v. Orr, 68 Conn. 101, 34 L.R.A. 279, 35 Atl. 770; Dupont v. District of Columbia, 20 App. D. C. 477; Fischer v. St. Louis, 194 U. S. 361, 48 L. ed. 1018, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 673; Dobbins v. Los Angeles, 195 U. S. 223, 49 L. ed. 169, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 18; California Reduction Co. v. Sanitary Reduction Works, 61 C. C. A. 91, 126 Fed. 29.

The constitutional right of trial by jury is not infringed by the act of the Michigan legislature creating the board of jury commissioners for the county of Wayne.

People v. Harding, 53 Mich. 48, 51 Am. Rep. 95, 18 N. W. 555; People v. Reilly, 53 Mich. 260, 18 N. W. 849.

Mr. Justice Harlan delivered the opinion of the court:

This appeal raises for consideration the question whether a certain ordinance of the city of Detroit, relating to the collection and disposition of garbage within that city, is repugnant to the 14th Amendment of the Constitution of the United States.

By the ordinance in question it was made the duty of the occupant or occupants of every dwelling house or other building in the city of Detroit to provide a suitable and water-tight box or other vessel of a convenient size to be handled by the garbage collector, in which such occupant or occupants should cause to be placed or deposited "all offal, garbage, and refuse animal and vegetable matter of the premises." Such occupants were required to keep the box or other vessel in the alley in rear of their premises, or at a place on the premises most accessible to the person collecting the garbage and offal; and it was made unlawful to put anything but refuse animal and vegetable matter in the vessel used for garbage and offal. If the vessel was placed in the alley, it must be provided with a tight cover, properly hinged, and located next to the lot line, from which it should not project more than two feet into the alley. § 1.

The remaining sections of the ordinance are in these words:

"§ 2. The word 'garbage' shall be held to include every refuse accumulation of animal, fruit, or vegetable matter that *attends [327] the preparation, use, cooking, dealing in or storing of meat, fish, fowl, food, fruit, or vegetables, including dead animals and condemned foods found within the city limits. All garbage shall be collected in water-tight closed metal boxes, and such boxes shall be purified as often as the health officer may direct, and shall have painted thereon the word 'Garbage.'

"§ 3. It is hereby made the duty of the contractor with the city of Detroit for the collection and removal of garbage and dead animals to collect and remove, in accordance with the ordinances and contract of the city, all garbage, dead animals, fish, and refuse animal and vegetable matter found within the city limits. No other person or party except the city contractor or its agents shall carry, convey, or transport through the streets, alleys, or public places of the city of Detroit such materials, and it shall be unlawful for any person to interfere in any manner with the collection and disposal of such materials by the city contractor.

"§ 4. It shall be unlawful for any person to deposit, throw, or place any garbage, fish, dead animals, or refuse animal or vegetable matter in any avenue, alley, street, or other public place within the city of Detroit; nor shall any person place such materials upon any private property, whether owned by such person or not, unless the same shall be inclosed in proper vessels or boxes, as provided in § 1.

"§ 5. The collection and removal of garbage shall be under the supervision of the board of health, and it shall be the duty of the board of health and police department, through their proper officials and agents, to enforce the provisions of this ordinance." Revised Ordinances of 1895, as amended in 1901.

The city of Detroit rests the authority of its council to pass this ordinance upon its charter, which contains the following provisions: "The council shall have power to provide for the preservation of the general health of the inhabitants of the city, and to make regulations to secure the same; . . . to abate or remove any nuisance; . . . to prohibit and prevent any person from having on his premises any substance [328] or thing *that is unwholesome or nauseous; and to authorize the removal thereof; . . . The common council is also empowered to enact and provide, by appropriate ordinance, for the manner of collecting, transporting, conveying, and handling of garbage and all animal and vegetable matter and refuse in said city; . . . and to require all persons in said city to dispose of the same in the manner provided by said common council in said ordinance for the removal and destruction thereof, and to impose and enforce appropriate penalties for any violation of said ordinance." Charter of the city, chap. 7, § 43, par. 130.

By additional legislation in 1889 the common council was given the power "to advertise for proposals, and contract for the removal, disposition, and destruction of garbage and all animal and vegetable refuse for a term of years."

In 1901 the city and the Detroit Sanitary Works, a corporation of Michigan, entered into a written agreement, by which the latter undertook to collect, remove, and dispose of all garbage and dead animals within the limits of the city of Detroit for the term of ten consecutive fiscal years, beginning July 1st, 1901. In consideration of the faithful performance of the conditions and specifications specified in the agreement, the city agreed to pay to the sanitary company the sum of $515,000, in equal monthly instalments of $4,291.66⅔ during the continuance of the contract.

The agreement between the city and the sanitary works contained, among others, the following provisions: "1. Garbage shall be understood to consist of all refuse animal or vegetable matter, including dead animals, found within the city limits, coming from private or public premises within the city. 2. The time for making the collection of garbage and dead animals shall be as follows, to wit: (a) Within and upon the public markets daily. (b) Within the two-mile circle as shown from the maps of the city, and from all hotels, restaurants, hospitals, slaughterhouses, and all other places where animals, game, or fowl are killed [329] within the said city of Detroit, *collections daily. (c) Within all other portions of the city, collections three times in each week, times as nearly equally divided as possible. The work of collecting said garbage shall be performed to the satisfaction and under the provision of the board of health. (d) The board of health shall have authority to order daily collections outside of the two-mile circle whenever, in its judgment, it is necessary. The health officer shall also have authority to order extra collections to be made at any time when necessary, the contractor shall be required to cause such collections to be made within three hours of the time when such order is received by him. (e) Garbage shall be collected in and transported through the streets of the city in vehicles with water-tight closed metal boxes. 3. All garbage must be taken at least 2 miles outside the limits of the city of Detroit, and disposed of in such manner as to entail no damage or claim against the city of Detroit for such disposal. 4. It is expressly agreed that no garbage or other refuse collected by said contractor shall be dumped into the Detroit river or any of its tributaries, or into Lake Eric or any other lake. The common council reserves the right to make such rules and regulations with reference to the collection of the garbage as may, from time to time, be deemed necessary. No employee of the contractor shall receive in the city of Detroit less than one and fifty one-hundredths dollars ($1.50) per day. In case said second party shall fail to collect garbage or dead animals in accordance with this contract, and such failure shall continue for the period of twenty-four (24) hours after a written notice from the board of health of the city of Detroit, then, and in such case, said second party shall be liable to and shall pay to the said party of the first part the penalty of two dollars ($2.00) for each and every such failure so to do."

Upon the complaint of an agent of the sanitary works, Gardner, the plaintiff in error, was arrested by warrant issued out of the recorder's court of Detroit, charged with having violated the above ordinance by unlawfully and wilfully carrying, *conveying, [330] and transporting garbage through the streets and alleys of Detroit, he not being the city contractor or its agent.

The defendant pleaded not guilty, was tried and found guilty by a jury, and fined $10.

There was no dispute at the trial as to the facts. It appeared that the defendant gathered and transported refuse from the tables of hotels, of the kinds described in the statute as garbage, acting in such matter, not for the city contractor, but for the person who bought such material from the proprietors of the hotels. He violated the statute, and was liable to the prescribed penalty unless the ordinance was invalid. The judgment of conviction in the recorder's court was affirmed by the supreme court of Michigan, all the judges (except one who did not sit) concurring. 11 Det. L. N. 166, 100 N. W. 126.

The contention of the accused at the trial was that the garbage or swill accumulated at hotels was property, and that the 3d section of the ordinance, directing the city contractor to collect and remove it, deprived the owner of his property without compensation, and therefore was in violation of the 14th Amendment of the Constitution of the United States.

This contention was overruled by the trial court, the judge saying to the jury: "The defendant in this case was transporting what confessedly was garbage. It is well settled that no one may claim damages because of enforced obedience to a police regulation designed to secure and protect public health. It is manifest that, were individuals permitted to escape the regulation fixed by the common council, and dispose of garbage as they severally saw fit, all system in the collection and removal of refuse matter would be destroyed. Even if this garbage have some value for some such use as that to which the respondent's employer put it,—the feeding of hogs,—the courts will not, at the expense of the public health, recognize that this refuse matter, in its legal aspect, [331]is property. No property *right has, therefore, been violated." The supreme court of the state thus disposed of the question: "The defendant attacks the validity of the ordinance as it relates to garbage or refuse from the tables of hotels. Similar ordinances have been before the court and sustained in People v. Gordon, 81 Mich. 306, 21 Am. St. Rep. 524, 45 N. W. 658, and Grand Rapids v. De Vries, 123 Mich. 570, 82 N. W. 269. In these cases the question of whether there is a property right in refuse was not raised in the form in which it is here presented, although, in the case last cited, it was quite plainly implied that the common council, in the exercise of the police power, had the right to treat as a nuisance all such refuse as is unfit for human food. The court may well take judicial notice that table refuse, when dumped into receptacles kept for that purpose, will speedily ferment and emit noisome odors, calculated to affect the public health. If, in providing against such a nuisance, the owner of such material suffers some slight loss, the inconvenience or loss is presumed to be compensated in the common benefit secured by regulation. Horr & B. Mun. Pol. Ord. § 220. The precise question involved in the present case was considered in the well-reasoned opinion of Judge Shepard in Dupont v. District of Columbia, 20 App. D. C. 477, and the conclusion reached fully sustains the holding of the trial judge."

Upon the general subject of the exercise of police powers by municipalities proceeding under legislative sanction for the protection of the public health, the views of this court have been set forth in the case of California Reduction Co. v. Sanitary Reduction Works (just decided), 199 U. S. 306, ante, 204, 26 Sup. Ct. Rep. 100, and what has been said in the opinion in that case is, we think, decisive against the present defendant. It is appropriate, however, to make some observations in reference to certain features of the present case.

The defendant insists that it is part of the common knowledge of the country that the refuse from kitchens, tables, hotels, and restaurants is valuable as food for swine, and is property within the meaning of the constitutional provision which forbids *the [332]taking by any state of private property for public use without compensation. Of course, all know that such a use of refuse is not uncommon in some localities, although modern investigation shows that a good deal may be said against such a practice. It is believed by some that the feeding of garbage to swine produces an inferior quality of pork. There is authority for the statement that in 1889 the Massachusetts board of health reported, as the result of its investigation, that garbage-fed hogs were afflicted with trichinosis to the extent of 13 per cent. In some states it is forbidden by statute to feed garbage to milch cows, and in some cities it is forbidden to sell milk from garbage-fed cows. Chapin, Municipal Sanitation in the United States, 699, 700. We do not, of course, express any opinion as to these matters, and refer to them only in order to bring out the thought that the question before the municipal authorities of Detroit was one in respect of which there was room for difference of views as to what means were best for the protection of the public health. Looking at the matter in a practical light, we are unable to say that the means devised by the city council, and indicated by its action, were plainly unreasonable or unnecessary, or did not have a real, substantial relation to the protection of the public.

Touching the suggestion that garbage and refuse are valuable for the manufacture of merchantable grease and other products, it is sufficient, in view of what we have said in the other case, to remark that it was a controlling obligation of the city, which it could not properly ignore, to protect the health of its people in all lawful ways having relation to that object; and if, in its judgment, fairly and reasonably exercised, the presence of garbage and refuse in the city, on the premises of householders and otherwise, would endanger the public health by causing the spread of disease, then it could rightfully require such garbage and refuse to be removed and disposed of, even if it contained some elements of value. In such circumstances, the property rights of [333] individuals in the noxious *materials described in the ordinance must be subordinated to the general good. If it be said that the city might have adequately guarded the public health and at the same time saved the property rights of its owner, on whose premises garbage and refuse were found, the answer is that the city evidently thought otherwise, and we cannot confidently say that its constituted authorities went beyond the necessities of the case and exceeded their proper functions when they passed the ordinance in question. Those ordinances cannot, therefore, according to well-settled principles, be held to be wanting in the due process of law required by the Constitution.

The defendant further contends, as he contended in the supreme court of the state, that the act of the Michigan legislature, creating the board of jury commissioners for Wayne county, in which the present trial occurred, denies to accused persons and other litigants in that county the equal protection of the laws. The ground of this contention is, that by the general laws of the state, the officers authorized to make and return the jury list were elected by the people in their several townships and in city wards (Const. art. 11, § 1, People ex rel. Atty. Gen. v. Detroit, 29 Mich. 108), and required that jurors should be of those who are assessed on the assessment roll; while, by the Wayne county jury law of 1893, as amended in 1895 (Pub. Acts 1893, p. 337; id. 1895, p. 69), the jury lists are made up and returned by a board of seven jury commissioners, appointed by the governor, with the consent of the senate, and the names of persons to be returned need not appear on the assessment rolls. This difference between the general law relating to jury trials and the special law relating to Wayne county, it is said, constitutes a discrimination against the people of that county, and amounts to a denial to them of the equal protection of the law. This view does not commend itself to our judgment. It is fully met and shown not to be sound by the judgment in Missouri v. Lewis (Pearman v. Lewis) 101 U. S. 22, 31, 25 L. ed. 989, 992, where Mr. Justice Bradley, speaking for the court, and referring to the 14th Amendment, said: "The last restric-

[334] tion, *as to the equal protection of the laws, is not violated by any diversity in the jurisdiction of the several courts as to subject-matter, amount, or finality of decision, if all persons within the territorial limits of their respective jurisdictions have an equal right, in like cases and under like circumstances, to resort to them for redress. Each state has the right to make political subdivisions of its territory for municipal purposes, and to regulate their local government. As respects the administration of justice, it may establish one system of courts for cities and another for rural districts, one system fo one portion of its territory, and another system for another portion. Convenience, if not necessity, often requires this to be done, and it would seriously interfere with the power of a state to regulate its internal affairs to deny to it this right. We think it is not denied or taken away by anything in the Constitution of the United States, including the amendments thereto. We might go still further and say, with undoubted truth, that there is nothing in the Constitution to prevent any state from adopting any system of laws or judicature it sees fit for all or any part of its territory. If the state of New York, for example, should see fit to adopt the civil law and its method of procedure for New York city and the surrounding counties, and the common law and its method of procedure for the rest of the state, there is nothing in the Constitution of the United States to prevent its doing so. This would not, of itself, within the meaning of the 14th Amendment, be a denial to any person of the equal protection of the laws. If every person residing or being in either portion of the state should be accorded the equal protection of the laws prevailing there he could not justly complain of a violation of the clause referred to. For, as before said, it has respect to persons and classes of persons. It means that no person or class of persons shall be denied the same protection of the laws which is enjoyed by other persons or other classes in the same place and under like circumstances."

[335] *Perceiving no error in the record touching any Federal question, the judgment is affirmed.

Mr. Justice Brewer and Mr. Justice Peckham dissent from the opinion so far as it relates to the ordinances in question.

F. H. HARTMAN, Plff. in Err.,

v.

BUTTERFIELD LUMBER COMPANY.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 335–341.)

Public lands—conveyance pursuant to contract made before patent—validity as against one claiming under patentee.—One claiming under a trust deed from the patentee, with knowledge of a prior conveyance of the timber and a right of way, cannot challenge the validity of such conveyance because it was made pursuant to an agreement entered into prior to the patent, in consideration of an advance of money to enable the entryman to perfect his entry and obtain the patent.

[No. 44.]

Argued and submitted November 7, 1905. Decided November 27, 1905.

IN ERROR to the Supreme Court of the State of Mississippi to review a judgment which reversed a decree of the Chancery Court of Lincoln County, in that state, dismissing a bill to establish the right to timber and a right of way under a conveyance from a patentee pursuant to an agreement entered into prior to the patent, and entered a decree in accordance with the prayer of the bill. Affirmed.

See same case below, 82 Miss. 494, 100 Am. St. Rep. 644, 34 So. 328.

Statement by Mr. Justice Brewer:

In December, 1892, Esau Harness received a patent from the United States for 160 acres of land in Lincoln county, Mississippi. On January 28, 1893, he conveyed to the Norwood & Butterfield Company all the pine timber on the land "and a right of way through and across the land for roads, trams, or railroads, 100 feet wide." This in-[336] strument was filed *for record February 10, and the complainant below (defendant in error here) subsequently obtained a deed from the Norwood & Butterfield Company. On January 30, 1893, the patentee conveyed his entire interest in the land as security for supplies and merchandise to be furnished by Hartman, the plaintiff in error (defendant below), during the year 1893. This deed was filed for record January 31, 1893. On December 14, 1894 the trustee therein named sold and conveyed the land to Hartman.

This suit was brought in the chancery court of Lincoln county, Mississippi, to establish the prior right of the complainant to the timber and right of way. The bill charged that the defendant had actual notice of the conveyance from the patentee to the Norwood & Butterfield Company when he accepted the trust deed from the patentee, and therefore that he was subordinated in right to those claiming under the first conveyance, although it was not placed on record until after the execution and record of the deed of trust. It appeared in the testimony that, prior to the patent, the patentee had contracted with the Norwood & Butterfield Company to convey to it the timber and right of way. He himself testified that he had made such a contract, both before and after he had received the patent. The supreme court of the state, deciding in favor of the complainant (82 Miss. 494, 100 Am. St. Rep. 644, 34 So. 328), considered the effect of the contract made before the patent upon the validity of the subsequent conveyance to the Norwood & Butterfield Company, saying:

"We are driven to the conclusion that the decree of the court below must have been the result of an opinion that the agreement between Esau Harness and the grantor of appellant that, in consideration of the advance money to perfect his homestead entry and get his patent, Esau would sell the timber on the land in controversy, was against public policy and void, and made void also the subsequent sale of the timber to reimburse for that advance. We are not in accord with that view. U. S. Rev. Stat. §§ 2290, 2291, 2296, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, pp. *1389, 1390, 1398, with Gould & Tucker's [337] notes, vol. 1, p. 537. On the testimony we cannot escape the conviction that the appellee had such notice as should put any reasonable man on inquiry, which would have disclosed the existence of the conveyance of the timber and right of way by Esau to the grantor of appellants.

"Reversed, and decree here in accordance with the prayer of the bill."

Mr. Pleasant Z. Jones submitted the cause for plaintiff in error.

Mr. Holmes Conrad argued the cause and filed a brief for defendant in error.

Mr. Justice Brewer delivered the opinion of the court:

For the purposes of this case it may be conceded that the contract made before the patent was, by virtue of the policy of the United States, as disclosed in its statutes, void, and could not have been enforced by the Norwood & Butterfield Company, but the contract was not inherently vicious or immoral. It was simply void because in conflict with the Federal statutes. Anderson v. Carkins, 135 U. S. 483, 34 L. ed. 272, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 905. When the patent issued, the full legal title passed to the patentee. He could do with the land that which he saw fit,—sell or give it away; and, if he voluntarily conveyed it, he could not thereafter repudiate the conveyance. He may well have thought that, having received money from the company to enable him to pay for the land, it was equitable that he should convey that interest which he had agreed to convey. At any rate, he had a right to exercise a choice in the matter, and, having exercised it, he, at least, cannot complain. Whether the government could challenge the conveyance we need not determine; for if it had any right to interfere, it has not chosen to do so. It is generally true that an executed contract, voluntarily executed, without fraud or duress, is binding, and cannot be repudiated by the party who executed it. In Bibb v. Allen, 149 U. S. 481, 497, 37 L. ed. 819, 825, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 950, Mr. Justice Jackson, speaking for the court, thus stated the law:

[338] *"It is well settled by the authorities that the defense of the statute of frauds cannot be set up against an executed contract. Dodge v. Crandall, 30 N. Y. 294, 304; Brown v. Farmers' Loan & T. Co. 117 N. Y. 266, 273, 22 N. E. 952; Madden v. Floyd, 69 Ala. 221, 225; Gordon v. Tweedy, 71 Ala. 202, 214; Huntley v. Huntley, 114 U. S. 394, 400, 29 L. ed. 130, 131, 5 Sup. Ct. Rep. 884; Browne, Stat. Fr. § 116. This rule proceeds and rests upon the principle that there is 'no rule of law which prevents a party from performing a promise which could not be legally enforced, or which will permit a party morally but not legally bound to do a certain act or thing, upon the act or thing being done, to recall it to the prejudice of the promisee, on the plea that the promise, while still executory, could not, by reason of some technical rule of law, have been enforced by action.' Newman v. Nellis, 97 N. Y. 285, 291."

St. Louis Hay & Grain Co. v. United States, 191 U. S. 159, 163, 48 L. ed. 130, 132, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 47.

It is also well settled that one whose interest in land is acquired subsequently to a conveyance thereof by the owner has no higher right to question the conveyance than his grantor had. This does not conflict with the rule that a conveyance fraudulent against creditors may be set aside at their instance, for their rights exist prior to the conveyance; or if not, the conveyance was made with the purpose on the part of the grantor of defrauding them out of debts subsequently contracted. Nothing of that kind appears here. Hartman, at the time of the conveyance, had no claim against the patentee. The conveyance was not made with the purpose of subsequently contracting a debt and defrauding him out of payment thereof. His trust deed was executed after the conveyance to the Norwood & Butterfield Company, and for the purpose of securing debts thereafter to be contracted, and he took with knowledge of the conveyance.

The judgment of the Supreme Court of Mississippi was right, and it is affirmed.

[339] *Mr Justice White, dissenting:

The reasons for my dissent are stated, not only because of what seems to me is the encouragement afforded to frauds on the homestead law by the ruling now made, but also because of the possible injurious consequences to arise from the application hereafter of the assumed legal principles upon which the ruling is based.

These are the facts: Harness entered the homestead. Before he had performed the conditions required by the law of the United States to entitle him to a patent, he made a contract with the Norwood & Butterfield Company, to convey to them, when he received a patent, the pine timber on the land and a right of way through and across the land for roads, trams, or railroads, 100 feet wide. Harness ultimately filed the proofs required by the acts of Congress; in other words, made an affidavit, as required by law, to the effect that he had the sole interest in the land, and that there was an absence of interest in anybody else. Obtaining the patent, he made the stipulated conveyance to the Norwood & Butterfield Company, who afterwards conveyed to the Butterfield Lumber Company, defendant in error. Before this deed, however, was recorded, as required by the laws of Mississippi, Harness mortgaged the land to Hartman, plaintiff in error, and the mortgage was at once recorded. Thereafter the deed was recorded. Soon afterward the Butterfield Company filed its bill in a court of chancery in Mississippi, to establish its alleged prior rights under the deed from Harness, and it was averred that Hartman accepted the mortgage to him with notice of the prior transfer, and therefore took subject to the deed.

That a Federal question was present is conceded, in view of the fact that the Mississippi court applied the laws of the United States in determining the validity of the contract and the deed. Having decided that they were valid, and that Hartman had notice of the transaction before the execution of the mortgage, the state court further held that the rights *of Hartman were subordinate [340] to those conferred by the contract and deed. I do not stop to demonstrate that a contract made by a homesteader to convey to another, when a patent is obtained, a right to strip the land of all the timber, and to vest in such party a right of way for a tramway to make the removal of the timber effectual, is void under the homestead laws of the United States. This I do not feel called upon to do, because the court, in deciding this case, expressly assumes that the contract to convey the timber was void, and bases its ruling upon that assumption, citing Anderson v. Carkins, 135 U. S. 483, 34 L. ed. 272, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 905. But, at the same time, it is declared that, although the contract was void, by virtue of the policy of the United States, as disclosed in its statutes, such contract was not inherently vicious or immoral. The deduction seems to me to be unwarranted. Considering a contract of this nature, in Anderson v. Carkins, it was said:

"There can be no question that this contract contemplated perjury on the part of Anderson, and was designed to thwart the policy of the government in the homestead laws, to secure for the benefit of the homesteader the exclusive benefit of his homestead right. Such a contract is against public policy, and will not be enforced in a court of equity."

And the doctrine of Anderson v. Carkins, which is conceded applies to this case, was reiterated in Adams v. Church, 193 U. S. 510, 515, 48 L. ed. 769, 771, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 512.

It having been impossible for the homesteader, without fraud and perjury, to execute the contract to strip the land of its timber, and give a right of way for a tramway to make the stripping effectual, it seems to me that it cannot be said that it was not immoral and vicious. And when the necessary effect of the contract is thus fixed, it is submitted that it becomes at once patent that decisions holding that executed contracts are not affected by the statute of frauds have no application to this case, for, as said by Mr. Justice Jackson, in the case relied upon to demonstrate the doctrine (Bibb v. Allen, 149 U. S. 497, 37 L. ed. 825, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 950): "Contracts not in [341] conformity *with the statute (of frauds) are only voidable, and not illegal."

It is said, however, that Harness made a deed in accordance with the contract, and this suit involves not the contract, but the deed. But unless this proceeds upon the assumption that the contract was merely voidable, and not illegal, as being contrary to public policy, it seems to me to be a plain misconception. This is said, since it cannot be that a court of equity will not enforce the specific performance of a contract which is void, as against public policy, but yet will lend its aid to one of the parties by enforcing a deed which permits the fruits of the void contract to be realized.

As said in Deweese v. Reinhard, 165 U. S. 386, 41 L. ed. 757, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 340,—a case concerning the homestead laws:

"A court of equity acts only when and as conscience commands; and if the conduct of the plaintiff be offensive to the dictates of natural justice, then, whatever may be the rights he possesses, and whatever use he may make of them in a court of law, he will be held remediless in a court of equity."

And especially must this be true where, as here, one of the parties to an illegal and void transaction invokes the aid of equity to give efficacy to perjury and a violation of public policy.

But it is asserted that whatever may be the right of the United States to assail the conveyance in question, neither the grantor nor his assignee has such right. Here again, it seems to me clear that the distinction has been lost sight of which exists between contracts which are merely voidable and those which are void because contrary to public policy. That in a case of the latter character either party to the unlawful transaction or those in privity with them may be heard to contest the right of one of the wrongdoers to the active aid of a court of equity in making the illegal act effective has long since been decided by this court. Harkness v. Underhill, 1 Black, 316, 325, 17 L. ed. 208, 213.

I therefore dissent.

---

*GUSTAV E. HAFEMANN, Plff. in Err., [342]

v.

FRED A. GROSS, Albert F. Gross, and Louis H. Gross.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 342–352.)

Public lands—contracts giving others than the pre-emptor benefit of entry.—A contract by which one proceeding under the pre-emption law agreed, in consideration of an advance of a portion of his expenses to be incurred in perfecting the entry, to pay a specified sum for locating him on the land, and a further amount, to be determined by the proceeds of any sale which he might make after acquiring title, is not invalid, under U. S. Rev. Stat. § 2262, requiring every pre-emptor to make affidavit before entry that "he has not settled upon and improved such land to sell the same on speculation, but in good faith to appropriate it to his own exclusive use; and that he has not, directly or indirectly, made any agreement or contract, in any way or manner, with any person whatsoever, by which the title which he might acquire from the government of the United States should inure, in whole or in part, to the benefit of any person except himself."

[No. 64.]

Argued and submitted November 9, 1905.
Decided November 27, 1905.

IN ERROR to the Supreme Court of the State of Minnesota to review a judgment which affirmed a judgment of the District Court for the County of St. Louis, in that state, in favor of plaintiffs in an action to recover a portion of the proceeds of a sale by a patentee from the United States, pursuant to an agreement made before entry. Affirmed.

See same case below, 92 Minn. 367, 100 N. W. 1. On first appeal, see 91 Minn. 1, 97 N. W. 430.

Statement by Mr. Justice Brewer:

By the admissions in the pleadings in this case, on December 1, 1890, the defendants in error, together with one Edmund F. Gross, as parties of the first part, entered into a contract with the plaintiff in error which stipulated: "That for and in consideration of the covenants hereinafter mentioned, the parties of the first part agree to pay one-fourth of all expenses accruing to the party of the second part in making final proof to S. W. ¼ of the N. W. ¼, the N. ½ of the S. W. ¼, and the S. W. ¼ of the S. W. ¼ of sec. 14, all in township 58, north of range 19 west, in St. Louis county, Minnesota, and receiving title thereto, and the party of the second part agrees and binds himself to pay to the parties of the first part $100 in cash upon the delivery of these presents for locating him on said land, and he further agrees to give the parties of the first part one-fourth part of the price and proceeds that may hereafter be obtained for the sale of said land after he has obtained title thereto from the United States, deducting the one-fourth expense as above provided, and can find a purchaser for and sell the same at its proper value."

The parties of the first part fully complied with all the stipulations of this contract.
[343] The plaintiff in error, who at the *time of the contract, was proceeding under the pre-emption law, made his final proofs, and on December 19, 1891, received a patent. On October 18, 1895, he sold the pine timber on the land and paid to the parties of the first part one fourth of the amount received by him therefor. Edmund F. Gross subsequently assigned to Albert F. Gross, one of the defendants in error, all of his right, title, and interest in the contract. On July 17, 1902, the plaintiff in error sold and conveyed the land to the Onondaga Iron Company. This action was brought in the district court of the county of St. Louis, Minnesota, to recover one-fourth part of the moneys received by him on said sale. Judgment was entered in the district court in favor of the plaintiffs (91 Minn. 1, 97 N. W. 430, 92 Minn. 367, 100 N. W. 1), which was affirmed by the supreme court of Minnesota, and thereupon this writ of error was sued out.

Mr. Roger S. Powell argued the cause and filed a brief for plaintiff in error:

"Title" is defined as the means whereby the owner of lands has the just possession of his property

2 Bl. Com. 195. But Blackstone is there treating the subject of tenures.

But "title" has also respect to that which is the subject of ownership.

Springfield F. & M. Ins. Co. v. Allen, 43 N. Y. 389, 3 Am. Rep. 711.

"Title," as applied to lands, signifies either a party's right to the enjoyment thereof, or the means whereby such right is approved, or by which it is evidenced.

Pratt v. Fountain, 73 Ga. 261.

One may have an equitable title in the land; that is, the legal title may be vested in one person, and the beneficial interest in the land may inure to another person, who may be named in the deed, or who may not be named at all, whose right may exist by parol,—that is, by the word of mouth, not shown by any written evidence.

Beringer v. Lutz, 188 Pa. 364, 41 Atl. 643.

The same situation in legal contemplation is made to appear in the case at bar by the written contract as was shown to exist wholly by parol in the case of Wolford v. Farnham, 44 Minn. 159, 46 N. W. 295, in which case it was held that the party holding a similar beneficial interest to the one discussed here was the owner and holder of the equitable title to the land.

See also Randall v. Constans, 33 Minn. 329, 23 N. W. 530.

This contract contains the evils in full flower, described by the court in the case of Myers v. Croft, 13 Wall. 291–296, 20 L. ed. 562, 563, as being the evils which it was the design and purpose of the pre-emption law to cut out.

It has been held in the case of Anderson v. Carkins, 135 U. S. 483, 34 L. ed. 272, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 905, that a contract, whereby one about to enter a homestead agreed to convey it to another, was against public policy and void, and not enforceable in equity. This decision was based on the construction of the statute relating to homestead entries; but the provisions of the pre-emption statute are even more stringent.

Mellison v. Allen, 30 Kan. 384, 2 Pac. 97.

A contract by a settler upon public land of the United States, made before the pre-emption of it, to convey to another an interest in the land in consideration for money loaned or advanced him to pre-empt it, is in violation of the statute, and void. It amounts to a contract in which one party undertakes to bribe, and the other agrees to commit perjury. There is no remedy in law or equity on such contracts.

Marshall v. Cowles, 48 Ark. 362, 3 S. W. 188.

A pre-emptor under the act of Congress of September 4th, 1841, who had not entered and paid for the land occupied by him, agreed to convey part of it to plaintiff. Afterwards, for the purpose of enabling him to make the oath required by the act of Congress to secure the pre-emption right, he induced plaintiff to surrender the evidence of the agreement, he promising orally that after his entry he would renew it.

The plaintiff had paid him $150 on the original agreement. It was held that the agreement was against public policy and void; and no action could be maintained to recover damages for its nonperformance, or to recover back the money paid on it.

Saint Peter Co. v. Bunker, 5 Minn. 192, Gil. 153.

Money paid upon a contract with a pre-emptor to sell his pre-emption claim before his entry and payment cannot be recovered.

Bruggerman v. Hoerr, 7 Minn. 337, 82 Am. Dec. 97, Gil. 264.

The advance of money to a pre-emptor to pre-empt land on an agreement that, in consideration thereof, he will convey part of the land pre-empted to the party advancing the money, furnishes no legal cause of action.

Ferguson v. Kumler, 11 Minn. 104, Gil. 62.

A contract by a pre-emptor about to pre-empt land, by which he agrees to give another an interest in the land, is utterly void, and incapable of becoming the foundation for any rights.

Evans v. Folsom, 5 Minn. 422, Gil. 342.

The earlier decisions in this state held that a mortgage of pre-empted lands, executed by the pre-emptor after making his proofs, but before patent issued, pursuant to an agreement made before the proofs, is void.

McCue v. Smith, 9 Minn. 252, 86 Am. Dec. 100, Gil. 237; Woodbury v. Dorman, 15 Minn. 338 Gil. 272.

Mr. Thomas J. Davis submitted the cause for defendants in error. Mr. John E. Davies was with him on the brief:

The supreme court of the state of Minnesota has repeatedly held that any agreement made prior to the entry or the purchase of land under the pre-emption act, by the entry man, to convey the title, or any portion thereof, to the land so acquired, is null and void and against public policy.

Saint Peter Co. v. Bunker, 5 Minn. 192, Gil. 153; Bruggerman v. Hoerr, 7 Minn. 337, 82 Am. Dec. 97, Gil. 264; Ferguson v. Kumler, 11 Minn. 104, Gil. 62; Evans v. Folsom, 5 Minn. 422, Gil. 342.

In its earlier decisions the same court held that a mortgage given on land by a pre-emptor, acquired under the pre-emption laws of the United States pursuant to an agreement made prior to the acquiring of the title to the land, was invalid, and not enforceable.

Woodbury v. Dorman, 15 Minn. 338, Gil. 272; McCue v. Smith, 9 Minn. 252, 86 Am. Dec. 100, Gil. 237.

Later the Minnesota court reversed the position taken in the two last-cited cases, and in the case so reversing its former holdings it expresses itself as follows: The question is, Was there any contract or agreement by which the pre-emptor fixed this result? Did the pre-emptor contract or agree that the title to be acquired—that is to say, the fee—should inure to the benefit of another? In other words, Did the pre-emptor contract or agree to do anything which, when done, would pass the title in whole or in part to another, so that the pre-emptor would, as to such whole or part, be a mere conduit of the title?

Jones v. Tainter, 15 Minn. 512, Gil. 423.

In the case of United States v. Budd, 144 U. S. 154, 36 L. ed. 384, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 575, Justice Brewer, writing the opinion in construing part of the timber and stone act, and which is analogous to, and almost word for word the same as, the statute under consideration, says: The act does not in any respect limit the dominion which the purchaser has over the land after its purchase from the government, or restrict in the slightest his power of alienation. All that it denounces is a prior agreement, —the acting for another in the purchase. If, when the title passes from the government, no one save the purchaser has any claim upon it, the act is satisfied.

This opinion is cited with approval in the case of United States v. Mackintosh, 29 C. C. A. 176, 56 U. S. App. 483, 85 Fed. 333.

The only agreement or contract forbidden by the statutes is one by which the title may inure in whole or in part to the benefit of any person except the applicant himself. If the agreement or contract is not of this nature, it cannot be in violation of the statute. The statute itself makes a specific designation of the kind of agreement or contract that is forbidden. It will be observed from its language that the agreement or contract which may inure to the benefit of some other person than the applicant must affect, in whole or in part, the title to the land.

Kingston v. Eckman, 22 Land Dec. 234; Dawson v. Higgins, 22 Land Dec. 544.

If the contention of the plaintiff in error is correct, an action of specific performance of the contract will lie on the part of the defendants in error, compelling the plaintiff in error to convey to them one fourth of the land. But such an action will not lie, and the courts have decided that such a contract conveys no interest in lands whatsoever.

King v. Millard, 15 R. I. 426, 7 Atl. 405; Ellsworth v. Pomeroy, 26 Ind. 158; Gross v. Hafemann, 91 Minn. 1, 103 Am. St. Rep. 471, 97 N. W. 430.

The contract created no community of interest in lands between the plaintiff in error and the defendants in error.

Ellsworth v. Pomeroy, supra.

An action would not lie on the part of the defendants in error against the plaintiff in error to compel him to sell the land if a purchaser could be found for the same at its proper value. Their only remedy would be, if they had any, in damages against the plaintiff in error for failure to perform the contract.

King v. Millard, supra.

Mr. Justice Brewer delivered the opinion of the court:

The case turns upon the construction of the contract and its alleged conflict with § 2262, Rev. Stat., the pertinent part of which is:

"Before any person claiming the benefit of this chapter is allowed to enter lands, he shall make oath before the receiver or register of the land district in which the land is situated. . . . That he has not settled upon and improved such land to sell the same on speculation, but in good faith to appropriate it to his own exclusive use; and that he has not, directly or indirectly, made any agreement or contract, in any way or manner, with any person whatsoever, by [344] which the title which *he might acquire from the government of the United States should inure, in whole or in part, to the benefit of any person except himself."

The defendants in error insist that the title was to be in no manner affected by the contract; that it was simply a promise on the part of the pre-emptor to pay a certain sum of money, the amount thereof to be determined by the proceeds of a sale which he might subsequently make; that he was under no obligations to make any sale, and, if he did not, they would have no claim upon him. On the other hand, the plaintiff in error invokes the doctrine laid down in Anderson v. Carkins, 135 U. S. 483, 34 L. ed. 272, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 905, that, by the terms of the contract, the title which he acquired from the government was in part to inure, indirectly, at least to the other parties to the contract. He insists that the purpose of Congress was to secure to the pre-emptor the full benefit of the property patented to him; that this purpose is emphasized by the use of the words "directly or indirectly;" and that any contract by which third parties were to acquire a portion of the property or a share in the proceeds of any sale of the property was really a contract which operated indirectly to transfer the title in part to such third party. Under such construction a contract by which the pre-emptor should agree to mortgage the land after acquiring title would be void, because, on failure to pay, and by foreclosure of the mortgage, the mortgagee might acquire title.

The question is not free from doubt. The contract did not directly affect the title; that was to be absolutely vested in the patentee, undisturbed by any claim of the defendants in error. He was not bound to do anything by which any portion of the title should pass to them, directly or indirectly. On the other hand, its effect was to cast a limitation on the full benefit of the property, for, while the patentee was under no obligation to sell, he was required to divide the proceeds if and when he made a sale.

It may be well to examine the decisions of the courts, Federal as well as state, and also the rulings of the Land Department. *Before doing so, however, we quote the cor- [345] responding provisions of the Federal statutes respecting homesteads. Rev. Stat. §§ 2290, 2291, and 2295, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, pp. 1389, 1390, 1398. In his application for a homestead entry the applicant must make affidavit that his "application is made for his exclusive use and benefit, and that his entry is made for the purpose of actual settlement and cultivation, and not either directly or indirectly for the use or benefit of any other person." And before a certificate or patent is issued he must make affidavit "that no part of such land has been alienated, except as provided in section 2288 (U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 1385)." That section refers to the transfer for church, cemetery, or school purposes, or for the right of way of railroads. The land shall not "in any event become liable to the satisfaction of any debt contracted prior to the issuing of the patent therefor." [Rev. Stat. § 2296, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 1398.]

Under these provisions it has been held that a contract to convey the whole or part of the land, made prior to the perfection of his equitable right, by one seeking pre-emption or a homestead, is void, will not be enforced in the courts (Anderson v. Carkins, 135 U. S. 483, 34 L. ed 272, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 905), and, if known to the Department, will prevent the passing of the legal title. Such has been the uniform ruling of the Land Department, as well as of the courts, state and Federal.

With respect to a mortgage or deed of trust executed under like circumstances, the decisions of the Land Department have been all to the effect that such mortgage or deed of trust is not an alienation within the scope of the homestead statute, or forbidden by the pre-emption law, especially where, in the case of a pre-emption, the mortgage is given to secure money borrowed to complete the purchase of the land. See, in reference to pre-emptors, Larson v. Weisbecker, 1 Land Dec. 409, Opinion of Secretary Teller; Re Ray, 6 Land Dec. 340, Opinion of Acting Secretary Muldrow; Haling v. Eddy, 9 Land Dec. 337, Opinion of Secretary Noble; Murdock v. Ferguson, 13 Land Dec. 198, Opinion of Secretary Chandler. With reference to a homestead entryman, see Mudgett v. Dubuque & S. R. Co. 8 Land Dec. 243, Opin-[346] ion of Secretary Vilas; Dawson v. *Higgins, 22 Land Dec. 544, Opinion of Secretary Smith; Kezar v. Horde, 27 Land Dec. 148. Opinion of Secretary Bliss. In addition, see Lawson v. Reynolds, 28 Land Dec. 155, in which Secretary Hitchcock held that a "written agreement executed by a homesteader, and operating as a mere lease of a part of the premises and the grant of an easement, the use of which would tend to improve and increase the value of the land as a homestead, is not an alienation of any part of such land, and no bar to the perfection of the entry." See also Kingston v. Eckman, 22 Land Dec. 234, in respect to an entry under the timber and stone act of June 3, 1878 (20 Stat. at L. 89, chap. 151), as amended by the act of August 4, 1892 (27 Stat. at L. 348, chap. 375, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 1434), the provisions of which statute in reference to the oath of the applicant are similar to those in the pre-emption act.

There has been some division in the courts upon the question. In Brewster v. Madden, 15 Kan. 249, the supreme court of that state, in an opinion delivered by the writer of this, held that a mortgage given by a pre-emptor prior to the entry of the lands was void, reaching this conclusion largely on the proposition that, at the time the pre-emption act [5 Stat. at L. 453, chap. 16] was passed (1841), mortgages, always in form conveyances, were then regarded by the profession generally as conditional alienations. To like effect were the early rulings of the supreme court of Minnesota (McCue v. Smith, 9 Minn. 252, 86 Am. Dec. 100, Gil. 237; Woodbury v. Dorman, 15 Minn. 338, Gil. 272), though these rulings were subsequently distinctly overruled by the same court. Jones v. Taintor, 15 Minn. 512, Gil. 423; Lang v. Morey, 40 Minn. 396, 12 Am. St. Rep. 748, 42 N. W. 88. Bass v. Buker, 6 Mont. 442, 12 Pac. 922, deciding the same way, was also overruled in Norris v. Heald, 12 Mont. 282, 33 Am. St. Rep. 581, 29 Pac. 1121. The large majority of state decisions follow these later rulings. See, in case of pre-emptions, Wilcox v. John, 21 Colo. 367, 52 Am. St. Rep. 246, 40 Pac. 880; Christy v. Dana, 34 Cal. 548; Christy v. Dana, 42 Cal. 174; Camp v. Grider, 62 Cal. 20; and in reference to homesteads, Fuller v. Hunt, 48 Iowa, 163; Dickerson v. Bridges, 147 Mo. 235, 48 S. W. 825; Weber v. Laidler, 26 Wash. 144, 90 Am. St. Rep. 726, 66 Pac. 400; Spiess v. Neuberg, 71 Wis. 279, 5 Am. St. Rep. 211, 37 N. W. 417; Kirkaldie v. Larrabee, 31 *Cal. [347] 455, 89 Am. Dec. 205; Orr v. Stewart, 67 Cal. 275, 7 Pac. 693; Stark v. Duvall, 7 Okla. 213, 54 Pac. 453. In Orrell v. Bay Mfg. Co. 83 Miss. 800, 36 So. 561, the court held that the prohibition of the alienation of public land by parties who have taken the preliminary steps to acquire the same under the homestead laws, and who have not perfected their entries, has reference to an absolute sale of the land, or some part of it, and in that case the leasing of trees on the land for turpentine purposes, and the sale of trees, was held not an alienation within the meaning of the statute.

Obviously, the trend of the authorities is strongly in favor of the proposition that a mortgage or deed of trust by one seeking an entry under the pre-emption or homestead laws of the United States, made prior to the perfection of his equitable right, is valid. These authorities would fully sustain the decision of the supreme court of Minnesota in the present case.

Further, in the case at bar, there was no mortgage, deed of trust, or agreement for a specific lien of any kind. It was simply a promise to pay money in case of a sale by the patentee, the amount of the payment to be determined by the sum received on the sale. It was a promise which, in no event, could be enforced against the land. It was only a personal obligation of the patentee. It might never be enforceable against him, and could not be except upon his sale of the land. Of course, it would not be contended that a mere promise to pay money by one seeking to acquire title under a homestead was not binding, and if the only effect of the contract is to measure the sum which the patentee agrees to pay by that which he may receive when he sells the land, it cannot be held that a contract has been made for an alienation of the title in whole or in part, or that the land was not acquired for the sole use and benefit of the patentee.

The judgment of the Supreme Court of Minnesota was right, and it is affirmed.

*Mr. Justice White, with whom concur [348] Mr. Justice McKenna and Mr. Justice Holmes, dissenting:

The power to evade the restrictions imposed by Congress upon the right to acquire land by pre-emption, which, it seems to me, must result from the construction now given to the act of Congress as applied to the contract in controversy, causes me to state the reasons for my dissent.

There is no controversy as to the applicable statute, and no question of fact as to the existence and terms of the contract. The bald question, therefore, is, Was the contract in conflict with the requirements of § 2262, Rev. Stat.?

By that section the pre-emptor, before being allowed to enter land, was obliged to make oath, as follows:

"That he has not settled upon and improved such land to sell the same on speculation, but in good faith to appropriate it to his own exclusive use; and that he has not, directly or indirectly, made any agreement or contract, in any way or manner, with any person whatsoever, by which the title which he might acquire from the government of the United States should inure in whole or in part to the benefit of any person except himself."

By the contract here in question, which was entered into prior to the making of the statutory affidavit, the defendants in error, and one other person—whose interest has since been acquired by one of the defendants in error—agreed to pay one-fourth part of the expenses of the plaintiff in error, the proposed pre-emptor, to be incurred by him in perfecting his entry, he, on the other hand, agreeing to pay $100 in cash "for locating him on said land," and binding himself to give to the other parties to the agreement "one-fourth part of the price and proceeds that may hereinafter be obtained for the sale of said land after he has obtained title thereto from the United States, deducting the one-fourth expense as above provided, and can find a purchaser for and sell the same at its proper value."

[349] *My mind cannot perceive how this contract can be held valid, testing its provisions by the statutory prohibitions, for it is settled that the requirement of specific statements in the affidavit implies a prohibition against the doing of that which the pre-emptor must swear in the affidavit that he had not done.

Let me consider what the statute thus requires the pre-emptor to swear, in connection with the contract, in order to test the conflict between them. The pre-emptor must swear "that he has not settled upon and improved such land to sell the same on speculation, but in good faith to appropriate it to his own exclusive use." Could this statement have been truthfully made in view of the agreement by which the pre-emptor bound himself after his purchase, if he sold the land, to pay to the other parties to the contract one-fourth part of the purchase price? Further, the statute requires the pre-emptor to swear "that he has not, directly or indirectly, made any agreement or contract, in any way or manner, with any person whatsoever, by which the title which he might acquire from the government of the United States should inure, in whole or in part, to the benefit of any person except himself." Was the affidavit made by the pre-emptor in this case true when, at the time it was made, he had executed a contract or agreement by which, when the property was sold, one fourth of the price should go to the benefit of the other parties to this contract? Concede that technically the contract did not purport to be an agreement on the part of the pre-emptor to convey the legal title to one-fourth part of the land to the other parties to the agreement,—can it in reason be said that the agreement did not directly or indirectly provide that the title, when acquired, should inure in whole or in part to the benefit of other contracting parties? To my mind the statute seems so plain, and the terms of the contract to be so clearly in violation of its provisions, that there can reasonably be no room for construction.

But it is said the statute simply prohibits agreements on *the part of the pre-[350] emptor by which the title which he might acquire would inure in whole or in part to the benefit of any other person than himself; therefore, to constitute a violation of the statute, it must be found that the contract bound the pre-emptor, after he had acquired the land, to convey a one-fourth interest in the title to the land. But this disregards the fact that the statute expressly forbids the doing of the prohibited thing, either "directly or indirectly;" and prohibits "any agreement or contract," in any way or manner whatsoever, by which the title to be derived from the government of the United States should inure, in whole or in part, to the benefit of any person except the pre-emptor. It is clear, to my mind, that the words "directly or indirectly and in any manner" were obviously intended to embrace evasions and subterfuges by which the policy of the statute might be frustrated,—that is, the prohibition against giving to another person than the pre-emptor the benefit, in whole or in part, of the results of acquiring the land from the United States.

In Anderson v. Carkins, 135 U. S. 483, 34 L. ed. 272, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 905, dealing with an affidavit of a homesteader, where the requirements were less stringent than exacted in pre-emption cases, it was decided that the existence of an agreement to convey, after patent, a part of the land to another, was void as against public policy. To me that case is decisive of this. It is said, however, there the obligation was to convey the land, whilst here there was no obligation on the part of the pre-emptor to convey or to sell the land after he acquired it, but only an obligation, if he did sell, to pay the one fourth of the proceeds. But it cannot be meant by this to say that there was no contract, because the agreement was so purely potestative on the part of the pre-emptor as not to imply an obligation, since the contract is enforced by the decree now rendered. Suppose, however, that the contract could be divided, and held to imply an obligation to pay over to another a portion of the purchase price, after the obtaining of a patent, only in case the pre-emptor chose to sell,—does such construction relieve [351] the contract from *the prohibitions of the statute? It seems to me not, because to so hold would simply be to permit mere form, and not substance, to control. In Pollock v. Farmers' Loan & T. Co. 157 U. S. 429, 39 L. ed. 759, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 673, the question was whether Congress could, in levying an income tax, include as part of the taxable income revenues derived from real estate. It was held that it could not be done, because substance was to control; and that to include rents in the income taxed was to impose a direct burden on the owner of the real estate. After quoting from Co. Litt. 45, the declaration "for what is the land but the profits thereof," and a passage in Jarman on Wills, stating that a devise of the rents and profits or of the income of lands passes the land itself, both at law and in equity, the court said (p. 581, L. ed. p. 819, Sup. Ct. Rep. p. 689):

"The real question is, Is there any basis upon which to rest the contention that real estate belongs to one of the two great classes of taxes, and the rent or income which is the incident of its ownership belongs to the other? We are unable to perceive any ground for the alleged distinction. An annual tax upon the annual value or annual user of real estate appears to us the same in substance as an annual tax on the real estate, which would be paid out of the rent or income."

This being the rule settled by this court, simply as to the right to receive the fruits of real estate, I do not perceive why, in view of the sweeping prohibitions of the act of Congress, the existence of a continued obligation to pay over the price of real estate to another person when sold does not amount to an agreement giving to such person, at least indirectly, an interest in the land itself.

Having said that, in my opinion, there was no ambiguity in the statute as applied to the contract, it seems to me unnecessary to consider the decided cases. But I refer briefly to them. True it is that there are rulings of state courts and of the Land Department, holding that an agreement to execute a mortgage upon pre-empted land is not within the prohibition of the statute. When the opinions so holding are analyzed it will be seen that they proceed upon the theory *that the spirit of the statute does [352] not embrace transactions of that character. For the purposes of this case, however, it does not seem to me essential to say whether or not such rulings are correct, as an agreement to mortgage to repay a given sum advanced, to enable the pre-emptor to improve the land, might well be held not to be within the spirit of the prohibitions of the statute, and yet such rulings would not be controlling as to an agreement like the one here in question, especially if the contract is construed as amounting to a perpetual obligation to transfer to a third person, upon a sale of the land, a given portion of the price. Such a contract at once puts the person in whose favor it is made in the attitude, not of a lender, entitled to receive back his loan with simple interest, but in the position of a speculator, who is to benefit from the enhancement in value of the land which may arise in the future, without reference to the amount of any expenditure by him made,—a character of transaction which it was the express purpose of the act of Congress to forbid. Myers v. Croft, 13 Wall. 295, 20 L. ed. 563. And, from another point of view, such a transaction puts the pre-emptor making it in a position where his plain interest is not to improve and develop the land to its full capacity, because the labor expended for that purpose would ultimately inure, in case of a sale of the land, to the benefit of a third person.

Deeming that the contract in question was within the prohibitions of the act of Congress, and void as against public policy, I do not think the court should lend its aid to its enforcement, and I therefore dissent; and am authorized to state that Mr. Justice McKenna and Mr. Justice Holmes concur therein.

---

*ROYAL INSURANCE COMPANY, Plff. [353] in Err.,
v.
ROBERT A. MILLER, Special Master of the Caja de Ahorros and Lucas Amadeo.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 353–371.)

1. Bankruptcy—authority of special master to collect assets.—The mere designation of a person as "special master" in the order of appointment in bankruptcy proceedings does not deprive him of the express authority conferred by such order to sue to collect all the assets of the bankrupt estate.

NOTE.—As to mortgages on crops—see note to Loftin v. Hines, 10 L.R.A. 490.

As to mortgages on future crops—see note to Dickey v. Waldo, 23 L.R.A. 449, and Butt v. Ellett, 22 L. ed. U. S. 183.

On the rights of mortgagee to benefit of insurance taken in the name of mortgagor—see note to Chipman v. Carroll, 25 L.R.A. 305.

2. Insurance—property covered—products of growing crop.—A policy of insurance on a stock of sugar and molasses "deposited" in the sugar manufactory upon a sugar plantation covers sugar and molasses coming into the sugar house as a result of the manufacture of a crop which was growing when the insurance was effected, where the risk under the policy was not to attach until a date fixed at more than two months after the date of the policy.

3. Mortgage—right of mortgagee to insurance on harvested crop.—The avails of insurance on sugar and molasses coming into the sugar house on a sugar plantation as the result of the manufacture of a crop growing thereon when the insurance was effected inure to the benefit of the mortgagee in a mortgage of the realty and the fruits thereof if the loss occurred after the execution of the mortgage, under the Porto Rico mortgage law of 1880, which subjects to a mortgage of real property the crops growing or harvested when the mortgage falls due, "but not yet removed or warehoused," and the indemnities awarded or due the owner of the realty either for the insurance or for the crops, provided the damage occurred after the creation of the mortgage.

4. Mortgage—right of mortgagee to sue for insurance without exhausting other remedies.—The mortgage creditor in a mortgage governed by the civil law may sue for the avails of insurance subject to his mortgage without first exhausting his remedies against other property embraced by the mortgage.

5. Mortgage—right of mortgagee to sue for insurance—effect of existing summary remedy.—The existence under the Spanish law of a summary remedy to enforce a mortgage does not prevent the mortgage creditor from suing in the ordinary way for the avails of insurance subject to his mortgage.

6. Limitation of actions—prescription for personal actions in Porto Rico.—The prescription of twenty years generally applicable to personal actions under the Spanish law prior to the promulgation of the Civil Code is the prior law which, under the provision of that Code that a prescription which began to run before its publication shall be governed by the prior laws, must govern an action in Porto Rico for a loss under a policy of insurance occurring before the royal decree of 1889, extending the Civil Code to that island.

7. Appeal and error—harmless error.—Error committed by the trial court either in admitting evidence or in the legal effect given to the evidence admitted concerning acts which were held adequate to interrupt the course of prescription is not ground for reversal, where the appellate court decides that a longer period of prescription controlled, concerning which the acts of interruption were wholly irrelevant, although the defeated party, relying on the certainty of a reversal because of such errors, may have neglected to make a full defense, or to assign other substantial errors in the appellate court.

8. Action—joinder of new party by amendment.—The joinder by amendment of the assignee of a policy of insurance as a party plaintiff in a suit in Porto Rico by a mortgage creditor of the assured to enforce his rights under the mortgage to the avails of the insurance cannot be deemed a clear abuse of the trial court's discretion, where the assignee's rights are alleged to be subordinate to those of the mortgage creditor, in view of the provision of the Law of Civil Procedure for Cuba and Porto Rico, art. 156, that "causes of action against several persons, or by several persons against one, arising from the same source of title, or based upon the same cause of action, may be joined and brought in one action."

9. Pleading—traverse of amended declaration.—The plea of the general issue, filed to a declaration before the allowance of an amendment joining as party plaintiff in a suit for insurance the person to whom a transfer of the policy is alleged, will not be regarded as traversing the amended declaration, where the record shows that the case was tried on the theory that the transfer was not disputed, but was an established fact.

[No. 7.]

Argued October 17, 18, 1905. Decided November 27, 1905.

IN ERROR to the District Court of the United States for the District of Porto Rico to review a judgment entered upon a verdict in favor of plaintiffs in an action on a policy of fire insurance. Affirmed.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Mr. Frederic D. McKenney argued the cause, and, with Messrs. Francis H. Dexter, John Spalding Flannery, and Wayne MacVeagh, filed a brief for plaintiff in error.

Mr. Fritz v. Briesen argued the cause and filed a brief for defendants in error.

Mr. Justice White delivered the opinion of the court:

Whether a judgment upon a verdict enforcing against the plaintiff in error a contract of fire insurance is erroneous is the general question for decision. The record is confused, the pleadings involved, and the errors assigned numerous. We shall, therefore, at the outset, state the contracts with which the controversy is concerned, the pleadings, and such uncontroverted facts as are essential to be borne in mind in order to comprehend the issues raised by the assignments of error.

On September 15, 1884, the Royal Insurance Company issued its fire policy in favor of Antonio Amadeo, "estate owner of Quebrada Arenas Maunabo," to the amount of £1,600, "on stock of sugar and molasses deposited in the sugar manufactory on the estate Quebrada Arenas," the risk only to begin two months and four days thereafter, viz., on November 19, 1884, and embracing the period between that date and November 19, 1885.

On September 19, 1884, four days after the taking out of the policy, Antonio Amadeo, the insured, by a notarial act acknowledged that he had received a loan [355] from the Caja de *Ahorros, a bank of Ponce, Porto Rico, amounting to $15,036.27, which he obligated himself to repay in two instalments, due in February and March, 1885. It was recited in the act that the money was lent to enable Amadeo "to attend to the developing and keeping of a sugar plantation by him owned." The act also described the plantation as the estate of Quebrada Arenas, gave the quantity of land, which it was declared was all planted in cane, except where used for pasturage, and where covered by a sugar manufactory and other appurtenant buildings. A mortgage in favor of the lender was granted by the notarial act upon all the property described "and the fruits thereof."

On the 6th of February, 1885, the sugar manufactory on the estate of Quebrada Arenas was burned, and there was destroyed in the factory sugar and molasses alleged to be equal in value to the sum of the insurance. It was shown that some of the sugar and molasses was in hogsheads and some was in pans and other apparatus, going through the process of manufacture.

Prior to the year 1901, in a court of the island of Porto Rico, the Caja de Ahorros was declared a bankrupt, and trustees were appointed and took charge of its assets. In the year 1901 proceedings were begun in the United States district court for Porto Rico by creditors of the bankrupt against the trustees, and Robert A. Miller was appointed a special master, with power to collect the assets of the bankrupt estate. On April 23, 1902, Miller, as special master, commenced this action on the policy. The declaration averred the appointment of Miller, and the authority given him to collect the assets of the Caja de Ahorros. The execution of the policy of insurance and mortgage of the plantation was then recited, and it was averred that the Caja de Ahorros, as a mortgage creditor, was entitled to the avails of the policy of insurance, and therefore had a right to enforce the same.

The declaration was demurred to, first, on the ground that Miller, as special master, was without authority to sue; and, [356] *second, that the action was prescribed, no reference being made to the period of limitation relied upon. A general demurrer was also filed. The court overruled the special demurrers and sustained the general demurrer because of the want of precision in some of the averments of the declaration, which was afterwards remedied by amendment.

To the declaration as amended three pleas were filed,—the general issue, a prescription of six years, and a prescription of fifteen years. A demurrer was sustained to the plea of six years, joinder was had on the general issue, and a replication was filed setting up various acts which it was alleged were interruptive of the alleged bar of fifteen-year limitation. Subsequently an additional plea was filed, averring in substance that on September 3, 1884, Antonio Amadeo, by way of pledge, had assigned the policy of insurance in question to a bank styled the Credito Mercantil free from any claim of the Caja de Ahorros, the alleged mortgage creditor, and that by judicial proceedings the policy had been sold and purchased by said Credito Mercantil, and as neither the Caja de Ahorros or Miller were the transferees of the Credito Mercantil, the plaintiff was not entitled to recover. A replication was filed denying all the averments of the plea, but admitting that Antonio Amadeo, on a date not named, had deposited the policy as collateral security with the Credito Mercantil, and that that corporation had, after the fire, bought in the policy at a judicial sale by it provoked, and had subsequently transferred the policy to one Lucas Amadeo. Upon this replication issue was joined by the defendant. Subsequently the court allowed Lucas Amadeo to become a party plaintiff, and permitted amendments to the declaration to accomplish this result. These amendments averred the delivery of the policy as collateral security by Antonio Amadeo to the Credito Mercantil, the date not being given, the sale, long after the fire, of the policy under judicial proceedings, and its purchase by the Credito Mercantil, and the subsequent transfer thereof by the Credito Mercantil to Lucas Amadeo. It being besides *alleged that by the effect of [357] this transfer Lucas Amadeo became a part owner of the policy "subject to the mortgage of the insured to Caja de Ahorros." No answer was filed to the amended complaint. An exception was, however, noted to the action of the court in permitting Lucas Amadeo to be joined as plaintiff.

The cause came on for trial. After the impaneling of a jury the court allowed the defendant to file six additional pleas, which were to be considered as traversed upon the record, and which were, in substance, as follows: 1st. That the plaintiff was not entitled to recover on the policy because Antonio Amadeo, in obtaining the insurance, had misdescribed the property or concealed material facts. 2d. That no recovery could be had in favor of the Caja de Ahorros or Miller, because no other person than Antonio Amadeo had any interest in the policy by operation of law, and no other person had any right in the policy by a conventional assignment from the insured, or, if there had been such an assignment, no notice thereof had been given the company, and its consent had not been indorsed on the policy, as required by its terms. 3d. Because Antonio Amadeo had materially increased the risk, without the knowledge and consent of the defendant, after the issue of the policy. 4th. That recovery could not be had, because the insured had not, within fifteen days after the fire, furnished adequate proof of loss, as required by the policy. 5th. That recovery could not be had, because petroleum and other inflammable oils had been stored upon the premises, contrary to the terms of the policy. 6th. Because the claim made by the insured following the fire was false and fraudulent, and the fire occurred by the incendiarism of the insured.

At the trial, evidence having been admitted tending to show the bringing by Miller, special master, of a suit in the district court of the United States to foreclose the mortgage against the plantation executed by Amadeo, it was stipulated by both parties that no sale of the plantation to en-[358] force the *mortgage thereon had yet been made. There was a verdict and judgment in favor of Miller, special master, and Lucas Amadeo, for the amount of the policy and interest.

Putting out of view for the present the question of the correctness of the action of the court in allowing Lucas Amadeo to be made a party plaintiff, it results that the issues arising on the trial were all embraced under the following headings:

1. Had the plaintiff capacity to sue, even if a cause of action in favor of the Caja de Ahorros was shown by the declaration? or

2. If Miller had the capacity to sue, did the Caja de Ahorros, as a result of the mortgage, acquire any right in or to the avails of the policy of insurance, and if so, did such right arise by operation of law, without the existence of a transfer by the insured of his rights under the policy and the acceptance of such transfer by the company?

3. If the right to enforce the policy obtained by operation of law, without assignment by the insured, could the Caja de Ahorros enforce the right by suing on the policy, and without previously exhausting its remedies against the other property embraced by the mortgage?

4. Even if the Caja de Ahorros was vested with the rights of the insured, and could exert such rights by suit on the policy without previously exhausting the other mortgaged property, had there been such misrepresentations by the insured in taking the policy, or such failure after taking it to comply with its terms, as precluded the right to recover?

5. In any event, was the action barred by the prescription of fifteen years?

And as the foregoing questions embrace every proposition covered by the errors assigned, except as to the right to join Lucas Amadeo as a party plaintiff, we come to consider the questions in the order stated, before passing on the error alleged to have arisen from an asserted improper joinder of parties.

First. The court found that the appoint-
[359] ment of Miller as *special master gave him express authority to sue to collect all the assets of the Caja de Ahorros. As the record of the appointment of Miller, although introduced in evidence, does not form a part of the bill of exceptions, we must assume that the ruling of the court was correct; and, this being assumed, it obviously results that the court below rightly held that the mere designation as special master did not have the effect of depriving Miller of the substantial powers conferred upon him by the decree of the court appointing him.

Second. The proposition that the Caja de Ahorros acquired no right to the policy of insurance in virtue of the mortgage involves two contentions, which require distinct consideration; the one, the proper construction of the policy; and the other, the operation of the law of Porto Rico upon the policy when properly construed. The first rests upon the assertion that the sugar and molasses covered by the policy was a distinct lot of sugar and molasses warehoused on the plantation at the time of the issue of the policy, and therefore had no legal relation to a subsequent mortgage of the plantation itself; and the second, that, in any event sugar and molasses in the manufactory on the plantation was movable property, not susceptible of being mortgaged under the law of Porto Rico.

The policy covered a "stock of sugar and molasses deposited in the sugar manufactory on the estate of Quebrada Arenas." It is true that the word "deposited," when standing alone, might well be considered as referring to exclusively sugar and molasses then existing, and in the sugar house. But the correctness of this construction is negatived by the fact that the risk under the policy was not to attach at the date of the policy, but in two months and four days thereafter. When this period of the commencement of the risk is considered in connection with the place at which the property insured was situated, viz., a sugar manufactory upon a sugar plantation, on which there was a growing crop, we think the policy must be held to have covered sugar to come into the sugar house on the plantation as the result of the future operation of the factory. And [360]*this conclusion is fortified by the indefinite description given of the property insured, which was not of a given number of commercial packages of sugar and molasses, held in a warehouse, but merely a stock of sugar and molasses, a description embracing such stock in whatever form existing, and which might be in the factory at the time the risk attached.

Additional force to the construction we give the policy likewise results from the course of the trial below; since it appears that no objection was noted to the introduction of testimony showing that the property destroyed, for which a claim under the policy had been made by the insured, consisted of sugar and molasses which was in the sugar house as the result of the process of manufacture of the growing crop therein carried on; and moreover, no instruction was asked upon the hypothesis that if the property destroyed was of that character, it was, for that reason alone, not covered by the insurance, or embraced in the mortgage.

The policy, then, embracing a stock of sugar and molasses to come into the sugar house on the plantation as the result of the manufacture of the crop which was growing thereon at the time the policy was issued, the question then is, Did the mortgage creditor, in virtue of the mortgage, acquire a right to the avails of the policy?

Undoubtedly, as a general rule under the Spanish law in force in Porto Rico at the time of the giving of the mortgage, only real property was the subject of mortgage. Mortgage law of 1880, art. 114; mortgage law of 1893, art. 110, War Department translation. But by that law a mortgage extended to the "natural increase, improvements, growing crops, and rents not collected when the obligation falls due, and the value of indemnities allowed or due the owner for insurance on the property mortgaged, or by virtue of condemnation by right of eminent domain." Mortgage law of 1880, art. 118; mortgage law of 1893, art. 110. And the mortgage law of 1880 as well as the mortgage law of 1893, moreover, provided as follows:

*"In accordance with the provisions of the [361] preceding article, the following shall be considered mortgaged together with the estate, provided they belong to the owner of the estate, although they are not mentioned in the contract.

. . . . . .

"3. Crops which, at the time the obligation falls due, are growing on the trees and plants, or have already been harvested, but not yet removed or warehoused.

. . . . . .

"5. Indemnities awarded or due the owner of the mortgage realty, either for the insurance thereof or for the crops, provided the damage occurred after the creation of the mortgage, or on account of condemnation of the land by the right of eminent domain. Mortgage law of 1880, art. 119; mortgage law of 1893, art. 111."

To grasp the import of the provisions just quoted a general understanding of the system of mortgages prevailing in the countries governed by the civil law is necessary. By that law the title to mortgaged property remains in the mortgagor, and the effect of the mortgage is not, therefore, to deprive the mortgage debtor of his right to administer the property before the obligation falls due. In other words, whilst the mortgage dismembers the ownership by depriving the owner of the right of abusus, and therefore devests him of the perfect ownership, it leaves him the imperfect ownership, with the full usus and fructus of the property mortgaged. Generally, in such countries, and by operation of law, growing crops are included in a mortgage; yet, as such crops are naturally thereafter to become movable by their harvesting as an incident of administration and of the usus and fructus, the right of the owner to realize by gathering the crops and disposing of the same before the mortgage becomes due exists, such gathering and realizing being considered as a mobilization of the crop, therefore taking it beyond the scope of the mortgage. See Code Napoleon, art. 2118; Paul Pont, Privileges et Hypotheques, vol. 1, p. 353, §§ 360, 362. Indeed, under the Napoleon *Code this power of the debtor to [362] administer the mortgaged property by an act of administration, done without fraud and in good faith, is, by a writer on that Code, asserted to be so complete that his right to produce the mobilization of a crop is deemed to arise by a mere sale of the crop as growing, without any actual concurrent severance of the crop from the realty. Ibid. No. 363.

It will be observed that although, generally speaking, the Spanish law, in force in Porto Rico, conforms to the theories just stated, it restricts the right of administration and power to mobilize a growing crop to narrower limits than is the case under the Code Napoleon. Thus, by the terms of paragraph 3 of the Code for Porto Rico, the power of the mortgage debtor to administer is controlled by a provision causing crops which are harvested at the time the mortgage falls due to remain subject to the mortgage, despite the harvesting, provided they have not yet been "removed or warehoused." And it will also be observed that paragraph 5 of the same Code, as to indemnities arising from insurance on crops, further restricts the power of administration vested in the mortgagor by declaring that, as to indemnities arising from insurance on the crops, the right of the mortgage creditor attaches, even although, at the time of the loss, the mortgage debt had not become due, provided the damage occurred "after the creation of the mortgage." This meaning, plainly resulting from the terms of paragraph 5, is also sustained, as we shall have occasion hereafter to show, by the act governing in Porto Rico concerning the procedure for the enforcement of mortgages, wherein the right is conferred upon the mortgage creditor to impound the avails of insurance upon crops destroyed by fire before the coming due of the obligation, but not collected before such maturity. In other words, the right of the mortgage debtor under the power of administration and by virtue of paragraph 3, to mobilize the crop, and thus remove it from the operation of the mortgage, ceases to exist, by the very terms of paragraph 5, upon the destruction [363] by fire of the mortgaged *crop, the law treating such destruction as irrevocably fixing the character of the crop as immovable. and causing the indemnity as its representative to be no longer subject to mobilization.

The crop here in question was one of growing cane, whose harvesting depended upon the treatment of the cane at the sugar factory. It is not questioned by either party to the record, and indeed, we think it clearly results from the mortgage law to which we have referred, that the crop which is therein subjected to the mortgage is not simply a growing product, but the harvested crop, which, in the case of growing sugar cane, necessarily includes the result of treating the cane at the sugar house,—that is, a crop of sugar and molasses.

From the text of the law we have quoted, and the exposition just given of its general import, the following conclusions result:

First. That the growing crop was, by operation of law, included in the mortgage to the Caja de Ahorros, even although the mortgage had not, as it did, expressly purported to embrace the fruits growing upon the mortgaged property.

Second. That the growing crop of cane continued to be affected by the mortgage after its harvest or manufacture into sugar up to the time of its removal or warehousing.

Third. That the rights of the mortgage creditor attached to indemnity for insurance upon the mortgaged property, including the crops, provided the loss occurred after the execution of the mortgage.

Under the construction which we have given the policy of insurance, these propositions are decisive in favor of the right of the mortgage creditor, unless it be that the sugar and molasses in question, although it had come from the growing cane, and was, at the time of the fire, in the sugar house as the result of the manufacture from such cane, or was in the process of manufacture, was not yet subject to the rights of the mortgage creditor, because it is to be considered as having been then "warehoused" within the meaning of that word as employed *in paragraph 8 of article 119 of the law [364] of 1880, which we have quoted. But to so hold would be, at one and the same time, to admit and deny the rights of the mortgage creditor to the avails of the crop, and to the indemnity arising from the insurance. This must follow, because it is impossible to conceive of the harvesting of growing sugar cane, without, at the same time, presupposing the existence in the sugar house of sugar and molasses as the result of the harvesting. We construe the warehousing referred to in the provision of the mortgage law in connection with the word "removed," with which it is associated. In other words, we construe it as relating to a distinct act of warehousing, separate from the mere existence of the manufactured product in the sugar house wherein it was made.

As, then, the mortgage, by operation of law, embraced the crop, and as also, by operation of law, the mortgage creditor was entitled to the benefits of the indemnity resulting from the insurance, it follows that the right of the mortgage creditor did not depend upon an assignment of the policy, and the contentions upon that subject are without merit.

The doctrine common to countries governed by the civil law is that a mortgage is indivisible. Code Napoleon, art. 2114; Paul Pont, Privileges et Hypotheques, vol. 1, p. 319, par. 330 et seq. And we think it is not to be doubted that the law of Spain, in this respect, was not different. Schmidt, Civil Law of Spain and Mexico, p. 108, art. 853. The mortgage being indivisible, the mortgage creditor had an undoubted right to assert the entirety of his mortgage rights against any or all of the property affected by the mortgage.

The contention pressed at bar, that the mortgage creditor had no cause of action to recover the insurance money subject to his mortgage because the law gave the power to proceed to enforce the mortgage by what is known in the Spanish law as via executiva, we think is without merit. The existence of the summary remedy does not tend to the implication that the creditor might [365] not, if he elected so to do, proceed via ordinaria to obtain judicially a decree recognizing his right of mortgage on the insurance money, and enforcing payment of the amount.

This is illustrated by a provision (art. 161) in the general regulations, put in force in 1893 for the execution of the mortgage law, wherein it is provided that where an indemnity for insurance on property covered by a mortgage becomes due in consequence of the destruction of the property by fire, before the maturity of the mortgage debt, the creditor has a right to compel the deposit of the sum of the insurance to await the period of the maturity of the mortgage obligation. Manifestly, if the mortgage creditor be endowed with this right before his mortgage debt becomes due, the right of such creditor to proceed separately to recover the insurance money after his debt becomes due must obtain. This case does not require us to pass upon, and we therefore do not decide whether, under the Spanish law, if there was a junior encumbrancer having some special right in or to the avails of the insurance money such junior encumbrancer would be entitled to compel the mortgage creditor to exhaust the other property covered by the mortgage before attempting to irrevocably impute or apply the proceeds of the insurance to the pro tanto extinction of the mortgage debt.

Fourth. All the questions concerning alleged misrepresentation in obtaining the policy, of misdescription of the property, of a material increase of the risk, of incendiarism, and of the failure to make the due proofs of loss required by the policy, depend for their ultimate determination upon questions of fact, which were concluded adversely to the plaintiff in error by the verdict of the jury. Although they are referred to, as they are not pressed in the brief of the plaintiff in error, we content ourselves with saying that we think the court, as to the matters in question, correctly applied the law to the state of the proof.

Fifth. The fire occurred on February 6, 1885. Suit was brought on April 23, 1902, [366] and Lucas Amadeo was made a *party plaintiff on May 13, 1903. In other words, even although the cause of action on the policy only arose within a reasonable time after the making of proofs of loss, more than fifteen years elapsed between the arising of the cause of action and the bringing of this suit. Both parties at bar admit that the action on the policy was personal in its nature, and barred by the term of prescription governing actions of that character.

As we have seen, the defendant (plaintiff in error here) specially pleaded and relied upon the prescription of fifteen years. The applicability of that prescription is based upon article 1964 of the Civil Code, which provides: "A mortgage action prescribes after twenty years, and those which are personal and for which no special term of prescription is fixed, after fifteen years."

As both parties concede that there was no special term of prescription fixed by the Civil Code for an action upon an insurance policy, it follows that the right to sue on the policy was barred by the limitation in question, if that limitation applied. The defendants in error—the plaintiffs below—deny its applicability, and insist that the term of prescription was twenty years, and, moreover, insist that, even if the fifteen-year term applied, the action was not barred, because of interruptions of the prescription asserted to result from the proof as to alleged demands and acknowledgments. The trial judge, whilst rejecting the claim of the plaintiffs as to the twenty-year prescription, and maintaining that of the defendant as to the fifteen-year prescription, yet held the action not barred, because of the interruptive effect which the court considered arose from certain demands or acknowledgments, which it was deemed were established by the proof. Before coming to consider the alleged errors on this subject we must determine whether the time of prescription was fifteen years, as asserted by the defendant and held by the trial court, or twenty years, as contended by the plaintiffs.

The loss under the policy occurred in 1885, and the right of action arose, therefore, in that year. The Civil Code was *not [367] then applicable to Porto Rico, not having been extended to that island by royal decree until 1889, and the claim that the twenty-year prescription is the only controlling period is based upon that fact. Whilst it is conceded that, by the terms of the Civil Code, personal actions were barred by fifteen years, the argument is, that by the Code, actions which arose prior to its promulgation were to be controlled by the prior law, which, it is insisted, was twenty years. The provision of the Code relied upon to maintain this proposition is article 1939, which reads as follows:

"Article 1939. Prescription which began to run before the publication of this Code shall be governed by the prior laws; but if, after this Code became operative, all the time required in the same for prescription has elapsed, it shall be effectual, even if, according to said prior laws, a longer period of time may be required."

As the fifteen years fixed by the Code for the bringing of personal actions had not elapsed between the promulgation of the Code and the bringing of this action, it follows that the controversy was not within the terms of the proviso, and therefore the limitation of the cause of action is to be determined, not by the Code provision fixing fifteen years, but by the prior law. What was the term of prescription of personal actions under the prior law is, therefore, the question.

In the absence of express legislation concerning Porto Rico, what was the prior law applicable to that island concerning the limitations of personal actions must be fixed by ascertaining the period of prescription for personal actions generally prevailing under the Spanish law. Schmidt, Civil Law of Spain and Mexico, p. 35. Whilst the general Spanish law prior to the promulgation of the Civil Code is to be derived from a review of the successive Spanish codes, nevertheless, the Spanish law prevailing prior to the Code is primarily to be found in the code known as the Novisima Recopilación.

By law 5, title 8, book 2, of the Novisima Recopilación, it appears that the term of [368] prescription of personal actions *was twenty years. 1 White, New Recopilación, p. 96. And from an edition of the Spanish codes, with concordance and notes, published at Madrid in 1850, under the text of the Novisima Recopilación in question (vol. 9, p. 458), it appears that the limitation of twenty years as to personal actions as expressed in the text of the Recopilación, prevailed as early as 1348, in the code known as the Ordenamiento de Alcalá.

Moreover, the supreme court of Spain has held, in repeated decisions, that the provision found in the Novisima Recopilación, above alluded to, was the general law of Spain on the subject, in force prior to the adoption of the Civil Code, and that by that law the limitation of personal actions was twenty years. References to a Spanish publication in which many such decisions are reported are given in the margin. †

It follows that the court below erred in applying the fifteen-year period of prescription, and that as twenty years had not elapsed from the time the cause of action arose to the bringing of the suit on the policy, the right to sue was not barred by limitation.

But it is insisted that, as the trial judge erred, either in admitting evidence or in the legal effect which he gave to the evidence admitted, concerning acts which were held adequate to interrupt the course of the fifteen-year prescription, there should be a reversal, despite the fact that it is now decided that a longer period of prescription controlled, concerning which the acts of interruption were wholly irrelevant, and *there- [369] fore not in any way prejudicial. We cannot yield our assent to the proposition. The contention that there should be a reversal because the defendant might have introduced evidence at the trial in support of certain defenses set up in its answer other than prescription, if it had not relied upon the certainty of securing a reversal by this court of any judgment which might be obtained against it, because of what was deemed to be the erroneous rulings as to the interruption of the prescription, is without merit. What term of prescription was applicable to the action was a disputed question at the trial; and we cannot admit that the defendant, by neglecting to make full defense, and by speculating on the chances of a verdict in its favor, could secure the right to a reversal of a verdict and judgment against it because of an error of law which, in a legal sense, occasioned no possible prejudice. And equally without merit is the contention that there would be prejudice if there be not a reversal, because in this court, relying upon the sufficiency of the errors assigned relating to the action of the court concerning the proof of interruption of the fifteen-year prescription, there was a neglect to assign other substantial errors which it is asserted the trial court committed as to the admissibility of certain evidence and the striking out of various answers of a witness who had given testimony under a commission. As we are at liberty, however, despite the absence of an assignment of error on the subject, to consider a plain error arising on the record, we have given our attention to the subjects referred to, and content ourselves with saying that we think they are devoid of merit.

†Decisions of the supreme court of Spain sitting at Madrid, reported in the Jurisprudencia Civil, holding the period of prescription of twenty years applicable to personal actions: Sentence of January 21, 1863, vol. 8, p. 54, No. 20; sentence of March 17, 1865, vol. 11, p. 326, No. 92; sentence of April 8, 1865, vol. 11, p. 469, No. 139; sentence of June 4, 1886, vol. 60, p. 24, No. 7*a*; and sentence of October 3, 1892, vol. 72, p. 142, No. 40 of the last-mentioned sentence. See also sentence of March 24, 1892, vol. 71, p. 307 (after the enactment of the Code); sentence of March 9, 1865, vol. 14, p. 264, No. 75; sentence of May 12, 1874, vol. 30, p. 56, No. 181; sentence of April 1, 1884, vol. 54, p. 548, No. 137; sentence of March 12, 1888, vol. 61, p. 404, No. 89; and sentence of April 19, 1901, vol. 91, p. 556, No. 105.

It remains only to consider the error alleged to have been committed by the trial court in allowing Lucas Amadeo to be made a party plaintiff.

The elementary rule is that amendments are within the sound discretion of the trial court, and are not susceptible of review on error, except for a clear abuse. Gormley v. Bunyan, 138 U. S. 623, 34 L. ed. 1086, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 453.

The objection made at the trial to the [370] amendment was that *it substituted a new party and an entirely new cause of action. That there was no clear abuse in this case we think results from article 156 of the Law of Civil Procedure for Cuba and Porto Rico, War Department translation of 1899, providing as follows:

"Causes of action against several persons, or by several persons against one, arising from the same source of title, or based upon the same cause of action, may be joined and brought in one action."

The claims of both parties depended upon the contract of insurance. There was no inherent antagonism between the two claims, since the amendment making Lucas Amadeo a party expressly alleged that his rights in and to the policy were subordinate to those of Miller, special master. We consider the provision of the Code of Procedure above quoted as analogous to the provision in the codes of a number of the states of the Union, by which an action is required to be brought in the name of the real parties in interest, and it is allowable to join as parties-plaintiff those having an interest in the recovery sought. Fireman's Fund Ins. Co. v. Oregon R. & Nav. Co. 45 Or. 53, 67 L. R. A. 161, 76 Pac. 1075; Fairbanks v. San Francisco & N. P. R. Co. 115 Cal. 579, 47 Pac. 450; Home Ins. Co. v. Gilman, 112 Ind. 7, 13 N. E. 118; Winne v. Niagara F. Ins. Co. 91 N. Y. 185, 192; Pratt v. Radford, 52 Wis. 114, 8 N. W. 606.

The contention in the argument that the permitting of Lucas Amadeo to be joined as plaintiff was, in legal effect, a consolidation of pending causes, which could not be made after answer filed, relying on article 157 of the Code of Civil Procedure, was not made below, since the ground of objection made at the trial was that the amendment substituted a new party and an entirely new cause of action, not that it was merely too late to permit the amendment.

But it is further contended that, as the bill of exception states that no evidence was offered proving or tending to prove any transfer by the Credito Mercantil of the policy sued on to Lucas Amadeo, therefore there was no proof whatever *tending to es- [371] tablish title in Lucas Amadeo to the policy, and hence there must be a reversal. On the state of the record, however, this objection is not available. The amended declaration making Amadeo a party, and alleging a transfer to him by the Credito Mercantil, was not traversed. It is argued, however, that no express traverse was necessary, because the plea of the general issue filed to the declaration before the allowance of the amendment must be applied to the amendment, and, therefore, the amended declaration should be regarded as having been traversed. Conceding, for the sake of the argument, the rule ordinarily to be as stated, and further conceding that that rule obtained under the procedure in Porto Rico, we do not think that it is here applicable. We say this because the record establishes that the case was tried upon the hypothesis that the transfer to Amadeo by the Credito Mercantil was not disputed, but, on the contrary, was an admitted fact in the case. Thus, when the court came to charge the jury, it enumerated specifically various issues of fact which they were to determine, and among those issues was not embraced any controversy whatever upon the fact of the transfer by the Credito Mercantil to Lucas Amadeo, as alleged in the amendment to the declaration, and no exception was taken to the action of the court in this particular. Moreover, although various instructions were asked to be given to the jury on behalf of the defendant, no request was made which in any way intimated that the defendant disputed the fact that Lucas Amadeo had acquired the interest, if any, of the Credito Mercantil in the policy in question, as alleged in the amended declaration. Indeed, we think the record affirmatively establishes that the case was tried below upon the assumption by all the parties that if there was a right to recover on the part of Miller, special master, and Lucas Amadeo had properly been joined as a party plaintiff, a joint recovery was not improper.

Judgment affirmed.

---

*JOHN D. JACK, Plff. in Err., [372]

v.

STATE OF KANSAS.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 372-382.)

Constitutional law—due process of law—privilege of witnesses—sufficiency of

---

NOTE.—On privilege of witnesses—see notes to Cooper v. State, 4 L.R.A. 766; Rice v. Rice, 11 L.R.A. 591; Re Buskett, 14 L.R.A. 407; United States v. James, 26 L.R.A. 418; Levy v. Superior Court, 29 L.R.A. 811; and Interstate Commerce Commission v. Baird, 48 L. ed. U. S. 860.

Immunity.—The danger that the testimony given in an examination under Kan. Laws 1897, chap. 265, § 10, might incriminate the witness as a violator of the Federal anti-trust law, and of the possible use, in a Federal prosecution for a violation of such statute, of the testimony given in the state proceeding, is so unsubstantial and remote as not to make an imprisonment for refusal to testify a deprivation of liberty without due process of law, where the statute is construed by the state courts to render material only such questions as relate to transactions within the state, and grants full immunity from prosecution in the state courts.

[No. 54.]

Argued and submitted Nov. 8, 1905. Decided Nov. 27, 1905.

IN ERROR to the Supreme Court of the State of Kansas to review a judgment affirming a judgment of the District Court of Shawnee County, in that state, imprisoning a person for his refusal to testify in an examination under the Kansas antitrust act. Affirmed.

See same case below, 69 Kan. 387, 76 Pac. 911.

Statement by Mr. Justice Peckham:

The plaintiff in error seeks to review the judgment of the supreme court of the state of Kansas, affirming a judgment against him of imprisonment for contempt, entered by direction of the district court of Shawnee county, in that state. The plaintiff in error had been duly subpœnaed as a witness to appear before the above mentioned district court, and was examined before that court under and by virtue of the provisions of § 10 of chapter 265 of the Laws of Kansas of 1897. Gen. Stat. 1901, § 7873. The statute is known as the Kansas anti-trust act. Section 10 is reproduced in the margin.†

[373] *The proceeding was commenced in September, 1903, by the attorney general and county attorney of Shawnee county, and those officers presented to the court their verified application, informing it of the existence of combinations of persons engaged in the operation of coal mines in Osage county to fix the price of coal at the mines, and the price to be charged to purchasers; that the members of the combination met at a place in Shawnee county monthly to fix the minimum price to be charged for coal, and that they would not sell coal for less than the minimum price so fixed, and that the agreements thus entered into were by them carried out and executed. The plaintiff in error was engaged in operating a coal mine in Osage county, and was named in the application as one who had a knowledge concerning the existence of the combination, and a subpœna was thereupon asked for to be served upon him. The district judge granted the application. The subpœna was duly served, and the plaintiff in error appeared pursuant thereto before the district judge and answered some questions that were propounded him by the attorney general or county attorney. Other questions were put to him in relation to his knowledge of the meetings, and as to the existence of any agreement between *the operators of the [374] coal mines of Osage county, and with regard to the fixing of the price of coal to be sold to residents and citizens of Kansas. The plaintiff in error refused to answer these questions, and assigned reasons for such refusal at some length; but the chief ground now relied on in this court as forming a Federal question is that the statute violated the 5th and 14th Amendments of the Federal Constitution; that the statute did not furnish a broad enough indemnity, and the judgment of imprisonment deprived him of his liberty without due process of law.

The court held that the excuses given for declining to answer were insufficient, and thereupon instructed and directed the witness to answer the questions propounded to him, but he still refused to do so. Whereupon the court found him guilty of a direct contempt of court in refusing to answer the questions, and ordered that †Section 10, being § 7873, Gen. Stat. 1901, reads:

"The several district courts of this state and the judges thereof, shall have jurisdiction, and it shall be their duty, upon good cause shown, and upon written application of the county attorney or the attorney general, to cause to be issued by the clerk of said court subpœnas for such witnesses as may be named in the application of a county attorney or the attorney general, and to cause the same to be served by the sheriff of the county where such subpœna is issued; and such witnesses shall be compelled to appear before such court or judge at the time and place set forth in the subpœna, and shall be compelled to testify as to any knowledge they may have of the violations of any of the provisions of this act; and any witness who falls or refuses to attend and testify shall be punished as for contempt, as provided by law. Any person subpœnaed and examined shall not be liable to criminal prosecution for any violation of this act about which he may testify. Neither shall the evidence of any such witness be used against him in any criminal proceeding. The evidence of all witnesses so subpœnaed shall be taken down by the reporter of said court, and shall be transcribed and placed in the hands of the county attorney or the general attorney, and he shall, in the proper courts, at once prosecute such violator or violators of this act as the testimony so taken shall disclose. Witnesses subpœnaed as provided for in this section shall be compelled to attend from any county in the state."

he be committed to the jail of Shawnee county until he should answer them, but not beyond a period of thirty days.

The plaintiff in error then appealed from the judgment rendered against him to the supreme court, where it was affirmed in May, 1904. To review that judgment of affirmance the plaintiff in error has brought the case here by writ of error.

Messrs. W. H. Rossington and Charles Blood Smith submitted the cause for plaintiff in error. Messrs. J. T. Pringle and R. B. Giluly were with them on the brief.

Mr. Edwin A. Austin argued the cause, and, with Messrs. C. C. Coleman and Otis E. Hungate, filed a brief for defendant in error.

Mr. Justice Peckham, after making the foregoing statement, delivered the opinion of the court:

The supreme court of Kansas has held in this case that the statute under which the plaintiff in error was sentenced to be imprisoned for a contempt of court was a valid statute, and did not violate either the Constitution of the state or of the Federal government.

One portion of the statute in question has already been passed upon by this court and decided to be a valid provision as construed by the state court. Smiley v. Kansas, 196 U. S. 447, 49 L. ed. 546, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 289. The decision in that case has no application to the section involved herein.

It is contended on the part of the plaintiff in error that the court below denied to him the protection of § 10 of the Bill of Rights of the Constitution of Kansas, and also denied to him the benefit of the provision of the 5th Amendment to the Constitution of the United States, that no person should be compelled, in any criminal case, to be a witness against himself, and also that he has been deprived of the benefit of the 14th Amendment. We are bound by the decision of the supreme court of Kansas that the statute in question violated no provision of the Constitution of that state, and that it was a valid statute so far as that instrument was concerned. This doctrine is familiar, and a few of the many cases upon the subject are cited in Smiley v. Kansas, 196 U. S. 447, 49 L. ed. 546, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 289.

It has been so frequently held as not to warrant the citation of many authorities, [380] that the first ten amendments to the *Federal Constitution operate on the national government only, and were not intended to, and did not, limit the powers of the states in respect to their own people. Spies v. Illinois (Ex parte Spies) 123 U. S. 131, 31 L. ed. 80, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 21; Brown v. New Jersey, 175 U. S. 172, 174, 44 L. ed. 119, 120, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 77. That portion of the 5th Amendment, therefore, already cited, has no application in a proceeding like this, in a state court, under a state statute.

The plaintiff in error, however, contends that the denial of his claim of right to refuse to answer the questions was in violation of the 14th Amendment to the Constitution of the United States, and deprived him of his liberty without due process of law. This, in reality, is the sole question in the case. He contends that the immunity granted by the state statute, while enforcing the giving of testimony which may incriminate the party interrogated, as a violator of that statute, is not (and could not be) broad enough to provide immunity from prosecution under the Federal antitrust statute, and that compelling him to answer questions under such circumstances, which might incriminate him as a violator of the Federal antitrust statute, and upon his refusal condemning him to imprisonment, deprived him of his liberty without due process of law, within the meaning of the 14th Amendment, and the statute is therefore void. The state statute could not, of course, prevent a prosecution of the same party under the United States statute, and it could not prevent the testimony given by the party in the state proceeding from being used against the same person in a Federal court for a violation of the Federal statute, if it could be imagined that such prosecution would be instituted under such circumstances. Is this fact fatal to the proceeding? We think not. Assuming for this purpose that if the statute failed to give sufficient immunity from prosecution or punishment, it would violate the 14th Amendment, and that an imprisonment by virtue of the statute would be depriving the witness of his liberty without due process of law, we come to an examination of the extent of the immunity in this case.

*The question has been before this court [381] in cases somewhat similar to this, although they arose under Federal statutes. In Counselman v. Hitchcock, 142 U. S. 547, 35 L. ed. 1110, 3 Inters. Com. Rep. 816, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 195, the immunity provided for by § 860 of the Revised Statutes (U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 661) was held not to be broad enough to enable the prosecution to insist upon an answer from the witness. In the subsequent case of Brown v. Walker, 161 U. S. 591, 40 L. ed. 819, 5 Inters. Com. Rep. 369, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 644, the statute there involved was held to afford complete immunity to the witness, and he was therefore obliged to answer the questions that were put to him, although they might tend to incriminate him. In that case it was contended on the part of the witness that the statute did not grant him immunity against prosecutions in the state courts, although it granted him full immunity from prosecution by the Federal government. This contention was held to be without merit. While it was asserted that the law of Congress was supreme, and that judges and courts in every state were bound thereby, and that therefore the statute granting immunity would probably operate in the state as well as in the Federal courts, yet still, and aside from that view, it was said that while there might be a bare possibility that a witness might be subjected to the criminal laws of some other sovereignty, it was not a real and probable danger, but was so improbable that it needed not to be taken into account.

The supreme court of Kansas has held in this case that in the proceeding under the section in question the witness can only be asked material questions relating to information regarding any alleged violation of the statute relating to transactions within the state, and that it would not be material, and consequently not permissible, to ask a witness in relation to matters of interstate commerce, which might constitute a violation of the Federal antitrust act. Therefore, the opinion continued, if, in the course of an examination properly made, in regard to transactions within the state, information should incidentally be given which might possibly be used in a prosecution under the Federal act, such possible prosecution did not operate as a reason for permitting the witness to refuse [382] to *answer; that it could not be presumed that under such circumstances any Federal prosecution would ever take place, and that it was, within the reasoning of Brown v. Walker, 161 U. S. 591, 40 L. ed. 819, 5 Inters. Com. Rep. 369, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 644, a danger so unsubstantial and remote that it was not necessary (as it was impossible) for the statute to provide against it. We regard this as a sound view. We do not believe that in such case there is any real danger of a Federal prosecution, or that such evidence would be availed of by the government for such purpose. We think the legal immunity is in regard to a prosecution in the same jurisdiction, and when that is fully given it is enough. The principles underlying the provision itself have been thoroughly treated in the above-cited cases, and it would be out of place to here renew their discussion.

We are of opinion that no Federal right of the plaintiff in error has been violated, and the judgment of the Supreme Court of Kansas must, therefore, be affirmed.

Mr. Justice Brewer and Mr. Justice McKenna dissented.

MARY McCUNE, by Daniel Donahue, Her Guardian ad litem, Appt.,

v.

N. FRED ESSIG and Emma C. Essig, His Wife.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 382–390.)

1. Removal of causes—cases arising under Federal laws.—A question depending for solution upon the laws of the United States, and therefore justifying removal from a state to a Federal circuit court, is involved in a suit by the daughter of a deceased homestead settler to establish her title under the operation of the state laws, as against his widow, to whom, in accordance with U. S. Rev. Stat. § 2291, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, pp. 1390, 1394, the patent has issued.

2. Public lands—patent to widow of homestead settler—relation.—The doctrine of relation cannot successfully be invoked to confer any right or interest in the land under the operation of the state laws upon the daughter of a deceased homestead settler, as against his widow, to whom, in accordance with the provisions of U. S. Rev. Stat. § 2291, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, pp. 1390, 1394, the patent has issued.

[No. 61.]

Submitted November 9, 1905. Decided November 27, 1905.

APPEAL from the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Ninth Circuit to review a decree which affirmed a decree of the Circuit Court for the District of Washington, Eastern Division, sustaining a demurrer to the complaint in a suit in equity to establish title to real property, which had been removed from the Superior Court in and for Lincoln County, in that state. Affirmed.

See same case below, 122 Fed. 588.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

NOTE.—On removal of causes where the Federal Constitution, statute, or treaty comes in question—see notes to Little York Gold Washing & Water Co. v. Keyes, 24 L. ed. U. S. 656; Ferguson v. Ross, 3 L.R.A. 322; Austin v. Gagan, 5 L.R.A. 476; Butler v. National Home for Disabled Volunteer Soldiers, 36 L. ed. U. S. 346; and Torrence v. Shedd, 36 L. ed. U. S. 528.

Mr. W. E. Cullen submitted the cause for appellant:

It has not been the policy of this court to determine questions involving the beneficial or equitable title to real estate, although the title had been acquired from the United States.

Blackburn v. Portland Gold Min. Co. 175 U. S. 571, 44 L. ed. 276, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 222.

The allegation that the construction of the United States laws which are referred to in the petition is involved in the determination of this case is a mere conclusion. There is no fact alleged which shows that any particular part or portion of these laws must be construed in the determination of this case. It is clearly manifest that they were complied with, and the patent issued to the only person to whom it could have been issued. The essential facts necessary to change the jurisdiction are not contained in the petition.

Little York Gold-Washing & Water Co. v. Keyes, 96 U. S. 199, 24 L. ed. 656.

It is admitted by all parties, and is a fact beyond doubt, that the widow took the legal title under and by virtue of the patent. The patent operated as a release to her of all the interest of the United States in the land. Whether she took the beneficial interest as well as the legal title depends upon the effect to be given the acts of the legislature of the state, and not upon the acts of Congress.

Romie v. Casanova, 91 U. S. 379, 23 L. ed. 374; McStay v. Friedman, 92 U. S. 723, 23 L. ed. 767; Hoadley v. San Francisco, 94 U. S. 4, 24 L. ed. 34; Blue Bird Min. Co. v. Largey, 49 Fed. 289; Blackburn v. Portland Gold Min. Co. supra; Shoshone Min. Co. v. Rutter, 177 U. S. 505, 44 L. ed. 864, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 726.

After any part of the public domain has been entered by a homesteader, and notice of such entry has been properly filed in the proper land office, such land, so entered, becomes segregated from the public domain, and such settler has a vested right therein against everybody and the government as well; and, when the patent for such land issues, it relates back and takes effect as of the time of such entry.

Shepley v. Cowan, 91 U. S. 330, 337, 23 L. ed. 424, 427; Sturr v. Beck, 133 U. S. 541, 550, 33 L. ed. 761, 765, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 350; Northern P. R. Co. v. McCormick, 89 Fed. 659; Witherspoon v. Duncan, 4 Wall. 210, 218, 18 L. ed. 339, 343; Bardon v. Northern P. R. Co. 145 U. S. 535, 36 L. ed. 806, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 856; Hastings & D. R. Co. v. Whitney, 132 U. S. 357, 361, 33 L. ed. 363, 366, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 112; United States v. Turner, 54 Fed. 228; Burlington, K. & S. W. R. Co. v. Johnson, 38 Kan. 142, 16 Pac. 125; Gibson v. Chouteau, 13 Wall. 92, 101, 20 L. ed. 534, 537.

That question having been settled by this court, it no longer presents a Federal question.

Kansas v. Bradley, 26 Fed. 289; Blue Bird Min. Co. v. Largey, supra.

When William McCune entered this land he had not the legal title, but he had an immediate equitable interest, and the exclusive right of possession until forfeited by failure to carry out the terms of his entry.

United States v. Turner, supra.

Assuming the jurisdiction of this court to exist, then it is submitted that it will be bound by the rule laid down by the supreme court of the state of Washington in the cases of Forker v. Henry, 21 Wash. 235, 57 Pac. 811, and Ahern v. Ahern, 31 Wash. 334, 96 Am. St. Rep. 912, 71 Pac. 1023, as determinative of a settled rule of property in the state of Washington, that, when the title is initiated during the community, and perfected after dissolution, the property is community.

Lowndes v. Huntington, 153 U. S. 1, 38 L. ed. 615, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 758.

The states have the power to regulate the tenure of real property and the rules of its transfer and descent.

United States v. Fox, 94 U. S. 315, 24 L. ed. 192; Arndt v. Griggs, 134 U. S. 321, 33 L. ed. 920, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 557; Hutchinson Invest. Co. v. Caldwell, 152 U. S. 65, 38 L. ed. 356, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 504.

Mr. George Turner submitted the cause for appellees. Messrs. F. H. Graves and W. G. Graves were with him on the brief:

Prior to a patent, or, at least, prior to a full compliance with the conditions which entitle him to a patent, the settler has no more than a right of possession, and a right to be preferred in the purchase of the lands. As against the United States, the owner of the lands, he acquires no vested right until he has fully complied with the requirements of the act; and Congress may at any time vest title in another.

Shiver v. United States, 159 U. S. 491, 40 L. ed. 231, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 54; Campbell v. Wade, 132 U. S. 34, 33 L. ed. 240, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 9; Wagstaff v. Collins, 38 C. C. A. 19, 97 Fed. 3; Frisbie v. Whitney, 9 Wall. 187, 19 L. ed. 668; Shepley v. Cowan, 91 U. S. 330, 23 L. ed. 424; Gonzales v. French, 164 U. S. 338, 345, 41 L. ed. 458, 460, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 102.

No doubt this right is, in a sense, a property right; but it is held at the will of Congress. It may be forfeited for noncompliance with existing laws, or taken away by changes in those laws. It becomes subject to state regulation only in so far as Congress permits.

Anderson v. Carkins, 135 U. S. 483, 34 L. ed. 272, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 905; Hall v. Russell, 101 U. S. 503, 513, 514, 25 L. ed. 829, 833.

When a settler upon public lands under the homestead laws dies before he has become the purchaser of the lands, i. e., before he has done those things which entitle him to the lands, his right to purchase, being purely a personal right, dies with him. Those whom Congress recognizes as entitled to complete the performance of the conditions do so, not as successors in interest from the deceased settler, but as grantees, or, rather, donees, of the United States.

Hall v. Russell, 101 U. S. 503, 25 L. ed. 829; Maynard v. Hill, 125 U. S. 190, 215, 31 L. ed. 654, 661, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 723; Cutting v. Cutting, 6 Sawy. 396, 6 Fed. 259; Stubblefield v. Menzies, 8 Sawy. 41, 11 Fed. 270; United States v. Tichenor, 8 Sawy. 142, 12 Fed. 421; Hershberger v. Blewett, 55 Fed. 177; Cooper v. Wilder, 111 Cal. 195, 52 Am. St. Rep. 163, 43 Pac. 591; Wittenbrock v. Wheadon, 128 Cal. 150, 79 Am. St. Rep. 32, 60 Pac. 664; Towner v. Rodegeb, 33 Wash. 153, 99 Am. St. Rep. 936, 74 Pac. 50; Rogers v. Clemmans, 26 Kan. 522; Dawson v. Mayall, 45 Minn. 408, 48 N. W. 12; Gjerstadengen v. Van Duzen, 7 N. D. 612, 66 Am. St. Rep. 679, 76 N. W. 233; Chapman v. Price, 32 Kan. 446, 4 Pac. 807.

The doctrine of relation is no more relevant to this case than is the doctrine of predestination.

Gibson v. Chouteau, 13 Wall. 92, 101, 20 L. ed. 534, 537.

Jurisdiction of the Federal courts over this cause is asserted upon the ground that it is one arising under the Constitution or laws of the United States. A case may be said to so arise whenever its correct decision depends upon the construction of either (Cohen v. Virginia, 6 Wheat. 379, 5 L. ed. 285), or when the title or right set up by the party may be defeated by one construction of the Constitution or laws of the United States, or sustained by the opposite construction.

Osborn v. Bank of United States, 9 Wheat. 822, 6 L. ed. 224.

The appellant denies the jurisdiction of the Federal courts upon the ground that title has passed from the United States, and the only controversy is as to the beneficial interests in that title. This is begging the whole question. The appellant may assert that, but the appellees deny it; and the only manner in which it can be determined who is right is by construing a law of the United States.

Anderson v. Carkins, 135 U. S. 483, 34 L. ed. 272, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 905; Bernier v. Bernier, 147 U. S. 242, 37 L. ed. 152, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 244; Hutchinson Invest. Co. v. Caldwell, 152 U. S. 65, 38 L. ed. 356, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 504.

Mr. Justice McKenna delivered the opinion of the court:

Suit in equity to establish title in appellant to an undivided one half of northeast quarter of section 6, township 25 north, range 38 east, Washington meridian 2, and for accounting of rents and profits, and for partition between appellant and appellees.

It was originally brought in the superior court in and for Lincoln county in the state of Washington. A demurrer was filed to the amended complaint, and a petition to remove the suit to the circuit court for the district of Washington, eastern division, on the ground that the suit involved the construction of §§ 2291 and 2292 of the Revised Statutes of the United States (U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, pp. 1390-1394), and of all statutes of the United States relating to homesteads. The suit was removed. In the circuit court a motion was made to remand, which was denied. The demurrer was sustained, and appellant, electing to stand upon her bill, it was decreed that she had no right, title, or interest in the land. 118 Fed. 273. The decree was affirmed by the circuit court of appeals. 122 Fed. 588.

The facts as exhibited by the bill of complaint are that appellant is the daughter of William McCune, deceased, and his wife, Sarah McCune, now Sarah Donahue, and the stepdaughter of Daniel Donahue, who appears as her guardian ad litem. William McCune and his wife, Sarah, settled on the land in controversy, it being a part of the public domain, and subject to settlement under the homestead laws. On the 4th of April, 1884, McCune filed a claim to the land as a homestead in the proper land district. In the same year he died intestate, *leaving surviving as his [387] only heirs appellant and his wife, Sarah. They continued to reside on the land until December 17, 1889, upon which day the mother of appellant made the required proof of full compliance with the homestead laws, and on the 6th of March, 1891, a patent was issued to her. In the year 1892 she, having become Mrs. Donahue, sold and conveyed the land to appellees, who went into possession of it and have been in possession of it ever since. The value of the land is $6,400. The patent recites:

"Whereas there has been deposited in the General Land Office of the United States a certificate of the register of the land office at Spokane Falls, Washington, it appears that, pursuant to the act of Congress approved 20th May, 1862 [12 Stat. at L. 392, chap. 75, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 1388], 'to secure homesteads to actual settlers on the public domain,' and the acts supplemental thereto the claim of Sarah Donahue, formerly the widow of William McCune, deceased, has been established and duly consummated, in conformity to law, for the south half of the northeast quarter and the lots numbered one and two of section six, in township twenty-five north of range thirty-eight of Willamette meridian in Washington, containing one hundred and sixty-three and eighty-four hundredths of an acre, according to the official plat of the survey of the said land, returned to the General Land Office by the Surveyor General:

"Now know ye, that there is, therefore, granted by the United States unto the said Sarah Donahue the tract of land above described, to have and to hold the said tract of land, with the appurtenances thereof, unto the said Sarah Donahue and to her heirs and assigns forever."

The action of the lower courts on the motion to remand and on the merits are attacked by appellant to a certain extent on the same ground; to wit, that the laws of Washington determine the title of the parties, not the laws of the United States. The interest in McCune, acquired by his entry, it is contended, was community property, and passed to appellant under the laws of the state. Sections 4488, 4489, [388] 4490, and *4491 of the statutes of Washington provide that property and pecuniary rights owned by either husband or wife before marriage, or that acquired afterwards by gifts, bequests, devise, or descent, shall be separate property. Property not so acquired or owned shall be community property, and, in the absence of testamentary disposition by a deceased husband or wife, shall descend equally to the legitimate issue of his or their bodies. 1 Ballinger's Anno. Codes & Statutes. Relying on these provisions the argument of appellant is, and we give it in the words of her counsel:

"When William McCune entered this land he had not the legal title, but he had an immediate equitable interest and the exclusive right of possession, until forfeited by failure to carry out the terms of his entry. United States v. Turner, 54 Fed. 228.

"The terms of his entry were carried out. The patent issued by reason of his entry. The state legislature had the right to direct to whom that equitable right and interest should pass. If the rights and interests under that entry had been forfeited, the state law would have no effect upon the title to the land. That equitable interest ripened, and was confirmed by the patent."

But this is begging the question. What interest arose in McCune by his entry, who could, upon his death, fulfil the conditions of settlement and proof, and to whom and for whom title would pass, depended upon the laws of the United States. Bernier v. Bernier, 147 U. S. 242, 37 L. ed. 152, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 244. The motion to remand was rightly overruled. On the merits we think the ruling of the lower courts was also right. Hutchinson Invest. Co. v. Caldwell, 152 U. S. 65, 38 L. ed. 356, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 504. Hoadley v. San Francisco, 94 U. S. 4, 24 L. ed. 34, and other cases relied on by appellant, are not in point.

Chapter 5, title 32, of the Revised Statutes, provides who may enter public lands as a homestead, and the conditions to be observed as to entry and settlement. By §§ 2291 and 2292 it is provided as follows:

"Sec. 2291. No certificate, however, shall be given or patent *issued therefor until the [389] expiration of five years from the date of such entry; and if, at the expiration of such time, or at any time within two years thereafter, the person making such entry, or, if he be dead, his widow, or, in case of her death, his heirs or devisee, or, in case of a widow making such entry, her heirs or devisee, in case of her death, proves by two credible witnesses that he, she, or they have resided upon or cultivated the same for the term of five years immediately succeeding the time of filing the affidavit, and makes affidavit that no part of such land has been alienated except as provided in section twenty-two hundred and eighty-eight (U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 1385), that he, she, or they will bear true allegiance to the government of the United States, then, in such case, he, she, or they, if at that time citizens of the United States, shall be entitled to a patent as in other cases provided by law."

"Sec. 2292. In case of the death of both father and mother, leaving an infant child or children under twenty-one years of age, the right and fee shall inure to the benefit of such infant child or children." U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, pp. 1390, 1394.

It requires an exercise of ingenuity to establish uncertainty in these provisions. They say who shall enter, and what he shall do to complete title to the right thus acquired. He may reside upon and cultivate the land, and by doing so is entitled to a patent. If he die, his widow is given the right of residenee and eultivation, and "shall be entitled to a patent, as in other cases." He can make no devolution of the land against her. The statute whieh gives him a right, gives her a right. She is as much a benefieiary of the statute as he. The words of the statute are elear, and express who in turn shall be its benefieiaries. The contention of appellant reverses the order of the statute, and gives the ehildren an interest paramount to that of the widow through the laws of the state.

The law of the state is not competent to do this. As was observed by Cireuit Judge Gilbert: "The law of the state of Washington governs the deseent of lands lying within the state, but the question here [390]is whether there had been any *descent of land." And, against applieation of the state law, the learned judge eited Wilcox v. Jackson, 13 Pet. 517, 10 L. ed. 273, and Bernier v. Bernier, 147 U. S. 242, 37 L. ed. 152, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 244. In the former it was said that whenever the question is whether title to land which had been the property of the United States has passed, that question must be resolved by the laws of the United States; but that whenever, according to those laws, the title shall have passed, then, like all other property in the state, it is subjeet to state legislation. In Bernier v. Bernier it was said that the objeet of §§ 2291 and 2292 was "to provide the method of eompleting the homestead elaim and obtaining a patent therefor, and not to establish a line of deseent or rules of distribution of the deeeased entryman's estate." See Hall v. Russell, 101 U. S. 503, 25 L. ed. 829. And hence it was decided that Mrs. Donahue took the title free from any interest or right in the appellant under the laws of the state.

Against the effeet of the patent conveying title to Mrs. Donahue, appellant invokes the doctrine of relation. It is admitted "that the title to the real estate in the ease at bar passed and vested aeeording to the laws of the United States by patent." But it is contended that, a beneficial interest having been ereated by the state law in McCune when the title passed out of the United States by the patent, it "instantly dropped baek in time to the inception or initiation of the equitable right of William McCune, and that the laws of the state intercepted and prevented the widow from having a eomplete title without first eomplying with the probate laws of the state." This, however, is but another way of asserting the law of the state against the law of the United States, and imposing a limitation upon the title of the widow which § 2291 of the Revised Statutes does not impose. It may be that appellant's eontention has support in some expressions in the state deeisions. If, however, they may be eonstrued as going to the extent eontended for, we are unable to aeeept them as eontrolling.

Decree affirmed.

---

*WILLIAM M. ESTES, Appt., [391]

v.

RICHARD A. TIMMONS.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 391-396.)

Public lands—conclusiveness of decisions of Land Department—perjury as ground for equitable relief.—Perjury on a hearing before the Land Department of a contest over an entry under the homestead laws is not ground for equitable relief against the decision of the Department.

[No. 74.]

Submitted November 10, 1905. Decided November 27, 1905.

APPEAL from the Supreme Court of the Territory of Oklahoma to review a decree which affirmed a deeree of the District Court of Pottawatomie County, in that territory, sustaining a demurrer to a bill in equity to establish a trust in land settled under the homestead laws. Affirmed.

See same ease below, 12 Okla. 537, 73 Pac. 303.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Mr. S. D. Luckett submitted the cause for appellant:

The Secretary of the Interior is the guardian of the people of the United States over the public lands. The obligations of his oath of offiee oblige him to see that the law is carried out, and that none of the public domain is wasted, or is disposed of to a party not entitled to it. He represents the government, which is a party in interest in every case involving the surveying and disposal of the public lands.

Knight v. United Land Asso. 142 U. S. 161, 35 L. ed. 974, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 258.

The United States is so far interested in keeping the title to a tract of public land within the jurisdiction of the Land Department until the question as to who is entitled to a patent has been properly determined that suit will be brought in the name of the United States to vacate a patent improvidently issued before the Department has fully determined this question.

NOTE.—On the effect and conclusiveness of decisions of the Land Department—see notes to Hartman v. Warren, 22 C. C. A. 38: and Carson City Gold & Silver Min. Co. v. North Star Min. Co. 28 C. C. A. 344.

Germania Iron Co. v. United States, 165 U. S. 379, 41 L. ed. 754, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 337; Williams v. United States, 138 U. S. 514, 34 L. ed. 1026, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 457.

Cases of this kind have even gone to the extent of recognizing the right of a party whose claim to a tract of public land had not been fully determined by the Land Department to go into the courts himself to maintain his claim as against the party to whom patent had issued.

Duluth & I. Range R. Co. v. Roy, 173 U. S. 587, 43 L. ed. 820, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 549.

Courts of justice have power to examine a contested claim to a right of entry under the pre-emption laws, and to overrule the decision of the register and receiver, confirmed by the commissioner, in a case where they have been imposed upon.

Garland v. Wynn, 20 How. 6, 15 L. ed. 801.

This court has sustained the lower courts where they have examined the entire proceeding in the Land Department, including the testimony taken in a contest case, to determine whether a patent issued and involved in the suit had been obtained rightfully or not.

Barnard v. Ashley, 18 How. 43, 15 L. ed. 285; Lytle v. Arkansas, 22 How. 193, 16 L. ed. 306; Lindsey v. Hawes, 2 Black, 554, 17 L. ed. 265; Carr v. Fife, 156 U. S. 494, 39 L. ed. 508, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 427; Johnson v. Howsley, 13 Wall. 72, 20 L. ed. 485.

This court recognizes the obtaining of a decision by the officials of the Land Department by means of imposition upon them through false swearing as sufficient ground for reviewing their action.

Lytle v. Arkansas, Lindsey v. Hawes, and Carr v. Fife, supra.

Where fraud or imposition has been practised on the party interested, or on the officers of the law, or where these have clearly mistaken the law of the case as applicable to the facts,—courts of equity may give relief.

Baldwin v. Stark, 107 U. S. 463, 27 L. ed. 526, 2 Sup. Ct. Rep. 473.

Mr. J. H. Everest submitted the cause for appellee:

To charge the holder of legal title to land under a patent as trustee of another, the claimant must show himself entitled to it, and its refusal to him in consequence of errors in the rulings of the Land Department, under the law applicable to the facts found. It is not sufficient to show that there may have been error in adjudging the title to the patentee.

Bohall v. Dilla, 114 U. S. 47–51, 29 L. ed. 61–63, 5 Sup. Ct. Rep. 782; Sparks v. Pierce, 115 U. S. 408–413, 29 L. ed. 428, 429, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 102.

In an action to declare a resulting trust where the plaintiff claims the land under the homestead laws, an essential averment of the petition, and one without which the petition does not state a cause of action, is that the plaintiff has resided upon, cultivated, and improved the land for such a period of time and to such an extent that, upon final proof, he would be entitled to the patent thereto.

Baldwin v. Keith, 13 Okla. 624, 75 Pac. 1124.

The appellant, Estes, being merely an unsuccessful contestant for a preference right, cannot question the judgment of the Land Department in a suit in equity to declare a trust.

Emblen v. Lincoln Land Co. 184 U. S. 661–663, 46 L. ed. 736, 737, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 523; Graham v. Great Falls Water Power & Townsite Co. 30 Mont. 393, 76 Pac. 808.

This being a suit in equity, the plaintiff, to maintain it, must offer to do equity. Nowhere in the petition does the appellant offer to pay the appellee, Timmons, the moneys expended by him in obtaining title to the tract of land, such as the purchase price, fees, and commissions paid the government, etc.; nor does he make any general offer to do equity which in general terms might satisfy this requirement of a bill in equity.

Thornton v. Peery, 7 Okla. 441, 54 Pac. 649; McQuiddy v. Ware, 20 Wall. 14, 22 L. ed. 311.

The petition of the plaintiff in the court below stated no cause of action for the reason that he seeks to overturn a decision of the Secretary of the Interior, and said petition does not exhibit or set out in any way the decision complained of.

Myers v. Berry, 3 Okla. 612, 41 Pac. 581; Thornton v. Peery, supra.

The frauds for which a bill in chancery will be sustained to set aside a judgment or decree between the same parties, rendered by a court of competent jurisdiction or special tribunal, are frauds extrinsic or collateral to the matter tried by the first court, and not a fraud which was in issue in the former suit.

United States v. Throckmorton, 98 U. S. 61–67, 25 L. ed. 93–95; Vance v. Burbank, 101 U. S. 514–521, 25 L. ed. 929–931; United States v. Minor, 114 U. S. 233–244, 29 L. ed. 110–114, 5 Sup. Ct. Rep. 836; State v. Bachelder, 5 Minn. 223, 80 Am. Dec. 410, Gil. 178.

Mr. Justice McKenna delivered the opinion of the court:

Bill in equity to declare appellee trustee of appellant of the south half of the southeast quarter of section 18, T. 10 N., R. 4 E., in the county of Pottawatomie, Oklahoma. Appellee holds patent of the United States. The charge is that he obtained the patent by imposition and fraud practised upon the Land Department. The trial court sustained a demurrer to the bill, and entered a judgment dismissing it. The judgment was affirmed by the supreme court of the territory. 12 Okla. 537, 73 Pac. 303.

The essential averments of the bill are that the land is a part of Sac and Fox reservation in the territory of Oklahoma, which was thrown open to settlement and homestead entry under the homestead laws of the United States, September 22, 1891, under the proclamation of the President of the United States, issued September 18, 1891. 27 Stat. at L. 989. The appellant was qualified to make settlement and entry of said land, and immediately after 12 o'cloek noon of September 22, and before any other qualified person, settled upon the land. Immediately thereafter he commenced to erect a dwelling house and established his residence thereon, and cultivated and improved the same in compliance with the homestead laws. On the 25th September he made a homestead entry thereon at the land office at Oklahoma City. Appellee filed an affidavit contesting the entry, in which he falsely and fraudulently alleged that he made settlement on the land immediately after 12 o'clock noon of September 22, 1891, and prior to appellant. The contest came on for hearing on the 5th of July, 1892, and after hearing, the register and receiver of the local land office held that appellee was the prior settler, and appellant's entry was canceled, and appellee was allowed to enter the land, May 21, 1894. On the 26th of September, 1894, appellant filed an affidavit of contest against appellee [393] and his entry, *alleging that appellee was not qualified to make entry, for the reason that he entered upon and occupied the land and other parts of the reservation prior to noon of the 22d day of September, 1891, and after September 18, 1891. The contest was heard and the land officers found adversely to the contention. This ruling was affirmed successively by the Commissioner of the General Land Office and the Secretary of the Interior, and patent issued to the appellee. The appellant alleges that, upon the hearing and trial before the register and receiver, appellee "wilfully, intentionally, and fraudulently, intending to deceive and mislead and misinform said register and receiver, procured and introduced the testimony of witnesses,—W. L. Hartman, Clarence Hartman, Sam Cole, David L. Timmons, John Eaton, and H. W. Darrow,—who, at the instigation and procurement of the said defendant (appellee), testified before said register and receiver, in substance and effect, that the said defendant did not enter upon or occupy any of said lands so opened to settlement as aforesaid before 12 o'clock noon of September 22, A. D. 1891, and subsequent to September 18, A. D. 1891, and to the effect that they were with said defendant during said period and all of the time; which said testimony was false, and known by said defendant to be false when he procured and introduced the same." The appellant also alleges that the Commissioner and Secretary of the Interior were deceived and misled as to the facts in the case by said false and fraudulent testimony.

An amendment to the bill, filed by permission of the trial court, alleges that after testimony was taken in the contest, and before any decision had been rendered by the register and receiver, appellant filed a motion to reopen the hearing in said contest, and that he be allowed to introduce further testimony. The motion was overruled, and a motion was then made for a new trial. Both motions were supported by affidavits, and it is alleged that the register and receiver were influenced to overrule the motions, and were deceived by the false and fraudulent testimony of appellee and his witnesses, and that *said officers miscon-[394] strued and misapplied the law, in that the rules and practice of the Land Department require in all cases where fraud or perjury has been committed in any hearing the same shall be reopened or a new trial granted, when such fact is shown to the office or department where pending, regardless of technicalities. A like allegation is made in regard to the ruling of the Commissioner of the General Land Office and the Secretary of the Interior.

One of the affidavits attached to the motions was that of John Eaton, a witness in the contest proceedings for appellee, who testified to the settlement of the latter upon the land on the 22d day of September, 1891, after the opening of the reservation. Eaton states in his affidavit that he made his deposition by inducement of appellee and while he, Eaton, was intoxicated; and, coming to reflect upon the injury he had done, he voluntarily reveals his perjury. He also states that he was not in Oklahoma on the 22d of September, but was in Kentucky, arriving there about the 15th or 16th of September. The affidavits of his brother and nephew corroborate his statement. There is an affidavit of one of the attorneys for appellant that he had been informed before the hearing of the contest by appellant that one George Stratton knew and had sworn in an affidavit, supporting appellant's affidavit of contest, that he was with appellee on the land in controversy on the 22d day of September, 1891, and was told by appellee that he had been on the reservation before it was opened. Stratton was written to, the affidavit states, to appear at the hearing, but did not appear. The affiant tried to see Stratton, but was prevented by inclement weather, but read his affidavit to him through the telephone, between the town of Wewoka and his residence. He replied that the affidavit was true. He, however, refused to come to town on account of the weather, and the notary refused to go to Stratton's for the same reason. It was stated that Stratton could not be communicated with earlier. No date is given of the communi-[395] cation with Stratton. The affivadit *is dated March 4, 1899. The officers of the Land Department held the showing insufficient.

The contention of the appellant is that the Land Department was imposed upon, and that this imposition constitutes a ground of review of its decision by the courts. Garland v. Wynn, 20 How. 6, 15 L. ed. 801; Barnard v. Ashley, 18 How. 43, 15 L. ed. 285; Lytle v. Arkansas, 22 How. 193, 16 L. ed. 306; Lindsey v. Hawes, 2 Black, 554, 17 L. ed. 265; Carr v. Fife, 156 U. S. 494, 39 L. ed. 508, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 427; De Cambra v. Rogers, 189 U. S. 119, 47 L. ed. 734, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 519, are relied on to support the contention.

Appellant, distinguishing between fraud and imposition practised by a party upon the Land Department, makes the latter a ground of jurisdiction in the courts. His case demands this, as no fraud was practised upon him to prevent him from fully presenting his case. He admits that a finding of facts upon contradictory testimony is conclusive, not only in the Land Department, but upon the courts. It is, however, in effect, contended that if perjury can or shall be imputed to the witnesses, the character of the decision changes and becomes reviewable; and this not in an ex parte proceeding, but in a contested proceeding, where everything was open and took place upon notice. No case justifies this extreme view. It is certainly not called for by the facts of the case at bar. The land was thrown open to entry on the 22d day of September, 1891. Appellant made an entry and appellee contested it. The contest came on for hearing July, 1892, and decision rendered in 1894. Appellee then made entry and appellant instituted a contest. After some preliminary steps, and by consent of the parties, the case was set for hearing June 10, 1898. There was a continuance until September 12, and another until the 29th, both at the instance of appellant. The case was closed October 28. Motion to reopen the case was made January 27, 1899. Five witnesses besides Eaton and appellee testified to the latter's qualification to enter the land. At the hearing, October 12, 1898, the divorced wife of Eaton testified on behalf of appellant that she knew of the opening of the Sac and Fox reservation for settlement, and at that time *she and Eaton were on the way [396] to Kentucky, having started in July, 1891. The attorney for the appellant, in the affidavits referred to, excused himself for not having moved for a continuance of the hearing after this testimony was given, on the ground that he could not give the names and residence of the witnesses by whom Eaton's presence in Kentucky could be proven, as required by rule 24, for the reason that the witness bad informed him she did not know any person who would be likely to know the date other than the brother and relatives of Eaton, and they would not testify without his consent. He gave as another reason that he was fearful if he disclosed the fact that he was seeking evidence in Kentucky Eaton would flee the country; and, as appellee had sought to confuse and conceal the identity of Eaton, the flight of the latter would make the evidence of no utility to appellant. In view of this statement of the proceedings, how can it be said imposition was practised upon the Land Department? A great deal of the testimony was taken in the presence of the register and receiver. They, as officers, given by law the duty and function of judgment, passed upon the weight of the evidence, its contradictions, and the imputations to which it and the witnesses who gave it were subject. They exercised a like judgment upon the new testimony which was submitted on the motions to reopen and for new trial, upon the diligence in procuring it, and its value upon the issue between the parties. They considered it and decided against it. They exercised the judgment which the law invested them with power to make. Their function would be useless if it did not extend that far, and every decision they should make could be subjected to review by the courts by a charge of perjury against a witness. Against such power of review the decisions are clear. Vance v. Burbank, 101 U. S. 514, 25 L. ed. 929; United States v. Minor, 114 U. S. 233, 29 L. ed. 110, 5 Sup. Ct. Rep. 836; Lee v. Johnson, 116 U. S. 48, 29 L. ed. 570, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 249; United States v. Throckmorton, 98 U. S. 61, 25 L. ed. 93.

Decree affirmed.

[397] *GREENLIEF W. SIMPSON, Appt.,
v.
UNITED STATES.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 397-400.)

1. Contracts—effect of prior negotiations on written agreement.—The written undertaking of the United States to take the fresh beef needed for army posts or camps in the interior of Cuba cannot be extended to cover the entire island whenever the supply of refrigerator beef should be insufficient, because of a prior conversation between the contractor and Commissary General of Subsistence, in which that officer stated that such was the purpose and intent of the Department.

2. Contracts—construction — agreement to furnish beef to interior army posts in Cuba.—The camp at Los Quemados of the main body of United States troops in the vicinity of Havana, situated about 6 or 8 miles from that city, and about 2½ miles from the beach of Marianao, and connected with both points by rail, is not "situated in the interior of the island" within the meaning of an agreement on the part of the United States to take the fresh beef needed at posts or camps so situated, made pursuant to advertisements for proposals, in which the phrases "posts remote from the seacoast" and "posts and camps in the interior of the island" were used as synonymous.

[No. 31.]

Argued and submitted October 27, 30, 1905.
Decided November 27, 1905.

APPEAL from the Court of Claims to review a judgment dismissing a petition for a recovery from the United States for refusal to take fresh beef for army posts in Cuba. Affirmed.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Mr. A. A. Hoehling, Jr., argued the cause, and, with Mr. John S. Blair, filed a brief for appellant.

Assistant Attorney General Pradt and Mr. Philip M. Ashford submitted the cause for appellee.

Mr. Justice Holmes delivered the opinion of the court:

This case arises upon a contract between the Commissary General of Subsistence and the claimant, by which it was agreed that the claimant should "deliver to the commissaries of the United States troops stationed at such posts and camps as are situated in the interior of the island of Cuba, at such prescribed hours on such days as, under the direction of their commanding officers, they shall designate, such quantities of fresh beef . . . fit for immediate use . . . as from time to time they may require." The contract was to "be in force from the 5th day of January, 1899, to the 30th day of June, 1899, inclusive, or such less time for any post as the Commissary *General of Subsistence, U. S. Army, may di- [398] rect." The claims made are two,—one for a refusal to take beef needed for troops at Los Quemados, during certain parts of the contract time, and another for a refusal to take it at Havana and Matanzas. The court of claims found the facts and dismissed the petition. The reasons for the judgment were not given, but manifestly were that, on the facts stated, the claimant had no claim, as matter of law.

The claim in respect of the ports of Havana and Matanzas is based on a talk with the Commissary General before the contract was made, in which that officer stated that it was the purpose and intent of the Department to cover the entire beef supply for the island of Cuba by two contracts: one with Swift & Co., for refrigerated beef, slaughtered in the United States and delivered at points on the seacoast, the other with the claimant, for fresh beef; and that when Swift & Co. could not furnish beef, the claimant's contract covered the entire island, both interior and seacoast. It is enough to say that the claim based on this conversation flies in the face of the contract, which confines the undertaking of the United States to beef for camps in the interior. The conversation is inadmissible, and if admitted would not be definite enough to change the plain meaning of the written words. Brawley v. United States, 96 U. S. 168, 173, 24 L. ed. 622, 624; Simpson v. United States, 172 U. S. 372, 379, 43 L. ed. 482, 484, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 212.

The claim in respect of Los Quemados raises two questions, or at least two were argued; one, whether the words "such quantities . . . as from time to time they may require," mean such quantities as the commissaries may make requisition for, or such quantities as they may need; the other, whether the camp at Los Quemados was "situated in the interior of the island," within the true intent of the contract. Our opinion upon the latter will dispose of the case.

Los Quemados was the camp of the main body of troops in the vicinity of Havana, and about 6 or 8 miles from that city. It was about 2½ miles from the beach of *Marianao, and connected with both points [399] by rail. There was a refrigerator plant

NOTE.—As to admissibility of parol evidence of previous negotiations to affect a written contract—see note to Union Mut. L. Ins. Co. v. Mowry, 24 L. ed. U. S. 674.

On merger of previous negotiations in contract—see notes to Diven v. Johnson, 3 L.R.A. 308; and Riedinger v. Diamond Match Co. 60 C. C. A. 6.

there which had been erected by Swift & Co., so that, if the claimant regarded his contract as the supplement to that of Swift & Co., there was notice on the face of the earth that this point was supposed to be within their territory. The original advertisement for proposals, referred to by the claimant when he made his offer, spoke of "posts remote from the seacoast;" a later one, also referred to, read "posts and camps in the interior of the island." Obviously the two phrases were used as meaning the same thing, and they may be considered in interpreting the word "interior" in the contract. Bradley v. Washington, A. & G. Steam Packet Co. 13 Pet. 89, 101, 10 L. ed. 72, 78; Stoops v. Smith, 100 Mass. 63, 65, 66, 1 Am. Rep. 85, 97 Am. Dec. 76; Prouty v. Union Hardware Co. 176 Mass. 155, 158, 57 N. E. 352; Bank of New Zealand v. Simpson [1900] A. C. 182; Bruce v. Moon, 57 S. C. 60, 68, 69, 35 S. E. 415; 4 Wigmore, Ev. § 2465. When performance of the contract began in January, 1899, beef was not ordered of the claimant for this camp. On the 26th he protested, but not on the ground that Los Quemados was situated in the interior of the island. His complaint was that he was to furnish all the fresh beef except that furnished under Swift & Co.'s contract. The reply from the acting Commissary General, and the local chief commissary, was that his contract embraced camps in the interior, "and not seacoast points," thus showing how the contract was construed at that time. He does not appear to have suggested a different view, although he seems to have kept on trying to get what orders he could. During January and February beef was purchased from third parties. On February 21 he was notified that commissaries throughout the island had been instructed to call on him to furnish fresh beef under his contract whenever Swift & Co. could not do so under theirs, and he furnished beef for Los Quemados for the first thirteen days of March, and was paid for it. But it will be observed that this action again was not on the ground that Los Quemados was a camp in the interior.

[400] *While insufficient to modify the contract in the sense of the claim first discussed, it was based on the willingness which the claimant had shown to furnish beef to that greater extent. Pursuant to the notice it would seem that he furnished beef to various points upon the coast.

On March 13 the call upon the claimant was stopped, and he again protested. On May 4 the Secretary of War decided that the camp at Quemados was an interior post, but called the attention of the Commissary Department to the clause in the contract providing that it should be in force from January 5 to June 30, 1899, or such less time for any post as the Commissary of Subsistence might direct. Accordingly the Commissary General notified the claimant that "the suspension of the delivery of fresh beef under your contract . . . is hereby made to cover the life of the contract in so far as it relates to the post of Quemados." The claimant, of course, relies upon this construction of his contract so far as it favors him, while he repudiates the attempt to terminate his rights under the last quoted clause. But this interpretation was after the event, and was not accepted or acted upon otherwise than to give the notice just mentioned. As we have shown, the contemporary construction by the men on the spot was different, and seems to have been accepted by the claimant. Taking the instrument in connection with the facts that for camping purposes Quemados was Havana, and that, as between the parties, interior meant remote from the seacoast, we are of opinion that the United States did not promise to take beef from the claimant at that point.

Judgment affirmed.

---

*BERYL F. CARROLL, Auditor of State of [401] the State of Iowa, Appt.,

v.

GREENWICH INSURANCE COMPANY OF NEW YORK et al.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 401–414.)

Constitutional law—validity of state legislation to insure competition between insurance companies.—Insurance companies doing business in Iowa cannot claim to be deprived of their rights under U. S. Const. 14th Amend. by Iowa Code 1897, § 1754, making it unlawful for them or their officers, agents, or employees to make or enter into any combination or agreement relating to the rates to be charged, the amount of commissions to be allowed agents, or the manner of transacting their business within the state, in the absence of any judicial construction of such statute as having any other than the single object to insure competition.

[No. 50.]

Argued November 7, 8, 1905. Decided November 27, 1905.

APPEAL from the Circuit Court of the United States for the Southern District of Iowa to review a decree enjoining the enforcement, as against fire insurance companies doing business in that state, of legislation to insure competition. Reversed.

NOTE.—On illegal trusts under modern anti-trust laws—see note to Whitwell v. Continental Tobacco Co. 64 L.R.A. 689.

See same case below, 125 Fed. 121.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Mr. Charles W. Mullan argued the cause and filed a brief for appellant:

The Iowa statute does not deprive any person of liberty or property, and does not restrict or abridge the liberty of contract; nor does any provision of such statute in any manner violate or infringe any provision of the 14th Amendment to the Federal Constitution.

Gibbons v. Ogden, 9 Wheat. 1, 6 L. ed. 23; Morris Run Coal Co. v. Barclay Coal Co. 68 Pa. 173, 8 Am. Rep. 159; Arnot v. Pittston & E. Coal Co. 68 N. Y. 558, 23 Am. Rep. 190; Central Ohio Salt Co. v. Guthrie, 35 Ohio St. 666; Craft v. McConoughy, 79 Ill. 346, 22 Am. Rep. 171; People ex rel. Peabody v. Chicago Gas Trust Co. 130 Ill. 268, 8 L.R.A. 497, 17 Am. St. Rep. 319, 22 N. E. 798; Richardson v. Buhl, 77 Mich. 632, 6 L.R.A. 457, 43 N. W. 1102; Santa Clara Mill & Lumber Co. v. Hayes, 76 Cal. 387, 9 Am. St. Rep. 211, 18 Pac. 391; India Bagging Asso. v. Kock, 14 La. Ann. 164; Northern Securities Co. v. United States, 193 U. S. 197, 339, 48 L. ed. 679, 701, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 436; People v. Sheldon, 139 N. Y. 251, 23 L.R.A. 221, 36 Am. St. Rep. 690, 34 N. E. 785; State ex rel. Crow v. Firemen's Fund Ins. Co. 152 Mo. 45, 45 L.R.A. 363, 52 S. W. 595; State ex rel. Monnett v. Buckeye Pipe Line Co. 61 Ohio St. 520, 56 N. E. 464; Stanton v. Allen, 5 Denio, 434, 49 Am. Dec. 282; Watson v. Harlem & N. Y. Nav. Co. 52 How. Pr. 348; Anderson v. Jett, 89 Ky. 375, 6 L.R.A. 390, 12 S. W. 670; Nester v. Continental Brewing Co. 161 Pa. 473, 24 L.R.A. 247, 41 Am. St. Rep. 894, 29 Atl. 102; Texas Standard Oil Co. v. Adoue, 83 Tex. 650, 15 L.R.A. 598, 29 Am. St. Rep. 690, 19 S. W. 274; John D. Park & Sons Co. v. National Wholesale Druggists' Asso. 50 N. Y. Supp. 1064; People v. Milk Exchange, 145 N. Y. 267, 27 L.R.A. 437, 45 Am. St. Rep. 609, 39 N. E. 1062; Emery v. Ohio Candle Co. 47 Ohio St. 320, 21 Am. St. Rep. 819, 24 N. E. 660; Chapin v. Brown Bros. 83 Iowa, 156, 12 L.R.A. 428, 32 Am. St. Rep. 297, 48 N. W. 1074; DeWitt Wire-Cloth Co. v. New Jersey Wire-Cloth Co. 16 Daly, 529, 14 N. Y. Supp. 277; United States v. E. C. Knight Co. 156 U. S. 1, 39 L. ed. 325, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 249; United States v. Trans-Missouri Freight Asso. 166 U. S. 290, 41 L. ed 1007, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 540; United States v. Joint Traffic Asso. 171 U. S. 505, 43 L. ed. 259, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 25; Addyston Pipe & Steel Co. v. United States, 175 U. S. 228, 44 L. ed. 143, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 96; Barron v. Baltimore, 7 Pet. 247, 8 L. ed. 674; Fox v. Ohio, 5 How. 434, 12 L. ed. 224; Withers v. Buckley, 20 How. 90, 15 L. ed. 819; Twitchell v. Pennsylvania, 7 Wall. 326, 19 L. ed. 224; Pumpelly v. Green Bay & M. Canal Co. 13 Wall. 176, 20 L. ed. 560; Spies v. Illinois (Ex parte Spies) 123 U. S. 166, 31 L. ed. 86, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 21; West River Bridge Co. v. Dix, 6 How. 531, 12 L. ed. 545; State v. Phipps, 50 Kan. 609, 18 L.R.A. 657, 4 Inters. Com. Rep. 299, 34 Am. St. Rep. 152, 31 Pac. 1097; Paul v. Virginia, 8 Wall. 168, 19 L. ed. 357; Missouri P. R. Co. v. Mackey, 127 U. S. 205, 32 L. ed. 107, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1161; Orient Ins. Co. v. Daggs, 172 U. S. 557, 43 L. ed. 552, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 281; Hooper v. California, 155 U. S. 648, 39 L. ed. 297, 5 Inters. Com. Rep. 610, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 207.

Mr. Charles A. Clark also argued the cause and filed a brief for appellant:

A statute prescribing regulations for actions on insurance policies different from those on other contracts is valid.

Christie v. Life Indemnity & Invest. Co. 82 Iowa, 360, 48 N. W. 94.

A method of assessing railway companies different from the method of assessing other taxpayers is valid.

Central Iowa R. Co. v. Wright County, 67 Iowa, 199, 25 N. W. 128.

The same is true as to express and telegraph companies.

United States Exp. Co. v. Ellyson, 28 Iowa, 370.

A statute establishing the liability of railroad companies to employees for negligence of coemployees is valid.

McAunich v. Mississippi & M. R. Co. 20 Iowa, 338; Deppe v. Chicago, R. I. & P. R. Co. 36 Iowa, 52.

State banks may be assessed for taxation differently from national banks.

Primghar State Bank v. Rerick, 96 Iowa, 238, 64 N. W. 801.

The classification in the statute assailed is not such as to be open to the objection of such want of uniformity as to deny the equal protection of the law.

Field v. Barber Asphalt Paving Co. 194 U. S. 621, 622, 48 L. ed. 1153, 1154, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 784; Kentucky Railroad Tax Cases, 115 U. S. 321, 29 L. ed. 414, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 57; Haycs v. Missouri, 120 U. S. 68, 30 L. ed. 578, 7 Sup. Ct. Rep. 350; Gulf, C. & S. F. R. Co. v. Ellis, 165 U. S. 150, 41 L. ed. 666, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 255; Magoun v. Illinois Trust & Sav. Bank, 170 U. S. 283, 42 L. ed. 1037, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 594.

Messrs. John G. Johnson and James C. Davis argued the cause, and, with Mr. George H. Carr, filed a brief for appellees:

The legislature of a state may not, under the guise of protecting public interests, arbitrarily interfere with private business, or impose unusual and unnecessary restrictions upon lawful occupations.

Lawton v. Steele, 152 U. S. 133, 38 L. ed. 385, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 499; Allgeyer v. Louisiana, 165 U. S. 578, 41 L. ed. 832, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 427; Lochner v. New York, 198 U. S. 45, 49 L. ed. 937, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 539; State ex rel. Zillmer v. Kreutzberg, 114 Wis. 530, 58 L.R.A. 748, 91 Am. St. Rep. 934, 90 N. W. 1098.

Under the guise of police regulation, the rights of persons and property cannot be invaded by legislative action; and, when such action takes away the property of a citizen, or interferes with his personal liberty, it is the province of the courts to determine whether it is an appropriate remedy for the preservation of the safety and welfare of society.

Ritchie v. People, 155 Ill. 98, 29 L.R.A. 79, 46 Am. St. Rep. 315, 40 N. E. 454; Bessette v. People, 193 Ill. 334, 56 L.R.A. 558, 62 N. E. 219; Re Jacobs, 98 N. Y. 98, 50 Am. Rep. 636; People v. Marx, 99 N. Y. 377, 52 Am. Rep. 34, 2 N. E. 29; People v. Gillson, 109 N. Y. 389, 4 Am. St. Rep. 465, 17 N. E. 343.

Reasonable contracts in restraint of trade are not void or against public policy. This is especially true where the subject of the contract is not a prime necessity or staple of commerce.

Oregon Steam Nav. Co. v. Winsor, 20 Wall. 69, 22 L. ed. 319; Fowle v. Park, 131 U. S. 97, 33 L. ed. 74, 9 Sup. Ct. Rep. 658; Chicago, St. L. & N. O. R. Co. v. Pullman Southern Car Co. 139 U. S. 89, 35 L. ed. 101, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 490; Northern Securities Co. v. United States, 193 U. S. 361, 48 L. ed. 710, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 436; Smiley v. Kansas, 196 U. S. 454, 49 L. ed. 550, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 289; Central Shade Roller Co. v. Cushman, 143 Mass. 353, 9 N. E. 629; Herriman v. Menzies, 115 Cal. 16, 35 L.R.A. 318, 56 Am. St. Rep. 82, 44 Pac. 660, 46 Pac. 730; Manchester & L. R. Co. v. Concord R. Corp. 66 N. H. 100, 9 L.R.A. 689, 3 Inters. Com. Rep. 319, 49 Am. St. Rep. 582, 20 Atl. 385.

Cases in which legislation has been held to be in contravention of the 14th Amendment of the Constitution of the United States are, (a) where the classification has been one of arbitrary selection; (b) where the liberty of contract has been invaded arbitrarily and without just cause.

Cooley, Const. Lim. 5th ed. §§ 484–486, 6th ed. pp. 481–483; Allgeyer v. Louisiana, 165 U. S. 578, 41 L. ed. 832, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 427; Gulf, C. & S. F. R. Co. v. Ellis, 165 U. S. 150, 41 L. ed. 666, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 255; Cotting v. Kansas City Stock Yards Co. (Cotting v. Godard) 183 U. S. 79, 46 L. ed. 92, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 30; Connolly v. Union Sewer Pipe Co. 184 U. S. 540, 46 L. ed. 679, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 431; Lochner v. New York, supra; State v. Haun, 61 Kan. 146, 47 L.R.A. 369, 59 Pac. 341; Frorer v. People, 141 Ill. 171, 16 L.R.A. 495, 31 N. E. 397; State v. Goodwill, 33 W. Va. 179, 6 L.R.A. 623, 25 Am. St. Rep. 863, 10 S. E. 285; State v. Loomis, 115 Mo. 307, 21 L.R.A. 789, 22 S. W. 350; Godcharles v. Wigeman, 113 Pa. 431, 6 Atl. 354; Stratton Claimants v. Morris Claimants (Dibrell v. Lanier) 89 Tenn. 497, 12 L.R.A. 70, 15 S. W. 87; State ex rel. Zillmer v. Kreutzberg, supra; Republic Iron & Steel Co. v. State, 160 Ind. 379, 62 L.R.A. 136, 66 N. E. 1006; Vanzant v. Waddel, 2 Yerg. 260; Millett v. People, 117 Ill. 294, 57 Am. Rep. 869, 7 N. E. 631; Ritchie v. People, supra; Harding v. People, 160 Ill. 459, 32 L.R.A. 445, 52 Am. St. Rep. 344, 43 N. E. 624; Eden v. People, 161 Ill. 296, 32 L.R.A. 659, 52 Am. St. Rep. 365, 43 N. E. 1108; Chicago v. Netcher, 183 Ill. 104, 48 L.R.A. 261, 75 Am. St. Rep. 93, 55 N. E. 707; Bailey v. People, 190 Ill. 28, 54 L.R.A. 838, 83 Am. St. Rep. 116, 60 N. E. 98; Johnson v. St. Paul & D. R. Co. 43 Minn. 222, 8 L.R.A. 419, 45 N. W. 156; Sutton v. State, 96 Tenn. 696, 33 L.R.A. 589, 36 S. W. 697; State v. Garbroski, 111 Iowa, 498, 56 L.R.A. 570, 82 Am. St. Rep. 524, 82 N. W. 959; State v. Jackman, 69 N. H. 318, 42 L.R.A. 438, 41 Atl. 347; South & North Ala. R. Co. v. Morris, 65 Ala. 193; Chicago, St. L. & N. O. R. Co. v. Moss, 60 Miss. 641; Wilder v. Chicago & W. M. R. Co. 70 Mich. 382, 38 N. W. 289; St. Louis, I. M. & S. R. Co. v. Williams, 49 Ark. 492, 5 S. W. 883; San Antonio & A. P. R. Co. v. Wilson, 4 Tex. App. Civ. Cas. (Willson) § 323, 19 S. W. 910; Wallace v. Georgia, C. & N. R. Co. 94 Ga. 732, 22 S. E. 579; New York L. Ins. Co. v. Smith, (Tex. Civ. App.) 41 S. W. 680; Street v. Varney Electrical Supply Co. 160 Ind. 338, 61 L.R.A. 155, 98 Am. St. Rep. 325, 66 N. E. 895; People ex rel. Rodgers v. Coler, 166 N. Y. 1, 52 L.R.A. 814, 82 Am. St. Rep. 605, 59 N. E. 716; State v. Fire Creek Coal & Coke Co. 33 W. Va. 188, 6 L.R.A. 359, 25 Am. St. Rep. 891, 10 S. E. 288.

Mr. Justice Holmes delivered the opinion of the court:

This is a bill brought by a number of fire insurance companies, incorporated in states other than Iowa, to enjoin the auditor of that state from enforcing §§ 1754, 1755, and 1756 of the Iowa Code, 1897. The ground of the bill is that these sections are invalid under the state Constitution and the 14th Amendment of the Constitution of the United States. There is a reference also to article 1, § 10, and an oblique suggestion that the law impairs the obligation of contracts.

The defendant demurred, and the circuit court issued an injunction as prayed, which was made perpetual by final decree. 125 Fed. 121. Thereupon the defendant appealed to this court.

By § 1754 "it shall be unlawful for two or more fire insurance companies doing business in this state, or for the officers, agents, or employees of such companies, to make or enter into any combination or agreement relating to the rates to be charged for insurance, the amount of commissions to be allowed agents for procuring the same, or the manner of transacting the fire insurance business within this state; and any such company, officer, agent, or employee violat-[408] ing this provision *shall be guilty of a misdemeanor," and a fine is imposed for each offense. By § 1755 it is made the duty of the auditor of state to summon for examination, under oath, any officer, agent, or employee suspected of violating § 1754, and if he determines that the company is guilty, or if the officer or agent fails to appear, to revoke the authority of the company to do business in the state for one year. By § 1756 an appeal is given from the decision of the auditor to the district court, the case to be tried de novo, as equitable causes are tried. By § 1757 the statements made upon the examination before the auditor or county court shall not be used in any criminal prosecution against the person making them.

The bill sets forth the necessity for every insurance company to gather all the experience available into one mass, and to analyze and classify it scientifically in order to ascertain the true value of risks, and that it will add greatly to the expense if each company is required to employ a separate person to do the work. It charges, upon information and belief, that if the plaintiffs attempt to combine their experience and to employ the same person to analyze it, the auditor will summon them and revoke their authority to do business in the state. It further alleges that the plaintiffs desire not only to do what has been stated for their guidance in establishing rates, but to agree what classes of risks are noninsurable, how various risks shall be classified, and as to other matters relating to the manner of doing business. It repeats the charge, upon information and belief, that if the plaintiffs proceed in this manner the auditor will order an examination and revoke their licenses, and prays for an injunction against enforcing in any manner the above-mentioned sections of the Iowa Code. The circuit court considered that the statute was not invalid under the Constitution of Iowa, but held that the prohibitions of agreements as to the amount of commissions to be allowed, or as to the manner of transacting the fire insurance business in the state, were contrary to the 14th Amendment. While waiving a discussion of the clause against combinations *as to rates, it seem-[409] ingly regarded the provisions of § 1754 as inseparable, and issued a general injunction forbidding the enforcement against the plaintiffs of §§ 1754, 1755, and 1756.

We assume, for purposes of decision, that the bill means that the auditor threatens and intends to enforce the act in case the plaintiffs do what they desire to do, and that if § 1754 is contrary to the Constitution of the United States, a proper case for an injunction is made out. Osborn v. Bank of United States, 9 Wheat. 738, 839, 840, 6 L. ed. 204, 228. See Cleveland v. Cleveland City R. Co. 194 U. S. 517, 531, 48 L. ed. 1102, 1106, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 756; Detroit v. Detroit Citizens' Street R. Co. 184 U. S. 368, 378, 46 L. ed. 592, 600, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 410. We assume further that the position of the plaintiffs is not affected by the fact that they are foreign corporations. The act is in general terms, and hits all insurance companies. If it is invalid as to some, it is invalid as to all. United States v. Ju Toy, 198 U. S. 253, 262, 263, 49 L. ed. 1040, 1043, 1044, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 644. That the requirements of the act might have been made conditions to foreign companies' doing business in the state (Fidelity Mut. Life Asso. v. Mettler, 185 U. S. 308, 46 L. ed. 922, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 662; Waters-Pierce Oil Co. v. Texas, 177 U. S. 28, 44 L. ed. 657, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 518) is immaterial, since as we understand the statute, the legislature did not attempt to reach the result in that way. A company lawfully doing business in the state is no more bound by a general unconstitutional enactment than a citizen of the state. W. W. Cargill Co. v. Minnesota, 180 U. S. 452, 45 L. ed. 619, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 423.

We pass to the question upon which the circuit court decided the case; namely, the constitutionality of § 1754, the only section which we find it necessary to consider. Whatever may be thought of the policy of such attempts, it cannot be denied in this court, unless some of its decisions are to be overruled, that statutes prohibiting combinations between possible rivals in trade may be constitutional. The decisions concern not only statutes of the United States (Northern Securities Co. v. United States, 193 U. S. 197, 48 L. ed. 679, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 436; Swift & Co. v. United States, 196 U. S. 375, 49 L. ed. 518, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 276), but also state laws of similar import (Smiley v. Kansas, 196 U. S. 447, 49 L. ed. 546, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 289; National Cotton Oil Co. v. Texas, 197 U. S. 115, 49 L. ed. 689, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 379).

[410] *In view of these cases further discussion is unnecessary; but we will add a few words. While we need not affirm that in no instance could a distinction be taken, ordinarily if an act of Congress is valid under the 5th Amendment it would be hard to say that a state law in like terms was void under the 14th. It is true that, by the provision in the body of the instrument, Congress has power to regulate commerce, and that the act of Congress referred to in the cases cited was passed in pursuance of that power. But even if the 5th Amendment were read as contemporaneous with the original Constitution, the power given in the commerce clause would not be taken to override it so far as the 5th Amendment protects fundamental personal rights. It is only on the ground that the right to combine at will is a fundamental personal right that it can be held to be protected by the 14th Amendment, from any abridgment by the states. Cincinnati Street R. Co. v. Snell, 193 U. S. 30, 36, 48 L. ed. 604, 607, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 319. Many state laws which limit the freedom of contract have been sustained by this court, and therefore an objection to this law on the general ground that it limits that freedom cannot be upheld. There is no greater sanctity in the right to combine than in the right to make other contracts. Indeed, Mr. Dicey, in his recent work on Law and Public Opinion in England during the Nineteenth Century, indicates that it is out of the very right to make what contracts one chooses, so strenuously advocated by Bentham, that combinations have arisen which restrict the very freedom that Bentham sought to attain, and which even might menace the authority of the state. If, then, the statute before us is to be overthrown, more special reasons must be assigned.

At the argument before us more special reasons were assigned. It was pressed that there is no justification for the particular selection of fire insurance companies for the prohibitions discussed. With regard to this it should be observed, as is noticed by the appellees, that a general statute of Iowa prohibits all contracts or combinations to fix the price of any article of merchandise or commodity, or to limit the quantity of [411] *the same produced or sold in the state (Code of 1897, § 5060), and that this section covers fire insurance (Beechley v. Mulville, 102 Iowa, 602, 63 Am. St. Rep. 479, 70 N. W. 107, 71 N. W. 428). Therefore the act in question does little if anything more than apply and work out the policy of the general law in a particular case. Again, if an evil is specially experienced in a particular branch of business, the Constitution embodies no prohibition of laws confined to the evil, or doctrinaire requirement that they should be couched in all-embracing terms. It does not forbid the cautious advance, step by step, and the distrust of generalities which sometimes have been the weakness, but often the strength, of English legislation. Otis v. Parker, 187 U. S. 606, 610, 611, 47 L. ed. 323, 328, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 168. And if this is true, then, in view of the possible teachings to be drawn from a practical knowledge of the business concerned, it is proper that courts should be very cautious in condemning what legislatures have approved.

If the legislature of the state of Iowa deems it desirable artificially to prevent, so far as it can, the substitution of combination for competition, this court cannot say that fire insurance may not present so conspicuous an example of what that legislature thinks an evil as to justify special treatment. The imposition of a more specific liability upon life and health insurance companies was held valid in Fidelity Mut. Life Asso. v. Mettler, 185 U. S. 308, 46 L. ed. 922, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 662. See also Missouri P. R. Co. v. Mackey, 127 U. S. 205, 32 L. ed. 107, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1161; Orient Ins. Co. v. Daggs, 172 U. S. 557, 43 L. ed. 552, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 281; Otis v. Parker, 187 U. S. 606, 47 L. ed. 323, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 168; Home L. Ins. Co. v. Fisher, 188 U. S. 726, 727, 47 L. ed. 667, 668, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 380.

But it is said that, however it may be as to some regulations of fire insurance, these, or at least the last two of them, forbidding agreements as to agents' commissions and the manner of transacting business, are not to be justified. In order to make this out the scope of the provisions was exaggerated both in the argument and in the bill. The bill seems to assume that the statute forbids insurance companies to obtain and use each other's experience, or to employ the same person to work up the results. It does not. It simply forbids an agreement between [412] *the companies relating to the rates which may be based upon those results. No doubt an agreement between the companies readily would be inferred if they were found all to charge the same rates; but an agreement between the companies is the only thing aimed at, and if they avoid that they escape the law. So it was suggested in argument that they could not employ the same adjuster in case of loss. We do not perceive anything to hinder their doing so, although it may be that they would have to be careful about the terms of his authority. The object of the law, we assume, until the Iowa court shall decide otherwise, is single,—to keep up competition,—and the general language is to be restricted by the specific provisions and to the particular end. Limited as we understand it to be limited, the statute goes no further than others which have been sustained, and does not contravene the Constitution of the United States.

The argument before us very properly was rested on the 14th Amendment. Therefore it is unnecessary to discuss the other objections suggested in the bill.

Although we have conceded that the bill makes a case for an injunction if its premises are true, it cannot be understood to charge that the auditor will go further than to enforce the act as properly construed. The allegations upon information and belief, which we have stated, probably mean no more than that the plaintiffs reasonably suppose that the auditor will do his duty. They are pressed to the verge when they are taken to set forth a threat to do that. They certainly do not show that he threatens to do more.

Decree reversed.

Mr. Justice Harlan, concurring:

It is clear from the averments of the bill that the insurance companies had not, prior to the institution of this suit, made any combination or agreement, among themselves, relating to the rates to be charged for insurance, or to the amount of commis-[413] sions *to be allowed agents for procuring insurance, or to the manner of transacting fire insurance business within the state. They expressed a desire to make such a combination or agreement, but were apprehensive that by doing so they would come into conflict with the state authorities. The auditor had done nothing under the statute, and will have nothing to do in execution of its provisions unless the insurance companies enter into the forbidden combination or agreement. Nevertheless, the plaintiffs came into court, avowed that they had not as yet violated the statute, but asked to be informed whether, in the event they concluded to do so, their officers, agents, or employees could be legally summoned before the state auditor for examination, as prescribed in § 1755. In other words, in advance of anything being done in violation of the statute, or of any steps being taken by the auditor in execution of its provisions, the opinion of the court was asked and obtained as to its constitutionality. This is a very convenient—and, in my judgment, a mischievous—mode of obtaining the opinion of a court upon an abstract question of the constitutionality of a statute which has not been and may never be violated, and under which no case may ever arise calling for judicial interference. It is as if the plaintiffs had addressed a personal communication to the court, asking to be informed as to what they might safely do. It seems to me that the suit has been prematurely brought. If the plaintiffs should make such a combination as is forbidden by the statute, the time to seek judicial interference in their behalf would be when the state auditor proceeds, or in some definite way indicates his purpose to proceed, under § 1755. I think the decree below should be reversed and the bill ordered to be dismissed, upon the ground that no facts existed, at the time the suit was brought, to justify a judicial tribunal in delivering a judgment as to the constitutionality of the state statute.

As, however, the court considered the case upon the merits, it is appropriate to say that I concur with the court in holding that the section of the statute which is assailed is not invalid. *The business of fire insur-[414] ance is of such a peculiar character, so intimately connected with the prosperity of the whole community, and so vital to the security of property owners, that it is competent for the state to forbid combinations and agreements among fire insurance companies doing business within its limits, in reference to rates, agents' commissions, and the manner of transacting their business. If, in the judgment of the state, the people who desire insurance upon their property are put at a disadvantage when confronted by a combination or agreement among insurance companies, I do not perceive any sound reason why, preserving the individual right of contracting, it may not forbid such combinations and agreements, and thereby enable the insured and insurer to meet on terms of equality. Surely, the state could enact such a regulation with reference to companies organized under its own laws. If that be so, it cannot be that such a regulation may not be made applicable to foreign insurance companies doing business in the state only by its consent.

UNITED STATES, Appt.,
v.
UTAH, NEVADA, & CALIFORNIA STAGE COMPANY. (No. 51.)

UTAH, NEVADA, & CALIFORNIA STAGE COMPANY, Appt.,
v.
UNITED STATES. (No. 52.)

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 414–425.)

1. Postoffice—mail contract—extra service.—An increase in the service required on a mail route, as the result of the establishment of a new distributing station in the city of New York, amounting to more than 300,000 miles of additional transfer service, and involving an additional expenditure of nearly $10,000 for ferry tolls, cannot be required by the Postmaster General without extra compensation, under the authority reserved to him in the contract to call for new, additional, mail messenger, or transfer service without additional compensation.

2. Postoffice—mail contract—effect of mistake in advertisement for proposals.—The positive statement in the government's advertisement for proposals for services on a mail route that the number of elevated stations to be served was two, whereas in fact there were four to be served, entitles the contractor to additional compensation for the extra service thereby necessitated, although the advertisement required bidders to inform themselves as to the facts, and stated that additional compensation would not be allowed for mistakes.

3. Postoffice — mail contract — delivery of mail at elevated stations.—The carriage of the mails up and down the steps at elevated railroad stations is called for by a contract for performing the covered regulation wagon, mail messenger, transfer, and mail station service on a mail route, in which the contractor agreed to take the mails from and deliver them to the postoffices, mail stations, and cars.

[Nos. 51, 52.]

Submitted November 8, 1905. Decided November 27, 1905.

APPEAL and Cross Appeal from the Court of Claims from a judgment awarding a portion of the extra compensation demanded for services performed under a contract for carrying the mails. Affirmed.

See same case below, 39 Ct. Cl. 420.

Statement by Mr. Justice Day:

This is an appeal and cross appeal from a judgment of the court of claims upon a demand for extra compensation in the performance of a contract made on December 21, 1892, between the United States, represented by the Postmaster General, and the Utah, Nevada, & California Stage Company, for the rendition of certain covered regulation wagon, mail messenger, transfer, and station service on mail route number 207,003, in the city of New York, for a term from July 1, 1893, to June 30, 1897. The advertisement contained certain instructions to bidders, a part of which is as follows:

"The contractors under this advertisement will be required to perform, without additional compensation, any and all new or additional service that may be ordered from July 1, 1893, or at any time thereafter during the contract term, whether between postoffices and railroad stations, between postoffices and steamboat landings, between postoffices and mail stations, or between the several railroad stations, steamboat landings, and mail stations now established or that may hereafter be established, whether caused by the establishment of new, or by change of site of existing, postoffices, railroad stations, steamboat landings, or mail stations within said cities, or caused by the alteration of the routes made necessary by any other reason.

"The statements of probable additional service that may be necessary on the routes under this advertisement are given so that bidders may be as fully advised as possible of the amount likely to be required. It will not, however, limit the *liability of the[416] contractors to perform all service that may become necessary without additional pay.

"Bidders must inform themselves of the distances, the running time, the weight of the mails, the condition of hills, streets, toll bridges, ferries, and obstructions of all kinds, whereby expense may be incurred, and as to the probable increase, additional service, or changes likely to be rendered necessary. Claims for additional pay based on such grounds, or for alleged mistakes or misapprehensions as to the service required, or for bridges destroyed or ferries discontinued, cannot be considered."

The stage company, having submitted a proposal under this advertisement, was awarded the contract, and the same was duly entered into. Among other things it was stipulated:

"To take the mail from and deliver it into the postoffices, mail stations, and cars at such points and at such hours, under the directions of the postmaster at New York, N. Y., approved by the Postmaster General, as will secure despatches and connections and facilitate distribution, and at the contractor's expense for tolls and ferriage.

"To perform all new or additional or changed covered regulation wagon, mail messenger, transfer, and mail station service that the Postmaster General may order at the city of New York, N. Y., during the contract term, without additional compensation, whether caused by change of location of postoffice, stations, landing, or the establishment of others than those existing at the date hereof, or rendered necessary, in the judgment of the Postmaster General, for any cause, and to furnish such advance or extra wagons from time to time for special or advance trips as the Postmaster General may require, as a part of such new or additional service."

After the contract was entered into, Congress having made an appropriation for the purpose, a new distribution station was established at Forty-fourth street and Lexington avenue, in the city of New York, known as the Industrial building station. At the time of the advertisement for proposals, *which resulted in the contract, to[417] wit, on September 15, 1892, the service therein referred to involved the carrying of the mails for approximately 973,674.22 miles per annum. In the advertisement bidders were notified that the probable annual increase in such service would amount to 6,718.40 miles. Between the time of the advertisement and the time when complainant entered upon the performance of his contract, additional service was required which increased the amount of annual mileage to 1,012,604.54 miles. On August 22, 1893, an order was made by the Second Assistant Postmaster General, requiring additional mail service to supply the mail station at Forty-fourth street and Lexington avenue, as per certain statements attached to the order, and a further order was made on October 23, 1893, for additional mail station service. Under the arrangement ordered by the Department, all first-class matter (letters) previously collected in the district of Station H (removed into the Industrial building from 156 East Fourth street) continued to be received and handled there; massed matter made up by the states for the East, North, and West, which had previously been sent to the general postoffice for distribution, was sent to the Industrial branch to be distributed. South and West mail was taken there during the period within suit and assorted, and all of the second-class bulky matter of publishers above Fourteenth street, which had formerly been received at the general postoffice and Station O, was delivered at the Industrial building; also, all third and fourth class matter, mailed in uptown stations, which had previously come to the general postoffice, was sent to the Industrial building, relieving the general postoffice from handling that matter. The result of the orders aforesaid was that claimant was compelled to increase the number of wagon trips from October 25, 1893, to February 6, 1895, over and above what would have been the normal increase, and increased the distance to be traveled by the wagons, over and above the normal increase, 311,939 miles for the period from October 5, 1893, to February 6, 1895.

[418] *The Industrial building was rented in March, 1893, for postal purposes, in order to relieve the general postoffice, which had become inadequate to accommodate the increased volume of business. Station H, on May 1, 1893, was moved from 156 East Fifty-fourth street into the Industrial building. In connection with Station H, there were inaugurated in the premises the district departments, variously known as district stations.

By establishing the distribution station in the Industrial building, and issuing the orders above set forth, there was no diminution in the number and character of the runs to and from the general postoffice, nor was the mileage at said general postoffice thereby diminished. To perform this extra service to and from the Industrial building the claimant was required to purchase from 80 to 100 additional horses, and from 32 to 33 additional wagons; to put on from 45 to 46 new runs, and to employ from 33 to 50 additional men,—drivers, hostlers, etc. The orders resulted in such increased speed in carrying the mails from the Industrial building to some of the railroad stations that in obeying them it was necessary to violate the city ordinances as to the rate of speed; it largely increased the wear and tear on the wagons; it injured and shortened the period of usefulness of the horses, some of them dying from overexertion in hot weather by reason of the fast driving, made necessary by the short time allowed to make the various trips.

The increase of runs to the railroad stations outside of the city of New York, made necessary by the establishment of the extra service from the Industrial building, increased the necessary expenditure by the claimant, in the matter of ferry tolls, in the sum of $9,950.22.

At no time prior to the making of said bid, or prior to entering into said contract, was any intimation or information given by the defendants' officers to claimant that they contemplated or intended the establishment of a service at the Industrial building.

*A postal station was established in the [419] Industrial building, and the contractor was required to transport the mails between it and the various railroad stations and some postal stations. This postal station was constituted as follows:

"Station H was moved May 1, 1893, from its location at No. 156 East Fifty-fourth street into the above-named premises.

"Thereafter, on September 1, 1893 (service began October 4, 1893), there was inaugurated in the same premises and in connection with Station H the distribution department, which was variously known as 'Distribution station,' 'Industrial station,' and 'Station H (distribution department),' and the two together were sometimes known as 'Industrial branch station.'

"Before and after the removal of Station H, as above stated, it was in all respects a branch postoffice, at which there were collections and deliveries of mail by carriers, distribution of mail matter for despatch, registration of letters, sale of stamps, and the issuing of money orders.

"Both that part of the industrial branch which had been known as Station H, and that part which was referred to as 'Distribution station,' etc., were situated on the same floor of the Industrial building, and were at all times connected by a passageway. The former was in charge of a superintendent of station, and the latter was, until January 5, 1895, under the direction of an assistant of the superintendent of mails of the general postoffice. Station H continued the collection and delivery of mail by carriers, the sale of stamps, the registration of matter, and sale of money orders, while the distribution department had charge of the distribution of second, third, and fourth class matter. The collectors for Station H proper carried their collections of mail directly into and deposited them in the distribution department, and the distribution for despatch and the assortment for city delivery were made there.

"After the equipment of Industrial branch station, second-class mail matter mailed by publishers and originating north of Fourteenth street was mailed at that station.

[420] *"This mail matter had previously been mailed at the general postoffice and at Station O, at which points the distribution had theretofore been made and despatch made to the several railroad stations, as specifically stated in the advertisement. Thereafter no further such mailing of second-class matter was made at Station O, and all despatches of said mailed matter for the West and New England states and to and from Grand Central station were made from the Industrial branch station, a distance of approximately 6 blocks, instead of from the general postoffice, 3½ miles distant, and from Station O, 1¾ miles distant, as theretofore.

"The congested state of the general postoffice on account of lack of adequate space, for the remedy of which Station O had been established some years before, was well known for some time prior to the advertisement and proposal for this service."

The advertisement of September 15, 1892, containing provision for covered regulation wagon, mail messenger, transfer, and station service, which was made a part of the contract, undertook to give a schedule of service probably required in the city as the same existed and was in operation on August 15, 1892, as stated in the advertisement, "so that bidders might be as fully advised as possible of the amount of service likely to be required." The advertisement inadvertently stated the service between the Manhattan Elevated Railroad station and the general postoffice and certain branch stations at one half of the number of transfers actually required, consequently the stage company was required to perform, and did perform, double the number of trips specified.

In the performance of the contract certain foot service was required, which, it is contended, was not included in the contract, which necessitated 479,875 trips going up and down steps in making delivery of mail to messengers on elevated trains, the service requiring the employment of additional men at each station.

From the findings of fact the court of claims held the complainant *entitled to re- [421] cover the sum of $68,483 as compensation for the additional service under the orders of the Department, made necessary by the establishment of the extra service in connection with the Industrial building, the sum including $9,950.22 expenses incurred by the stage company in the matter of ferry tolls; also $14,538 because of the double service required between the Manhattan Elevated Railroad and the general postoffice and certain branch postoffices, growing out of the mistake in the advertisement in stating the number of trips required at one half the actual number. It disallowed the claim for extra compensation on account of the "foot service" required in delivering the mail upstairs at the elevated railway stations. 39 Ct. Cl. 440.

Assistant Attorney General Pradt and Mr. Joseph Stewart for the United States.

Messrs. A. A. Hoehling, Jr., and J. H. McGowan for the Utah, Nevada, & California Stage Company.

Mr. Justice Day delivered the opinion of the court:

It is the contention of the government that, under the authority of the Postmaster General to require new or additional mail messenger or transfer service, without additional compensation, the contractor might be required to perform the additional service made necessary by the establishment of the Industrial building branch under the authority of the act of Congress of March 3, 1893 (27 Stat. at L. 732, chap. 213), authorizing the renting of the building to be used for general postoffice purposes in the city of New York. The findings of fact establish that this Industrial building branch was more than 3 miles distant from the general postoffice, and was intended to and did transact nearly all of the business north of Fourteenth street. This necessitated the carrying of the mails, not only from the *general [422] postoffice to the railroad stations, but to and from the branch station established at the Industrial building. In order to perform this service under the directions of the Department, complainant was required to furnish 80 additional horses, more than 30 additional wagons, and from 33 to 50 additional men, requiring an additional distance to be traveled in wagons, over and above the normal increase, of 311,939 miles for the period from October 5, 1893, to February 6, 1895, and to pay an increased sum for ferrying the wagons across the North and East rivers of $9,950.22. Can such enormous increase of the service required and the expense entailed be exacted of a contractor who had agreed to perform new or additional service of the kind specified without additional compensation? There can be no doubt that the purpose of placing this stipulation in the contract was to require the performance, without additional compensation, of new or additional service which might arise from improved methods in the transaction of the business of the Postoffice Department and in the increased demand for service resulting from the growth and developments of towns and cities. The contract gave to the Postmaster General very considerable discretion in calling for additional service which might result from these causes, without compensation. This was well illustrated in the case of Slavens v. United States, 196 U. S. 229, 49 L. ed. 457, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 229, in which it was held that while the Postmaster General might not order, under such a contract, service of a different character not within the contractual arrangement, he might order, without additional compensation, a change in the service which required the mail to be taken to and from street cars, met at crossings instead of landings and stations. In that case it happened the burden upon the contractor was not increased. But in the present case we find more service required, amounting to additional mileage of hundreds of thousands of miles, and the payment of a large additional sum of money for ferrying wagons to deliver the mails. There must be some limit to the service which can be required without additional compensation, under *the authority [423] vested in the Postmaster General by the contract, to call for new or additional service of the same character. Otherwise it is within the power of the government to ruin a contractor by new and wholly unanticipated demands, which caution and prudence, however great, could not have foreseen. If this were a contract between individuals, a claim of the right to require this vast amount of additional work—evidently not within the contemplation of the parties—without additional compensation would hardly be seriously entertained. The same principles of right and justice which prevail between individuals should control in the construction and carrying out of contracts between the government and individuals. The phrase "new or additional service" is not one of exact meaning, defining the precise extent of the obligation incurred, and permits the court to give it a reasonable construction with a view to doing justice between the parties. In giving a proper construction, the court is required to examine the entire contract, to consider the relation of the parties, and the circumstances under which it was signed. Chicago, R. I. & P. R. Co. v. Denver & R. G. R. Co. 143 U. S. 596, 609, 36 L. ed. 277, 281, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 479. It was said by Mr. Justice White, in O'Brien v. Miller, 168 U. S. 287, 297, 42 L. ed. 469, 473, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 140, 144:

"The elementary canon of interpretation is not that particular words may be isolatedly considered, but that the whole contract must be brought into view, and interpreted with reference to the nature of the obligations between the parties, and the intention which they have manifested in forming them. Boardman v. Reed, 6 Pet. 328, 8 L. ed. 415; Chesapeake & O. Canal Co. v. Hill, 15 Wall. 94, 21 L. ed. 64."

And, upon the same subject, Mr. Justice Bradley, in the case of Chesapeake & O. Canal Co. v. Hill, 15 Wall. 94, 99, 21 L. ed. 64, 67, said:

"We should look carefully to the substance of the original agreement, . . . as contradistinguished from its mere form, in order that we may give it a fair and just construction, and ascertain the substantial intent of the parties, which is the fundamental rule in the construction of all agreements."

We cannot believe it possible that the parties to this contract contemplated the establishment of a new postal department *in [424] the city of New York not then authorized by any act of Congress, which should so greatly increase the service, requiring more than 300,000 miles of additional transfer service and nearly $10,000 of additional expense for ferrying during the time covered in the suit. The government, in its advertisement, had stated the probable additional annual mileage at 6,718.40 miles. This may be presumed to have been a fair and impartial estimate, made for the benefit of those with whom the government was about to contract, notwithstanding they were warned that it was not conclusive. There is nothing in the record to show that it was not a reasonable estimate in the light of the facts then known. In this case, after the contract was entered into, this enormous new service, clearly not intended by either of the parties to be rendered, was required. In this instance we think the limit of reasonable requirement under the new and additional service clause was exceeded, and the service required cannot be held to be within the terms of the contract. We find no error in the court of claims reaching this conclusion.

2. The second question involved is as to the right of the contractor to recover because the government's advertisement for proposals, instead of stating the number of elevated stations to be served at four, which was, in fact, the number, gave the number of stations at two, thus doubling the number of trips necessary. It is true that the advertisement required the bidders to inform themselves as to the facts, and stated that additional compensation would not be allowed for mistakes; but, in the present instance, the government, in its advertisement, had positively stated the number of stations at two. The contractor had a right to presume that the government knew how many stations were to be served; it was a fact peculiarly within the knowledge of the government agents, and upon which, in the advertisement, it spoke with certainty. We do not think, when the statement was thus unequivocal, and the document was prepared for the guidance of bidders for government service, that the general statement that the [425] contractor must investigate *for himself, and of nonresponsibility for mistakes, would require an independent investigation of a fact which the government had left in no doubt. We think the court of claims correctly allowed this item.

3. As to the compensation for the so-called "foot service," for carrying the mails up and down the steps at the elevated railroad stations, the delivery of the mail at the foot of the steps would not have been sufficient, and the contractor agreed to deliver the mail into the postoffices, mail stations, and cars. The statement of facts shows that the preceding contractor had delivered the mail on the platform of the stations, at the door of the cars. We think the contract was not exclusively for wagon service, but, reasonably construed, required the delivery of the mail into the elevated stations in such wise as to be placed in the cars, and consequently required it to be carried upstairs without extra allowance of pay. We find no error in disallowing this claim for extra compensation.

The judgment of the Court of Claims is affirmed.

MARY MABEL ROGERS, Appt.,

v.

HENRY H. PECK and Wilson S. Lovell.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 425–437.)

1. Habeas corpus—Federal interference with state administration of criminal law.—The Federal courts will not interfere by habeas corpus with a state in the administration of its criminal law unless fundamental rights specially secured by the Federal Constitution are invaded.

2. Constitutional law—due process of law—solitary confinement after original date fixed for execution of death sentence.—Solitary confinement by the state authorities pending the execution of a death sentence after the original day fixed for the execution of that sentence has passed, even if unwarranted, is not a denial of the due process of law guaranteed by the 14th Amendment to the Federal Constitution.

3. Constitutional law—due process of law in execution of death sentence.—No denial of the due process of law guaranteed by U. S. Const. 14th Amend. will result from the execution of a death sentence because of the failure of the highest state court, on denying a motion for a new trial, to fix a day for execution, where the governor of the state had, by a reprieve, already definitely fixed the time for execution at a day which had not arrived when the court made its decision.

4. Constitutional law—due process of law in providing for appellate review in criminal cases.—The due process of law guaranteed by U. S. Const. 14th Amend. does not require that the highest state court for the review of a conviction of capital crimes be held in any particular county of that state, whatever may be the requirement of the state Constitution in that respect.

5. Habeas corpus—state interference pending final judgment.—A reprieve by the governor of a state, postponing, until a fixed date, the execution of a death sentence, evidently granted to permit the prisoner to appeal to the Supreme Court of the United States from the order of a district court denying habeas corpus, is not a proceeding against the prisoner within the meaning of U. S. Rev. Stat. § 766, as amended by the act of March 3, 1893 (27 Stat. at L. 751, chap. 226, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 597), nullifying any proceeding against a person in prison or confined or restrained of his liberty, in any state court, or by authority of any state, pending the proceedings or appeal in habeas corpus cases in the Federal courts.

[No. 368.]

Argued November 6, 1905. Decided November 27, 1905.

APPEAL from the District Court of the United States for the District of Vermont to review an order denying a petition for a writ of habeas corpus. Affirmed.

See same case below, 138 Fed. 961.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

NOTE.—On habeas corpus in the Federal courts—see notes to Re Reinitz, 4 L.R.A. 236; State ex rel. Cochran v. Winters, 10 L.R.A. 616; Re Huse, 25 C. C. A. 4; and Tinsley v. Anderson, 43 L. ed. U. S. 91.

As to what constitutes due process of law—

Messrs. Tracy L. Jeffords and T. W. Moloney argued the cause, and, with Mr. F. M. Butler, filed a brief for appellant:

Solitary confinement with the sentence of death is held to constitute, in and of itself, a separate and severe punishment in addition to being in custody until execution by hanging.

Re Medley, 134 U. S. 160, 33 L. ed. 835, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 384.

Whenever a citizen is denied a right guaranteed by the Federal Constitution, or is subjected to a penalty forbidden by it, the Federal courts have jurisdiction, and may grant relief.

Ex parte Royall, 117 U. S. 241, 29 L. ed. 869, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 734.

Law in its regular course of administration through courts of justice is due process of law.

Hurtado v. California, 110 U. S. 516, 28 L. ed. 232, 4 Sup. Ct. Rep. 111, 292.

A Federal court has jurisdiction to discharge from the custody of state officials any person restrained of his liberty in violation of the Constitution, and may exercise its discretion in the light of the circumstances.

Minnesota v. Brundage, 180 U. S. 499, 45 L. ed. 639, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 455; Markuson v. Boucher, 175 U. S. 184, 44 L. ed. 125, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 76.

The Constitution applies to any person. In Leeper v. Texas the court seems to have limited this provision to "particular persons or classes of persons." By the use of these expressions it can hardly be possible that the Supreme Court intended to amend or limit the express words "any person" to a particular person or class of persons. It surely was intended to apply to any person, rich or poor, white or black, young or old, male or female.

139 U. S. 462, 35 L. ed. 225, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 577.

The reason of the rule that the court usually refuses to review the decisions of state courts on habeas corpus, and compels resort to writ of error, as stated in the leading case of Baker v. Grice, 169 U. S. 284, 42 L. ed. 748, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 323, incidentally touches this case. This is a case of "peculiar urgency;" error is being committed, since the judgment of the inferior court has been superseded or vacated by the supreme court. It is an attempt of the state, by its officers, to execute a sentence vacated by the court. There is no action of the court in this regard to which error can be assigned.

Tinsley v. Anderson, 171 U. S. 101, 43 L. ed. 91, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 805; Newport Light Co. v. Newport, 151 U. S. 527, 38 L. ed. 259, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 429; Pepke v. Cronan, 155 U. S. 100, 39 L. ed. 84, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 34.

This is one of the cases of so exceptional a nature that this writ is the only course.

Re Neagle (Cunningham v. Neagle) 135 U. S. 1, 34 L. ed. 55, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 658; Re Loney (Thomas v. Loney) 134 U. S. 372, 33 L. ed. 949, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 584.

Courts illegally constituted, whose judgment and sentence are void, do not furnish the citizen with due legal process. An indictment in a state court, obtained by unlawful discrimination, is void.

Rogers v. Alabama, 192 U. S. 226, 48 L. ed. 417, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 257.

Even a sane person cannot waive anything in a capital cause.

People v. Barberi, 149 N. Y. 256, 52 Am. St. Rep. 717, 43 N. E. 635.

The exercise of jurisdiction by this court to protect constitutional rights cannot be declined when it is plain that the very result of a decision is to deny the rights.

Rogers v. Alabama, supra.

Mr. Clarke C. Fitts argued the cause and filed a brief for appellees:

Appellant's mere averment that she is detained in violation of the Constitution and laws of the United States, and is restrained in violation of the Constitution of the United States, is merely an averment of a conclusion of law, and not of fact; and is not sufficient to give the court jurisdiction.

Sawyer v. Piper, 189 U. S. 154, 47 L. ed. 757, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 633; Whitten v. Tomlinson, 160 U. S. 231, 40 L. ed. 406, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 297; Craemer v. Washington, 168 U. S. 124, 42 L. ed. 407, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1; Re Cuddy, 131 U. S. 280, 33 L. ed. 154, 9 Sup. Ct. Rep. 703; Kohl v. Lehlback, 160 U. S. 293, 40 L. ed. 432, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 304.

The granting of a reprieve under the Constitution of Vermont is an executive function. It is favor to the prisoner.

Re Cross, 146 U. S. 277, 36 L. ed. 972, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 109.

The Federal Constitution neither grants, nor forbids, to the governor of a state, the right to stay the execution of a sentence.

Storti v. Massachusetts, 183 U. S. 141, 46 L. ed. 122, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 72.

In Lambert v. Barrett, 159 U. S. 663, 40 L. ed. 297, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 135, this court held that the question whether there was authority to issue a reprieve or death warrant was for the state court alone to determine.

see Kuntz v. Sumption, 2 L.R.A. 655, and note: Re Gannon, 5 L.R.A. 359, and note; Ulman v. Baltimore, 11 L.R.A. 224, and note; and Gilman v. Tucker, 13 L.R.A. 304, and note. And see notes to People v. O'Brien, 2 L.R.A. 255; Pearson v. Yewdall, 24 L. ed. U. S. 436; and Wilson v. North Carolina, 42 L. ed. U. S. 865.

The authority of the governor to fix a certain date for the execution to take place is an incident to the power to grant reprieves.

Clifford v. Heller, 63 N. J. L. 105, 57 L.R.A. 312, 42 Atl. 155.

The repricve is not a new sentence, and the execution under it is not by way of a new sentence, but by reason of the expiration of a temporary suspension of the original sentence.

Ex parte Fleming, 60 Miss. 910.

The failure of the state supreme court to appoint a time for executing the sentence is a matter of state procedure.

Lambert v. Barrett, supra; Brown v. New Jersey, 175 U. S. 174, 44 L. ed. 119, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 77; Baldwin v. Kansas, 129 U. S. 57, 32 L. ed. 642, 9 Sup. Ct. Rep. 193.

Any question relating to procedure in the state court cannot be raised by habeas corpus. A writ of error is the proper remedy to review judgments and practice of state courts.

Re Frederich, 149 U. S. 70–78, 37 L. ed. 653–657, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 793; Markuson v. Boucher, 175 U. S. 184, 44 L. ed. 124, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 76; Re Sehneider, 148 U. S. 162, 37 L. ed. 406, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 572; Re Duncan (Duncan v. McCall) 139 U. S. 449, 35 L. ed. 219, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 573.

The appellant complains that her rights under the Constitution of the United States have been infringed because she has been denied the right of appeal for a correction of errors of the trial court. She says there is no supreme court of the state of Vermont to which she has the right to appeal for a correction of the errors which she alleges occurred on her trial in county court. This question, as the appellant makes it, raises only the question of the Constitution of the state of Vermont and the alleged collision of the state statute with the state Constitution. It is not a Federal question.

Baldwin v. Kansas, Brown v. New Jersey, and Lambert v. Barrett, supra; Porter v. Foley, 24 How. 415, 16 L. ed. 740.

A state may provide one judicial system for one county and another for an adjoining county so long as it does not abridge the privileges and immunities of citizens of the United States, nor deprive any person of his rights without due process of law, nor deny to any person within its jurisdiction the equal protection of the laws in the same county.

Missouri v. Lewis (Bowman v. Lewis) 101 U. S. 33, 25 L. ed. 993.

This court has nothing to do with the wrongs which may have been inflicted by an individual upon the appellant. It is only to inquire into what the state has done.

Murphy v. Massachusetts, 177 U. S. 155, 44 L. ed. 711, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 639; People ex rel. Trezza v. Brush, 128 N. Y. 536, 28 N. E. 533.

This court has repeatedly frowned upon attempts to use the writ of habeas corpus in place of a writ of error.

Re Swan, 150 U. S. 637, 37 L. ed. 1207, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 225; Pepke v. Cronan, 155 U. S. 100, 101, 39 L. ed. 84, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 34; Davis v. Burke, 179 U. S. 399, 45 L. ed. 249, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 210; Minnesota v. Brundage, 180 U. S. 499, 505, 45 L. ed. 639, 642, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 455.

Under the writ of habeas corpus, the court can exercise no appellate jurisdiction over the proceedings of the trial court or courts of the state, nor review their conclusions of law or fact and pronounce them erroneous.

Re Frederich, supra; Ex parte Siebold, 100 U. S. 371, 25 L. ed. 717; Ex parte Curtis, 106 U. S. 371, 27 L. ed. 232, 1 Sup. Ct. Rep. 381; Ex parte Yarbrough, 110 U. S. 651, 28 L. ed. 274, 4 Sup. Ct. Rep. 152; Ex parte Wilson, 114 U. S. 417, 29 L. ed. 89, 5 Sup. Ct. Rep. 935; Ex parte Royall, 117 U. S. 241, 29 L. ed. 868, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 734; Stevens v. Fuller, 136 U. S. 468, 34 L. ed. 461, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 911.

Mr. Justice Day delivered the opinion of the court:

The appellant, Mary Mabel Rogers, having been convicted and sentenced in the county court of Bennington, in the state of Vermont, of the crime of murder in the first degree, filed her petition on June 19, 1905, for a writ of habeas corpus against the sheriff and superintendent of the state prison, in the district court of the United States for the district of Vermont. The petition, having been heard, was denied on June 22, 1905. From that order an appeal was taken to this court.

The conviction of appellant was had at the December term, 1903, of the Bennington county court, and she was sentenced to be confined at hard labor in the state prison at Windsor until the 3d day of November, 1904, and on and after that day to be kept in solitary confinement until February 3, 1905, on which day she should suffer the penalty of death by hanging. On the first day of February, 1905, the Governor of the state of Vermont reprieved the execution of sentence until June 2, 1905. On April 29, 1905, the appellant presented a petition for a new trial to two judges of the supreme court of Vermont. On May 5, 1905, the judges made an order allowing the petition for new trial to be filed, and fixed May 10 for the hear-[427] ing *thereof. After hearing before the supreme court, sitting at Montpelier, Washington county, on May 30 an order was made dismissing the petition, and refusing the new trial. Rogers v. State, 77 Vt. 454, 61 Atl. 489. On June 1, 1905, the execution of sentence was further reprieved by the Governor until June 23, 1905. Thereupon appellant filed her petition in the Federal court for the writ of habeas corpus, which was dismissed, as heretofore stated. On the date of the dismissal of her petition (June 22, 1905), the Governor further reprieved the execution of the sentence until December 8, 1905. The appeal to this court was allowed on June 22, 1905. The petitioner (appellant) averred that, by the various proceedings in the state courts and her incarceration in the prison in solitary confinement, she has been restrained of her liberty and is about to be executed without due process of law, guaranteed for her protection by the 14th Amendment to the Constitution of the United States.

For the reversal of the judgment and order of the district court of the United States, discharging the writ and remanding her to the custody of the Vermont authorities, appellant relies upon the following specifications of error:

"First. Because the petitioner was and is deprived of her liberty by the state, and subjected to the punishment of solitary confinement without any statute authorizing such punishment, and without any sentence of any court directing such punishment, and therefore without due process of law.

[432] *"Second. Because the supreme court of Vermont, having taken jurisdiction of the petition for a new trial, and having failed to comply with the requirements of law in respect of ordering a stay of execution and fixing the time for the execution of the petitioner, has failed to fix a day for the execution, and the Governor of Vermont has no right or authority to fix such a day, and the petitioner is being held to be executed in accordance with a precept not authorized by law, and which is not in and of itself due process of law.

"Third. Because the state of Vermont, having failed to maintain an appellate court in the County of Bennington, as required by its Constitution, has deprived the relator of the opportunity to be heard by a court of competent jurisdiction, and thus deprived her of due process of law.

"Fourth. Because the Governor of Vermont, having issued his order requiring execution of the petitioner on December 8, while proceedings were pending in the courts of the United States for her relief on habeas corpus, said order of the Governor is to be deemed null and void, and the petitioner should be released from custody thereunder."

We shall notice these several assignments in the order named.

As to solitary confinement of the prisoner, it is not contended that she was not properly sentenced in this respect by the court of original jurisdiction. The statute of the state of Vermont (Vt. Stat. § 2007) provides:

"When execution is not to take place until after six months from date of sentence, the court at the same time shall sentence the respondent to hard labor in the state prison or house of correction until three months before the time fixed in the sentence of death for execution thereof, and shall also sentence him to solitary confinement in the state prison or house of correction from the expiration of the sentence to hard labor until the time of execution."

The court, in sentencing the appellant to be hanged on the first Friday of February, 1905, in pursuance of this statute, imposed a sentence of three months at hard labor until within *three months of the time fixed [433] for the execution, and three months of solitary confinement next before the day of execution.

The complaint in this behalf is not of a sentence alleged to have been imposed in violation of law but because of the manner in which the appellant has been kept in confinement in prison after the original day fixed for the execution of the sentence. She alleges that she is suffering solitary confinement without due process of law, within the meaning of the 14th Amendment. If she is held in such confinement by the state authorities,—which the record does not disclose, the confinement shown being close rather than solitary,—we are of the opinion that no case within the Federal protection is made. Re Medley, 134 U. S. 160, 33 L. ed. 835, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 384, is cited and relied upon by counsel. That case presented an entirely different question. It was there held that a sentence under a state law passed after the commission of felonious homicide, affixing the punishment of solitary confinement for a period of six months in addition to the death penalty, was an ex post facto law within the meaning of § 10, article 1, of the Federal Constitution, and therefore void. In Rooney v. North Dakota, 196 U. S. 319, 49 L. ed. 494, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 264, it was held that a statute which substituted close confinement in the penitentiary for a period before execution longer than had theretofore been authorized for confinement in jail was not an ex post facto law. In the present case no sentence or law is being violated, and, assuming the appellant to be held in solitary confinement, there is nothing to prevent her having relief at the hands of the state authorities, and nothing to show that the appellant is being deprived of her liberty in violation of any right secured to her by the Federal Constitution.

The extent of the right of the Federal courts to interfere by the writ of habeas corpus with the proceedings of courts and other authorities of a state is carefully defined by statute. When a prisoner is in jail he may be released upon habeas corpus when held in violation of his constitutional rights. Rev. Stat. § 753, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 592. In the case before us, [434] assuming for this purpose *that the appellant has been properly convicted and sentenced of one of the gravest offenses known to the law, she is properly restrained of her liberty while in custody, for the purpose of making the sentence effectual. If her custodian is improperly restricting her freedom more than is necessary or legal under state law, there is no reason to suppose that the state authorities will not afford the necessary relief. And certainly there is nothing in this branch of the case to justify Federal interference with the local authority intrusted with the keeping of the prisoner.

The reluctance with which this court will sanction Federal interference with a state in the administration of its domestic law for the prosecution of crime has been frequently stated in the deliverances of the court upon the subject. It is only where fundamental rights, specially secured by the Federal Constitution, are invaded, that such interference is warranted. Ex parte Reggel, 114 U. S. 642, 29 L. ed. 250, 5 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1148; Re Converse, 137 U. S. 624, 34 L. ed. 796, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 191; Allen v. Georgia, 166 U. S. 138, 41 L. ed. 949, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 525; Hodgson v. Vermont, 168 U. S. 262, 42 L. ed. 461, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 80; Brown v. New Jersey, 175 U. S. 172, 44 L. ed. 119, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 77; Re Frederich, 149 U. S. 70, 37 L. ed. 653, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 793.

As to the second assignment of error,—arising from the failure of the supreme court of Vermont to grant a stay, and fix a time for execution of the sentence when it entertained and denied the petition for a new trial,—at the time of the ruling in this behalf the prisoner had been reprieved until June 2. The decision was made before that day had arrived (May 30th). It is difficult to perceive any good reason for requiring the court to fix a time for sentence which was already definitely set by the reprieve of the Governor. It was the opinion of the supreme court of Vermont that it was not required to do so, and this decision cannot be reversed by Federal authority. It has been so frequently ruled by this court, that it is scarcely necessary to cite cases, that the Federal courts will not, by writs of habeas corpus, undertake to reverse the proceedings of the state courts, while acting within their jurisdiction, under statutes which do not conflict with the Federal Constitution. Re Shibuya Jugiro* (Shibuya Jugiro v. Brush) [435] 140 U. S. 291, 35 L. ed. 510, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 770; Re Wood (Wood v. Brush) 140 U. S. 278, 35 L. ed. 505, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 738; Andrews v. Swartz, 156 U. S. 272, 39 L. ed. 422, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 389.

Whether, when the Governor had issued a reprieve which carried the date of execution beyond the time of decision in the supreme court, such action rendered unnecessary the fixing of a new day for execution, was purely a question of state practice, not controlled by the Federal Constitution or laws, and upon which the state court had final jurisdiction. Lambert v. Barrett, 159 U. S. 660, 40 L. ed. 296, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 135.

As to the third assignment, that the state of Vermont had failed to maintain an appellate court in the county of Bennington, as required by its Constitution, and thereby deprived the appellant of an opportunity to be heard in review by a court of competent jurisdiction, the state has the right to determine for itself the courts in which crime may be prosecuted, and the appellate tribunals, if any, to which such causes may be carried for review. McKane v. Durston, 153 U. S. 684, 687, 38 L. ed. 867, 868, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 913. Due process of law, guaranteed by the 14th Amendment, does not require the state to adopt a particular form of procedure, so long as it appears that the accused has had sufficient notice of the accusation and an adequate opportunity to defend himself in the prosecution. Louisville & N. R. Co. v. Schmidt, 177 U. S. 230, 44 L. ed. 747, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 620; Wilson v. North Carolina, 169 U. S. 586, 42 L. ed. 865, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 435.

The appellant had the right, by the laws of the state, to have a jury trial before a competent court. Upon exceptions, duly and seasonably taken for errors of law alleged to have occurred upon the trial, the appellant had a right to review in the supreme court (Vt. Stat. § 1961); whether this court should be held in each county, or at the state capital for all the counties, is entirely a question of state procedure, presenting no Federal question for review here.

The fourth assignment of error calls for the consideration of § 766, Rev. Stat. of the United States, as amended. 27 Stat. at L. 751, chap. 226, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 597. This section provides in substance that any proceeding against a person imprisoned [436] or confined or restrained *of his liberty, in any state court, or by authority of any state, pending the proceedings or appeal in habeas corpus cases in the Federal courts, and until final judgment therein, and after final judgment of discharge, shall be null and void. The contention for the appellant in this behalf is that the order further staying execution of the sentence by the Governor of Vermont, made on June 22, 1905, granting a reprieve until December 8 of the same year, was made pending the habeas corpus proceedings in the Federal courts, and is therefore void. The order of reprieve was made on June 22, the day upon which the writ was dismissed and appeal allowed to this court, just after the petitioner was remanded to the custody of the state authorities, and very shortly before the appeal here was allowed. The power of the Governor of Vermont to grant reprieves in cases of murder is ample. Vt. Const. Amend. art. 8, chap. 2, § 11. And such power is neither granted nor withheld by the Federal Constitution. Storti v. Massachusetts, 183 U. S. 138, 46 L. ed. 120, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 72.

It is perfectly apparent that it was exercised in the present instance for the very purpose of permitting the prisoner to appeal to this court, and not to render ineffectual or in anywise interfere with the jurisdiction and orders of the Federal courts. Statutes should be given a reasonable construction with a view to make effectual the legislative intent in their enactment. The object of this statute is apparent. It requires the state courts and authorities to make no order, and entertain no proceeding, which shall interfere with the full examination and final judgment in a habeas corpus proceeding in the Federal courts (Re Shibuya Jugiro [Shibuya Jugiro v. Brush] 140 U. S. 291, 35 L. ed. 510, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 770), and in no wise to interfere with the judgment if it shall result in a restoration of the petitioner's freedom when wrongfully imprisoned or restrained. The proceedings annulled are "against the person so imprisoned," etc. The statute aims to entirely prevent action which shall interfere with the perfect freedom of the Federal courts to inquire into the case and make such orders and render such judgment as they shall see fit.

[437] *The reprieve granted has had the effect doubtless intended by the chief executive of the state, to allow the cause to be heard upon appeal in this court. To denominate such an order a proceeding against the prisoner would do violence to the terms of the statute and defeat, not carry out, its purpose.

We are unable to find that the appellant has sustained any violation of rights secured by the Federal Constitution by the proceedings of the executive or judicial departments of the state of Vermont. The final order is affirmed, mandate to issue at once.

STATE OF SOUTH CAROLINA, Appt., v. UNITED STATES.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 437–472.)

1. Internal revenue—tax on dealers in intoxicating liquors—application to state agents.— The dispensing and selling agents of a state which, in the exercise of its sovereign power, has taken charge of the business of selling intoxicating liquors, are fairly within the scope of U. S. Rev. Stat. §§ 3232, 3244, 3140 (U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, pp. 2091, 2097, 2040), under which an excise tax is to be collected from all sellers of intoxicating liquors.

2. Constitutional law—Federal license tax on state dispensers of intoxicating liquors.— The United States may, under the Federal Constitution, exact the license taxes prescribed by the internal revenue laws for dealers in intoxicating liquors from the dispensing and selling agents of a state which, in the exercise of its sovereign power, has taken charge of the business of selling such liquors.

[No. 10.]

Argued April 11, 1905. Decided December 4, 1905.

APPEAL from the Court of Claims to review a judgment denying the right of the state of South Carolina to recover the amounts exacted under the Federal internal revenue laws from the state dispensers of intoxicating liquors. Affirmed.

See same case below, 39 Ct. Cl. 257.

Statement by Mr. Justice Brewer:

By several statutes, the state of South Carolina established dispensaries for the wholesale and retail sale of liquor, and prohibited sale by other than the dispensers. The United States demanded the license taxes prescribed by the internal revenue act for dealers in intoxicating liquors, and the dispensers filed the statutory applications for such licenses. The state, sometimes in cash and sometimes by warrant on its treasury, paid the taxes. No protest was made in reference to these payments prior to April 14, 1901. On that day a formal protest by the state dispensary commissioner was filed with the United States collector of internal revenue at Columbia, South Carolina. No appeal or application for the repayment of the sums paid by the various dispensers was made by them or by the state of South Carolina to the Commissioner of Internal Revenue, as authorized by §§ 3226, 3227, and 3228, Rev. Stat., U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, pp. 2088, 2089.

The dispensers had no interest in the [439] sales, and received no *profit therefrom. The entire profits were appropriated by the state, one half being divided equally between the municipality and the county in which the dispensaries were located, and the other half paid into the state treasury. In the year 1901 the profits arising from these sales amounted to $545,248.12. While the laws of South Carolina prohibited the sale of liquor by individuals other than the dispensers, of 373 special license stamps issued in that state by the United States internal revenue collector, only 112 were to dispensers, while 260 were to private individuals. Three separate actions were commenced in the court of claims by the state of South Carolina to recover the amounts paid for these license taxes. These actions were consolidated. Upon a hearing, findings of fact were made and a judgment entered for the United States. 39 Ct. Cl. 257. Whereupon the state appealed to this court.

Mr. Jackson H. Ralston argued the cause, and, with Mr. Frederick L. Siddons, filed a brief for appellant.

Mr. Franklin H. Mackey also filed a brief for appellant:

The word "person," as contained in U. S. Rev. Stat. § 3140, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 2040, does not, and was not intended by Congress to, mean a state.

The Alabama Certificates, 12 Ops. Atty. Gen. 176; Taxation of State Railroads and Manufactures, 12 Ops. Atty. Gen. 277; The Detroit House of Correction, 12 Ops. Atty. Gen. 376; Internal Revenue Laws and Municipal Corporations, 13 Ops. Atty. Gen. 67; Tax on Dividends Accruing to a State, 13 Ops. Atty. Gen. 439; State v. Atkins, 35 Ga. 315; United States v. Baltimore & O. R. Co. 17 Wall. 322, 21 L. ed. 597; Van Brocklin v. Tennessee (Van Brocklin v Anderson) 117 U. S. 151, 29 L. ed. 845, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 670.

The Constitution contains no grant of power to Congress, express or implied, to tax a state or its means and instrumentalities of government; and the exercise by Congress of a power not expressly or impliedly granted by the Constitution to it is impliedly forbidden.

Cooley, Const. Lim. *480; M'Culloch v. Maryland, 4 Wheat. 316, 432, 4 L. ed. 579, 583; Pollock v. Farmers' Loan & T. Co. 157 U. S. 429, 39 L. ed. 759, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 673; The Collector v. Day (Buffington v. Day) 11 Wall. 113, 20 L. ed. 122; Warren v. Paul, 22 Ind. 276; State ex rel. Lakey v. Garton, 32 Ind. 1, 2 Am. Rep. 315; Jones v. Keep, 19 Wis. 390; Sayles v. Davis, 22 Wis. 225; Union Bank v. Hill, 3 Coldw. 325; Fifield v. Close, 15 Mich. 505; Smith v. Short, 40 Ala. 385; Freedman v. Sigel, 10 Blatchf. 327, Fed. Cas. No. 5,080.

By no subterfuge of language, or indirection of phraseology, can the limitation upon the taxing power be evaded. It is the substance, and not the shadow, that is to be regarded.

Brown v. Maryland, 12 Wheat. 419, 6 L. ed. 678; Weston v. Charleston, 2 Pet. 449, 7 L. ed. 481; Dobbins v. Erie County, 16 Pet. 435, 10 L. ed. 1022; Almy v. California, 24 How. 169, 16 L. ed. 644; Northern C. R. Co. v. Jackson, 7 Wall. 262, 19 L. ed. 88; Cook v. Pennsylvania, 97 U. S. 566, 24 L. ed. 1015; Fairbank v. United States, 181 U. S. 283, 45 L. ed. 862, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 648; United States v. Baltimore & O. R. Co. 17 Wall. 322, 21 L. ed. 597.

The power to tax includes the power to destroy; therefore the police power, like the judicial power, of a state, may be destroyed by Congress under the guise of taxation if the right to tax it exists at all.

Fifield v. Close, 15 Mich. 505.

Solicitor General Hoyt argued the cause and filed a brief for appellee:

There are many state authorities for the proposition that a state is a corporation, and that the word "person" in a statute may include a state on its corporate and municipal side, as distinguished from its sovereign character.

Martin v. State, 24 Tex. 61; Indiana v. Woram, 6 Hill, 33, 40 Am. Dec. 378; Lancaster County v. Trimble, 34 Neb. 752, 52 N. W. 711; State v. Herold, 9 Kan. 194; Honduras v. Soto, 112 N. Y. 310, 2 L.R.A. 642, 8 Am. St. Rep. 744, 19 N. E. 845. See also Salt Lake City v. Hollister, 118 U. S. 256, 30 L. ed. 176, 30 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1055.

There has been no actual burden on the state or its property. Its customers have paid the tax and this principle is evident when considered in connection with the fact that these taxes were charged in as expenses of the business, and were so passed by the state's accounting officers. The tax may also be viewed as taking the form of an occupation tax and license, but it falls none the less within the indirect class, and is as truly an excise as the charge per gallon on whisky or per hundred on cigars.

Pacific Ins. Co. v. Soule, 7 Wall. 433, 19 L. ed. 95; Veazie Bank v. Fenno, 8 Wall. 533, 19 L. ed. 482; Scholey v. Rew, 23 Wall. 331, 23 L. ed. 99; Nicol v. Ames, 173 U. S. 509, 43 L. ed. 786, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 522; Knowlton v. Moore, 178 U. S. 41, 44 L. ed. 969, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 747; Patton v. Brady, 184 U. S. 608, 46 L. ed. 713, 22 Sup. Ct.

Rep. 493; Spreckels Sugar Ref. Co. v. McClain, 192 U. S. 397, 48 L. ed. 496, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 376.

The Federal excise is levied pursuant to express constitutional grant of power. It is superior to the reserved police power of the states, which cannot control the powers created, or prohibitions imposed, by the Constitution.

This power of taxation is especially broad, absolute, and untrammeled; it is in no wise affected by the fact that states, under their like sovereign power, do or may tax the same object, activities, or rights; it includes liquor excises and license fees.

M'Culloch v. Maryland, 4 Wheat. 316, 4 L. ed. 579; Gibbons v. Ogden, 9 Wheat. 1, 6 L. ed. 23; License Tax Case, 5 Wall. 462, 18 L. ed. 497; Pacific Ins. Co. v. Soule, supra; Austin v. Boston, 7 Wall. 694, 19 L. ed. 224; Veazie Bank v. Fenno, and Knowlton v. Moore, supra; McCray v. United States, 195 U. S. 27, 49 L. ed. 78, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 769.

It is well settled that state laws of police and public welfare become inoperative so far as they interfere with the Federal power over interstate commerce.

Bowman v. Chicago & N. W. R. Co. 125 U. S. 465, 507, 31 L. ed. 700, 714, 1 Inters. Com. Rep. 823, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 689, 1062; Hannibal & St. J. R. Co. v. Husen, 95 U. S. 465, 473, 474, 24 L. ed. 527, 530, 531.

Before the passage of the so-called Wilson act, it was thoroughly established that it was not within the power of a state to forbid the importation of liquors from foreign countries or other states, nor their sale in original packages, nor to subject the sale to discriminatory taxes or regulations.

Walling v. Michigan, 116 U. S. 446, 29 L. ed. 691, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 454; Leisy v. Hardin, 135 U. S. 100, 34 L. ed. 128, 3 Inters. Com. Rep. 36, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 681; Lyng v. Michigan, 135 U. S. 161, 34 L. ed. 150, 3 Inters. Com. Rep. 143, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 725; Re Rahrer (Wilkerson v. Rahrer) 140 U. S. 545, 35 L. ed. 572, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 865; Rhodes v. Iowa, 170 U. S. 412, 42 L. ed. 1088, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 664; Vance v. W. A. Vandercook Co. 170 U. S. 438, 42 L. ed. 1100, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 674; American Exp. Co. v. Iowa, 196 U. S. 133, 49 L. ed. 417, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 182.

Under the Wilson act, however, Congress consented, to a certain degree, that the states should regulate the introduction of liquors into their confines by providing that intoxicating liquors, when transported from one state to another, should lose their character as interstate commerce, and be subject to the operation of state laws, upon completion by delivery and before sale in the original packages; and this act was passed upon in the cases of Re Rahrer (Wilkerson v. Rahrer) and Rhodes v. Iowa, supra, which held that the act was a valid exercise of the power to regulate commerce.

In Vance v. W. A. Vandercook Co. supra, a case coming from South Carolina, the Wilson act was again before the court, and it was held that since the passage of the act, while the right existed to receive intoxicating liquors sent from another state without regard to the state laws to the contrary, there was no right to their sale in the original packages in defiance of state law.

A state may, by contract, restrict the exercise of its powers beyond the right of revocation, where exclusive grants have been made, or exemptions from taxation have been conferred.

Proprietors of Bridges v. Hoboken Land & Improv. Co. 1 Wall. 116, 17 L. ed. 571; The Binghamton Bridge (Chenango Bridge Co. v. Binghamton Bridge Co.) 3 Wall. 51, 18 L. ed. 137; Home of the Friendless v. Rouse, 8 Wall. 430, 19 L. ed. 495; Humphrey v. Pegues, 16 Wall. 244, 248, 249, 21 L. ed. 326, 327; Farrington v. Tennessee, 95 U. S. 679, 689, 24 L. ed. 558, 561; St. Anna's Asylum v. New Orleans, 105 U. S. 362, 368, 26 L. ed. 1128, 1130.

State statutes dealing with undesirable immigrants are unconstitutional whenever they conflict by their necessary operation and effect with the paramount authority of Congress.

Henderson v. New York (Henderson v Wickham) 92 U. S. 259, 271, 23 L. ed. 543 548. See also Chy Lung v. Freeman, 92 U S. 275, 23 L. ed. 550.

The police power is, from its nature, it capable of exact definition or limitation.

Slaughter-House Cases, 16 Wall. 36, 6 21 L. ed. 394, 404; Stone v. Mississippi, 10 U. S. 814, 818, 25 L. ed. 1079, 1080; Eldridge v. Trezevant, 160 U. S. 452, 40 L. ed 490, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 345.

But all definitions of the power must be taken subject to the condition that the state cannot, in its exercise, for any purpose whatever, encroach upon the powers of the general government, or rights granted or secured by the supreme law of the land.

New Orleans Gaslight Co. v. Louisiana Light & H. P. & Mfg. Co. 115 U. S. 650, 29 L. ed. 516, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 252.

In Veazie Bank v. Fenno, 8 Wall. 533, 547, 549, 19 L. ed. 482, 487, 488, a Federal statute enacted under the power to coin money and the power to lay and collect taxes was attacked upon the ground that it was a tax upon a state instrumentality exercised by the state under its police power; but the court held that, since the Constitution granted the power expressly, any appropriate legislation was superior to the state police power, and that the particular legislation was entirely constitutional.

If the state delegates authority to her citizens to sell liquor, and exacts a license tax, the Federal excise must be paid before that authority or privilege may be exercised.

Merchants' Nat. Bank v. United States, 101 U. S. 1, 25 L. ed. 979.

Since the taxing power conferred by the Constitution knows no limits except those expressly stated in that instrument, it must follow, if a tax be within the lawful power, the exertion of that power may not be judicially restrained because of the results to arise from its exercise.

McCray v. United States, 195 U. S. 27, 49 L. ed. 78, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 769.

The word "dealer" is not confined to one who sells his own property only.

United States v. Allen, 38 Fed. 736.

Mr. Justice Brewer delivered the opinion of the court:

The important question in this case is whether persons who are selling liquor are relieved from liability for the internal revenue tax by the fact that they have no interest in the profits of the business, and are simply the agents of a state which, in the exercise of its sovereign power, has taken charge of the business of selling intoxicating liquors. It is true a further question is made whether the act of Congress is broad enough to include such persons. But upon this we have little doubt. Section 3232, Rev. Stat., U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 2091, provides:

"No person shall be engaged in or carry on any trade or business hereinafter mentioned until he has paid a special tax therefor in the manner hereinafter provided."

Section 3244 (U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 2097) contains these words of description:

"Every person who sells or offers for sale foreign or domestic distilled spirits or wines, in less quantities than five wine gallons at the same time, shall be regarded as a retail dealer in liquors."

"Person" is also defined:

[448] *"Sec. 3140 (U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 2040). . . . Where not otherwise distinctly expressed or manifestly incompatible with the intent thereof, the word 'person,' as used in this title, shall be construed to mean and include a partnership, association, company, or corporation, as well as a natural person."

Now, the dispensers were persons who sold liquors. They applied for and received the licenses. True, they were acting simply as agents of the state; but if the fact that the state was the principal creates no exemption from Federal taxation, then the statute reaches them because they were the actual sellers.

We pass, therefore, to the vital question in the case, and it is one of far-reaching significance. We have in this republic a dual system of government,—national and state,—each operating within the same territory and upon the same persons, and yet working without collision, because their functions are different. There are certain matters over which the national government has absolute control, and no action of the state can interfere therewith, and there are others in which the state is supreme, and in respect to them the national government is powerless. To preserve the even balance between these two governments, and hold each in its separate sphere, is the peculiar duty of all courts; pre-eminently of this,—a duty oftentimes of great delicacy and difficulty.

Two propositions in our constitutional jurisprudence are no longer debatable. One is that the national government is one of enumerated powers; and the other, that a power enumerated and delegated by the Constitution to Congress is comprehensive and complete, without other limitations than those found in the Constitution itself.

The Constitution is a written instrument. As such its meaning does not alter. That which it meant when adopted, it means now. Being a grant of powers to a government, its language is general; and, as changes come in social and political life, it embraces in its grasp all new conditions which are within the scope of the powers in terms conferred. In other words, *while the pow- [449] ers granted do not change, they apply from generation to generation to all things to which they are in their nature applicable. This in no manner abridges the fact of its changeless nature and meaning. Those things which are within its grants of power, as those grants were understood when made, are still within them; and those things not within them remain still excluded. As said by Mr. Chief Justice Taney in Scott v. Sandford, 19 How. 393, 426, 15 L. ed. 691, 709:

"It is not only the same in words, but the same in meaning, and delegates the same powers to the government, and reserves and secures the same rights and privileges to the citizen; and as long as it continues to exist in its present form, it speaks not only in the same words, but with the same meaning and intent with which it spoke when it came from the hands of its framers, and was voted on and adopted by the people of the United States. Any other rule of construction would abrogate the judicial character of this court, and make it the mere reflex of the popular opinion or passion of the day."

It must also be remembered that the framers of the Constitution were not mere visionaries, toying with speculations or theories, but practical men, dealing with the facts of political life as they understood them; putting into form the government they were creating, and prescribing, in language clear and intelligible, the powers that government was to take. Mr. Chief Justice Marshall, in Gibbons v. Ogden, 9 Wheat. 1, 188, 6 L. ed. 23, 68, well declared:

"As men whose intentions require no concealment generally employ the words which most directly and aptly express the ideas they intend to convey, the enlightened patriots who framed our Constitution, and the people who adopted it, must be understood to have employed words in their natural sense, and to have intended what they have said."

One other fact must be borne in mind, and that is that in interpreting the Constitution we must have recourse to the common law. As said by Mr. Justice Matthews in Smith v. Alabama, 124 U. S. 465, 478, 31 L. ed. 508, 512, 1 Inters. Com. Rep. 804, 809, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 564, 569:

[450] *"The interpretation of the Constitution of the United States is necessarily influenced by the fact that its provisions are framed in the language of the English common law, and are to be read in the light of its history."

And by Mr. Justice Gray in United States v. Wong Kim Ark, 169 U. S. 649, 654, 42 L. ed. 890, 892, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 456, 459:

"In this, as in other respects, it must be interpreted in the light of the common law, the principles and history of which were familiarly known to the framers of the Constitution. Minor v. Happersett, 21 Wall. 162, 22 L. ed. 627; Ex parte Wilson, 114 U. S. 417, 422, 29 L. ed. 89, 91, 5 Sup. Ct. Rep. 935; Boyd v. United States, 116 U. S. 616, 624, 625, 29 L. ed. 746, 748, 749, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 524; Smith v. Alabama, 124 U. S. 465, 31 L. ed. 508, 1 Inters. Com. Rep. 804, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 564. The language of the Constitution, as has been well said, could not be understood without reference to the common law. 1 Kent, Com. 336; Bradley, J., in Moore v. United States, 91 U. S. 270, 274, 23 L. ed. 346, 347."

To determine the extent of the grants of power, we must, therefore, place ourselves in the position of the men who framed and adopted the Constitution, and inquire what they must have understood to be the meaning and scope of those grants.

By the 1st clause of § 8 of article 1 of the Constitution, Congress is given the "power to lay and collect taxes, duties, imposts, and excises, to pay the debts and provide for the common defense and general welfare of the United States; but all duties, imposts, and excises shall be uniform throughout the United States."

By this clause the grant is limited in two ways: The revenue must be collected for public purposes, and all duties, imposts, and excises must be uniform throughout the United States.

The 4th, 5th, and 6th clauses of § 9 of article 1 are:

"4. No capitation or other direct tax shall be laid, unless in proportion to the census or enumeration hereinbefore directed to be taken.

"5. No tax or duty shall be laid on articles exported from any state.

"6. No preference shall be given by any regulation of commerce *or revenue to the [451] ports of one state over those of another; nor shall vessels bound to, or from, one state, be obliged to enter, clear, or pay duties in another."

Article 5 of the amendments provides that no one shall be deprived of "life, liberty, or property without due process of law."

These are all the constitutional provisions that bear directly upon the subject. It will be seen that the only qualifications of the absolute, untrammeled power to lay and collect excises are that they shall be for public purposes, and that they shall be uniform throughout the United States. All other limitations named in the Constitution relate to taxes, duties, and imposts. If, therefore, we confine our inquiry to the express provisions of the Constitution, there is disclosed no limitation on the power of the general government to collect license taxes.

But it is undoubtedly true that that which is implied is as much a part of the Constitution as that which is expressed. As said by Mr. Justice Miller in Ex Parte Yarbrough, 110 U. S. 651, 658, 28 L. ed. 274, 276, 4 Sup. Ct. Rep. 152, 155:

"The proposition that it has no such power is supported by the old argument, often heard, often repeated, and in this court never assented to, that when a question of the power of Congress arises, the advocate of the power must be able to place his finger on words which expressly grant it. The brief of counsel before us, though directed to the authority of that body to pass criminal laws, uses the same language. Because there is no express power to provide for preventing violence exercised on the voter as a means of controlling his vote, no such law can be enacted. It destroys at one blow, in construing the Constitution of the United States, the doctrine universally applied to all instruments of writing, that what is implied is as much a part of the instrument as what is expressed."

Among those matters which are implied, though not expressed, is that the nation may not, in the exercise of its powers, prevent a state from discharging the ordinary functions of government, just as it follows from [452] the 2d clause of artiele *6 of the Constitution, that no state can interfere with the free and unembarrassed exercise by the national government of all the powers conferred upon it.

"This Constitution, and the laws of the United States which shall be made in pursuance thereof, and all treaties made, or which shall be made, under the authority of the United States, shall be the supreme law of the land; and the judges in every state shall be bound thereby, anything in the Constitution or laws of any state to the contrary notwithstanding."

In other words, the two governments—national and state—are each to exercise their powers so as not to interfere with the free and full exercise by the other of its powers. This proposition, so far as the nation is concerned, was affirmed at an early day in the great case of M'Culloch v. Maryland, 4 Wheat. 316, 4 L. ed. 579, in which it was held that the state had no power to pass a law imposing a tax upon the operations of a national bank. The case is familiar and needs not to be quoted from. No answer has ever been made to the argument of Mr. Chief Justice Marshall, and the propositions there laid down have become fundamental in our constitutional jurisprudence. Osborn v. Bank of United States, 9 Wheat. 738, 6 L. ed. 204; Weston v. Charleston, 2 Pet. 449, 7 L. ed. 481; New York ex rel. Bank of Commerce v. Tax Comrs. 2 Black, 620, 17 L. ed. 451; Bank Tax Case (New York ex rel. Bank of Commonwealth v. Tax & A. Comrs.) 2 Wall. 200, 17 L. ed. 793; The Banks v. New York (People ex rel. Bank of N. Y. Nat. Bkg. Asso. v. Connelly) 7 Wall. 16, 19 L. ed. 57.

The limitations on the powers of the states to tax national banks are founded upon the doctrines laid down in that case. So also the immunity of national property from state taxation. It is true that in most of the enabling acts for the admission of new states there is express provision that the property of the nation shall be free from state taxation; but, as shown by Mr. Justice Gray, delivering the opinion of the court in Van Brocklin v. Tennessee (Van Brocklin v. Anderson) 117 U. S. 151, 29 L. ed. 845, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 670, this provision is merely declaratory and unnecessary to establish the exemption of national property from state taxation. See also Dobbins v. Erie County, 16 Pet. 435, 10 L. ed. 1022, as to taxation by a state of an officer of the United States for his office or its emoluments.

*The converse of this proposition has also [453] been declared by the decisions of this court. In Texas v. White, 7 Wall. 700, 725, 19 L. ed. 227, 237, Mr. Chief Justice Chase, speaking for the court, declared:

"Not only, therefore, can there be no loss of separate and independent autonomy to the states, through their union under the Constitution, but it may be not unreasonably said that the preservation of the states, and the maintenance of their governments, are as much within the design and care of the Constitution as the preservation of the Union and the maintenance of the national government. The Constitution, in all its provisions, looks to an indestructible Union, composed of indestructible states."

In The Collector v. Day (Buffington v. Day) 11 Wall. 113, 20 L. ed. 122, it was held that it was not competent for Congress to impose a tax upon the salary of a judicial officer of a state. In the opinion of the court, delivered by Mr. Justice Nelson, it was said (p. 127, L. ed. p. 126):

"It is admitted that there is no express provision in the Constitution that prohibits the general government from taxing the means and instrumentalities of the states, nor is there any prohibiting the states from taxing the means and instrumentalities of that government. In both cases the exemption rests upon necessary implication, and is upheld by the great law of self-preservation; as any government, whose means employed in conducting its operations, if subject to the control of another and distinct government, can exist only at the mercy of that government. Of what avail are these means if another power may tax them at discretion?"

See also United States v. Baltimore & O. R. Co. 17 Wall. 322, 21 L. ed. 597; Pollock v. Farmers' Loan & T. Co. 157 U. S. 429–584, 39 L. ed. 759–820, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 673.

Upon this proposition counsel for appellant rely. There being no constitutional limit as to the amount of a license tax, and the power to tax being the power to destroy, if Congress can enforce such a tax against a state, it may destroy this effort of the state, in the exercise of its police power, to control the sale of liquor. It cannot be doubted that the regulation of the sale of liquor comes within the scope of the *police power, and equally true that the po- [454] lice power is, in its fullest and broadest sense, reserved to the states; that the mode of exercising that power is left to their discretion, and is not subject to national supervision. But, if Congress may tax the agents of the state charged with the duty of selling intoxicating liquors, it in effect assumes a certain control over this police power, and thus may embarrass and even thwart the attempt of the state to carry on this mode of regulation.

We are not insensible to the force of this argument, and appreciate the difficulties which it presents; but let us see to what it leads. Each state is subject only to the limitations prescribed by the Constitution, and within its own territory is otherwise supreme. Its internal affairs are matters of its own discretion. The Constitution provides that "the United States shall guarantee to every state in this Union a republican form of government." Art. 4, § 4. That expresses the full limit of national control over the internal affairs of a state.

The right of South Carolina to control the sale of liquor by the dispensary system has been sustained. Vance v. W. A. Vandercook Co. 170 U. S. 438, 42 L. ed. 1100, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 674. The profits from the business in the year 1901, as appears from the findings of fact were over half a million of dollars. Mingling the thought of profit with the necessity of regulation may induce the state to take possession, in like manner, of tobacco, oleomargarine, and all other objects of internal revenue tax. If one state finds it thus profitable, other states may follow, and the whole body of internal revenue tax be thus stricken down.

More than this. There is a large and growing movement in the country in favor of the acquisition and management by the public of what are termed "public utilities," including not merely therein the supply of gas and water, but also the entire railroad system. Would the state, by taking into possession these public utilities, lose its republican form of government?

We may go even a step further. There are some insisting that the state shall become the owner of all property and the manager of all business. Of course, this is [455] an extreme view, *but its advocates are earnestly contending that thereby the best interests of all citizens will be subserved. If this change should be made in any state, how much would that state contribute to the revenue of the nation? If this extreme action is not to be counted among the probabilities, consider the result of one much less so. Suppose a state assumes, under its police power, the control of all those matters subject to the internal revenue tax, and also engages in the business of importing all foreign goods. The same argument which would exempt the sale by a state of liquor, tobacco, etc., from a license tax, would exempt the importation of merchandise by a state from import duty. While the state might not prohibit importations, as it can the sale of liquor, by private individuals, yet, paying no import duty, it could undersell all individuals, and so monopolize the importation and sale of foreign goods.

Obviously, if the power of the state is carried to the extent suggested, and with it is relief from all Federal taxation, the national government would be largely crippled in its revenues. Indeed, if all the states should concur in exercising their powers to the full extent, it would be almost impossible for the nation to collect any revenues. In other words, in this indirect way it would be within the competency of the states to practically destroy the efficiency of the national government. If it be said that the states can be trusted not to resort to any such extreme measures, because of the resulting interference with the efficiency of the national government, we may turn to the opinion of Mr. Chief Justice Marshall in M'Culloch v. Maryland, 4 Wheat. 431, 4 L. ed. 607, for a complete answer:

"But is this a case of confidence? Would the people of any one state trust those of another with a power to control the most insignificant operations of their state government? We know they would not. Why, then, should we suppose that the people of any one state should be willing to trust those of another with the power to control the operations of a government to which they have confided their most important and *most valuable interests? In the legislature [456] of the Union alone are all represented. The legislature of the Union alone, therefore, can be trusted by the people with the power of controlling measures which concern all, in the confidence that it will not be abused."

In other words, we are to find in the Constitution itself the full protection to the nation, and not to rest its sufficiency on either the generosity or the neglect of any state.

There is something of a conflict between the full power of the nation in respect to taxation and the exemption of the state from Federal taxation in respect to its property and a discharge of all its functions. Where and how shall the line between them be drawn? We have seen that the full power of collecting license taxes is in terms granted to the national government, with only the limitations of uniformity and the public benefit. The exemption of the state's property and its functions from Federal taxation is implied from the dual character of our Federal system and the necessity of preserving the state in all its efficiency. In order to determine to what extent that implication will go we must turn to the condition of things at the time the Constitution was framed. What, in the light of that condition, did the framers of the convention intend should be exempt? Certain is it that modern notions as to the extent to which the functions of a state may be carried had then no hold. Whatever Utopian theories may have been presented by any writers were regarded as mere creations of fancy, and had no practical recognition. It is true that monopolies in respect to certain commodities were known to have been granted by absolute monarchs, but they were not regarded as consistent with Anglo-Saxon ideas of government. The opposition to the Constitution came not from any apprehension of danger from the extent of power reserved to the states, but, on the other hand, entirely through fear of what might result from the exercise of the powers granted to the central government. While many believed that the liberty of the people depended on [457] the preservation of the rights *of the states, they had no thought that those states would extend their functions beyond their then recognized scope, or so as to imperil the life of the nation. As well said by Chief Justice Nott, delivering the opinion of the court of claims in this case (39 Ct. Cl. 284):

"Moreover, at the time of the adoption of the Constitution, there probably was not one person in the country who seriously contemplated the possibility of government, whether state or national, ever descending from its primitive plane of a body politic to take up the work of the individual or body corporate. The public suspicion associated government with patents of nobility, with an established church, with standing armies, and distrusted all governments. Even in the high intelligence of the convention, there were men who trembled at the power given to the President, who trembled at the power which the Senate might usurp, who feared that the life tenure of the judiciary might imperil the liberties of the people. Certain it is that if the possibility of a government usurping the ordinary business of individuals, driving them out of the market, and maintaining place and power by means of what would have been called, in the heated invective of the time, 'a legion of mercenaries,' had been in the public mind, the Constitution would not have been adopted, or an inhibition of such power would have been placed among Madison's amendments."

Looking, therefore, at the Constitution in the light of the conditions surrounding at the time of its adoption, it is obvious that the framers, in granting full power over license taxes to the national government, meant that that power should be complete, and never thought that the states, by extending their functions, could practically destroy it.

If we look upon the Constitution in the light of the common law, we are led to the same conclusion. All the avenues of trade were open to the individual. The government did not attempt to exclude him from any. Whatever restraints were put upon him were mere police regulations to control his conduct in the *business, and not to [458] exclude him therefrom. The government was no competitor, nor did it assume to carry on any business which ordinarily is carried on by individuals. Indeed, every attempt at monopoly was odious in the eyes of the common law, and it mattered not how that monopoly arose, whether from grant of the sovereign or otherwise. The framers of the Constitution were not anticipating that a state would attempt to monopolize any business heretofore carried on by individuals.

Further, it may be noticed that the tax is not imposed on any property belonging to the state, but is a charge on a business before any profits are realized therefrom. In this it is not unlike the taxes sustained in United States v. Perkins, 163 U. S. 625, 41 L. ed. 287, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1073, and Snyder v. Bettman, 190 U. S. 249, 47 L. ed. 1035, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 803. In the former case a succession tax of the state of New York was sustained, although the property charged therewith was bequeathed by will to the United States, the court holding that the latter acquired no property until after the state charges for transmission had been paid, saying (p. 629, L. ed. p. 288, Sup. Ct. Rep. p. 1075):

"This, therefore, is not a tax upon the property itself, but is merely the price exacted by the state for the privilege accorded in permitting property so situated to be transferred by will or by descent or distribution."

In Snyder v. Bettman, the succession tax required by the laws of Congress was sustained, although the bequest was to the city of Springfield, Ohio. This is almost a converse to the Perkins Case. It was held that while the power to regulate inheritances and testamentary dispositions was one belonging to the state, and therefore subject to such conditions as the state might see fit to impose (as held in the Perkins Case), yet the power to impose a succession tax was vested in Congress, that it could be exercised upon a bequest made to a municipality or a state, and was not to be considered as a tax upon the property bequeathed, the court saying (p. 254, L. ed. p. 1037, Sup. Ct. Rep. p. 805):

"Having determined, then, that Congress has the power to tax successions, that the states have the same power, and that such power extends to bequests to the United States, it would *seem to follow logically that [459]
Congress has the same power to tax the transmission of property by legacy to states, or their municipalities, and that the exercise of that power in neither case conflicts with the proposition that neither the Federal nor the state government can tax the property or agencies of the other; since, as repeatedly held, the taxes imposed are not upon property, but upon the right to succeed to property."

So here, the charge is not upon the property of the state, but upon the means by which that property is acquired, and before it is acquired.

It is also worthy of remark that the cases in which the invalidity of a Federal tax has been affirmed were those in which the tax was attempted to be levied upon property belonging to the state, or one of its municipalities, or was a charge upon the means and instrumentalities employed by the state, in the discharge of its ordinary functions as a government.

In Veazie Bank v. Fenno, 8 Wall. 533, 19 L. ed. 482, in which a national tax of 10 per cent on the amount of notes of any person, state bank, or banking association, used for circulation, was sustained, the court thus stated the limits of the power of national taxation over state agencies (p. 547, L. ed. p. 487):

"It may be admitted that the reserved rights of the states, such as the right to pass laws, to give effect to laws through executive action, to administer justice through the courts, and to employ all necessary agencies for legitimate purposes of state government, are not proper subjects of the taxing power of Congress."

In The Collector v. Day (Buffington v. Day) 11 Wall. 113, 20 L. ed. 122, in the argument in favor of the exemption of the salary of a state judge from national taxation is this language (p. 125, L. ed. p. 126):

"It would seem to follow, as a reasonable, if not a necessary, consequence, that the means and instrumentalities employed for carrying on the operations of their governments, for preserving their existence, and fulfilling the high and responsible duties assigned to them in the Constitution, should be left free and unimpaired,—should not be [460] liable to be crippled, much less *defeated, by the taxing power of another government, which power acknowledges no limits but the will of the legislative body imposing the tax. And, more especially, those means and instrumentalities which are the creation of their sovereign and reserved rights, one of which is the establishment of the judicial department, and the appointment of officers to administer their laws. Without this power and the exercise of it, we risk nothing in saying that no one of the states, under the form of government guaranteed by the Constitution, could long preserve its existence."

In United States v. Baltimore & O. R. Co. 17 Wall. 322, 21 L. ed. 597, an attempt was made to collect a tax on money due from a railroad company to the city of Baltimore. It was held that the city was a portion of the state, in the exercise of a limited portion of the powers of the state, and the court said (p. 327, L. ed. p. 599):

"The right of the states to administer their own affairs through their legislative, executive, and judicial departments, in their own manner, through their own agencies, is conceded by the uniform decisions of this court and by the practice of the Federal government from its organization. This carries with it an exemption of those agencies and instruments from the taxing power of the Federal government."

And again (p. 332, L. ed. p. 601):

"We admit the proposition of the counsel that the revenue must be municipal in its nature to entitle it to the exemption claimed. Thus, if an individual should make the city of Baltimore his agent and trustee to receive funds, and to distribute them in aid of science, literature, or the fine arts, or even for the relief of the destitute and infirm, it is quite possible that such revenues would be subject to taxation. The corporation would therein depart from its municipal character, and assume the position of a private trustee. It would occupy a place which an individual could occupy with equal propriety. It would not, in that action, be an auxiliary or servant of the state, but of the individual creating the trust. There is nothing of a governmental character in such a position."

*In Ambrosini v. United States, 187 U. S.
[461] 1, 47 L. ed. 49, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1, in which the Federal war revenue tax act, providing for stamp taxes on bonds, was held inapplicable to bonds required from licensees under the dram shop act of Illinois, the court declared (p. 8, L. ed. p. 52, Sup. Ct. Rep. p. 3):

"The question is whether the bonds were taken in the exercise of a function strictly belonging to the state and city in their ordinary governmental capacity, and we are of the opinion that they were, and that they were exempted as no more taxable than the licenses."

These decisions, while not controlling the question before us, indicate that the thought has been that the exemption of state agencies and instrumentalities from national taxation is limited to those which are of a strictly governmental character, and does not extend to those which are used by the state in the carrying on of an ordinary private business.

In this connection may be noticed the well-established distinction between the duties of a public character cast upon municipal corporations, and those which relate to what may be considered their private business, and the different responsibility resulting in case of negligence in respect to the discharge of those duties. The supreme court of Massachusetts, speaking by Mr. Justice Gray (afterwards an associate justice of this court), in Oliver v. Worcester, 102 Mass. 489, 499, 500, 3 Am. Rep. 485, observed:

"The distinction is well established between the responsibilities of towns and cities for acts done in their public capacity, in the discharge of duties imposed upon them by the legislature for the public benefit, and for acts done in what may be called their private character, in the management of property or rights voluntarily held by them for their own immediate profit or advantage as a corporation, although inuring, of course, ultimately to the benefit of the public.

"To render municipal corporations liable to private actions for omission or neglect to perform a corporate duty imposed by general law on all towns and cities alike, [462] . . . . the performance *of which they derive no compensation or benefit in their corporate capacity, an express statute is doubtless necessary. . . . But this rule does not exempt towns and cities from the liability to which other corporations are subject, for negligence in managing or dealing with property or rights held by them for their own advantage or emolument."

In Lloyd v. New York, 5 N. Y. 369, 374, 55 Am. Dec. 347, the court said:

"The corporation of the city of New York possesses two kinds of powers, one governmental and public, and, to the extent they are held and exercised, is clothed with sovereignty; the other private, and, to the extent they are held and exercised, is a legal individual. The former are given and used for public purposes, the latter for private purposes. While in the exercise of the former, the corporation is a municipal government; and while in the exercise of the latter, is a corporate, legal individual."

See also Maxmilian v. New York, 62 N. Y. 160, 164, 20 Am. Rep. 468; Brown v. Vinalhaven, 65 Me. 402, 20 Am. Rep. 709; Mead v. New Haven, 40 Conn. 72, 16 Am. Rep. 14; Petersburg v. Applegarth, 28 Gratt. 321, 343, 26 Am. Rep. 357; Eastman v. Meredith, 36 N. H. 285, 72 Am. Dec. 302; Western Sav. Fund Soc. v. Philadelphia, 31 Pa. 175, 72 Am. Dec. 730. In this case it was held that a city supplying gas to the inhabitants acts as a private corporation, and is subject to the same liabilities and disabilities. In the opinion the court declared (p. 183, Am. Dec. p. 735):

"Such contracts are not made by the municipal corporation by virtue of its powers of local sovereignty, but in its capacity of a private corporation. The supply of gaslight is no more a duty of sovereignty than the supply of water. Both these objects may be accomplished through the agency of individuals or private corporations, and in very many instances they are accomplished by those means. If this power is granted to a borough or a city, it is a special private franchise, made as well for the private emolument and advantage of the city as for the *public good. The whole investment is the [463] private property of the city, as much so as the lands and houses belonging to it. Blending the two powers in one grant does not destroy the clear and well-settled distinction, and the process of separation is not rendered impossible by the confusion. In separating them, regard must be had to the object of the legislature in conferring them. If granted for public purposes exclusively, they belong to the corporate body in its public, political, or municipal character. But if the grant was for purposes of private advantage and emolument, though the public may derive a common benefit therefrom, the corporation quoad hoc is to be regarded as a private company. It stands on the same footing as would any individual or body of persons upon whom the like special franchises had been conferred."

See further a subsequent case between the same parties, in the same volume (pp. 185, 189); Bailey v. New York, 3 Hill, 531, 38 Am. Dec. 669; 1 Dill. Mun. Corp. 4th ed. § 66.

Now, if it be well established, as these authorities say, that there is a clear distinction as respects responsibility for negligence between the powers granted to a corporation for governmental purposes and those in aid of private business, a like distinction may be recognized when we are asked to limit the full power of imposing exeises granted to the national government by an implied inability to impede or embarrass a state in the discharge of its functions. It is reasonable to hold that, while the former may do nothing by taxation in any form to prevent the full discharge by the latter of its governmental functions, yet, whenever a state engages in a business which is of a private nature, that business is not withdrawn from the taxing power of the nation.

For these reasons we think that the license taxes charged by the Federal government upon persons selling liquor are not invalidated by the fact that they are the agents of the state, which has itself engaged in that business.

The judgment of the Court of Claims is affirmed.

[464] *Mr. Justice White, with whom concur Mr. Justice Peckham and Mr. Justice McKenna, dissenting:

The delicacy of the question, the suggestion that, apart from constitutional limitations, the ruling made is, from an economic point of view, a just one, and the long and painstaking consideration which the court has given the case, cause me to be reluctant to announce a dissent. This, however, is overborne by the conviction that it is my duty to dissent and state my reasons. And this because the decision now made, as it is by me understood, overrules many cases, departs from a principle which has been recognized from the beginning, and, under the assumed necessity of protecting the taxing power of the government of the United States, establishes a doctrine which, in its potentiality, strips the states of their lawful authority. It does more than this, since the theory upon which the case is decided also endows the states with a like power to devest the government of the United States of its lawful attributes. In other words, by the ruling and the reasoning sustaining it, the ancient landmarks are obliterated, and the distinct powers belonging to both the national and state governments are reciprocally placed the one at the mercy of the other, so as to give to each the potency of destroying the other.

The case is this: South Carolina has adopted a law by which no liquor is allowed to be brought into the state for sale or to be sold therein, except such liquor as may be bought by a board of officers appointed by state authority, which liquor is sold by state agents, appointed for that purpose under regulations prescribed by the statute. The question is whether these agents of the state, for the act of selling liquor belonging to the state, as agents of the state, under the authority of the state, can be subjected to a license for carrying on the liquor business, levied by the internal revenue laws of the United States.

That the state, under its police authority, had the right to absolutely prohibit the sale of liquor, or to subject it to such regulations as it deemed proper, is elementary.

[465] So far-reaching *is that authority that a state may direct the destruction of liquor held contrary to law, without paying the value thereof, and without thereby violating the constitutional safeguards as to the taking of property. Mugler v. Kansas, 123 U. S. 623, 31 L. ed. 205, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 273. True, by the operation of the commerce clause of the Constitution, the absolute authority of the state does not extend to prohibiting the sale in original packages of liquor brought in from other states. Leisy v. Hardin, 135 U. S. 100, 34 L. ed. 128, 3 Inters. Com. Rep. 36, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 681. But that limitation no longer applies, since Congress has, by express legislation, permitted the power of the states to attach to all liquor shipped into one state from another, at once on its arrival, before sale in the original packages, as fully as if it had been manufactured within the state. And the validity of the statute referred to has been upheld by the court in reiterated rulings. Re Rahrer (Wilkerson v. Rahrer) 140 U. S. 562, 35 L. ed. 576, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 865; Rhodes v. Iowa, 170 U. S. 412, 42 L. ed. 1088, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 664; Vance v. W. A. Vandercook Co. 170 U. S. 468, 42 L. ed. 1111, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 645; American Exp. Co. v. Iowa, 196 U. S. 133, 49 L. ed. 417, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 182; Adams Exp. Co. v. Iowa, 196 U. S. 147, 49 L. ed. 424, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 185; Pabst Brewing Co. v. Crenshaw, 198 U. S. 17, 49 L. ed. 925, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 552. Indeed, one of these cases—the W. A. Vandercook Co.'s Case—involved the question whether the act of South Carolina, providing for the purchase and sale of liquor belonging to the state, as above stated, was repugnant to the Constitution of the United States, and the validity of the act in this particular was upheld by the court because of the police power of the state, and because of the provisions of the act of Congress limiting the effect of the interstate commerce clause as to liquor, as already mentioned.

It is not necessary to trace the want of authority of the United States to impose a license exaction on the agents of the state to an express provision of the Constitution, since the court has constantly held that the absence of authority in the government of the United States to tax or burden the agencies or instrumentalities of a state government, and the like want of authority on the part of the states to tax the agencies or instrumentalities of the national government, results from the dual system of government which the Constitution created, *and [466] that the continuance in force of such a prohibition is absolutely essential to the preservation of both governments.

It would be superfluous to review in detail the many cases decided on the subject, but, in the endeavor to bring the settled doctrine clearly to the mind, I refer to the most salient of the cases.

In M'Culloch v. Maryland (1819) 4 Wheat. 316, 4 L. ed. 579, and Osborn v. Bank of United States (1824) 9 Wheat. 738, 6 L. ed. 204, it was held that a state could not impose a tax on the operations of the Bank of the United States or any of its branches. In Weston v. Charleston (1829) 2 Pet. 449, 7 L. ed. 481, New York ex rel. Bank of Commerce v. Tax Comrs. (1862) 2 Black, 620, 17 L. ed. 451, Bank Tax Case (New York ex rel. Bank of Commonwealth v. Tax & A. Comrs.) (1865) 2 Wall. 200, 17 L. ed. 793, and The Banks v. New York (People ex rel. Bank of N. Y. Nat. Bkg. Asso. v. Connelly) (1869) 7 Wall. 16, 19 L. ed. 57,—it was decided that a state was without power to tax stock or bonds issued by the United States for loans made to it, when held by an individual or by a corporation. In Dobbins v. Erie County (1842) 16 Pet. 435, 10 L. ed. 1022, it was decided that a state might not tax the compensation of an officer of the United States. And, in Van Brocklin v. Tennessee (Van Brocklin v. Anderson) (1886) 117 U. S. 151, 29 L. ed. 845, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 670, and cases cited on pages 167 et seq., L. ed. page 850, Sup. Ct. Rep. p. 679, it was held that a state might not impose a tax on any property of the United States, including real estate of which the United States had become the owner as the result of a sale to enforce the payment of direct taxes previously levied by the United States.

Conversely, the adjudications concerning the want of power in the United States to tax the states are of a like scope. In The Collector v. Day (Buffington v. Day) (1870) 11 Wall. 113, 127, 20 L. ed. 122, 126, it was decided that Congress could not impose a tax upon the salary of a judicial officer of a state. In United States v. Baltimore & O. R. Co. (1872) 17 Wall. 322, 21 L. ed. 597, it was held that the United States might not impose a tax upon the property and revenues of a municipal corporation. Two members of the court dissented (p. 334, L. ed. p. 601), on the ground that the private property owned by a municipal corporation, and held merely as private property in a proprietary right, and used merely in a commercial sense for the income, gains, and profits, was "taxable [467] just the same as *property owned by an individual or any other corporation." In Van Brocklin v. Tennessee (Van Brocklin v. Anderson) (1886) 117 U. S. 151, 29 L. ed. 845, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 670, where, as we have seen, it was held that the state of Tennessee could not tax real property within its borders while held by the United States as proprietor, in reviewing the ruling made in United States v. Baltimore & O. R. Co., the court said (p. 178, L. ed. p. 854, Sup. Ct. Rep. p. 685):

"This court, in United States v. Baltimore & O. R. Co. 17 Wall. 322, 21 L. ed. 597, held that a municipal corporation within a state could not be taxed by the United States on the dividends or interest of stock or bonds held by it in a railroad or canal company, because the municipal corporation was a representative of the state, created by the state to exercise a limited portion of its powers of government, and therefore its revenues, like those of the state itself, were not taxable by the United States. The revenues thus adjudged to be exempt from Federal taxation were not themselves appropriated to any specific public use, nor derived from property held by the state or by the municipal corporation for any specific public use, but were part of the general income of that corporation, held for the public use in no other sense than all property and income belonging to it in its municipal character must be so held. The reasons for exempting all the property and income of a state, or of a municipal corporation, which is a political division of the state, from Federal taxation, equally require the exemption of all the property and income of the national government from state taxation."

In Mercantile Nat. Bank v. New York (1887) 121 U. S. 138, 162, 30 L. ed. 895, 904, 7 Sup. Ct. Rep. 826, it was decided that the United States might not tax bonds issued by a state or one of its municipal bodies, under its authority, and held by private corporations. In Pollock v. Farmers' Loan & T. Co.—the income tax case—(1895) 157 U. S. 429, 39 L. ed. 759, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 673, although much difference of opinion was manifested in the court as to some of the questions involved, as to one, that is, the lack of authority in the United States to include in the amount of income subject to taxation by the United States money derived from interest on municipal bonds, *the court was [468] unanimous. The opinion, in reviewing the subject, and citing approvingly The Collector v. Day, United States v. Baltimore & O. R. Co., the Van Brocklin Case and the Mercantile Nat. Bank Case, said (p. 584, L. ed. p. 820, Sup. Ct. Rep. p. 690):

"As the states cannot tax the powers, the operations, or the property of the United States, nor the means which they employ to carry their powers into execution, so it has been held that the United States have no power under the Constitution to tax either the instrumentalities or the property of a state."

And, lastly, in Ambrosini v. United States (1902) 187 U. S. 1, 47 L. ed. 49, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1, it was held that Congress could not impose a stamp tax upon a bond which the state law required to be given as a prerequisite to the right to sell liquor.

Is the ruling now made reconcilable with the cases just referred to? In other words, is it consistent with the theory of the Constitution as interpreted from the beginning? In order to give the reasons which convince me that it is not, let me review the contentions which are relied upon to support the ruling.

1. It is urged that, as the state of South Carolina derives revenue from the sale, by the agents of the state, of the liquor belonging to the state, therefore the United States has also the right to derive a revenue from that source. If, by this contention, it is intended to suggest that the South Carolina law was not passed in the exercise of the police power of that state, and must be treated as a revenue law from the mere fact that some revenue results from the operation of the law, the unsoundness of the proposition is demonstrated by the previous cases. In Vance v. W. A. Vandercook Co. 170 U. S. 438, 42 L. ed. 1100, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 674, that identical proposition was urged, and was decided to be without merit; and the same doctrine was reiterated in the cases of American Exp. Co. v. Iowa, 196 U. S. 133, 49 L. ed. 417, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 182; Adams Exp. Co. v. Iowa, 196 U. S. 147, 49 L. ed. 424, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 185, and Pabst Brewing Co. v. Crenshaw, 198 U. S. 17, 49 L. ed. 925, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 552. If the contention be that wherever, by the exertion of state power upon persons or things, [469] a revenue is produced, *there must be a corresponding right on the part of the government of the United States to reap revenue by burdening the like person or thing, even although in so doing a state agency or instrumentality is taxed, the unsoundness of the proposition and its conflict with the previous cases becomes yet more apparent. One of the foundations upon which the doctrine rests, denying the power of the governments, state or national, to burden the instrumentalities or agencies of each other, is that, if such burdening be permitted, it might result in crippling the revenues of the government upon whose agency or instrumentality the tax was placed. Was this not the ground upon which the earlier cases were placed, and was it not specifically declared to be the foundation of the ruling made in the income tax case, —Pollock v. Farmers' Loan & T. Co. (1894) 157 U. S. 429, 39 L. ed. 759, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 673? The contention that because one government may have derived income from the exertion of its authority, therefore the other government has a right to do likewise, even if the agencies of the other government be thereby taxed, reduces itself to this: That the power to burden arises from the very condition which prevents the power from existing. If pushed to its logical conclusion, the far-reaching result of the proposition that wherever revenue is derived from an act by one government, therefore the other may burden the agent or instrumentality of the other, may be readily illustrated. Take the national government. If, in the exercise of its ample authority to establish national banks, a tax is imposed on such banks and a revenue derived, do the states thereby become entitled, without the consent of Congress, to tax banks? Take the Postoffice Department. If, by the carrying of the mails, revenue is derived by the government of the United States, are the states, from that fact, entitled to tax the instrumentalities employed by the Postoffice Department? Take the ocean transport service of the United States. If, under given circumstances, a charge is made for transportation, and hence a revenue is earned, may the states cripple that service by taxation? It is no answer to the demonstration *which results from these illustra- [470] tions to say that the cases concern purely governmental functions of the United States, and, therefore, the states cannot tax the exercise of such functions. May I ask are these functions on the part of the United States any more governmental than is the power of the government of South Carolina to absolutely control at will the liquor traffic in that state?

2. It is implied that necessity demands the recognition of the right of the government of the United States to tax the state agencies in question because the principle, by which alone such power on the part of the United States can be denied, will inevitably result in giving the states authority to destroy the government of the United States by adopting peculiar methods of dealing with various classes of persons or property. Thus, it is said, the state governments may acquire all farms within their borders, and thus deprive the United States of its power to impose a direct tax on land. That a state may import property from foreign countries, and be exempt from import duty, and undersell those who pay duty, and render the collection of any import tax from others by the United States impossible. But these extreme illustrations amount simply to saying that it is possible for the imagination to foreshadow conditions which, did they arise, would impair the government created by the Constitution, and, because such conjectures may be indulged in, the limitations created by the Constitution for the purpose of preserving both the state and national governments are to be disregarded. In other words, that the government created by the Constitution must now be destroyed, because it is possible to suggest conditions which, if they arise, would, in the future, produce a like result. But the weakness of the illustrations as applied to this case is apparent. They have no relation to this case, since it is not denied that, as to liquor, the state has absolute power, and may prohibit the sale of all liquor, and thus prevent the United States from deriving revenue from that source. Again, there-[471] fore, when the true relation *of the argument to the case in hand is seen, it reduces itself to a complete contradiction, viz., a state may, by prohibition, prevent the United States from reaping revenue from the liquor traffic, but any other state regulation by which such result is accomplished may be prevented by the United States, because thereby the state has done indirectly only that which the state had the lawful power directly to do.

3. It is urged that the liquor in this case was owned by South Carolina, and in selling it the state was merely acting as a proprietor, and therefore the tax on the state agents is lawful. But here again the argument overlooks the absolute power possessed by the state concerning the liquor traffic, and the consequent right of the state, in the exercise of its governmental functions, to adopt such methods and instrumentalities as might be deemed best for the control of the traffic. Besides, the proposition is directly repugnant to the previous decisions of this court. Can anything be plainer than that the contention is directly antagonistic to the ruling made in United States v. Baltimore & O. R. Co. 17 Wall. 322, 21 L. ed. 597, which ruling was expressly approved in the subsequent cases, especially in the income tax case? Was not the United States the proprietor of the land in Tennessee, which it was held, in the Van Brocklin Case, the state of Tennessee had no power to tax? Conceding, for the sake of argument only, that the doctrine announced in the previous cases should be qualified, certainly such qualification would be wholly unreasonable if it did not propose to take in view the absolute and paramount nature of the governmental function under which the property or agency which it was proposed to tax was held or exercised. Reference is made to cases in state courts concerning the liability of municipal corporations to suits for negligence. I cannot see their appositeness to the issue here involved. Besides, the doctrine expounded in the line of cases referred to, if doctrine can be deduced from the confusion and contradiction which exists among the cases, has never received the approval of this court. On the contrary, the rulings of this court point the other way.
[472] Barnes v. District of Columbia, 91 U. S. 540, 23 L. ed. 440; Workman v. New York, 179 U. S. 552, 574, 45 L. ed. 314, 325, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 212. But grant that the rule applied by some state courts, in order to determine when a municipal corporation may be sued for a negligent act, has relation to this case,—my mind sees no possibility of holding that the state of South Carolina, when, by the law in question, it provided for the purchase and sale of liquor by its own agents, was not exercising purely governmental function, in view of the absolute power of that state over that subject, and, moreover, in view of the act of Congress making such power complete and efficacious, even as to original packages of liquor before sale.

4. It is not, of course, by me denied that however varying may be the conditions to which the Constitution is applied, that instrument means to-day what it did at the time of its adoption; but I cannot give my assent to the doctrine that a limitation, which it has been decided over and over again arises from the very nature of the Constitution, is not to be enforced in a given condition to which the Constitution applies, because it does not appear that the framers could have contemplated that such conditions might be evolved in the course of the development of our constitutional institutions. To me it seems that no proposition could be more absolutely destructive of constitutional government.

Being of opinion that the state of South Carolina had complete and absolute power over the liquor traffic, and could exert, in dealing with that subject, such methods and instrumentalities as were deemed best, and that the United States was without authority to tax the agencies which the state called into being for the purpose of dealing with the liquor traffic, I, therefore, dissent, and am authorized to say that Mr. Justice Peckham and Mr. Justice McKenna concur.

---

*ARTHUR M. MANIGAULT, Appt., [473
v.
ALFRED A. SPRINGS et al.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 473–487.)

1. Commerce—state obstruction of navigable waters.—In the absence of legislation by Congress, a state may improve its lands and promote the general health by authorizing a dam to be built across its interior streams, though they were previously navigable to the sea by vessels engaged in the coastwise trade.

2. Waters—power of legislature to authorize dam across navigable stream.—The provision of a state Constitution that

---

NOTE.—On the right to obstruct or destroy rights of navigation—see note to Hutton v. Webb, 59 L.R.A. 33.

As to liability for damming back water of stream—see note to Avery v. Vermont Electric Co. 59 L.R.A. 817.

On state control of navigable waters—see all navigable waters shall forever remain public highways does not prevent the legislature, in the exercise of its police power to subserve the drainage of lowlands, from authorizing the construction of a dam across a navigable stream.

8. Contracts—impairment of obligation by exercise of police power.—The obligations of an agreement to remove an existing dam from a navigable stream, and to allow the stream to remain open and unobstructed, are not unconstitutionally impaired by a state statute subsequently enacted in the exercise of the police power to subserve the drainage of lowlands, authorizing the construction of a dam across the stream by the very persons making such agreement.

4. Constitutional law—due process of law—flooding lands as taking private property without compensation.—The flooding of lands consequent upon the private erection of a dam under the authority of legislation enacted in the exercise of the police power to subserve the drainage of lowlands does not amount to a taking which requires compensation to be made to the owner in order to afford the due process of law guaranteed by U. S. Const., 14th Amend., when such flooding can be prevented by raising the height of the dikes around the lands.

5. Constitutional law—due process of law—taking private property without compensation—interference with navigation.—The interruption of access to lands, and the impairment of the rights of navigation, consequent upon the private construction of a dam across a navigable stream, under the authority of legislation enacted in the exercise of the police power to subserve the drainage of lowlands, is not a "taking" which requires compensation to be made to the owner of the lands in order to afford the due process of law guaranteed by the 14th Amendment to the Federal Constitution.

6. Injunction — pending payment of damages—financial irresponsibility.—Equity will not—at least, in the absence of any allegation of financial irresponsibility—enjoin until the damages are paid the private erection of a dam across a navigable stream, at the instance of one who claims that his lands will be flooded as a result of its construction unless prevented by raising the dikes around his lands, and that his access thereto will be interrupted and his rights of navigation impaired, where the legislation authorizing the construction of the dam to subserve the drainage of lowlands makes provision for compensation to any landowner claiming that his land is damaged by reason of its erection.

7. Statutes—local or special legislation.—A navigable stream is not a highway in the sense that that word is used in the provision of S. C. Const. art. 3, § 34, forbidding the enactment of local or special laws "to lay out, open, alter, or work roads or highways."

8. Statutes—formalities essential to the introduction of private bills—validity of statute as affected by noncompliance.—Noncompliance with the formalities prescribed by the general laws of the state for the introduction of private bills in the legislature does not nullify an act passed in disregard of such noncompliance.

[No. 46.]

Submitted November 2, 1905. Decided December 4, 1905.

APPEAL from the Circuit Court of the United States for the District of South Carolina to review a decree sustaining a demurrer to, and dismissing, a bill to enjoin the damming or otherwise obstructing of a stream in that state. Affirmed.

Statement by Mr. Justice Brown:

This was a bill in equity filed March 4, 1903, by Manigault, *to enjoin the damming [474] or otherwise obstructing Kinloch creek, in the county of Georgetown, South Carolina. A demurrer to the bill was sustained, and the bill subsequently dismissed. See 123 Fed. 707.

It seems that, in 1898, the plaintiff and the two defendants, Springs and Lachicotte, together with one Ford, were adjoining riparian owners on the Santee river, at the mouth of Kinloch creek. The creek furnished access as a highway to all the proprietors on its banks. At that time the defendants constructed a dam across the creek for their own purposes. Objection was made to this by plaintiff and by Ford as an interference with their rights of passage and irrigation. Plaintiff also complained that the effect was to compel him to raise the dikes around his lands. As a result of long negotiations, a compromise was effected and a contract entered into in August, 1898, between defendants under the name of S. M. Ward & Company, of the first part, and plaintiff and Ford, of the second part, whereby it was agreed that the obstructions should continue until December 31 of that year, when they should be removed, so as to give the parties complaining a clear passage through the creek.

notes to Gibson v. United States, 41 L. ed. U. S. 997; Swanson v. Mississippi & R. River Boom Co. 7 L.R.A. 673; Eisenbach v. Hatfield, 12 L.R.A. 632; and Mills v. United States, 12 L.R.A. 673.

On consequential damages in eminent domain proceedings—see notes to D. M. Osborne & Co. v. Missouri P. R. Co. 37 L. ed. U. S. 156; Sweet v. Rechel, 40 L. ed. U. S. 188; A. Backus Jr. & Sons v. Fort Street Union Depot Co 42 L. ed. U. S. 853; and High Bridge Lumber Co. v. United States, 16 C. C. A. 468.

As to what laws are void as impairing obligation of contracts—see notes to Franklin County Grammar School v. Bailey, 10 L.R.A. 405; Fletcher v. Peck, 3 L. ed. U. S. 162; McCanna & F. Co. v. Citizens' Trust & Surety Co. 24 C. C. A. 20; and Montana Ore-Purchasing Co. v. Boston & M. Consol. Copper & S. Min. Co. 35 C. C. A. 12.

This removal was effected and matters allowed to remain as they were until 1903, when the general assembly of the state passed an act reciting the necessity of draining the lowlands on the Santee river, whereby their taxable value would be greatly enhanced. Authority was given to the defendants by name to erect and maintain a dam across Kinloch creek, with a proviso that they should be liable for all such damages as might be established in any court of competent jurisdiction by any landowner claiming that his land had been damaged by reason of the erection of the dam.

Mr. Henry A. M. Smith submitted the cause for appellant:

The statute is not in the exercise of the police power of the state and for the benefit of the state as a whole, not being a statute passed for the protection of the public health, the public safety, or the public morals.

Jacobson v. Massachusetts, 197 U. S. 25, 49 L. ed. 649, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 358; Re Jacobs, 98 N. Y. 98, 50 Am. Rep. 636; Lawton v. Steele, 152 U. S. 133, 38 L. ed. 385, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 499; Mugler v. Kansas, 123 U. S. 661, 31 L. ed. 210, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 273.

The common law with regard to riparian proprietors is the law of South Carolina.

McCullough v. Wall, 4 Rich. L. 68, 53 Am. Dec. 715; Shands v. Triplet, 5 Rich. Eq. 78.

As a riparian proprietor the complainant is entitled, not only to the free use of the stream as a highway, but he is certainly entitled to the rights of a riparian proprietor whose land is bounded by a navigable stream; and among those rights are access to the navigable part of the river from the front of his lot, the right to make a landing wharf or pier for his own use, or for the use of the public, subject to such general rules and regulations as the legislature may see proper to impose for the protection of the rights of the public, whatever those may be.

Yates v. Milwaukee, 10 Wall. 497, 19 L. d. 984; Weber v. State Harbor, 18 Wall. 57, 21 L. ed. 798; Potomac S. B. Co. v. Upper Potomac S. B. Co. 109 U. S. 682, 27 L. ed. 1074, 3 Sup. Ct. Rep. 445, 4 Sup. Ct. Rep. 15; Illinois C. R. Co. v. Illinois, 146 U. S. 445, 36 L. ed. 1040, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 110.

This riparian right is property, and is valuable, and, though it must be enjoyed in due subjection to the rights of the public, it cannot be arbitrarily or capriciously destroyed or impaired. It is a right of which, when once vested, the owner can only be deprived in accordance with established law, and, if necessary that it be taken for the public good, upon due compensation.

Yates v. Milwaukee, Weber v. State Harbor, Potomac S. B. Co. v. Upper Potomac S. B. Co. and Illinois C. R. Co. v. Illinois, supra.

The rule is well settled that the taking, by statute, of the private property of a person or corporation, is not due process of law.

Yates v. Milwaukee, 10 Wall. 504, 19 L. ed. 986; Pumpelly v. Green Bay & M. Canal Co. 13 Wall. 166, 20 L. ed. 557; Missouri P. R. Co. v. Nebraska, 164 U. S. 417, 41 L. ed. 495, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 130; Holden v. Hardy, 169 U. S. 383, 42 L. ed. 788, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 383; Muhlker v. New York & H. R. Co. 197 U. S. 544, 49 L. ed. 872, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 523.

Mr. Theodore G. Barker submitted the cause for appellees:

In all cases where private property is taken by the state for public use the action is on the property, and the power, if it exists in the state, must be above the contract. It does not act on the contract, but takes from under it vested rights. And this power, when exercised by a state, does not, in the sense of the Federal Constitution, impair the obligation of the contract.

Charles River Bridge v. Warren Bridge, 11 Pet. 420, 9 L. ed. 773.

This was said of a grant or contract between the state herself and her grantee, creating vested rights in the latter. If even such a contract was not impaired by the subsequent exercise of the rightful authority of government devesting such vested rights, a fortiori would a contract between private persons not be impaired by a law passed in the exercise by the state of her legitimate authority. Such a law must, still more than in a case of the state's own grant, be above the contract, and must be held not to act on the contract at all.

The general provisions of a state constitution are not, and cannot become, as against the state, annexed to the land and properties of a private individual so as to become part of his property; the right to such provisions is not given to him by the Constitution and laws at the time of the acquisition of his land, and such supposed right and privilege are not, by force of such supposed annexation to his property, protected to the owner by a contract obligation binding the state and restricting her in the exercise of her sovereignty.

Jackson ex dem. Hart v. Lamphire, 3 Pet. 280, 7 L. ed. 679.

The authority of the state government, for the purposes of public improvements, over navigable streams wholly within the limits of the state, is to be respected as essential to the welfare of the community and to the rights of the states; and the surrender by the state of such authority, or of any power of the like character, can never be implied or presumed, but must be so clearly expressed as to admit of no doubt.

Charles River Bridge v. Warren Bridge, supra; Bird v. Smith, 8 Watts, 434, 34 Am. Dec. 484; Atkinson v. Philadelphia & T. R. Co. Fed. Cas. No. 615.

Questions whether the statute passed by the state of South Carolina, approved March 3, 1903, for stopping Kinloch creek by a dam, violated the Constitution and laws of that state, are not matters of which the courts of the United States will entertain jurisdiction.

Willson v. Black Bird Creek Marsh Co. 2 Pet. 245, 7 L. ed. 412; McCain v. Des Moines, 174 U. S. 168, 43 L. ed. 936, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 644; Atkinson v. Philadelphia & T. R. Co., Charles River Bridge v. Warren Bridge, and Jackson ex dem. Hart v. Lamphire, supra; Medberry v. Ohio, 24 How. 413, 16 L. ed. 739; Porter v. Foley, 24 How. 415, 16 L. ed. 740; Withers v. Buckley, 20 How. 84, 15 L. ed. 816; Pennsylvania v. Wheeling & B. Bridge Co. 18 How. 421, 15 L. ed. 435; Lake Shore & M. S. R. Co. v. Ohio, 165 U. S. 365, 41 L. ed. 747, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 357; Sinnot v. Davenport, 22 How. 244, 16 L. ed. 248; Northern Transp. Co. v. Chicago, 99 U. S. 635, 25 L. ed. 336; Pound v. Turck, 95 U. S. 459, 24 L. ed. 525; Cardwell v. American River Bridge Co. 113 U. S. 205, 28 L. ed. 959, 5 Sup. Ct. Rep. 423; Miller v. New York, 109 U. S. 385, 27 L. ed. 971, 3 Sup. Ct. Rep. 228; Escanaba & L. M. Transp. Co. v. Chicago, 107 U. S. 678, 27 L. ed. 442, 2 Sup. Ct. Rep. 185; Leovy v. United States, 177 U. S. 621, 44 L. ed. 914, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 797.

Mr. Justice Brown delivered the opinion of the court:

The gravamen of the bill is the alleged impairment by the statute of 1903 of the contract entered into in 1898, by which defendants agreed to remove the dam then existing, and to allow such creek to remain open and unobstructed.

It was also charged that the Constitution of South Carolina, declared that all navigable waters should forever remain public highways, was a privilege annexed to and constituting a part of the value of the lands, and that the damming of the creek, except for the purpose of the public health, welfare, and safety, and without due compensation therefor, was a destruction of the property of the plaintiff, and a deprivation thereof without due process of law.

The specific injury complained of is that the plaintiff is the owner of a rice plantation on the North Santee river, bordering on Minim creek, a tributary of the Santee, and lying in part just opposite the mouth or entrance of Kinloch creek; that, relying on the agreement of the defendants, he had also purchased a millsite on the Santee, which could be used for a rice mill or a sawmill, the chief element of value of which was the water connection by means of a canal with Bluff Back creek, accessible only through Kinloch creek, and the consequent necessity of keeping Kinloch creek open and unobstructed; that Kinloch creek is a water highway, navigable by vessels into the Santee river and thence into the ocean; that the erection and retention of a dam across Kinloch creek would not only interrupt his use of Kinloch creek and Bluff Back creek by preventing access to the public landing on the state road from his plantation on Kinloch creek, but would obstruct the inflow of the tide of the Santee river through Minim creek, causing the water from the river to flow back upon the banks to the plantation opposite the mouth of Kinloch *creek, and would thus[478] compel him to raise and strengthen his banks.

1. The first question considered by the court below was whether Kinloch creek was a navigable water of the United States, as defined in the case of The Montello (United States v. The Montello) 11 Wall. 411, 20 L. ed. 191, 20 Wall. 430, 22 L. ed. 391, or navigable, as navigable streams are defined by the Constitution and the laws of South Carolina. The court was of opinion, based apparently upon affidavits not sent up with the record, that the creek was not a navigable stream under these definitions.

But the bill alleges that "Kinloch creek is a navigable stream or water highway," and the cause was determined upon demurrer to the bill, which admits the allegation of the bill that the creek was navigable. As an original proposition we have repeatedly held that, in the absence of legislation by Congress, a state has power to improve its lands and promote the general health by authorizing a dam to be built across its interior streams, though they were previously navigable to the sea by vessels engaged in the coastwise trade. This was decided in Willson v. Black Bird Creek Marsh Co. 2 Pet. 245, 7 L. ed. 412, in a brief but cogent opinion by Mr. Chief Justice Marshall. An act of the state of Delaware gave the defendant the right to build a dam across the Black Bird Marsh creek, the constitutionality of which act was attacked as an abridgment of the rights of those who had been accustomed to use it for the purposes of navigation. "But this abridgment," said the court (p. 251, L. ed.

p. 414), "unless it comes in conflict with the Constitution or a law of the United States, is an affair between the government of Delaware and its citizens, of which this court can take no cognizance." The act was sustained. See also Pound v. Turck, 95 U. S. 459, 24 L. ed. 525; Gilman v. Philadelphia, 3 Wall. 732, 18 L. ed. 101; Huse v. Glover, 119 U. S. 543, 30 L. ed. 487, 7 Sup. Ct. Rep. 313.

We do not think the provision of the Constitution of South Carolina interferes with these common-law powers of the state over its navigable waters. In Escanaba & L. M. Transp. Co. v. Chicago, 107 U. S. 678, 688, 27 L. ed. 442, 446, 2 Sup. Ct. Rep. 185, it was held that the right of bridging [479] navigable *streams extended to the state of Illinois, notwithstanding that the ordinance of 1787, for the government of the Northwest territory, contained a clause declaring that "the navigable waters leading into the Mississippi and St. Lawrence, and the carrying places between them, shall be common highways and forever free." The power to span these rivers by bridges was put partly upon the theory that the limitations upon the power of the state whilst in a territorial condition ceased to have any operative force except as voluntarily adopted by her after she became a state of the Union, and partly upon the theory, as said Mr. Justice Field, page 689, L. ed. p. 447, Sup. Ct. Rep. p. 194, that "all highways, whether by land or water, are subject to such crossings as the public necessities and convenience may require, and their character as such is not changed if the crossings are allowed under reasonable conditions, and not so as to needlessly obstruct the use of the highways."

So also in Cardwell v. American River Bridge Co. 113 U. S. 205, 28 L. ed. 959, 5 Sup. Ct. Rep. 423, a provision in the act admitting California [9 Stat. at L. 453, chap. 50, § 3], that "all the navigable waters within the said state shall be common highways and forever free," was held not to deprive the state of the power possessed by it to authorize the erection of bridges over navigable waters. Said the court, page 211, L. ed. p. 961, Sup. Ct. Rep. p. 426, "the clause, therefore, in the act admitting California, quoted above, upon which the complainant relies, must be considered, according to these decisions, as in no way impairing the power which the state could exercise over the subject if the clause had no existence." To the same effect, Willamette Iron Bridge Co. v. Hatch, 125 U. S. 1, 31 L. ed. 629, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 811; Hamilton v. Vicksburg, S. & P. R. Co. 119 U. S. 280, 284, 30 L. ed. 393, 395, 7 Sup. Ct. Rep. 206.

In Lake Shore & M. S. R. Co. v. Ohio, 165 U. S. 365, 41 L. ed. 747, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 357, it was held that the act of September 19, 1890 [26 Stat. at L. 426, chap. 907], conferring upon the Secretary of War the authority to direct the alteration of such bridges so as to render navigation easy and unobstructed, did not deprive the states of authority to bridge such streams.

While all of these cases turned upon the power of the state to authorize the erection of bridges, the same principle applies where the legislature deems it necessary to the public welfare *to make other improvements [480] for the reclamation of swampy and overflowed lands, though certain individual proprietors may thereby be subjected to expense. The question whether Kinloch creek could be obstructed without the permission of the Secretary of War does not arise in this case, and is specially disclaimed by the plaintiff. See Lake Shore & M. S. R. Co. v. Ohio, 165 U. S. 365, 41 L. ed. 747, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 357; Leovy v. United States, 177 U. S. 621, 633, 44 L. ed. 914, 919, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 797; Cummings v. Chicago, 188 U. S. 410, 47 L. ed. 525, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 472; Montgomery v. Portland, 190 U. S. 89, 47 L. ed. 965, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 735.

The main argument was addressed to the question whether the contract of August, 1898, providing for the removal of the obstruction on December 31 and the free ingress and egress through the creek thereafter, was impaired by the act of the general assembly of 1903, permitting the defendants by name to construct and maintain the dam in question.

It is the settled law of this court that the interdiction of statutes impairing the obligation of contracts does not prevent the state from exercising such powers as are vested in it for the promotion of the common weal, or are necessary for the general good of the public, though contracts previously entered into between individuals may thereby be affected. This power, which, in its various ramifications, is known as the police power, is an exercise of the sovereign right of the government to protect the lives, health, morals, comfort, and general welfare of the people, and is paramount to any rights under contracts between individuals. Familiar instances of this are where parties enter into contracts, perfectly lawful at the time, to sell liquor, operate a brewery or distillery, or carry on a lottery, all of which are subject to impairment by a change of policy on the part of the state, prohibiting the establishment or continuance of such traffic; in other words, that parties, by entering into contracts, may not estop the legislature from enacting laws intended for the public good.

While this power is subject to limitations in certain cases, there is wide discretion on the part of the legislature in determining what is and what is not necessary,— [481] a discretion which *courts ordinarily will not interfere with. The leading case upon this point is that of Charles River Bridge v. Warren Bridge, 11 Pet. 420, 9 L. ed. 773, in which a franchise to maintain a ferry between Cambridge and Boston, under which a bridge was subsequently erected, was held to be subject to the power of the legislature to establish a parallel bridge between the same points. In Stone v. Mississippi, 101 U. S. 814, 25 L. ed. 1079, a charter to a lottery company for twenty-five years was held to be subject to the power of the state to abolish lotteries altogether. Similar cases announcing the same principle are Boyd v. Alabama, 94 U. S. 645, 24 L. ed. 302; Boston Beer Co. v. Massachusetts, 97 U. S. 25, 24 L. ed. 989; Butchers' Union S. H. & L. S. L. Co. v. Crescent City, L. S. L. & S. H. Co. 111 U. S. 746, 28 L. ed. 585, 4 Sup. Ct. Rep. 652; New Orleans Gaslight Co. v. Louisiana Light & H. P. & Mfg. Co. 115 U. S. 650, 672, 29 L. ed. 516, 524, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 252; Mugler v. Kansas, 123 U. S. 623, 665, 31 L. ed. 205, 211, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 273; Chicago, B. & Q. R. Co. v. Chicago, 166 U. S. 226, 41 L. ed. 979, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 581.

It only remains to consider, in connection with this branch of the case, whether the act of the general assembly of 1903 was a proper exercise of the police power of the state. Of this we have no doubt. Although it was not an exercise of that power in its ordinarily accepted sense of protecting the health, lives, and morals of the community, it is defensible in its broader meaning of providing for the general welfare of the people by the reclamation of swampy, overflowed, and infertile lands, and the erection of dams, levees, and dikes for that purpose. We have often held that private interests are subservient to that right, except where property is taken for which compensation must be paid, and must give way to any general scheme for the reclamation or improvement of such lands.

Indeed, this seems to have been within the contemplation of Congress in its act of September 28, 1850 (9 Stat. at L. 519, chap. 84, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 1586), to enable the states to reclaim the swamp lands within their limits, the 1st section of which enacts that "to enable the state of Arkansas to construct the necessary levees and drains to reclaim the swamp and overflowed lands therein, the whole of those swamp and overflowed lands made unfit thereby for cultivation . . . shall be, [482] and the same are hereby, granted *to said state." Section 4 extends this provision to the other states. Although the act has no direct bearing on this case, it recognizes an intent on the part of Congress to allow the states to regulate the disposal of overflowed lands as the legislature shall deem best for the public interests. That the act of the general assembly in question was passed upon this theory is indicated by its recitals, that "by reason of the drainage and protection of said lands from overflow, their taxable value will be greaty enhanced, and, without the dam provided for in this bill, a large part of the land bordering on said creek will eventually become abandoned and valueless, as some portions of it now are," and that this "is the only feasible and practicable scheme for the drainage of said lands." This was the reason given for the passage of the act of the general assembly of Delaware in the Black Bird Creek Marsh Co.'s Case already cited. "Chief Justice Marshall observed (p. 251, L. ed. p. 414): "The value of the property on its banks must be enhanced by excluding the water from the marsh, and the health of the inhabitants probably improved. Measures calculated to produce these objects, provided they do not come into collision with the powers of the general government, are undoubtedly within those which are reserved to the states." Several subsequent decisions have confirmed the power of the state to deal, in the absence of congressional legislation, with their rivers, for the purposes of their internal improvement, such as Withers v. Buckley, 20 How. 84, 15 L. ed. 816, wherein the right of Mississippi to change the channels or courses of rivers within the state for the purpose of improvement was sustained, and Atkinson v. Philadelphia & T. R. Co. (Fed. Cas. No. 615), a decision by Mr. Justice Baldwin of this court.

The whole subject was recently discussed in the case of Leovy v. United States, 177 U. S. 621, 44 L. ed. 914, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 797, wherein was vindicated the right of the state of Louisiana to authorize the construction and maintenance of levees, drains, and other structures necessary and suitable to reclaim swamp and overflowed lands, although there was evidence that the stream there concerned *(Red Pass) was useful [483] for some minor purposes of interstate commerce. There was testimony that luggers or yawls chiefly used by fishermen to carry oysters to and from their beds sometimes went through this pass, but it was not shown that passengers ever went through it, or that freight destined for any other state was ever carried through it.

In delivering an exhaustive opinion in this case, Mr. Justice Shiras observed (p. 636, L. ed. p. 920, Sup. Ct. Rep. p. 803): "We think that the trial court might well take judicial notice that the public health is deeply concerned in the reclamation of swamp and overflowed lands. If there is any fact which may be supposed to be known by everybody, and, therefore, by courts, it is that swamps and stagnant waters are the cause of malarial and malignant fevers, and that the police power is never more legitimately exercised than in removing such nuisances."

While, as already observed, there is a general allegation in the bill that Kinloch creek was a navigable stream, and was capable of navigation by vessels in the Santee river and thence into the ocean, there is no allegation that it was ever used for that purpose, and the opinion of the court was that it certainly was not a navigable water of the United States, or a public highway under the laws of South Carolina. But, however this may be, we are of opinion that the state had full power, in the absence of legislation by Congress, to authorize the construction of this dam for the avowed purposes of this act.

2. The second assignment of error, that the plaintiff was deprived of his property without compensation, and hence without due process of law, is also unsound.

The only allegation of the bill in that connection is that the construction of the dam was not only a destruction of plaintiff's right of navigation and of his access to his lands through Kinloch creek, but has caused the water to fall back to some extent on the plantation on Minim creek, just opposite the mouth of Kinloch, so as to compel the plaintiff to raise his dikes. We do not think the overflow to the minor extent indicated constitutes a taking of prop-[484] erty within the meaning of *the law, when the damage can be prevented by raising the banks, or that, if the damage stated did in fact result, that it would justify the interposition of a court of equity.

The question whether the overflow of lands constitutes "a taking" within the constitutional provision has been discussed in several cases in this court. Pumpelly v. Green Bay & M. Canal Co. 13 Wall. 166, 20 L. ed. 557; Northern Transp. Co. v. Chicago, 99 U. S. 635, 25 L. ed. 336; Gibson v. United States, 106 U. S. 269, 41 L. ed. 996, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 578; Scranton v. Wheeler, 179 U. S. 141, 45 L. ed. 126, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 48; Atwater v. Canandaigua, 124 N. Y. 602, 27 N. E. 385.

A recent case is that of United States v. Lynah, 188 U. S. 445, 47 L. ed. 539, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 349, wherein it was held that where the government had placed dams and other obstructions in the Savannah river in such manner as to hinder its natural flow, and to raise the water so as to overflow plaintiff's lands and to cause a total destruction of their value, the proceeding must be regarded as an actual appropriation of the land, and created an obligation upon the government to make compensation for the land. The case was distinguished from that of Mills v. United States, 12 L. R. A. 673, 46 Fed. 738, wherein the damage consisted in obliging the plaintiff to raise the levees around his rice fields to prevent the flooding of the fields in high water. "Obviously," said the court, in commenting upon that case, "there was no taking of the plaintiff's lands, but simply an injury which could be remedied at an expense, as alleged, of $10,000, and the action was one to recover the amount of this consequential injury. The court rightfully held that it could not be sustained." A still more recent case is that of Bedford v. United States, 192 U. S. 217, 48 L. ed. 414, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 238, in which it is held that damages to lands by flooding as a result of revetments erected by the United States along the banks of the Mississippi river to prevent erosion of the banks from natural causes are consequential, and do not constitute a taking of the lands flooded within the meaning of the Constitution.

We think the rule to be gathered from these cases is that where there is a practical destruction or material impairment of the value of plaintiff's lands, there is a taking which demands *compensation; but [485] otherwise where, as in this case, plaintiff is merely put to some extra expense in warding off the consequences of the overflow.

The damage claimed by the plaintiff in the interruption of access to his lands and the impairment of his right to navigate the creek does not demand separate consideration. We have repeatedly held that where the government of the United States has, for the purposes of improving the navigation of a river, erected piers or other structures by which access to plaintiff's land is rendered more difficult, there is no claim for compensation. Gibson v. United States, 166 U. S. 269, 41 L. ed. 996, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 578; Scranton v. Wheeler, 179 U. S. 141, 45 L. ed. 126, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 48. We see no reason why the same principle should not apply to cases where the state legislature, exercising its police power, directs a certain dam to be built, and thereby incidentally impairs access to lands above the dam. In both cases the sovereign is exercising its constitutional right,—in one case in improving the navigation of the river, and in the other, in draining its lowlands, and thereby enhancing their value for agricultural purposes.

It is suggested that the agreement of 1898 created an easement of access to plaintiff's land (Ladd v. Boston, 151 Mass. 585, 21 Am. St. Rep. 481, 24 N. E. 858; Hogan v. Barry, 143 Mass. 538, 10 N. E. 253), and that the statute of South Carolina must be construed as overriding private rights of property, and not merely as putting an end to the rights of the public, and as giving to plaintiff a claim for damages for the taking of that easement. But it does not necessarily follow that an injunction should issue. Apparently this covenant did not apply to the millsite, since this was purchased after the covenant was made; but, however this may be, a court of equity is not bound to enjoin a public work authorized by statute, until compensation is paid, where no property is directly appropriated. This is particularly true where the damage is difficult of ascertainment at the time, and a reasonable provision is made by the law for compensation. Sweet v. Rechel, 159 U. S. 380, 40 L. ed. 188, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 43; Backus v. Fort Street Union Depot Co. 169 U. S. 557, 42 L. ed. 853, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. [486] 445; Cherokee Nation v. Southern Kansas R. Co.* 135 U. S. 641, 34 L. ed. 295, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 965; Beasley v. Texas & P. R. Co. 191 U. S. 492, 48 L. ed. 274, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 164; Haverhill Bridge v. Essex County, 103 Mass. 120, 4 Am. Rep. 518; Parker v. Catholic Bishop, 146 Ill. 158, 34 N. E. 473. The state cases are numerous on this point.

In view of the incidental character of the damage probably resulting to plaintiff's land from the erection of this dam, and the careful provision of the act that the defendants shall be liable for such damage, we do not think, at least, in the absence of an allegation that the defendants are financially irresponsible, that a court of equity would be authorized to enjoin the erection until the damages, which, if they exist at all, must be very difficult of ascertainment, shall be paid.

3. It is also assigned as error that the act of 1903 is obnoxious to the following provisions of the Constitution of South Carolina, article 3, § 34, that "the general assembly of this state shall not enact local or special laws concerning any of the following subjects, or for any of the following purposes, to wit: . . . II. To lay out, open, alter, or work roads or highways."

As the case comes from a Federal court, the question is properly before us.

Admitting that, for the purposes of transit and travel, a river may be considered a highway,—and that seems to have been adjudged by the supreme court of South Carolina (Heyward v. Chisolm, 11 Rich. L. 253),— we think that, in connection with the words "to lay out, open, alter, or work roads," the word "highway" is used in its ordinary sense, and as an equivalent to a public road. The power given by this section is evidently inapplicable to water highways, which are neither laid out, opened, altered, or worked in the ordinary sense of these words.

4. It is also urged that the act was passed without the formality required by the Revised Statutes of South Carolina of 1893, in which it is declared that no bill for the granting of any privilege or immunity, or for any other private purpose *whatsoever, [487] shall be introduced or entertained in either house of the general assembly except by petition, to be signed by the persons desiring such privileges, of which sixty days' notice shall be given to all persons interested, and be published in the newspaper having the largest circulation in the county where such privilege is to be enjoyed, once a week for three weeks, etc.

As this is not a constitutional provision, but a general law enacted by the legislature, it may be repealed, amended, or disregarded by the legislature which enacted it. This law was doubtless intended as a guide to persons desiring to petition the legislature for special privileges, and it would be a good answer to any petition for the granting of such privileges that the required notice had not been given; but it is not binding upon any subsequent legislature, nor does a noncompliance with it impair or nullify the provisions of an act passed without the requirement of such notice.

There was no error in the action of the court below, and its judgment is, therefore, affirmed.

HAROLD PETRI, Carl Bopp, and Victor Poels, Copartners, Doing Business under the Name of Petri & Company, Plffs. in Err.,

v.

F. E. CREELMAN LUMBER COMPANY and Frank E. Creelman.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 487–501.)

1. Error to circuit court—when jurisdiction is in issue—necessity of cer-

---

NOTE.—On direct review in the Federal Supreme Court of judgments of circuit or district court—see note to Gwin v. United States, 46 L. ed. U. S. 741, and Roberts v. Lewis, 36 L. ed. U. S. 579.

On repeal of statutes by implication—see notes to State v. Massey, 4 L.R.A. 309; First Nat. Bank v. Weidenbeck, 38 C. C. A. 136; and United States v. 356 Caddies of Tobacco, 20 L. ed. U. S. 235.

tificate.— The question of the jurisdiction of a Federal circuit court is sufficiently certified to sustain a writ of error from the Supreme Court under the act of March 3, 1891 (26 Stat. at L. 827, chap. 517, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 549), § 5, irrespective of any irregularity in the bill of exceptions or formal certificate, where the judgment dismissing the action and the prior proceedings clearly exhibit the ground on which the judgment was based, and make apparent on the record the fact that the only matters tried and decided were demurrers to pleas to the jurisdiction, and the petition upon which the writ of error was allowed asked only for the review of the judgment, which decided that the court was without jurisdiction.

2. Courts—jurisdiction of circuit court where one of two defendants resides in another district.—Jurisdiction of a civil cause in which two or more defendants reside in different districts in the state of Illinois was conferred upon the Federal circuit court for either district, where the requisite diversity of citizenship exists, by the provision of the act of March 2, 1887 (24 Stat. at L. 442, chap. 315, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 345), § 4, that "if there are two or more defendants in civil suits, residing in the different divisions or districts, the action may be brought in either in which either of the defendants may reside."

3. Statutes—repeal by implication—special and general legislation.—The special provision of the act of March 2, 1887 (24 Stat. at L. 442, chap. 315, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 345), § 4, giving the Federal circuit court for either district in Illinois jurisdiction, where the requisite diversity of citizenship exists, of a civil cause in which two or more defendants reside in different districts in the state, was not repealed by the general language of the act of March 3, 1887 (24 Stat. at L. 552, chap. 373), as corrected by the act of August 13, 1888 (25 Stat. at L. 433, chap. 866, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 508), respecting the proper district for instituting suits in the circuit or district courts, although the act contains a general clause repealing all laws and parts of laws in conflict with its provisions.

[No. 49.]

Argued and submitted November 7, 1905. Decided December 4, 1905.

IN ERROR to the Circuit Court of the United States for the Northern Division of the Northern District of Illinois to review a judgment dismissing, for want of jurisdiction, a suit by aliens against citizens of Illinois, some of whom reside in a different district from that in which the suit was brought. Reversed and remanded for further proceedings.

Statement by Mr. Justice White:

Plaintiffs in error, suing as aliens and residents of Antwerp, Belgium, commenced this action in the circuit court of the United States for the northern division of the northern district of Illinois, to recover damages for an alleged libel. Two Illinois corporations and a number of persons were made defendants. The bill as to the corporations alleged citizenship in Illinois, and, as to all the defendants, except the Creelman Lumber Company and F. E. Creelman, one of the individual defendants, the bill alleged that the defendants resided in the district and division where the suit was brought. The Creelman Lumber Company and F. E. Creelman filed pleas to the jurisdiction of the court, based upon the fact that each of them, before and at the time of the commencement of the suit, although citizens of the state of Illinois, were residents of a different district from the one in which the suit was brought,—that is, the southern district of Illinois. To these pleas the plaintiffs demurred, and, on a hearing, a district judge, holding the circuit court, overruled the demurrers, and held the pleas to the jurisdiction good. The plaintiffs electing to stand upon their demurrers to the pleas, the action as to the defendants in question was dismissed for want of jurisdiction. Some time afterwards a bill of exceptions was signed by a circuit judge, in which was recited the action taken by the trial court upon the demurrer to the jurisdictional pleas aforesaid, and the cause was taken to the circuit court of appeals. That court, however, dismissed the writ of error, and on the receipt of its mandate, about a year after the entry of the judgment of dismissal above referred to, there was filed in the trial court *a certificate of [489] the circuit judge, in which was set out the proceedings had in the cause, and it was certified, for the purpose of a writ of error from this court, that the only question involved in such writ of error was one of jurisdiction. It was also certified that the judge who had heard the cause resided in the southern district of Illinois, and was not within the territorial limits of the northern district of Illinois. Cotemporaneous with the filing of the certificate a writ of error was allowed, and in the petition and assignments of errors it clearly appeared that the writ of error was prosecuted solely upon the question of jurisdiction arising from overruling of the demurrers to the pleas to the jurisdiction.

Mr. Consider H. Willett submitted the cause for plaintiffs in error:

The record showing that the only question involved is one of jurisdiction, such record takes the place of a bill of exceptions showing that the only question embraced in the record is one of jurisdiction.

Excelsior Wooden Pipe Co. v. Pacific Bridge Co. 185 U. S. 282, 46 L. ed. 910, 22

Sup. Ct. Rep. 681; Huntington v. Laidley, 176 U. S. 668, 44 L. ed. 630, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 526; Smith v. McKay, 161 U. S. 355, 40 L. ed. 731, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 490; Chappell v. United States, 160 U. S. 499, 40 L. ed. 510, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 397; Van Wagenen v. Sewall, 160 U. S. 369, 372, 40 L. ed. 460, 461, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 370; Interior Constr. & Improv. Co. v. Gibney, 160 U. S. 217, 40 L. ed. 401, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 272; Shields v. Coleman, 157 U. S. 168, 39 L. ed. 660, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 570; Re Lehigh Min. & Mfg. Co. 156 U. S. 322, 39 L. ed. 438, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 375.

Two years is the limitation prescribed for writs of error to the United States Supreme Court from a circuit court, where suit is dismissed on the sole ground of a want of jurisdiction.

Excelsior Wooden Pipe Co. v. Pacific Bridge Co. 185 U. S. 282–285, 46 L. ed. 910–913, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 681; Allen v. Southern P. R. Co. 173 U. S. 479, 43 L. ed. 775, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 518; Holt v. Indiana Mfg. Co. 176 U. S. 68, 44 L. ed. 374, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 272.

As a part of such writ of error, and in compliance with act of Congress of March 3, 1891 (26 Stat. at L. 826, chap. 517, § 5, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 549), where a writ of error is sued out, the court having jurisdiction, the court whose clerk has charge of the record at the time of making application for the writ of error must certify that the only question involved in the writ of error is one of jurisdiction, and at the same time the same judge must require a bond of plaintiffs in error.

Excelsior Wooden Pipe Co. v. Pacific Bridge Co. and Huntington v. Laidley, supra.

A bill of exceptions is only essential when facts dehors the record are to be preserved. Where the record itself shows that the plaintiffs lose their rights upon pleas to the jurisdiction because the defendants in error are not properly served with summons within the judicial district where suit is brought, such facts appear of record and require no bill of exceptions to preserve them. In such case a certificate that the only question involved in a writ of error from such judgment is one of jurisdiction is mere recital of facts existing of record, to save labor to the Supreme Court, and puts no new facts into the record.

Interior Constr. & Improv. Co. v. Gibney, supra.

Plaintiffs being aliens, having a cause of action against defendants, who were citizens of Illinois, some of whom resided in the northern division of the northern district of Illinois, where suit was brought, the court erred in holding that a duplicate summons could not issue to defendants, residents of the southern district of Illinois.

East Tennessee, V. & G. R. Co. v. Atlanta & F. R. Co. 15 L.R.A. 109, 49 Fed. 608; Goddard v. Mailler, 80 Fed. 422; New Jersey Steel & I. Co. v. Chormann, 105 Fed. 532; Hughes, Fed. Proc. p. 234.

The fact that the earliest controlling statute is special and the other two general creates a presumption that the first special statute is to be construed as remaining an exception to the general statutes, such general statutes making no provision for the particular case where more than one defendant are parties to a suit.

Pearce v. Bank of Mobile, 33 Ala. 693; McFarland v. Bank of State, 4 Ark. 410; Thorpe v. Adams, L. R. 6 C. P. 125; Fitzgerald v. Champenys, 30 L. J. Ch. N. S. 782; State v. Rackley, 2 Blackf. 249; Stockett v. Bird, 18 Md. 484; Crane v. Reeder, 22 Mich. 322; State ex rel. Fosdick v. Perrysburg, 14 Ohio St. 472; Brown v. Philadelphia County, 21 Pa. 37; Rounds v. Waymart, 81 Pa. 395; Harrisburg v. Sheck, 104 Pa. 53; Morrison v. Fayette County, 127 Pa 110, 17 Atl. 755; Murdock's Petition, 142 Pa. 341, 24 Atl. 222; Ex parte Crow Dog (Ex parte Kang-Gi-Shun-Ca), 109 U. S. 556, 27 L. ed. 1030, 3 Sup. Ct. Rep. 396; Rodgers v. United States, 185 U. S. 83, 46 L. ed. 816, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 582; Henderson's Tobacco (United States v. 356 Caddies of Tobacco) 11 Wall. 652, 20 L. ed. 235.

Where several affirmative statutes relate to the same subject-matter, but have different objects, none are repealed, but all stand.

Gibson v. Ackermann, 70 Ill. App. 399; Casey v. Harned, 5 Iowa, 1; Safe Deposit & T. Co. v. Fricke, 152 Pa. 231, 25 Atl. 530; Mills v. State, 23 Tex. 295; United States v. Claflin, 97 U. S. 546, 24 L. ed. 1082; People ex rel. Murphy v. McAllister, 10 Utah, 357, 37 Pac. 578; Re Gannett, 11 Utah, 289, 39 Pac. 496.

Repeals by implication are not favored.

Conner v. Southern Exp. Co. 37 Ga. 397; Bruce v. Schuyler, 9 Ill. 221; People ex rel. Freeman v. Barr, 44 Ill. 198; Casey v. Harned, supra; Goddard v. Boston, 20 Pick. 407; M'Cartee v. Orphan Asylum Soc. 9 Cow. 437, 18 Am. Dec. 516; Dodge v. Gridley, 10 Ohio, 173; Wood v. United States, 16 Pet. 342, 10 L. ed. 987; McCool v. Smith, 1 Black, 459, 17 L. ed. 218; Arthur v. Homer, 96 U. S. 137, 24 L. ed. 811; Red Rock v. Henry, 106 U. S. 596, 27 L. ed. 251, 1 Sup. Ct. Rep. 434; Ex parte Crow Dog (Ex parte Kang-Gi-Shun-Ca) supra; Cope v. Cope, 137 U. S. 682, 34 L. ed. 832, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 222; Frost v. Wenie, 157 U. S. 46, 39 L. ed. 614, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 532; United States v. Healey, 160 U. S. 136, 147, 40 L. ed. 369, 373, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep.

247; United States v. New York, 160 U. S. 598, 609, 40 L. ed. 551, 555, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 402; United States v. Greathouse, 166 U. S. 601, 605, 41 L. ed. 1130, 1131, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 701; United States v. Lee Yen Tai, 185 U. S. 213, 46 L. ed. 878, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 629.

Mr. David S. Lansden argued the cause, and, with Messrs. Angus Leek, John M. Lansden, and M. Paul Noyes, filed a brief for defendants in error:

The certificate of the question of jurisdiction not having been made by the circuit court during the December term, 1902, at which term said cause was dismissed for want of jurisdiction, the writ of error from this court should be dismissed for want of jurisdiction to entertain the same.

Colvin v. Jacksonville, 158 U. S. 456, 461, 39 L. ed. 1053, 1054, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 866; The Bayonne, 159 U. S. 687–694, 40 L. ed. 306–309, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 185.

The certificate of the question of jurisdiction should have been made, the bill of exceptions signed, and the writ of error allowed by Honorable J. Otis Humphrey, Judge, who heard and decided the cause in the circuit court, and not by Honorable Christian C. Kohlsaat, Judge, who was not present at the hearing and decision. This court having decided that a bill of exceptions must be signed by the judge before whom the cause was tried, the same being a judicial act, by analogy it should be held that the granting of the certificate of the question of jurisdiction is also a judicial act, which should be performed by the judge who heard and decided the cause.

Malony v. Adsit, 175 U. S. 281–291, 44 L. ed 163–167, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 115.

The statement in the certificate, made by Judge Kohlsaat, that Judge Humphrey, who heard the cause, resided at Springfield, Illinois, in the southern district of Illinois, and that he was out of the territorial limits of the northern district of Illinois at the time the certificate was granted, constitutes no excuse whatever for the failure of plaintiffs in error to have the certificate made by Judge Humphrey.

Western Dredging & Improv. Co. v. Heldmaier, 49 C. C. A. 264, 111 Fed. 123.

This judgment does not present to the court the definite question of jurisdiction upon which the case was decided.

Huntington v. Laidley, 176 U. S. 676, 44 L. ed. 634, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 526; Excelsior Wooden Pipe Co. v. Pacific Bridge Co. 185 U. S. 285, 46 L. ed. 910, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 681; Shields v. Coleman, 157 U. S. 168, 39 L. ed. 660, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 570.

The defendants in error are inhabitants of the southern district of Illinois, and were served with process in that district. The plaintiffs in error are aliens. The defendants in error, therefore, could not be sued in the northern district of Illinois, in which district this suit was brought, although the other defendants were residents of said northern district. The circuit court properly overruled the demurrers of plaintiffs in error to the pleas to the jurisdiction filed by defendants in error.

McCormick Harvesting Mach. Co. v. Walthers, 134 U. S. 41, 33 L. ed. 833, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 485; Denton v. International Co. 36 Fed. 1; Smith v. Lyon, 133 U. S. 315, 33 L. ed. 635, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 303; Greeley v. Lowe, 155 U. S. 58, 39 L. ed. 69, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 24; Interior Constr. & Improv. Co. v. Gibney, 160 U. S. 217, 40 L. ed. 401, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 272; New Jersey Steel & I. Co. v. Chormann, 105 Fed. 532; Jenkins v. York Cliffs Improv. Co. 110 Fed. 807; Freeman v. American Surety Co. 116 Fed. 549; French v. Spencer, 21 How. 228, 16 L. ed. 97; Gibson v. United States, 194 U. S. 182, 48 L. ed. 926, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 613; M'Iver v. Ragan, 2 Wheat. 25, 4 L. ed. 175; Denn v. Reid, 10 Pet. 524, 9 L. ed. 519; United States v. Goldenberg, 168 U. S. 95, 42 L. ed. 394, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 3; Potter's Dwarr. Stat. p. 221; Hankins v. People, 106 Ill. 628; Cooley, Const. Lim. p. 64; Sutherland, Stat. Constr. § 328; Hamilton v. Rathbone, 175 U. S. 414, 44 L. ed. 219, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 155; Harwood v. Wentworth, 162 U. S. 547, 40 L. ed. 1069, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 890; Guthrie Nat. Bank v. Guthrie, 173 U. S. 528, 43 L. ed. 796, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 513; Waite v. Santa Cruz, 184 U. S. 302, 46 L. ed. 552, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 327; Arms v. Ayer, 192 Ill. 601, 58 L.R.A. 277, 85 Am. St. Rep. 357, 61 N. E. 851; Louisville Water Co. v. Clark, 143 U. S. 1, 36 L. ed. 55, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 346; Rodgers v. United States, 185 U. S. 83, 46 L. ed. 816, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 582.

Mr. Justice White, after making the foregoing statement, delivered the opinion of the court:

A motion to dismiss the writ of error first requires our attention. It is urged that the writ should be dismissed because the bill of exceptions filed below and the certificate made as to the question of jurisdiction on this writ of error were authenticated by a judge other than the trial judge, and further, because the certificate was not made at the term in which the judgment complained of was entered. We are relieved, however, from the necessity of considering these objections, for the reason that the judgment of dismissal and the prior proceedings clearly exhibit the ground upon which the judgment was based, and plainly make apparent on the record the fact that the only matter tried and decided in the circuit court were demurrers to pleas to the jurisdiction, and that the petition upon which the writ of error was allowed asked only for the review of the judgment, which decided that the court had no jurisdiction of the action. This being the state of the record, no bill of exceptions or formal certificate in respect to the matter decided was required, and the question of jurisdiction alone was sufficiently certified to this court, as required by the act of March 3, 1891. 26 Stat. at L. 827, chap. 517, § 5, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 549; Interior Constr. & Improv. Co. v. Gibney, 160 U. S. 217, 40 L. ed. 401, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 272, and cases cited; Chappell v. United States, 160 U. S. 507, 40 L. ed. 512, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 397.

We pass, then, to a consideration of the merits. The plaintiffs in error insist that the circuit court for the northern division of the northern district of Illinois had jurisdiction over the defendants, who, being citizens of Illinois, were residents of the southern district of that state, because such jurisdiction was expressly conferred by § 740, Rev. Stat., U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 587, and by the terms of a special act [493] relating to the judicial districts *in Illinois, approved March 2, 1887. 24 Stat. at L. 442, chap. 315, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 345. On the contrary, in effect, the defendants in error maintain that the court below rightly held that it had no jurisdiction over the defendants who resided in the southern district of Illinois, because § 740 of the Revised Statutes had been repealed by the judiciary acts of March 3, 1875 (18 Stat. at L. 470, chap. 137), and March 3, 1887 (24 Stat. at L. 552, chap. 373), as corrected by the act of August 13, 1888 (25 Stat. at L. 433, chap. 866, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 508), and because no such jurisdiction was given by the special act of March 2, 1887, and, if it was conferred by that act, the act was repealed by the judiciary act of March 3, 1887.

In order, as far as may be, to narrow the question for decision to the case before us, we shall come first to consider the contentions concerning jurisdiction, based on the special act of March 2, 1887, which deals alone with the state of Illinois, since, if we conclude that that act gave the jurisdiction and has not been repealed, we will be relieved of the necessity of determining whether the general provision (Rev. Stat. § 740, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 587), applicable to all states having more than one judicial district, is yet in force.

In approaching the consideration of the special act relating to the Illinois districts we shall assume, for the purposes of such consideration, that the provisions of § 740, Rev. Stat., were repealed by any or all of the judiciary acts of March 3, 1875, and the act of March 3, 1887, as corrected by the act of August 13, 1888.

In coming to consider the special act two questions arise: 1. Did the terms of that act give jurisdiction to the circuit courts of the United States in Illinois as to all the defendants in a civil action where there were two or more such defendants residing in different districts of the state? 2. If the act conferred such jurisdiction, was it repealed at the time of the bringing of the action?

First. The special act of March 2, 1887, was entitled "An Act to Amend Section 536 of the Revised Statutes of the United States [U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 344], Relating to the Division of the State of Illinois into *Judicial Districts. . . . " At the time [494] of the passage of this special act there were two judicial districts in the state of Illinois, —the northern and the southern. The 1st section of the act took certain counties from the southern district, and added them to the northern district. The 2d section divided the northern district, as enlarged, into two divisions. The 3d section fixed the place and times of holding courts in said divisions of the northern district. The 4th section, relating to jurisdiction, was as follows:

"Sec. 4. That all civil suits not of a local nature, and criminal prosecutions, must be brought in the division of the said northern district of Illinois where the defendant or defendants reside or the offense is committed; but, if there are two or more defendants in civil suits, residing in the different divisions or districts, the action may be brought in either in which either of the defendants may reside. When the defendant is a nonresident of the district, action may be brought in either division of said district wherein the defendant may be found." [24 Stat. at L. 442, chap. 315, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 345.]

The remaining sections contain provisions rendered necessary by the change in both districts and the subdivision of the northern district.

The first part of the opening sentence of § 4 clearly lays down the general rule controlling suits against residents of the northern district, and directs in what division of that district suit may be brought. This general rule being thus laid down, the sentence proceeds to carve out an exception in the following language: ". . . but if there are two or more defendants in civil suits, residing in different divisions or districts, the action may be brought in either in which either of the defendants may reside." In other words, the exception plainly confers jurisdiction, in the cases for which it provides, upon the courts of either district, and as to such exception gives the right to bring the suit in either district, and, if brought in the northern district, requires it to be brought in the division of that district in which one of the defendants resided.

[495] The *text making this provision is free from ambiguity, and, if its plain import be followed, is decisive. But the argument is that the words "or district," contained in the sentence, were manifestly a mistake, and should be read "of the district," so as to cause the sentence to read as follows: but if there are two or more defendants in civil suits, residing in the different divisions of the district, the action may be brought in either in which either of the defendants may reside. To adopt this view, however, would compel us to strike out the word "or" and insert in its stead the words "of the," and to strike out the word "districts" and insert in its stead the word "district." To do this would be not interpretation, but legislation. It is insisted, however, that this would not be the case, because to thus restrict the section in question is compelled by a consideration of the subject with which it dealt and the purpose which Congress had in mind in enacting the statute; that is to say, the argument is that, as by the act the purpose of Congress was only to divide the northern district of Illinois into two divisions, and to deal exclusively with the district thus subdivided, therefore the words used must be construed so as to cause them to relate exclusively to such subject-matter. This argument, however, misconceives the avowed purpose of the act as shown by its title and context. The title, as we have seen, expressly purported to deal with and amend the section of the Revised Statutes creating two judicial districts in Illinois, and the very first section of the act dealt with the southern as well as with the northern district. And that the mind of Congress was addressed to the existence of two districts in the state, and that the wisdom of legislating on that basis was present to its mind is shown not only by the provisions in question, but by the subsequent sections of the act, wherein frequent mention is made of both districts.

And the error of the assumption that, because the act of Congress primarily provided for the division of the northern district, therefore that body could not have contemplated a provision concerning the right

[496] of election to bring a suit in *either of the districts of the state where two or more defendants resided in the different districts, is refuted by legislation enacted at the same session of Congress in which the Illinois act was passed,—that is, by an act approved February 28, 1887, two days before the approval of the Illinois act,—dividing the eastern and western districts of Missouri into divisions, in which act it was provided in the 4th section as follows (24 Stat. at L. 425, chap. 271, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 387):

"Sec. 4. That hereafter all suits to be brought in the courts of the United States in Missouri, not of a local nature, shall be brought in the division having jurisdiction over the county where the defendants, or either of them, reside; but, if there be more than one defendant, and a part of them reside in different divisions or districts of said state, the plaintiff may sue in either division of either district where one of such defendants resides, and send duplicate writs to the other division or district, directed to the marshal of said district, on which said writs shall be indorsed, by the plaintiff or his attorney, that the same is a duplicate of the original writ sued out of the court of the proper division and district. . . ."

Now, it will be observed that Congress in this provision uses the very words found in the Illinois act, accompanied with such directions as to service of process as leaves no possible room for contention that the words "division or district" were used by Congress as synonymous and without a comprehension of the plain distinction which existed between them. And, as we shall proceed hereafter to demonstrate, the prior and subsequent legislation of Congress relating to the division of states into judicial districts or of a judicial district into divisions, all demonstrate that in enacting such legislation Congress usually deemed it wise to provide for joining in a single action in either district a number of defendants residing in the particular state, but in different districts thereof.

Holding, as we do, that the special act of 1887, as to Illinois, conferred jurisdiction upon a court of either district in a civil cause wherein two or more defendants resided in different *districts in the state, we [497] are brought to consider the second question, which is, Was the act in question repealed by the act of March 3, 1887, as corrected by the act of August 13, 1888?

As previously said, we assume, for the purposes of the argument, that the effect of the judiciary act of March 3, 1875, was to repeal § 740, Rev. Stat., U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 587, conferring in general terms throughout the United States the character of jurisdiction referred to, and we also concede, for the sake of the argument, that, if the act of 1875 had not caused a repeal of § 740, the act of March 3, 1887, as corrected by the act of August 13, 1888, did so. Does it follow from these concessions, however, that the judiciary act of March 3, 1887, as corrected, repealed the special act, which was approved only one day before the approval of the judiciary act of 1887?

Undoubtedly the act of 1887 [24 Stat. at L. 552, chap. 373, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 508], in the 1st section thereof, declared the general rule to be that no civil suit should be thereafter brought in a circuit or district court by any original "process of [or] proceeding" in any other district than that whereof the defendant was an inhabitant, and that where the jurisdiction was founded only on the fact that the action was between citizens of different states, suit should be brought only in the district of the residence of either the plaintiff or defendant. So, also, the act contained a general clause repealing all laws and parts of laws in conflict with the provisions of the act.

It is elementary that repeals by implication are not favored, and that a repeal will not be implied unless there be an irreconcilable conflict between the two statutes. And especially does this rule apply where the prior law is a special act relating to a particular case or subject, and the subsequent law is general in its operation. To hold, then, that the general terms of the act of 1887 [24 Stat. at L. 552, chap. 373, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 508] repealed the special and particular provisions of the act of 1887 [24 Stat. at L. 442, chap. 315, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 345] relating to the districts in Illinois, we must conclude that there was such conflict between the two that it cannot reasonably be inferred that Congress intended that the two should coexist.

[498] *The conclusion, in effect, therefore, would have to be that it cannot be supposed that Congress intended, when it legislated generally concerning the jurisdiction of the courts of the United States, to leave in force a special act as to the districts in Illinois, which would take those districts out of the general rule otherwise governing elsewhere. But to adopt this proposition would compel us to ignore the entire course of legislation by Congress concerning the courts of the United States from the beginning, both prior to and after the adoption of the general act of 1887. By the original judiciary act (1 Stat. at L. 79, chap. 20) suits were permitted to be brought, either in a circuit or district court, in the district whereof the defendant was an inhabitant or wherein he was found at the time of serving the writ. Each state, then, practically constituted a single judicial district. Whilst this general provision was in force, many special acts were passed by Congress creating more than one district in a state, and providing that where a suit was brought against two or more defendants residing in different districts in a state, the plaintiff might sue in either district. See act of June 18, 1838, § 4, as to Mississippi districts, 5 Stat. at L. 248, chap. 115; act of January 18, 1839, § 7, as to Tennessee, 5 Stat. at L. 314, chap. 3; act of February 6, 1839, § 5, as to Alabama, 5 Stat. at L. 315, chap. 20; act of August 11, 1848, § 5, as to Georgia, 9 Stat. at L. 281, chap. 151; act of March 3, 1849, § 3, as to Iowa (state made into divisions), 9 Stat. at L. 411, chap. 124; and act of February 10, 1855, § 9, as to Ohio, 10 Stat. at L. 606, chap. 73.

If the theory of irreconcilability between such statutes and the existence of a general provision to the contrary, necessarily involved in the argument to establish that the special Illinois statute was repealed by the act of 1887, be sound, it must follow that either these special acts, passed long after the judiciary act of 1789, never took effect, or that the consequence of their passage was to destroy the provision of the judiciary act, prescribing the place where civil suits might be brought, which, of course, is an impossible hypothesis.

Now, it was not until May 4, 1858 (11 Stat. at L. 272, chap. 27), that a general law was passed, making a provision like unto that contained in the special acts to which we have referred, of general application throughout the United States; and it was this general provision which was subsequently incorporated into § 740, Rev. Stat., U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 587. And, even after the passage of the act of 1858, in at least one special act, Congress incorporated a like provision to that we have been considering. Act Feb. 24, 1863, § 9, as to Michigan, 12 Stat. at L. 662, chap. 54, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 587.

And the refutation of the argument of inherent incompatibility between a *general [499] rule regulating jurisdiction and a special act departing from that rule as to a particular state, which results from a consideration of the legislation of Congress from the beginning to the time of the adoption of the act of 1875, likewise results from a consideration of the legislation since that act. Thus under the contention, which we have assumed to be sound, the effect of the passage of the act of 1875 was to repeal the provision of § 740, Rev. Stat. This being the case, it resulted that the act of 1875 announced the general rule as to jurisdiction, which was in conflict with the rule theretofore generally prevailing under the terms of § 740, Rev. Stat. But that Congress did not deem that a special provision as to a particular state or states was irreconcilable with the existence of the general rule is conclusively shown by the fact that, after the adoption of the act of 1875, various special acts were passed, dividing particular states into two or more districts, or dividing a district or districts into divisions, and expressly declaring that, in civil suits, not of a local nature, two or more citizens of the state might be joined as defendants, although residing in different districts of the state, and that suit might be brought in either district. See act as to Louisiana, 1881 (21 Stat. at L. 507, § 2, chap. 144, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 364), as to Mississippi, 1882 (22 Stat. at L. 102, § 3, chap. 218, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 378); as to Missouri, Feb. 28, 1887, § 4 (24 Stat. at L. 425, chap. 271, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 387). To which may be added the statute relating to Illinois, which we are considering.

Indeed, the legislation of Congress since the passage of the act of 1887 [24 Stat. at L. 552, chap. 373, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 508], under the hypothesis of the repeal [500] of § 740, *Rev. Stat., by that act, also demonstrates that it was considered that the passage of a special statute as to a particular state, vesting jurisdiction in the courts of either district within the state, where two or more defendants resided in different districts therein, was not irreconcilable with the existence of a general rule to the contrary in a statute having a general operation. This is shown by the fact that a special law of the character stated has been enacted as recently as 1894. Act as to Mississippi (28 Stat. at L. 115, § 4, chap. 144, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 383). The subject-matter dealt with by that act—viz., the division of a judicial district of Mississippi into minor subdivisions—is like unto the Illinois act which we are considering, and the identical language used in the Illinois act, "division or district," is also found in the Mississippi act, accompanied, however, with a provision leaving no possible room to contend that it was not the intention of Congress to allow the joinder in one action of defendants residing in different districts within the state. Section 4 of the act reads as follows:

"Sec. 4. That if there be more than one defendant in a cause, and the defendants reside in different divisions of the said southern district, or any of the defendants reside in the northern district, the plaintiff may sue in either division or district where any defendant resides, and send duplicate writs for the other defendant or defendants to the other division or district where such defendant or defendants reside, and said writs, when executed and returned into the court from which they issued, shall constitute one suit, and be proceeded in accordingly."

Concluding, as we do, that the special act of March 2, 1887, relating to the judicial districts of Illinois, was in force at the time of the bringing of this action, and still remains in force, and that, by the terms of § 4 of the act and under the pleadings in the action, jurisdiction was conferred upon the circuit court of the northern division of the northern district of Illinois over all the defendants named in the declaration, as well those residing *in the southern dis- [501] trict as those residing in the northern district of Illinois, it follows that the court below erred in overruling the demurrers to the pleas to the jurisidiction, and rendering judgment of dimissal, and such judgment must, therefore, be reversed, and the cause remanded for further proceedings.

Reversed.

JAMES FOPPIANO, Plff. in Err.,
v.
ROBERT A. SPEED, as Clerk of the County Court of Shelby County.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 501–520.)

Commerce in intoxicating liquors—state license tax on sales on board interstate carriers.—The exaction by a state of a license fee from a person engaged in selling intoxicating liquors within the state, over the bar, on board a ferryboat employed in interstate commerce, is authorized by the Wilson act of August 8, 1890 (26 Stat. at L. 313, chap. 728, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 3177), subjecting to state laws enacted in the exercise of the police power all intoxicating liquors arriving in the state.

[Nos. 67, 68.]

Argued and submitted November 9, 1905. Decided December 4, 1905.

NOTE.—On state regulation of interstate or foreign commerce—see notes to Norfolk & W. R. Co. v. Com. 13 L.R.A. 107; McCanna & F. Co. v. Citizens' Trust & Surety Co. 24 C. C. A. 13; and Gloucester Ferry Co. v. Pennsylvania, 29 L. ed. U. S. 158.

State licenses or taxes as affecting interstate commerce—see notes to Rothermel v. Meyerle, 9 L.R.A. 366; American Fertilizing Co. v. Board of Agriculture, 11 L.R.A. 179; Gibbons v. Ogden, 6 L. ed. U. S. 23; Brown v. Maryland, 6 L. ed. U. S. 678; Ratterman v. Western U. Teleg. Co. 32 L. ed. U. S. 229; Harmon v. Chicago, 37 L. ed. U. S. 217; Cleveland, C. C. & St. L. R. Co. v. Backus, 38 L. ed. U. S. 1041; Postal Teleg. Cable Co. v. Adams, 39 L. ed. U. S. 311; and Pittsburg & S. Coal Co. v. Bates, 39 L. ed. U. S. 538.

On commerce in intoxicating liquors—see notes to State v. Creeden, 7 L.R.A. 296; State ex rel. Cochran v. Winters, 10 L.R.A. 616, and Rhodes v. Iowa, 42 L. ed. U. S. 1089.

IN ERROR to the Supreme Court of the State of Tennessee to review two judgments of affirmance of judgments of the Circuit Court of Shelby County, in that state, enforcing a license tax for the sale of intoxicating liquors within the state on board a ferryboat employed in interstate commerce. Affirmed.

See same case below, 113 Tenn. 167, 82 S. W. 222.

Statement by Mr. Justice Peckham:

The plaintiff in error was compelled to pay for a license to sell liquors while on a ferryboat at the city of Memphis, in the state of Tennessee, the ferryboat plying between ports in the states of Arkansas and [502] Tennessee. The license was demanded *by the clerk of the county court of Shelby county, by virtue of the following state statute:

"Liquor Dealers . . .

"Persons selling beer or any quantities of liquor on steamboats, flatboats, or any other vessel or water craft, or from railroad cars, shall pay a tax, each, in lieu of all other taxes, to be paid in any county they may elect, per annum, $200 dollars."

He denied his liability to pay, because, as he averred, he was engaged in interstate commerce, and was not subject to be taxed by the state in such case. The taxing officers insisting, he paid the license for the past years 1901, 1902, 1903, and also for the then coming year of 1904, under protest, and to avoid the taking of his property under a distress warrant, and he then commenced these actions to recover the money so paid. They both involve the same question, one action being brought to recover for the back taxes paid, and the other for the taxes paid for the future, from January 1, 1904. Judgment went against him in the trial court, which was affirmed in the supreme court of the state. 113 Tenn. 167, 82 S. W. 222. The plaintiff brings the cases here by writs of error.

The record shows that Speed, the defendant in error, being clerk of the county court of Shelby county, Tennessee, undertook to assess the plaintiff in error, under the Tennessee statute, and the plaintiff in error denying his liability to pay any tax, the parties agreed upon the following facts for the purpose of having the question presented judicially and determined by the court, under the practice in Tennessee:

"That the West Memphis Packet Company is, and has been for more than fifteen years last past, a corporation duly created and existing under and in accordance with the laws of the state of Arkansas, located and having its situs at West Memphis, in the county of Crittenden, in the state of Arkansas, situated just opposite the lower end of the city of Memphis, across the Mississippi river, having power by its charter to buy or build *and own one or more steam-[503] boats, barges, and flatboats, and other water craft, to be used in transporting freight and passengers on the Mississippi river, and the lakes, bayous, and other navigable streams connecting therewith, within the limits of the state of Arkansas; and during the time the said James Foppiano was engaged in selling beer and liquors, as herein stated, the said West Memphis Packet Company was in the exercise of its corporate powers and privileges, and engaged continuously in commerce between the city of Memphis, in the state of Tennessee, and points contiguous thereto, situated along the Arkansas shore of the Mississippi river.

"For more than fifteen years the West Memphis Packet Company has been operating a ferry across the Mississippi river from Hopefield Point, in Crittenden county, Arkansas, and other points adjacent thereto in the state of Arkansas, to and from the state of Tennessee, under licenses to operate such ferry, regularly granted and issued to it, the West Memphis Packet Company, by the county court of Crittenden county, Arkansas, the tribunal authorized by the Constitution and laws of the state of Arkansas to grant and issue such licenses, and under such licenses the West Memphis Packet Company had been making landings regularly, at its dock, at the wharf in the city of Memphis, on the Mississippi river, and there receiving and discharging freight and passengers transported or to be transported by means of such ferry along and across the Mississippi river. It had made but one landing regularly in the course of such business in the state of Tennessee, and two or more in the state of Arkansas.

"For more than four years last past the West Memphis Packet Company has used and employed the steamboat Chas. H. Organ as its regular ferryboat in carrying on the ferry aforesaid, under its said licenses, and such steamboat had made stated regular trips during all that time, between Memphis and the points aforesaid, in the state of Arkansas, constituting such ferry landings.

"The steamboat Chas. H. Organ was [504] owned by the West *Memphis Packet Company, and was duly enrolled and licensed as a steam vessel, to navigate the Mississippi river and its tributaries, under the laws of the United States regulating the coasting trade, and for other purposes, in the custom house at Memphis,—Memphis being the nearest port of the United States to the residence of the West Memphis Packet Company, and the home port of the said steamboat for each of the said years 1901, 1902, and 1903, and before that time.

"Ever since the West Memphis Packet Company began the keeping and maintaining of a ferry across the Mississippi river, as before stated, a bar has been, and was, during the years 1901, 1902, and 1903, kept and maintained on the steamboat it used and operated for that purpose, by some individual to whom it rented the privilege of keeping such bar, and carrying on at the same the sale of beer and liquors, by retail, to persons transported, or to be transported, or upon the said steamboat.

"During the years 1901, 1902, and 1903, James Foppiano was the lessee of the West Memphis Packet Company, and rented such bar on the steamboat Chas. H. Organ from it, and at such bar, during the said time, when the boat was in transit along or across the river, or when temporarily at the landings on the one side or the other of the river, he made sales by retail of beer and liquors to persons transported, or being transported, or to be transported, upon such steamboat, or who were thereon and applied to make purchases. And for the said years 1901, 1902, and 1903 he paid no taxes on such business, and took out no licenses therefor.

"For carrying on the said business for the said years 1901, 1902, and 1903, respectively, in the manner aforesaid, the defendant, Robert A. Speed, as clerk of the county court, insists that the said James Foppiano was required to and should have taken out a license for each year, and also was required to and should have paid the tax for each year, prescribed by the law levying such taxes, and the costs and charges therefor collected by him, as before [505] stated, and not having done so, *that he was authorized and required by law to make such collections, and is not liable to repay the same.

"The said James Foppiano denies that, under the facts, he was required by law to take out any licenses, or pay any taxes, for carrying on the said business for the said years 1901, 1902, and 1903, respectively, or either of them, in the manner aforesaid. He denies that the said Robert A. Speed was authorized or required by law to collect either the taxes collected by him in the manner aforesaid, or the costs or charges aforesaid, or any part thereof, and claims that all such sums have been illegally exacted of and collected from him and against his will, and that he is entitled to recover them back."

Messrs. William M. Randolph and Wassell Randolph submitted the cause for plaintiff in error. Mr. George Randolph was on the brief:

There is nothing in the Wilson act affecting the questions in this case.

Re Rahrer (Wilkerson v. Rahrer) 140 U. S. 545, 35 L. ed. 572, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 865; Rhodes v. Iowa, 170 U. S. 412, 42 L. ed. 1088, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 664; Vance v. W. A. Vandercook Co. 170 U. S. 438, 42 L. ed. 1100, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 674; Norfolk & W. R. Co. v. Sims, 191 U. S. 441, 48 L. ed. 254, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 151; American Exp. Co. v. Iowa, 196 U. S. 133, 49 L. ed. 417, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 182; Cook v. Marshall County, 196 U. S. 261, 49 L. ed. 471, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 233.

Mr. Charles T. Cates, Jr., argued the cause and filed a brief for defendant in error:

The effect of the Wilson act was to remove all impediments to the enforcement of the state laws in respect of the sale and taxation of intoxicating liquors, even when such liquors were imported in original packages, and to withdraw from the protection of the commerce clause of the Federal Constitution persons and corporations bringing liquor into a state for the purpose of sale, without regard to the condition or means by which such liquor was held or sold.

Re Rahrer (Wilkerson v. Rahrer) 140 U. S. 545, 35 L. ed. 572, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 865; Vance v. W. A. Vandercook Co. 170 U. S. 446, 42 L. ed. 1103, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 674; Rhodes v. Iowa, 170 U. S. 412, 42 L. ed. 1088, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 664.

Mr. Justice Peckham, after making the foregoing statement, delivered the opinion of the court:

The plaintiff in error contends that he rented the bar privilege from the company owning the ferryboat, and that he conducted the business of selling liquors over the bar on the boat pursuant to his lease, and while doing so was engaged in interstate commerce, and therefore was not liable in any manner to be taxed on account of conducting his business in the way he did, while within the boundaries of the state of Tennessee.

There is a distinction to be observed between the business of the plaintiff in error in selling intoxicating liquors and any other business which might have been conducted by him on the ferryboat under the same circumstances. The general right of the states to regulate or prohibit the sale of intoxicating liquors within their borders is not denied; but how far they could prohibit the entrance of the liquors, or their sale, after having been brought into the state, has been a subject of examination and decision within late years by this court. Bowman v. Chicago & N. W. R. Co. 125 U. S. 465, 31 L. ed. 700, 1 Inters. Com. Rep. 823, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 689, 1062; Leisy [517] v. Hardin, *135 U. S. 100, 34 L. ed. 128, 3 Inters. Com. Rep. 36, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 681; Re Rahrer (Wilkerson v. Rahrer) 140 U. S. 545, 35 L. ed. 572, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 865; Rhodes v. Iowa, 170 U. S. 412, 42 L. ed. 1088, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 664; Vance v. W. A. Vandercook Co. 170 U. S. 438, 42 L. ed. 1100, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 674. The result of the Bowman and Leisy Cases together was to uphold the right of a party to send intoxicating liquors into another state and sell the same in such state in their original packages. The decisions in those cases were followed by the passage of an act of Congress, commonly known as the Wilson act, approved August 8, 1890 (26 Stat. at L. 313, chap. 728, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 3177), which provided that intoxicating liquors, when transported into another state or territory should, upon arrival therein, be subject to the operation and effect of the laws of such state or territory, enacted in the exercise of its police powers, to the same extent and in the same manner as though such liquors had been produced in said state or territory. This act was held to be constitutional in the case of Re Rahrer (Wilkerson v. Rahrer) 140 U. S. 545, 35 L. ed. 572, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 865, and that by virtue of said act, state statutes might operate upon the original packages of intoxicating liquors before sale in the state. Rhodes v. Iowa, 170 U. S. 412, 42 L. ed. 1088, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 664, and Vance v. W. A. Vandercook Co. 170 U. S. 438, 42 L. ed. 1100, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 674, held that the state statute must permit the delivery of the liquors to the party to whom they were consigned within the state, but that, after such delivery, the state had power to prevent the sale of the liquors, even in the original package.

If the liquors kept for sale at the bar on the ferryboat had been consigned to the plaintiff in error from Arkansas, addressed to him at Memphis, although the plaintiff in error would have had the right to a delivery of the liquors to him at the wharf in Memphis, yet, under the act of Congress, as construed by this court, the state could then at once have prohibited absolutely the sale thereof, even in original packages. Of course, if it could totally prohibit such sale, it would permit the sale conditionally. In this case there is no consignment to anyone, but we do not see that the distinction is material. The liquors were owned by the plaintiff in error while on the boat, and carried along from port to port, and to be used on the boat as the demand at the bar made necessary. The thing which *the plaintiff in error did was [518] to sell the intoxicating liquors on this ferryboat when temporarily at the wharf in Memphis, or within the boundaries of the state, to persons then on the boat, and it was on account of these sales that he was compelled to take out a license and pay the tax therefor. Although there was no consignment of the liquor, yet it was in the possession of the plaintiff in error on the boat, within the state, the same as if he had received it therein on a consignment to him from outside the state, and had taken portions of it while in the state, sold it to different persons then on the boat, and those persons had then and there taken and drank the liquor, and then and thus the transaction had been commenced and ended. The law provided no tax on any liquor in any way, but it made it necessary for the plaintiff in error to get a license for this sale of liquor within the state. There was no tax levied upon the boat or crew, nor upon any of the passengers, nor on any portion of the property of the company, nor on the freight carried by it on the boat. Neither the boat nor its officers nor crew were subjected to the payment of any fees for navigating the waters of the river. The supreme court of the state observed that the case did not show that the charter permitted the company to maintain a bar on board its boat, nor that the liquors sold in Tennessee came from any other state; and it may be stated here that there was no proof that the liquors were sold in original packages, but, as they were sold over the bar, there might, perhaps, be a presumption that they were not so sold. Without deciding the case on these grounds, the state court, interpreting the above-mentioned act of Congress, and believing that it was following the decisions of this court, held that, by virtue of that act, the state had the right to exact a license as a condition precedent to the exercise of the right on the part of the plaintiff in error to sell intoxicating liquors over the bar on board the boat, while within the boundaries of the state of Tennessee. We think the supreme court was right in that view of the case.

The counsel for plaintiff in error, in a most elaborate brief, *exhibiting very great [519] learning and industry, has sought to show that the plaintiff in error was entitled to the free navigation of the Mississippi river, under various treaties and compacts as well as by the national Constitution, and to support that contention has gone back to a time prior to the war between Great Britain and France, in 1756, and has cited many cases in this court to maintain his position. That the navigation of the Mississippi river is free to every citizen of the United States is a fact not to be questioned at this time. No one could successfully dispute it; but we think that question is not involved in this case. When the ferryboat entered the boundaries of the state of Tennessee, and fastened up at the wharf in Memphis, and the plaintiff in error then sold liquors to customers as they asked for them, he became subject to the police laws of that state regarding the sale of intoxicating liquors. Enforcing that law, even if it did incidentally affect the free navigation of the Mississippi river, is justified under the act of Congress, and the decisions of this court interpreting the same. As the boat is free to be navigated without molestation, let, or hindrance on account of any fees, taxes, licenses, or otherwise, it cannot be held that the navigation of the Mississippi river is not free, because, while within the boundaries of the state of Tennessee, and under the authority of the act of Congress, the barkeeper on the boat is prohibited from there selling the liquors he carries with him, without first having paid the license demanded by the state statute.

The case of State v. Frappart, 31 La. Ann. 340, was decided in 1879, before the act of Congress was passed, and is, therefore, not applicable to the facts of this case.

The plaintiff in error also contends that when the packet company, being a corporation of the state of Arkansas, employed the ferryboat in interstate commerce between the states of Arkansas and Tennessee, the boat was a part of the territory of Arkansas, and the plaintiff in error, in selling liquors upon the boat, was located outside the jurisdiction of the state of Tennessee, even though, in fact, he sold the [520] liquors while the *boat was tied to the wharf in the city of Memphis. Many cases are cited in counsel's brief where tangible property was directly taxed by the state, and where it was held that the state had no jurisdiction, because, although the property was temporarily within the state, it was not there permanently. Hays v. Pacific Mail S. S. Co. 17 How. 596, 15 L. ed. 254, Morgan v. Parham, 16 Wall. 471, 21 L. ed. 303, were cases of vessels not abiding within the state where they were taxed, and were there but temporarily while engaged in lawful trade and commerce, with their situs at the home port, where the vessels belonged, and where the owners were liable to be taxed for the capital invested, and where the taxes had been paid. See also Old Dominion S. S. Co. v. Virginia, 198 U. S. 299, 49 L. ed. 1059, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 686. Here, however, there is no taxation of any property whatever, either of the boat or the plaintiff in error. He is simply called upon to pay a tax for the privilege of doing the business in which he was engaged—that is, the retailing of intoxicating liquors at the bar of the ferryboat—while that boat was within the jurisdiction of the state of Tennessee. The fact that he was so engaged within the actual territory of that state cannot be blotted out in such a case as this by any fiction suggested by the counsel for plaintiff in error. As we have said, we see no objection to this exercise of the power of the state, regard being had to the act of Congress already mentioned.

The judgments of the Supreme Court of Tennessee are affirmed.

---

*VALENTIN TRONO, Maximo Angeles, and [521]
Timoteo Natividad, Plffs. in Err.,
v.
UNITED STATES.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 521-540.)

1. Constitutional law—former jeopardy—conviction in appellate tribunal.—A person is not placed twice in jeopardy within the meaning of the act of July 1, 1902 (32 Stat. at L. 691, chap. 1369), for the government of the Philippine Islands, by a conviction of homicide in the supreme court of those islands, on an appeal taken by the accused from a judgment of the trial court, which, after acquitting of murder, convicted the accused of assault, which is included in the crime of murder charged in the complaint.

2. Appeal in criminal cases—conviction in appellate tribunal—power of supreme court of Philippine Islands.—The supreme court of the Philippine Islands has jurisdiction, on an appeal taken by the accused from a conviction in the trial court, to reverse the judgment, and convict the accused of a higher degree of the offense charged.

[No. 34.]

Argued October 31, 1905. Decided December 4, 1905.

IN ERROR to the Supreme Court of the Philippine Islands to review the judgment of that court which, on an appeal

---

NOTE.—On the right of a state to appeal in a criminal case—see note to People ex rel. Hodson v. Miner, 19 L.R.A. 342.

On former jeopardy—see notes to Com. v. Fitzpatrick, 1 L.R.A. 451; Altenburg v. Com. 4 L.R.A. 543; Ex parte Lange, 21 L. ed. U. S. 872; and United States v. Perez, 6 L. ed. U. S. 165.

taken by the accused from a conviction in the court of first instance in the province of Bulacan, reversed the judgment, and convicted the accused of a higher degree of the offense charged. Affirmed.

Statement by Mr. Justice Peckham:

The plaintiffs in error were proceeded
[522] against in the court *of first instance of the province of Bulacan, Philippine Islands, upon a complaint accusing them of causing the death of Benito Perez "with great cruelty and evident premeditation . . . by means of blows given with the butts of guns, they co-operating one with the other." In other words, the accused were complained of as guilty of murder in the first degree.

They were tried in the court above mentioned, and were acquitted of the crime of murder, and convicted of the crime of assault, which is included in the crime of murder charged in the complaint, and they were therefore sentenced by the court to suffer a penalty of six months' imprisonment, and to pay a certain sum to the heirs of Perez, with subsidiary imprisonment in case of insolvency.

All three of the accused appealed to the supreme court of the Philippine Islands from the judgment and sentence of the trial court. The supreme court, having heard the case, reversed the judgment of the court of first instance, and convicted the accused of the crime of homicide (in substance, murder in the second degree), which is included in, and is a lower degree of, the crime charged in the complaint, but is a higher degree of crime than that of which the accused were convicted in the court below. Two of them (Angeles and Trono) were sentenced to fourteen years, eight months, and one day, and Natividad to imprisonment for eight years and one day, and all three to the payment of an indemnity to the heirs of the deceased.

The accused have brought the case here by writ of error to the supreme court of the Philippine Islands, for the purpose of reviewing the judgment of that court.

Mr. Aldis B. Browne argued the cause, and, with Messrs. Alexander Britton and Maurice Kelly, filed a brief for plaintiffs in error:

In convicting Trono, Angeles, and Natividad of homicide after their acquittal thereof by the court of first instance, the court below placed them twice in jeopardy of punishment for the same offense.

Kepner v. United States, 195 U. S. 100, 49 L. ed. 114, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 797.

By appeal from the conviction of assault, the accused did not waive their immunity from second jeopardy on the charge of homicide.

United States v. Harding, 1 Wall. Jr. 127, Fed. Cas. No. 15,301; Hopt v. Utah, 110 U. S. 574, 28 L. ed. 262, 4 Sup. Ct. Rep. 202; Thompson v. Utah, 170 U. S. 343, 42 L. ed. 1061, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 620; People v. Dowling, 84 N. Y. 478. See also Guenther v. People, 24 N. Y. 100; People v. Cignarale, 110 N. Y. 23, 17 N. E. 135; Stuart v. Com. 28 Gratt. 950; State v. Martin, 30 Wis. 216, 11 Am. Rep. 567; State v. Hill, 30 Wis. 416; State v. Belden, 33 Wis. 120, 14 Am. Rep. 748; Campbell v. State, 9 Yerg. 333, 30 Am. Dec. 417; Slaughter v. State, 6 Humph. 410; Brennan v. People, 15 Ill. 511; Barnett v. People, 54 Ill. 325; Sipple v. People, 10 Ill. App. 144; Hurt v. State, 25 Miss. 378, 59 Am. Dec. 225; Morris v. State, 8 Smedes & M. 762; Johnson v. State, 29 Ark. 31, 21 Am. Rep. 154; State v. Tweedy, 11 Iowa, 350; State v. Ross, 29 Mo. 32; State v. Kattlemann, 35 Mo. 105; Johnson v. State, 27 Fla. 245, 9 So. 208; Golding v. State, 31 Fla. 262, 12 So. 525; State v. Dennison, 31 La. Ann. 847; State v. Murphy, 13 Wash. 229, 43 Pac. 44; Bell v. State, 48 Ala. 684, 17 Am. Rep. 40; Berry v. State, 65 Ala. 117; Brown v. United States, 2 Ind. Terr. 582, 52 S. W. 56; Jones v. State, 13 Tex. 168, 62 Am. Dec. 550; State v. Steeves, 29 Or. 85, 43 Pac. 947; People v. Knapp, 26 Mich. 112; People v. Comstock, 55 Mich. 405, 21 N. W. 384; George v. State, 59 Neb. 163, 80 N. W. 486; State v. Kittle, 2 Tyler (Vt.) 472.

In the states of Kentucky, Indiana, and Kansas, a different rule has been adopted, based on statutory provisions, to the effect that a new trial places the parties in the same position as if no trial had been had.

Com. v. Arnold, 83 Ky. 1, 4 Am. St. Rep. 114; Morris v. State, 1 Blackf. 37; Veatch v. State, 60 Ind. 291; State v. McCord, 8 Kan. 232, 12 Am. Rep. 469.

The California courts, however, hold, on a similar statutory provision, that there can be no second prosecution for the offense of which the defendant was acquitted on first trial.

People v. Gilmore, 4 Cal. 376, 60 Am. Dec. 620; People v. Gordon, 99 Cal. 227, 33 Pac. 901.

In Georgia and Missouri the common-law rule has been changed by the Constitution.

Waller v. State, 104 Ga. 505, 30 S. E. 835; State v. Simms, 71 Mo. 538.

And in Ohio and South Carolina the courts have adopted a different doctrine from that prevailing at the common law.

State v. Behimer, 20 Ohio St. 572; State v. Cross Roads Comrs. 3 Hill, L. 239.

The English courts have gone so far in support of the maxim that no man ought to be twice brought in danger of his life for one and the same crime that they have always refused a new trial in cases of felony where the indictment is valid.

King v. Mawbey, 6 T. R. 619; Atty. Gen. v. Bertrand, L. R. 1 P. C. 520.

And in the earlier cases this was the construction of the courts in this country.

United States v. Gibert, 2 Sumn. 19, Fed. Cas. No. 15,204; People v. Comstock, 8 Wend. 549.

Solicitor General Hoyt argued the cause and filed a brief for defendant in error:

Under the Philippine law, the appeal given to the supreme court vested in that body the authority to review the entire case both upon the facts and upon the law.

United States v. Atienza, 1 Philippine Rep. 736; United States v. Abijan, 1 Philippine Rep. 83.

An appeal is a civil-law process, and removes a cause entirely, subjecting the law and fact to a review and retrial. A writ of error is a common-law process, and removes for re-examination nothing but the law.

United States v. Goodwin, 7 Cranch, 108, 3 L. ed. 284; Dower v. Richards, 151 U. S. 658, 663, 38 L. ed. 305, 307, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 452.

By taking their appeal the defendants assented to the conditions upon which it was granted, and thereby waived any right they had to rely to any extent upon the judgment finding them guilty of assault in the court of first instance, as a shield against their conviction for a higher offense by the supreme court upon appeal.

McKane v. Durston, 153 U. S. 684, 38 L. ed. 867, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 913; Andrews v. Swartz, 156 U. S. 272, 275, 39 L. ed. 422, 423, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 389; Kohl v. Lehlback, 160 U. S. 293, 297, 40 L. ed. 432, 434, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 304; Murphy v. Massachusetts, 177 U. S. 155, 44 L. ed. 711, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 639; United States v. Keen, 1 McLean, 429, Fed. Cas. No. 15,510; Com. v. Arnold, 83 Ky. 1, 4 Am. St. Rep. 114; Briggs v. Com. 82 Va. 554; State v. Hart, 33 Kan. 218, 6 Pac. 288; State v. McCord, 8 Kan. 232, 12 Am. Rep. 469; People v. Palmer, 109 N. Y. 413, 4 Am. St. Rep. 477, 17 N. E. 213.

When, in any criminal case in which a single offense is charged, a verdict of guilty is set aside and a new trial granted, or a judgment upon a verdict of guilty is reversed in an appellate court and a new trial granted, the effect is to annul the action and finding of the jury as effectually as if the case had never been tried or a verdict returned.

United Staes v. Keen, supra; 4 Bl. Com. 336, 337; Lockwood v. Jones, 7 Conn. 436; Zaleski v. Clark, 45 Conn. 397; Rasmussen v. State, 63 Wis. 1, 22 N. W. 835; Bailey v. State, 26 Ga. 579; Reg. v. Drury, 3 Cox, C. C. 544; Donahue v. Klassner, 22 Mich. 252; Crawford v. Morris, 5 Gratt. 90; People v. Gordon, 99 Cal. 232, 33 Pac. 901; Edwards v. Edwards, 22 Ill. 123; Grayson v. Com. 6 Gratt. 712.

The ultimate question in this case is whether the supreme court of the Philippine Islands, upon the trial of the appeal of the accused persons by trying them anew upon the charge of murder and finding them guilty of homicide after they had been found guilty of assault only by the court of first instance, twice placed them in jeopardy upon the charge of murder.

The cases which, as we think, sustain the government's position, are the following:

United States v. Harding, 1 Wall. Jr. 127, Fed. Cas. No. 15,301; United States v. Keen, supra; People v. Keefer, 65 Cal. 232, 3 Pac. 818; People v. Carty, 77 Cal. 213, 19 Pac. 490; State v. Lee, 65 Conn. 265, 27 L.R.A. 498, 48 Am. St. Rep. 202, 30 Atl. 1110; Bailey v. State, supra; Small v. State, 63 Ga. 386; Veatch v. State, 60 Ind. 291; State v. McCord, supra; State v. Terreso, 56 Kan. 126, 42 Pac. 354; Com. v. Arnold, supra; Bohanan v. State, 18 Neb. 57, 53 Am. Rep. 791, 24 N. W. 390; People v. Palmer, supra; State v. Stanton, 23 N. C. (1 Ired. L.) 424; State v. Behimer, 20 Ohio St. 572; State v. Cross Roads Comrs. 3 Hill, L. 239; State v. Bradley, 67 Vt. 465, 32 Atl. 238; Briggs v. Com. and Rasmussen v. State, supra.

Mr. Justice Peckham, after making the foregoing statement, delivered the opinion of the court:

The plaintiffs in error seek a reversal of the judgment in their case on the ground that the supreme court of the Philippine Islands had no power to reverse the judgment of the court of first instance, and then find them guilty of a higher crime than that of which they had been convicted in that court, and of which higher crime that court had acquitted them, and they contend that such a conviction by the supreme court of the islands was a violation of the act of Congress, passed July 1, 1902 (32 Stat. at L. 691, chap. 1369), a portion of the 5th section of that act providing that "no person for the same offense shall be twice put in jeopardy of punishment."

This language is to be found in connection with other language in the same act, providing for the rights of a person accused of crime in the Philippine Islands. The whole language is substantially taken from the Bill of Rights set forth in the amendments to the Constitution of the United States, omitting the provisions in regard to the right of trial by jury and the right of the people to bear arms, and containing the prohibition of the 13th Amendment, and also prohibiting the passage of bills of attainder and ex post facto laws.

The important question to be determined is whether this action of the supreme court of the islands did violate the act of Congress by placing the accused twice in jeopardy.

The meaning of the phrase, as used in the above-mentioned act of Congress, was before this court in Kepner v. United [529]States*, decided in May, 1904 (195 U. S. 100, 49 L. ed. 114, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 797), where will be found a very full discussion of the subject. The plaintiff in error in that case had been acquitted of the crime charged against him in the court of first instance, but the government, not being satisfied with the decision, appealed to the supreme court, and that court reversed the judgment of acquittal, and found Kepner guilty of the crime of which the court of first instance had acquitted him, and sentenced him to a term of imprisonment, and suspended him from any public office or public trust, and deprived him of the right of suffrage. This court, upon writ of error, held that, in reversing, upon the appeal of the government, the judgment of the court of first instance, and itself convicting the accused and pronouncing judgment against him, the supreme court of the islands violated the provision in question, and its judgment was therefore reversed and the prisoner discharged. It was also held that the government had no power to obtain a review of a judgment or decision of the trial court acquitting an accused party, and that the phrase in question was to be construed as the same phrase would be construed in the instrument from which it was originally taken, viz., the Constitution of the United States; and that the settled and well-known meaning of the language, as used in the Constitution, must also be taken when the same language is used in the act of Congress, and not as it might possibly be construed with reference to Spanish law or Spanish procedure.

The difference between that case and the one now before the court is obvious. Here the accused, while acquitted of the greater offense charged in the complaint, were convicted of a lesser offense included in the main charge. They appealed from the judgment of the court of first instance, and the government had no voice in the matter of the appeal, it simply followed them to the court to which they appealed. We regard that fact as material and controlling. The difference is vital between an attempt by the government to review the verdict or decision of acquittal in the court of first instance and the action of the accused person in himself appealing from the *judgment and asking for its re-[530] versal, even though that judgment, while convicting him of the lower offense, acquits him of the higher one charged in the complaint.

We may regard the question as thus presented as the same as if it arose in one of the Federal courts in this country, where, upon an indictment for a greater offense, the jury had found the accused not guilty of that offense, but guilty of a lower one which was included in it, and, upon an appeal from that judgment by the accused, a new trial had been granted by the appellate court, and the question was whether, upon the new trial accorded, the accused could be again tried for the greater offense set forth in the indictment, or must the trial be confined to that offense of which the accused had previously been convicted, and which conviction had, upon his own motion, been set aside and reversed by the higher court.

This question has given rise to much diversity of opinion in the various state courts. Many of them have held that the new trial must be confined to the lesser offense of which the accused had been convicted on the first trial, while other courts have held precisely the contrary, and that upon a new trial the whole case was open as if there had been no former trial. Most, if not all, of these two classes of cases have been cited by the respective counsel in this case and will be found in their briefs herein. It would be unprofitable to cite and refer to each of them in detail here. They have been carefully examined.

Those cases which limit the new trial proceed upon the ground, as stated in People v. Dowling, 84 N. Y. 478, 483, by Folger, Chief Judge, as follows:

"The matter at the bottom is the constitutional provision that 'no person shall be subject to be twice put in jeopardy for the same offense' (N. Y. Const. art. 1, par. 6), and yet new trials are granted in criminal cases on the motion of the accused, and, if he gets a new trial, he is thus subject to be twice put in jeopardy. This is done on the ground that, by asking for a correction of errors made on the first trial, he does waive his constitutional protection, and does himself ask for a new *trial[531] though it brings him twice in jeopardy. But that waiver, unless it be expressly of the benefit of the verdict of acquittal, goes no further than the accused himself extends it. His application for a correction of the verdict is not to be taken as more extensive than his needs. He asks a correction of so much of the judgment as convicted him of guilt. He is not to be supposed to ask correction or reversal of so much of it as acquitted him of offense. He, therefore, waives his privilege as to one and keeps it as to the other. It is upon this principle that where, by a verdict of guilty on one count or for one offense, and an acquittal on or for another, there has been a partial conviction on an indictment, and on writ of error there has been a reversal of the conviction, the acquittal still stands good, and is, as to that count or offense, a bar. As to that, the plea of autrefois acquit can be upheld, though the plea of autrefois convict cannot be upheld as to the offense of which the verdict was guilty. The waiver is construed to extend only to the precise thing concerning which the relief is sought."

But in the subsequent case of People v. Palmer, 109 N. Y. 413, 419, 4 Am. St. Rep. 477, 17 N. E. 213, the effect of the statute of New York known as §§ 464 and 544 of the Code of Criminal Procedure, was under consideration. Those sections enacted as follows:

"Sec. 464. The granting of a new trial places the parties in the same position as if no trial had been had.

"Sec. 544. When a new trial is ordered it shall proceed in all respects as if no trial had been had."

The statute was held valid, and that it did not violate the constitutional provision against subjecting a person to be twice put in jeopardy for the same offense, as the jeopardy was incurred with the consent of, and as a privilege granted to, the defendant upon his application.

And generally, it may be said that the cases holding that a new trial is not limited in the manner spoken of proceed upon the ground that, in appealing from the judgment, the accused necessarily appeals from the whole thereof, as well that which acquits as that which condemns; that the [532] judgment is one entire *thing, and that, as he brings up the whole record for review, he thereby waives the benefit of the provision in question, for the purpose of attempting to gain what he thinks is a greater benefit, viz., a review and reversal by the higher court of the judgment of conviction. Although the accused was, as is said, placed in jeopardy upon the first trial, in regard not only to the offense of which he was accused, but also in regard to the lesser grades of that offense, yet by his own act and consent, by appealing to the higher court to obtain a reversal of the judgment, he has thereby procured it to be set aside, and when so set aside and reversed the judgment is held as though it had never been. This was in substance decided in United States v. Harding, tried in the United States circuit court in 1846, 1 Wall. Jr. 127, Fed. Cas. No. 15,301, before Mr. Justice Grier, then a member of this court, and this is the ground substantially upon which the decisions of the other courts are placed.

In Kring v. Missouri, 107 U. S. 221, 27 L. ed. 506, 2 Sup. Ct. Rep. 443, it was stated by Mr. Justice Miller, who delivered the opinion of the court, that it was admitted that by the law of Missouri, as it stood at the time of the homicide, the prisoner having been convicted of murder in the seceond degree upon an indictment charging him with murder in the first degree, if that conviction was set aside he could not again be tried for murder in the first degree. That law was in force at the date of the homicide for which Kring was sentenced to death, but it was subsequently, and before his retrial, changed so as to deprive him of the benefit to which he would otherwise have been entitled, and this court held that that change was, as to him, ex post facto and void. It was also said by the court that there was "no question of the right of the state of Missouri, either by her fundamental law or by an ordinary act of legislation, to abolish this rule, and that it is a valid law as to all offenses committed after its enactment. The question here is, Does it deprive the defendant of any right of defense which the law gave him when the act was committed, so that, as to that offense, it is ex post facto?" This court answered that question in the affirmative.

*In our opinion the better doctrine is [533] that which does not limit the court or jury, upon a new trial, to a consideration of the question of guilt of the lower offense of which the accused was convicted on the first trial, but that the reversal of the judgment of conviction opens up the whole controversy, and acts upon the original judgment as if it had never been. The accused, by his own action, has obtained a reversal of the whole judgment, and we see no reason why he should not, upon a new trial, be procceded against as if no trial had previously taken place. We do not agree to the view that the accused has the right to limit his waiver as to jeopardy, when he appeals from a judgment against him. As the judgment stands before he appeals, it is a complete bar to any further prosecution for the offense set forth in the indictment, or of any lesser degree thereof. No power can wrest from him the right to so use that judgment, but if he chooses to appeal from it, and to ask for its reversal, he thereby waives, if successful, his right to avail himself of the former acquittal of the greater offense, contained in the judgment which he has himself procured to be reversed.

It is urged, however, that he has no power to waive such a right, and the case of Hopt v. Utah, 110 U. S. 574, 28 L. ed. 262, 4 Sup. Ct. Rep. 202, is cited as authority for that view. We do not so regard it. This court held in that case that in the territory of Utah the accused was bound, by provisions of the Utah statute, to be present at all times during the trial, and that it was not within the power of the accused or his counsel to dispense with such statutory requirement. But, on an appeal from a judgment of this nature, there must be a waiver to some extent on the part of the accused when he appeals from such judgment. When the first trial is entered upon, he is then put in jeopardy within the meaning of the phrase, and yet it has been held, as late as United States v. Ball, 163 U. S. 662, 671, 41 L. ed. 300, 303, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1192 (and nobody now doubts it), that if the judgment of conviction be reversed on his own appeal, he cannot avail himself of the once-in-jeopardy provision as a bar to a new trial [534] of the offense of which he was *convicted. And this is generally put upon the ground that by appeal he waives his right to the plea, and asks the court to award him a new trial, although its effect will be, if granted, that he will be again tried for the offense of which he has been once convicted. This holding shows that there can be a waiver of the defense by reason of the action of the accused. As there is, therefore, a waiver in any event, and the question is as to its extent (that is, how far the accused by his own action may be decmed to have waived his right), it seems much more rational and in better accord with the proper administration of the criminal law to hold that, by appealing, the accused waives the right to thereafter plead once in jeopardy, when he has obtained a reversal of the judgment, even as to that part of it which acquitted him of the higher while convicting him of the lower offense. When, at his own request, he has obtained a new trial, he must take the burden with the benefit, and go back for a new trial of the whole case. It does not appear to us to be a practice founded on solid reason to permit such a limited waiver by an accused party while himself asking for a reversal of the judgment.

There is also the view to be taken that the constitutional provision was really never intended to, and, properly construed, does not, cover the case of a judgment under these circumstances, which has been annulled by the court at the request of the accused, and there is, therefore, no necessity of relying upon a waiver, because the correct construction of the provision does not make it applicable.

A further question is made as to the power of the supreme court of the islands to reverse the judgment appealed from and itself convict the accused on appeal. The supreme court, in so doing, acted within its power and jurisdiction. It is a result of the ordinary procedure in the courts of that country, proceeding under the act of Congress already referred to. See statement of the procedure, in the case heretofore cited,—Kepner v. United States, 195 U. S. 100, 49 L. ed. 114, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 797.

The judgment of the Supreme Court of* [535] the Philippine Islands is right, and it is affirmed.

Mr. Justice Holmes concurs in the result.

Mr. Justice Harlan, dissenting:

The plaintiffs in error were tried by one of the courts of first instance in the Philippine Islands for the crime of murder. The trial was before a single judge, without a jury, and simply upon a written complaint filed by an individual with a justice of the peace. The judge who tried the accused found them not guilty of murder, and guilty only of assault. For the latter offense they were each sentenced to six months' imprisonment. Upon appeal by the accused to the supreme court of the islands, the judgment of the trial court was reversed, and two of the accused were condemned to the penalty, each one, of fourteen years, eight months, and one day of reclusión temporal, the other one to the penalty of eight years and one day of prisión mayor, and all three to the indemnification of five hundred Philippine pesos to the heirs of the deceased.

I did not so state in a separate opinion in Kepner v. United States, 195 U. S. 101, 49 L. ed. 114, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 797, but my concurrence in the judgment in that case was upon the ground that, from the moment of the complete acquisition of the Philippine Islands by the United States, and without any act of Congress, or a proclamation of the President upon the subject, the people of those islands became entitled, of right, to the benefit of all the fundamental guaranties of life, liberty, and property to be found in that instrument. Hence, my approval of the review announced in Kepner's Case, that the accused was entitled to the benefit of the jeopardy clause of the Constitution.

Assuming that it was competent for the court of first instance to proceed without a jury against the accused upon a mere complaint by an individual, I desire to express my concurrence in the dissenting opinion [536] of Mr. Justice McKenna, so far as it *holds that the accused in the present case were entitled to the benefit of the jeopardy clause of the Constitution, and that, after their acquittal in the tribunal assuming jurisdiction to try them for the crime of murder, they could not thereafter, in any appellate tribunal deriving its authority from the United States, be again tried for that crime or for any crime more serious than the one of which they were convicted in the court of first instance.

But I dissent from the opinion and judgment of the court in the present case upon the broader ground that, as the Constitution of the United States is the supreme law of the land, as that instrument declares that, except in cases arising in the land or naval forces, or in the militia when in actual service in time of war or public danger, "no person shall be held to answer for a capital or otherwise infamous crime, unless on a presentment or indictment of a grand jury," and that "the trial of all crimes, except in cases of impeachment, shall be by jury," and as the people of the Philippine Islands are as much under the authority and jurisdiction of the United States as are the people within the limits of the several states and of the organized territories of the United States, the prosecution of the accused, based only upon the written complaint of an individual, filed with a justice of the peace, and their trial by a single judge, was without authority of law, and a nullity from beginning to end. I repeat substantially what has been said by me in former cases, that no person within the territory and subject to the sovereign jurisdiction of the United States can be legally deprived of his life or liberty for crime committed by him against the United States, except in the mode prescribed by the Constitution of the United States. I am unable to perceive how a principle declared by the supreme law of the land to be essential in all prosecutions for crime against the United States can be recognized as applicable to a part of the people subject to the sovereign jurisdiction of the United States, and yet be denied to another part of the people equally subject to the national authority. No tribunal or officer deriving its [537] authority *from the United States can disregard the mandatory injunctions of the Constitution by which the government of the United States is created, and under the sanction of which alone that government exists and performs its functions. It may be that the application of these principles to the Philippine Islands and to the people who inhabit them may, particularly in criminal prosecutions, prove sometimes to be inconvenient. But no authority exists anywhere to set aside plain provisions of the supreme law of the land, and substitute the law of convenience for the written fundamental law.

Mr. Justice McKenna, with whom concurs Mr. Justice White, dissenting:

I am unable to concur in the judgment of the court.

When the United States acquired the Philippine Islands, the system of jurisprudence which prevailed there was different from our Anglo-Saxon jurisprudence. Trial by jury was unknown. The trial court, called the court of first instance, had full authority to find the facts and adjudge the law, subject, however, to a review by a higher court of both the facts and law.

This system was continued substantially by the orders of the President and the act of July 1, 1902, providing for the government of the islands.

Therefore, when Kepner v. United States, 195 U. S. 100, 49 L. ed. 114, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 797, was decided, I was of opinion that, under such a system, there could be no justifiable foundation for the plea of autrefois acquit, resulting from a judgment of acquittal by the lower court, when such judgment had been reversed by the higher court; in other words, that there could be no foundation for the plea of autrefois acquit arising from an acquittal in a case where the acquittal was subsequently reversed as a result of a right to review, not only the law, but the facts, given by the very statutes which provided for the trial. The court, however, decided otherwise, and I joined in a dissent to the opinion. The Kepner Case is not overruled. It is said to be so clearly distinguishable as *not to call for much attention. [538] I think otherwise. What was the Kepner Case and what is this?

Kepner was charged with the crime of embezzlement. He was tried in the court of first instance, without a jury, and acquitted. Upon the appeal of the United States to the supreme court of the Philippine Islands, the judgment of the court of first instance was reversed, and he was found guilty, and sentenced to a term of imprisonment. This court reversed the judgment, and discharged Kepner on the ground that, by his trial in the court of first instance, he had been in jeopardy, and to try him again upon the merits, even in an appellate court, was to put him a second time in jeopardy for the same offense. In the case at bar the plaintiffs in error were charged with murder. They were tried in the court of first instance without a jury. They were convicted of simple assault. They appealed to the supreme court, and that court reversed the judgment of the court of first instance, and convicted them of murder in the second degree. I will not stop to demonstrate that the conviction of the lesser crime of assault was an acquittal of the greater charge of murder. It has been made unnecessary by clear concession in the opinion that plaintiffs in error were acquitted of murder. Indeed (though it probably makes no difference in principle), it was explicitly so found and pronounced in the judgment of the court of first instance. There is an exact parallel, therefore, between this case and the Kepner Case in all particulars but one. In the Kepner Case the appeal was by the United States; in the case at bar it was by the accused; and this difference is especially made the ground of decision. It is, in effect, held that because the defendants (plaintiffs in error) appealed and sought a review, as authorized by the statute, of the minor offense for which they were convicted, the United States was given the right to try them for the greater offense for which they were acquitted. In some of the cases quoted in the opinion such a result is said to arise from the consent of the accused, deemed to be given by taking an appeal. An accused would [539] not purposely and consciously *appeal from an acquittal of a grave crime, and cast from himself the immunity that such an acquittal gives him. Should such consent be imputed? Let it be remembered that we are dealing with a great right, I may even say a constitutional right, for the opinion of the court discusses the case as though it were from a circuit court of the United States. Should such a right be narrowly or grudgingly considered? Should it be put in balance with other rights, and lost by their exercise? I think that the guaranties of constitutions and laws should not be so construed. The life and liberty of the citizen are precious things,—precious to the state as to the citizen; and concern for them is entirely consistent with a firm administration of criminal justice. I submit that the state seeks no convictions except in legal ways, and because it does not, it affords means of review of erroneous rulings and judgments, and freely affords such means. It does not clog them with conditions or forfeit by their exercise great and constitutional rights. Yet, in my judgment, such is the effect of the decision just rendered.

The opinion says that as the accused takes up the whole record for review, "he thereby waives the benefit of the provision in question [once in jeopardy] for the purpose of attempting to gain what he thinks is a greater benefit, viz., a review and reversal by the higher court of the judgment of conviction." I repeat again, that constitutional guaranties and statutory remedies should not be put in such barter; that a defendant should not be required to give up the protection of a just (it must be so regarded for the sake of the argument) acquittal of one crime as the price of obtaining a review of an unjust conviction of another crime.

In the opinion in the Kepner Case it was said: "It is not necessary to determine in this case whether the jeopardy provision in the Bill of Rights would have become part of the law of the islands without congressional legislation." Resting the decision on that legislation, the court further observed: "How can it be successfully maintained that these expressions of fundamental rights, which have been the subject of frequent *adjudication in the [540] courts of this country, and the maintenance of which has been ever deemed essential to our government, could be used by Congress in any other sense than that which has been placed upon them in construing the instrument from which they were taken? It is a well-settled rule of construction that language used in a statute, which has a settled and well-known meaning, sanctioned by judicial decision, is presumed to be used in that sense by the legislative body. The Abbotsford (The Abbotsford v. Johnson) 98 U. S. 440, 25 L. ed. 168."

If this language expresses a proper and determining test of once in jeopardy against the appeal of the United States, it must also be the test of once in jeopardy against the appeal of the accused in the case at bar. By that test the judgment should be reversed. Here and there may be found a decision which supports the exposition of once in jeopardy expressed in the opinion. Opposed to it is the general concensus of opinion of American textbooks on criminal law and the overwhelming weight of American decided cases. Which may we suppose Congress adopted in its legislation, the interpretation of a few cases (able, it may be, and highly sanctioned by the reputation of the courts that delivered them), or the interpretation of the courts of a large number of the states of the Union? See cases in the margin.†

The CHIEF JUSTICE also dissented.

---

†Alabama.—Bell v. State, 48 Ala. 684, 17 Am. Rep. 40; Berry v. State, 65 Ala. 117; Sylvester v. State, 72 Ala. 201.

California.—People v. Gilmore, 4 Cal. 376, 60 Am. Dec. 620; People v. Apgar, 35 Cal. 389; People v. Gordon, 99 Cal. 227, 33 Pac. 901.

Florida.—Johnson v. State, 27 Fla. 245, 9 So. 208; Golding v. State, 31 Fla. 262, 12 So. 525.

Illinois.—Brennan v. People, 15 Ill. 511; Barnett v. People, 54 Ill. 325.

Iowa.—State v. Tweedy, 11 Iowa, 350; State v. Helm, 92 Iowa, 540, 61 N. W. 246.

Louisiana.—State v. Dennison, 31 La. Ann. 847; State v. Victor, 36 La. Ann. 978.

Michigan.—People v. Knapp, 26 Mich. 112, 114; People v. Comstock, 55 Mich. 405, 407, 21 N. W. 384.

Minnesota.—State v. Lessing, 16 Minn. 75, Gil. 64.

Mississippi.—Morris v. State, 8 Smedes & M. 762; Hurt v. State, 25 Miss. 378, 59 Am. Dec. 225.

Missouri.—Prior to alteration effected by constitutional amendment of 1875, as to which see State v. Simms, 71 Mo. 538, in State v. Ross, 29 Mo. 32; State v. Kattlemann, 35 Mo. 105; State v. Brannon, 55 Mo. 63, 17 Am. Rep. 643.

New York.—Prior to alteration effected by the Code of Procedure, as to which see People v. Palmer, 109 N. Y. 413, 4 Am. St. Rep. 477, 17 N. E. 213, in Guenther v. People, 24 N. Y. 100; People v. Dowling, 84 N. Y. 478; and see People v. Cignarale, 110 N. Y. 23, 30, 17 N. E. 135.

Oregon.—State v. Steeves, 29 Or. 85, 43 Pac. 947.

Tennessee.—Campbell v. State, 9 Yerg. 333, 30 Am. Dec. 417; Slaughter v. State, 6 Humph. 410, 415.

Texas.—Jones v. State, 13 Tex. 168, 62 Am. Dec. 550.

Virginia.—Before alteration by statute, as to which see Briggs v. Com. 82 Va. 554, doctrine enforced in Stuart v. Com. 28 Gratt. 950. Reinstated by later statute, as to which see Forbes v. Com. 90 Va. 550, 19 S. E. 164, and Benton v. Com. 91 Va. 782, 21 S. E. 495.

Washington.—State v. Murphy, 13 Wash. 229, 43 Pac. 44.

Wisconsin.—State v. Martin, 30 Wis. 216, 11 Am. Rep. 567; State v. Hill, 30 Wis. 416; State v. Belden, 33 Wis. 120, 14 Am. Rep. 748. But not in cases of misdemeanors,—Rasmussen v. State, 63 Wis. 1, 22 N. W. 835.

Georgia, owing to constitutional provisions, and by statute in the states of Indiana, Kansas, and Kentucky, when a new trial is granted on motion of an accused, he may be tried again for the greater offense of which he was acquitted on the first trial. Morris v. State, 1 Blackf. 37; Veatch v. State, 60 Ind. 291; State v. McCord, 8 Kan. 232, 12 Am. Rep. 469; Com. v. Arnold, 83 Ky. 1, 4 Am. St. Rep. 114.

*ALLEN C. CLARK, Sarah P. Clark, His[541] Wife, and Barton L. Walker, Appts.,

v.

JOHN E. ROLLER, Intervener. (No. 72.)

JOHN E. ROLLER, Intervener, Appt.,

v.

ALLEN C. CLARK, Sarah P. Clark, and Barton L. Walker. (No. 451.)

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 541–546.)

1. Appeal—final decree.—A decree of the court of appeals of the District of Columbia, although involving a decision upon the merits of the case, is not final for the purpose of an appeal to the Supreme Court of the United States, where it contemplates and requires further proceedings not inconsistent with its opinion.

2. Partition—effect of adverse possession.—Proceedings in a partition suit in which a possession adverse to complainants is asserted under a tax title should be postponed until complainants shall have established their title at law.

3. Judgment—effect of dismissal as to a party—right to intervene if subsequent proceedings affect his interest.—A party asserting possession of real property under a tax title may obtain relief by intervention against proceedings in a partition suit which would cast a cloud upon his title after the bill has been dismissed as to him on the grounds of lack of jurisdiction, multifariousness, and laches, barring complainants from equitable relief against him.

4. Appeal—final decree.—A decree confirming the report of commissioners appointed in a partition suit is not final for the purpose of appeal, where the plan adopted was dependent upon a sale of a part of the property, which had not taken place, and which required the confirmation of the court.

[Nos. 72, 451.]

Argued November 9, 10, 1905. Decided December 4, 1905.

APPEAL from the Court of Appeals of the District of Columbia to review a decree which affirmed a decree of the Supreme Court of that District, dismissing a suit for the partition of real property in which an adverse possession under a tax title is asserted. Modified by allowing complainants a reasonable time to establish their title at law, and as so modified, affirmed.

NOTE.—As to what judgments or decrees are final for purposes of review—see notes to Brush Electric Co. v. Electric Improv. Co. 2 C. C. A. 379; Central Trust Co. v. Madden, 17 C. C. A. 238; Prescott & A. C. R. Co. v. Atchison, T. & S. F. R. Co. 28 C. C. A. 482; Gibbons v. Ogden, 5 L. ed. U. S. 302; and Schlosser v. Hemphill, 49 L. ed. U. S. 1001.

On the right of one out of possession to partition—see note to Weston v. Stoddard, 20 L.R.A. 624.

See same case below, 19 App. D. C. 539, on first appeal.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Mr. Leo Simmons argued the cause and filed a brief for Clark et al.:

There need be no authorities cited to this court to sustain the proposition that a decree dismissing one party from a suit is a final decree.

As to the decree of June 30th, 1896, confirming the report of the commissioners in partition, and whether or not the same was final, see—

Washington G. & A. R. Co. v. Bradley (Washington, G. & A. R. Co. v. Washington) 7 Wall. 575, 19 L. ed. 274; Thomson v. Dean (Dean v. Nelson) 7 Wall. 342, 19 L. ed. 94; Bank of Lewisburg v. Sheffey, 140 U. S. 445, 35 L. ed. 493, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 755; Willard v. Willard, 145 U. S. 116, 36 L. ed. 644, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 818. See also Mackall v. Willoughby, 6 App. D. C. 125, 167 U. S. 681, 42 L. ed. 323, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 954; St. Louis, I. M. & S. R. Co. v. Southern Exp. Co. 108 U. S. 24, 27 L. ed. 638, 2 Sup. Ct. Rep. 6; Winthrop Iron Co. v. Meeker, 109 U. S. 180, 27 L. ed. 898, 3 Sup. Ct. Rep. 111; Ex parte Norton, 108 U. S. 237, 27 L. ed. 709, 2 Sup. Ct. Rep. 490.

The second attempt of Roller to get into the case was nothing more than a motion for rehearing, which was not subject to an appeal.

Clerks' Invest. Co. v. Sydnor, 19 App. D. C. 97.

The ruling of the court of appeals in the case at bar is wholly inconsistent with any other case it has passed upon.

District of Columbia v. Humphries, 11 App. D. C. 68; Chisholm v. Cissell, 12 App. D. C. 180.

The order of May 5, 1896, dismissing Roller, was either final or interlocutory. If final, certainly it was incumbent upon him to complete his appeal in forty days. If not final, it was necessary to ask for the allowance of a special appeal. The court of appeals in the case of National Cable Co. v. Washington & G. R. Co. 8 App. D. C. 478, held that an application for the allowance of an appeal, made thirty days after the order was passed, came too late.

Mr. John E. Roller in propria persona argued the cause, and, with Mr. O. B. Roller, filed a brief for himself as intervener.

Mr. Justice Holmes delivered the opinion of the court:

This is an appeal from a decree dismissing a bill brought by the Clarks for partition of certain land in the District of Columbia, and a cross appeal by Roller, to protect his rights in case the whole record should be held to be brought up by the appeal. A short history of the case is necessary to make the questions intelligible. The bill was filed on November 24, 1893. On January 23, 1894, Roller petitioned to be made a party, on the ground that he claimed the title, and two days later his petition was granted. On February 13 he answered, setting up a tax title in himself and the exercise of all rights of ownership and possession for nearly half a century, and also a previous decree between the parties. By a supplemental bill the plaintiffs alleged defects in the tax title, and prayed that it might be declared void. The previous decree referred to was rendered in an earlier suit, which was like the present, except that it made Roller a party. In that suit Roller demurred on the grounds of laches, and that the bill ought not to be maintained until the *plaintiffs had established their title at [543] law, and the bill was dismissed as against Roller in general terms. There was testimony that the judge stated that he dismissed the bill for laches and on the other grounds set up.

On May, 5, 1896, the present bill was dismissed as to Roller, on the grounds that the court had no jurisdiction as against him, that the bill was made multifarious by joining him, and that the plaintiffs were barred from equitable relief against him by laches. The next day the court ordered partition and appointed commissioners. The same month Roller entered an appeal from these decrees, which, however, was dismissed on October 24, 1898, for failure to give security for costs. On May 29, 1896, the commissioners made return, and on June 30, 1896, their report was confirmed. A conveyance of a part of the property was ordered, and a sale of the rest. It was further ordered that, on a ratification of the sale by the court, and payment, the purchase money should be brought into court, to be disposed of under its direction. A sale was not advertised until June, 1901. On July 26, 1901, Roller made a new application to come in, on the ground that the proceedings should have stopped after the decision and decree as to him, that he was in possession, and that the sale had not taken place, and if it did would be a cloud upon his title. On September 9, 1901, answers were filed to this petition, denying Roller's title and possession, and setting up that the possession was in one of the defendants in partition, and that the matters alleged had been adjudicated by the decrees in the cause. On November 6, of the same year, Roller's new petition was denied by the supreme court. He appealed, and in 1902, the mandate being filed on February 20, 1903, the decree of the supreme court was reversed by the court of appeals of the District, and the cause was remanded for further proceedings not inconsistent with the opinion of the court. The opinion is reported in 19 App. D. C. 539.

In that opinion it was stated that the proper course was to suspend proceedings under the bill in order to give the com-[544] plainants *reasonable time to establish their title at law. An application for rehearing was denied, and it was stated that the plaintiffs virtually conceded that the decree of partition was at least premature, but relied on the ground that it became final at the expiration of the term at which it was rendered. The plaintiffs, on November 27, 1903, filed a paper alleging that they were in possession, and that the matter was adjudicated as against Roller, and stood upon the record. Thereupon, on January 6, 1904, a final decree was entered by the supreme court, dismissing the bill without prejudice. This was affirmed by the court of appeals on May 24, 1904. From the latter decree the parties have taken the present appeals. It will be seen from what had preceded that the bill was dismissed because the plaintiffs, by their election of November 27, 1903, had declined to accept the suggested suspension of the bill and to proceed at law. The question is whether, generally and specially in the stage the case had reached, the condition attached to further proceeding with this cause was right.

A preliminary question is raised by the defendant Roller, who argues that the previous decree of the court of appeals, reversing the denial of his petition to come into the case a second time, was a final decree and settled the merits of the case. No doubt it did pass upon the merits, as we have explained, but it was not a final decree. It contemplated and required further proceedings; and not until the plaintiffs had elected to stand upon the record could it be known what those proceedings would be. Only then was it determined that the bill should be dismissed rather than suspended with a possibility that, after a suit at law, the partition might go on.

It was adjudicated in the other suit that the plaintiffs were not entitled to have Roller's claims disposed of summarily as an incident to a suit for partition, and therefore they cannot be heard to maintain in this suit that those claims are absurd. Indeed, whatever may be the final result, it is obvious that Roller shows a good deal more than a naked averment of title. That he holds under tax sale is not disputed, although it is [545] *argued that the sale was void. He kept the land fenced from shortly after his purchase in 1887 into 1892, and he sets up that his possession continued when the suit was brought. He paid the taxes on the land, except for one year, and he says that the payment for that year was omitted by oversight. So far as general principles go, we certainly should not reverse the decision of the court of appeals that the petitioners ought to establish their title at law before partition should be decreed. Wilkin v. Wilkin, 1 Johns. Ch. 111; Giffard v. Williams, L. R. 5 Ch. 546. "A bill for partition cannot be made the means of trying a disputed title." Bolton v. Bolton, L. R. 7 Eq. 298 note, 300; Potter v. Waller, 2 De G. & S. 410, 417.

It would seem from what we have quoted that this was pretty nearly admitted before the court of appeals, but it was and is argued that the point was not open. It is said in the first place that when the bill was dismissed as against Roller, on May 5, 1896, that was a final decree as to him, and that he could not be heard later in this court. No doubt the decree was final as to what it decided, and he is not likely to quarrel with it. But it would be an extraordinary result of a decision that nothing could be done to a party's prejudice in a suit, if it were held to preclude him from reappearing at a later stage to protest when the court was about to cast a cloud upon his title. If later unexpected features arose, we see nothing in the dismissal of the bill as against Roller to prevent his again being heard. That dismissal gave him a right to expect that a sale of property to which he was recognized as having a colorable claim would not be ordered until the title of the plaintiffs was made good. Even if he properly should have been allowed to remain a party to the bill in order to make sure that no decree should be made prejudicial to his rights, as to which we need not express an opinion, the dismissal of him from the suit, on the ground that no such decree could be made, cannot be turned into a weapon against him to prevent his objecting to the decree when it is made in fact.

It is argued further that the decree of June 30, 1896 confirming *the commissioners' [546] report, was final. But this cannot be so. The set-off of a parcel to certain parties was part of a scheme of division by which other parties were to be paid in money, and those to whom the land was set off were to receive a small additional sum. The whole plan, therefore, was dependent upon a sale of the remaining land, which had not taken place, and which required the confirmation of the court. If the sale produced a much smaller sum than expected, the set-off necessarily would fall, and a new order would be required. The whole matter was in fieri, and subject to change if, for any reason, it became necessary or desirable to change the plan. See Iowa v. Illinois, 151 U. S. 238, 38 L. ed. 145, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 333; McGourkey v. Toledo & O. C. R. Co. 146 U. S. 536, 36 L. ed. 1079, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 170; Keystone Manganese & Iron Co. v. Martin, 132 U. S. 91, 33 L. ed. 275, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 32. In Willard v. Willard, 145 U. S. 116, 36 L. ed. 644, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 818, it is true, an appeal was entertained from a general decree of sale for partition. The question whether the decree was final was not considered, but there was no such element of uncertainty in the scheme as in the present. Whatever the result of this sale, it was the proper means of division, and was to take place in any event.

The argument took a wider range than the matters which we have discussed, but we deem nothing further material for the decision of the case. The defendant Roller seeks to have us now consider his title and declare it good. But it is obvious that he gets all that he can hope for by his intervention when partition is postponed to a trial at law. With regard to the plaintiffs' contention that they are in possession, if they desire to rest on that, they can. If they prefer to sue and to settle the matter, it is not likely that Roller will deny the possession which in this case he affirms. But, to secure the plaintiffs' rights, the decree may be modified so as to allow them a reasonable time to sue, the bill to be dismissed unless they do so and it may be made a condition of the decree that, in case a suit is brought, Roller shall admit that he is in possession, as he now avers.

Decree modified and affirmed.

---

[547] *THOMAS M. RIGGINS, Appt.,
v.
UNITED STATES.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 547–551.)

Habeas corpus—to test sufficiency of indictment.—The sufficiency of an indictment found in a Federal district court and removed to a circuit court cannot, in the absence of exceptional circumstances, be tested by habeas corpus in the latter court, on the application of the accused, who is in custody under a capias issued on the indictment, made before he has been compelled to take any step in the cause.

[No. 169.]

Submitted November 9, 1905. Decided December 11, 1905.

APPEAL from the Circuit Court of the United States for the Northern District of Alabama to review an order discharging a writ of habeas corpus to inquire into a detention under a capias issued on an indictment found in the District Court for the Northern Division of the Northern District of that state, and removed to the Circuit Court. Reversed and remanded with directions to quash the writ of habeas corpus and dismiss the petition without prejudice.

See same case below, 134 Fed. 404.

Statement by Mr. Chief Justice Fuller:

Riggins and Powell were indicted under §§ 5508, 5509, Revised Statutes, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 3712, in the district court for the northern division of the northern district of Alabama, at the October term, 1904, thereof; and on the 24th day of October, 1904, the indictment was remitted to the next session of the circuit court in and for that division and district by order of the circuit court, the district judge presiding. A capias was issued to take Riggins into custody to answer the indictment, October 26, 1904. On the same day a severance was ordered as between Powell and Riggins, and thereupon Riggins filed his petition for habeas corpus; the writ was issued; the marshal made his return; the circuit court, held by the district judge, heard the case, and discharged the writ, and remanded Riggins to custody; a bill of exceptions was signed and sealed, and an appeal to this court was prayed, allowed, and perfected, by the giving of a bond in the penal sum of $250, which was approved by the judge; certificate of certain questions of jurisdiction was filed; as also assignments of error; and a citation was issued and served; all on the said 26th day of October, 1904. The opinion of the district judge will be found reported 134 Fed. 404.

[548] *The petition for habeas corpus alleged that Riggins was restrained of his liberty by the United States marshal under the capias issued on the indictment, a copy of which capias was attached, as also a copy of the indictment. That indictment in brief set up that Riggins and others entered into a conspiracy to take one Maples, a citizen of the United States, of African descent, from the state officers, to whose custody he had been lawfully committed under a charge of murder, and to hang him until he was dead, and that said conspiracy was formed and its purpose executed because Maples was of African descent. The petition averred that the indictment charged no offense punishable under the laws of the United States; that the indictment did not show that Riggins had violated any right, privilege, or immunity guaranteed to Maples under the Constitution of the United States; or that any Federal law was violated providing for the punishment of such offense; and that it did not appear from the indictment that the conspiracy, combination, or confedcration therein alleged was formed or entered into under any law of the state of Alabama, or that any law of that state authorized its citizens or other persons to enter into any conspiracy to injure, threaten, or oppress Maples by denying to him, by reason of his race, the right, privilege, and immunity of a trial by jury to determine his guilt or innocence on an indictment for murder pending against him in the courts of Alabama.

---

NOTE.—On habeas corpus in the Federal courts—see notes to Re Reinitz, 4 L.R.A. 236; State ex rel. Cochran v. Winters, 10 L.R.A. 616; Re Huse, 25 C. C. A. 4; and Tinsley v. Anderson, 43 L. ed. U. S. 91.

As to questions reviewable by habeas corpus—see notes to State v. Jackson, 1 L.R.A. 373; Bion's Appeal, 11 L.R.A. 694; United States v. Hamilton, 1 L. ed. U. S. 490; Re Carll, 27 L. ed. U. S. 288; Oteiza y Cortes v. Jacobus, 34 L. ed. U. S. 464; Pearce v. Texas, 39 L. ed. U. S. 164; and Glass v. The Betsey, 1 L. ed. U. S. 489.

Mr. Lawrence Cooper submitted the cause for appellant.

Assistant to the Attorney General Purdy submitted the cause for appellee. Mr. Otis J. Carlton was on his brief.

Mr. Chief Justice Fuller delivered the opinion of the court:

It is settled that the writ of habeas corpus will not issue unless the court under whose warrant petitioner is held is without jurisdiction, and that it cannot be used merely to correct errors. Ordinarily the writ will not be granted when there is a [549] remedy *by writ of error or appeal, yet, in rare and exceptional cases, it may be issued, although such remedy exists.

In New York v. Eno, 155 U. S. 89, 39 L. ed. 80, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 30, It was held that Congress intended to invest the courts of the Union and the justices and judges thereof with power, upon writ of habeas corpus, to restore to liberty any person within their respective jurisdictions held in custody, by whatever authority, in violation of the Constitution or any law or treaty of the United States; that the statute contemplated that cases might arise when the power thus conferred should be exercised during the progress of proceedings instituted in a state court against the petitioner on account of the very matter presented for determination by the writ of habeas corpus; but that the statute did not imperatively require the circuit court by that writ to wrest the petitioner from the custody of the state officers in advance of his trial in the state court; and that while the circuit court had the power to do so, and could discharge the accused in advance of his trial, if restrained in violation of the Constitution, it was not bound in every case to exercise such power immediately upon application being made for the writ. The conclusion was that in a proper exercise of discretion, the circuit court should not discharge the petitioner until the state court had finally acted upon the case, when it could be determined whether the accused, if convicted, should be put to his writ of error or the question determined on habeas corpus whether he was restrained of his liberty in violation of the Constitution of the United States.

These principles were fully discussed in the cases of the appeals of Royall from judgments in habeas corpus in the circuit court of the United States for the eastern district of Virginia. Ex parte Royall, 117 U. S. 241, 29 L. ed. 868, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 734. And, in addition, Royall made an original application to this court for a writ of habeas corpus, which was denied upon the grounds stated in the previous cases. 117 U. S. 254, 29 L. ed. 872, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 742.

While special reasons may exist why this should be the rule in respect of proceedings in state courts, which are not applicable *to [550] cases in the courts of the United States, nevertheless, we have frequently applied the same principle to such cases. Re Chapman, 156 U. S. 211, 39 L. ed. 401, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 331; Re Lancaster, 137 U. S. 393, 34 L. ed. 713, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 117; Re Huntington, 137 U. S. 63, 34 L. ed. 567, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 4; Ex parte Mirzan, 119 U. S. 584, 30 L. ed. 513, 7 Sup. Ct. Rep. 341.

In Chapman's Case we held that it was a judicious and salutary general rule not to interfere with proceedings pending in the courts of the District of Columbia or in the circuit courts of the United States in advance of their final determination. And we said:

"We are impressed with the conviction that the orderly administration of justice will be better subserved by our declining to exercise appellate jurisdiction in the mode desired until the conclusion of the proceedings. If judgment goes against petitioner, and is affirmed by the court of appeals, and a writ of error lies, that is the proper and better remedy for any cause of complaint he may have. If, on the other hand, a writ of error does not lie to this court, and the supreme court of the district was absolutely without jurisdiction, the petitioner may then seek his remedy through application for a writ of habeas corpus. We discover no exceptional circumstances which demand our interposition in advance of adjudication by the courts of the District upon the merits of the case before them."

In Re Lancaster, this court denied an application for leave to file a petition for habeas corpus in the circumstances stated in the opinion, which opinion was as follows:

"The petitioners were indicted under §§ 5508 and 5509 of the Revised Statutes, on the 20th of November, 1890, in the circuit court for the southern district of Georgia, and have been taken into custody. They have not invoked the action of the circuit court upon the sufficiency of the indictment by a motion to quash or otherwise, but ask leave to file in this court a petition for a writ of habeas corpus upon the ground that the matters and things set forth and charged do not constitute any offense or offenses under the laws of the United States, or cognizable in the circuit court, and that for other [551] reasons the indictment *cannot be sustained. In this posture of the case we must decline to interfere."

We are of opinion that the rule therein laid down should have been followed by the circuit court.

True, the present case is not one of the issue of the writ of habeas corpus in respect of confinement under state authority, nor of an application to this court for the writ, but is the case of custody taken under a capias issued on an indictment returned in the district court and removed to the circuit court, and an application to that court for the writ before defendant had been compelled to take any step in the cause.

Defendant might have raised his objections to the indictment by motion to quash or otherwise. If the indictment were held good, as we are advised by the opinion of the circuit court it would have been, defendant would have pleaded and gone to trial, and might have been acquitted. If convicted, the remedy by writ of error was open to him.

There is nothing in this record to disclose that there were any special circumstances which justified a departure from the regular course of judicial procedure. That departure is contrary to the views we have heretofore explicitly expressed, and, if we acquiesce in this method of invoking our jurisdiction, we shall find ourselves obligated to decide questions in advance of final adjudication, contrary to the settled rule, and to many decisions we have heretofore announced upon the subject.

If we should affirm or reverse the final order in this case, we should recognize a proceeding below which we would not ourselves have entertained; and we are not disposed to hold that this manner of testing such questions as are argued here ought to have been pursued.

Final order reversed and cause remanded with a direction to the Circuit Court to quash the writ of habeas corpus, and dismiss the petition without prejudice.

---

*PEOPLE OF THE STATE OF NEW YORK [552] ex rel. SIMON LIEBERMAN, Plff. in Err.,

v.

JOHN E. VAN DE CARR, Warden, etc., Deft. in Err.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 552–564.)

1. Constitutional law—due process of law—licensing milk business—discretion of board of health.—A provision of the sanitary code of the city of New York which is construed by the state courts to confer discretionary power on the board of health, within reasonable limits, to grant or withhold permits to sell milk in that city, cannot be deemed to be lacking in the due process of law guaranteed by the 14th Amendment to the Federal Constitution, in the absence of any showing of arbitrary or oppressive exercise of such power.

2. Constitutional law—equal protection of the laws—municipal regulation of milk business.—Singling out the milk business in the city of New York as a proper subject for regulation does not deny the equal protection of the laws, where all milk dealers in the city are equally affected by such regulation.

[No. 71.]

Argued and submitted November 9, 1905. Decided December 11, 1905.

IN ERROR to the Supreme Court of the State of New York to review a judgment entered pursuant to a mandate of the Court of Appeals of that state, which had affirmed a judgment of the Appellate Division of the Supreme Court for the First Department, which had, in turn, affirmed an order of the Supreme Court at a special term held in and for the county of New

---

NOTE.—As to what constitutes due process of law—see notes to Kuntz v. Sumption, 2 L.R.A. 655; Re Gannon, 5 L.R.A. 359; Ulman v. Baltimore, 11 L.R.A. 224; Gilman v. Tucker, 13 L.R.A. 304; People v. O'Brien, 2 L.R.A. 255; Pearson v. Yewdall, 24 L. ed. U. S. 436; and Wilson v. North Carolina, 42 L. ed. U. S. 865.

As to the validity of class legislation—see notes to State v. Goodwill, 6 L.R.A. 621; and State v. Loomis, 21 L.R.A. 789.

As to constitutional equality of privileges, immunities, and protection—see note to Louisville Safety Vault & T. Co. v. Louisville & N. R. Co. 14 L.R.A. 579.

York, dismissing a writ of habeas corpus to inquire into a detention on a charge of violating a section of the sanitary code of that city, prohibiting the sale of milk without a permit from the board of health. Affirmed.

See same case below, in appellate division, 81 App. Div. 128, 80 N. Y. Supp. 1108. In court of appeals, 175 N. Y. 440, 67 N. E. 913.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Mr. Frank Moss argued the cause and filed a brief for plaintiff in error:

The language of the regulation in question permits unjust discrimination and favoritism, and the evils of its abuse cannot be corrected by mandamus.

Yick Wo v. Hopkins, 118 U. S. 356, 30 L. ed. 220, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1064; Noel v. People, 187 Ill. 587, 52 L.R.A. 287, 79 Am. St. Rep. 238, 58 N. E. 616; Gundling v. Chicago, 177 U. S. 183, 44 L. ed. 725, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 633; Dunham v. Rochester, 5 Cow. 462; St. Paul v. Laidler, 2 Minn. 190, 72 Am. Dec. 89, Gil. 159.

A city ordinance prohibiting the storage by any person within the city limits of inflammable oils, except upon permission from the common council, leaving it to the common council to say whether a particular place is suitable for the purpose, or a particular person is a proper one to whom to grant permission, and allowing the permission to be revoked at the will of the council, is invalid because of the power of arbitrary discrimination it vests in the council.

Richmond v. Dudley, 129 Ind. 112, 13 L.R.A. 587, 28 Am. St. Rep. 180, 28 N. E. 312.

A city ordinance making it unlawful to carry on the business of a tannery within 1 mile of the city limits without a permit from the city council, and which does not define the conditions on which tanneries may be conducted, or on which such permit shall issue, but leaves the propriety of granting such permit to the uncontrolled discretion of the board of health and common council, is invalid.

Plymouth v. Schultheis, 135 Ind. 339, 35 N. E. 12.

A city ordinance which declares that it shall not be lawful for anyone to establish a private market for the sale of meats, fish, vegetables, etc., without permission of the city council is illegal and void, since the discretion vested by such an ordinance in the city council is in no way regulated or controlled, leaving it within the power of the council to grant or refuse the privilege at pleasure.

State v. Dubarry, 44 La. Ann. 1117, 11 So. 718; State v. Deffes, 45 La. Ann. 658, 12 So. 841.

An ordinance which provides that no person shall erect, add to, or generally change, any building without first obtaining the permission of the board of aldermen is void in reserving to the board the arbitrary power to refuse the application of one person and grant that of another.

State v. Tenant, 110 N. C. 609. 15 L.R.A. 423, 28 Am. St. Rep. 715, 14 S. E. 387.

When the legislature passes an act which plainly transcends the limits of the police power of the state, it is the duty of the judiciary to pronounce its invalidity, and to nullify the legislative attempt to invade the citizens' rights.

People ex rel. Nechamcus v. Warden, 144 N. Y. 535, 27 L.R.A. 718, 39 N. E. 686.

The validity of a statute is not to be determined by what has been done in a particular instance, but by what may be done under it.

Rochester v. West, 164 N. Y. 514, 53 L.R.A. 548, 79 Am. St. Rep. 650, 58 N. E. 673.

Mr. Theobore Connoly submitted the cause for defendant in error:

The 14th Amendment does not take away from the state the power to pass police regulations affecting the health, safety, and morals of the people.

Barbier v. Connolly, 113 U. S. 27, 31, 28 L. ed. 923, 924, 5 Sup. Ct. Rep. 357; Minncapolis & St. L. R. Co. v. Beckwith, 129 U. S. 26–29, 32 L. ed. 585, 586, 9 Sup. Ct. Rep. 207; Giozza v. Tiernan, 148 U. S. 657, 37 L. ed. 599, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 721; Jones v. Brim, 165 U. S. 180–182, 41 L. ed. 677, 678, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 282.

The presumption which exists in favor of the constitutionality of a statute is especially strong in the case of statutes intended for the protection of the health and comfort of the community; and it will be presumed that each state legislature has most knowledge of the needs of its people.

Powell v. Pennsylvania, 127 U. S. 678, 684, 32 L. ed. 253, 256, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 992, 1257; Atkin v. Kansas, 191 U. S. 207–223, 48 L. ed. 148–158, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 124.

There is no need of argument to prove that one of the fundamental duties of the state is to exercise the police power to protect and preserve the health of its people.

Com. v. Alger, 7 Cush. 53; Boston Beer Co. v. Massachusetts, 97 U. S. 25, 24 L. ed. 989; Hawker v. New York, 170 U. S. 189, 42 L. ed. 1002, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 573; Jacobson v. Massachusetts, 197 U. S. 11, 49 L. ed. 643, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 358.

Health measures taking the form of legislative enactments or ordinances passed under legislative authority by the municipal departments of cities, which regulate the conditions under which the supply of milk to the community may be had, are valid police regulations.

Fischer v. St. Louis, 194 U. S. 361, 48 L. ed. 1018, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 673; Johnson v. Simonton, 43 Cal. 242; State v. Schlenker, 112 Iowa, 642, 51 L.R.A. 347, 84 Am. St. Rep. 360, 84 N. W. 698; Kansas v. Cook, 38 Mo. App. 660; Sanders v. Com. 25 Ky. L. Rep. 1165, 77 S. W. 358; State v. Fourcade, 45 La. Ann. 717, 40 Am. St. Rep. 249, 13 So. 187; State v. Dupaquier, 46 La. Ann. 577, 26 L.R.A. 162, 49 Am. St. Rep. 334, 15 So. 502; State v. Stone, 46 La. Ann. 147, 15 So. 11; State v. Rogers, 95 Me. 94, 85 Am. St. Rep. 395, 49 Atl. 564; Deems v. Baltimore, 80 Md. 164, 26 L.R.A. 541, 45 Am. St. Rep. 339, 30 Atl. 648; State v. Broadbelt, 89 Md. 565, 45 L.R.A. 433, 73 Am. St. Rep. 201, 43 Atl. 771; Com. v. Farren, 9 Allen, 489; Com. v. Nichols, 10 Allen, 199; Com. v. Waite, 11 Allen, 264, 87 Am. Dec. 711; Com. v. Evans, 132 Mass. 11; Com. v. Luscomb, 130 Mass. 42; State v. Nelson, 66 Minn. 166, 34 L.R.A. 318, 61 Am. St. Rep. 399, 68 N. W. 1066; State v. Crescent Creamery Co. 83 Minn. 284, 54 L.R.A. 466, 85 Am. St. Rep. 464, 86 N. W. 107; Littlefield v. State, 42 Neb. 223, 28 L.R.A. 588, 47 Am. St. Rep. 697, 60 N. W. 724; State v. Campbell, 64 N. H. 402, 10 Am. St. Rep. 419, 13 Atl. 585; State, Shivers, Prosecutor, v. Newton, 45 N. J. L. 469; Polinsky v. People, 73 N. Y. 65; People v. Cipperly, 37 Hun, 324, 101 N. Y. 634, 4 N. E. 107; People v. West, 106 N. Y. 293, 60 Am. Rep. 452, 12 N. E. 610; People v. Kibler, 106 N. Y. 321, 12 N. E. 795; People v. Briggs, 114 N. Y. 56, 20 N. E. 820; People v. Biesecker, 169 N. Y. 53, 57 L.R.A. 178, 88 Am. St. Rep. 534, 61 N. E. 990; People v. Bowen, 182 N. Y. 10, 74 N. E. 489; State v. Smith, 10 R. I. 258; State v. Smyth, 14 R. I. 100, 51 Am. Rep. 344; State v. Groves, 15 R. I. 208, 2 Atl. 384; Norfolk v. Flynn, 101 Va. 473, 62 L.R.A. 771, 99 Am. St. Rep. 918, 44 S. E. 717.

Similar legislation regulating the sale and standard of oleomargarine has received uniform support from the courts.

Powell v. Pennsylvania, 127 U. S. 678, 32 L. ed. 253, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 992, 1257; Plumley v. Massachusetts, 155 U. S. 461, 39 L. ed. 223, 5 Inters. Com. Rep. 590, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 154; Schollenberger v. Pennsylvania, 171 U. S. 1, 43 L. ed. 49, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 757; Capital City Dairy Co. v. Ohio, 183 U. S. 238, 46 L. ed. 171, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 120; Re Brosnahan, 4 McCrary, 1, 18 Fed. 62; Cook v. State, 110 Ala. 40, 20 So. 360; State v. Armour Packing Co. 124 Iowa, 323, 100 N. W. 59; State v. Rogers, supra; McAllister v. State, 72 Md. 390, 20 Atl. 143; Pierce v. State, 63 Md. 592; Fox v. State, 89 Md. 381, 73 Am. St. Rep. 193, 43 Atl. 775; Wright v. State, 88 Md. 436, 41 Atl. 795; Com. v. Huntley, 156 Mass. 236, 15 L.R.A. 839, 30 N. E. 1127; People v. Rotter, 131 Mich. 250, 91 N. W. 167; Armour Packing Co. v. Snyder, 84 Fed. 136; Butler v. Chambers, 36 Minn. 69, 1 Am. St. Rep. 638, 30 N. W. 308; State ex rel. Weideman v. Horgan, 55 Minn. 183, 56 N. W. 688; State v. Addington, 77 Mo. 110; State v. Bockstruck, 136 Mo. 335, 38 S. W. 317; Beha v. State, 67 Neb. 27, 93 N. W. 155; State v. Marshall, 64 N. H. 549, 1 L.R.A. 51, 15 Atl. 210; State v. Collins, 70 N. H. 218, 45 Atl. 1080, 171 U. S. 30, 43 L. ed. 60, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 768; State v. Ball, 70 N. H. 40, 46 Atl. 50; State, Waterbury, Prosecutor, v. Newton, 50 N. J. L. 534, 2 Inters. Com. Rep. 63, 14 Atl. 604; People v. Arensberg, 105 N. Y. 123, 59 Am. Rep. 483, 11 N. E. 277; Palmer v. State, 39 Ohio St. 236, 48 Am. Rep. 429; State v. Ransick, 62 Ohio St. 283, 56 N. E. 1024; Com. ex rel. Allegheny County v. Weiss, 139 Pa. 247, 11 L.R.A. 530, 23 Am. St. Rep. 182, 21 Atl. 10; Com. v. Vandyke, 13 Pa. Super. Ct. 484; Com. v. McCann, 14 Pa. Super. Ct. 221; Com. v. Diefenbacher, 14 Pa. Super. Ct. 264; State v. Myers, 42 W. Va. 822, 35 L.R.A. 844, 57 Am. St. Rep. 887, 26 S. E. 539.

In a like manner, statutes regulating the production and sale of lard have been held valid as a proper exercise of the police power.

State v. Snow, 81 Iowa, 642, 11 L.R.A. 355, 47 N. W. 777; State v. Aslesen, 50 Minn. 5, 36 Am. St. Rep. 620, 52 N. W. 220.

Similar legislation affecting the production and manufacture of vinegar has also been sustained.

People v. Girard, 145 N. Y. 105, 45 Am. St. Rep. 595, 39 N. E. 823; People v. Niagara Fruit Co. 75 App. Div. 11, 77 N. Y. Supp. 805, 173 N. Y. 629, 66 N. E. 1114; People v. Henry J. Heinz Co. 90 App. Div. 408, 86 N. Y. Supp. 141; People v. Windholz, 92 App. Div. 569, 86 N. Y. Supp. 1015; People v. Worden Grocery Co. 118 Mich. 604, 77 N. W. 315; Weller v. State, 53 Ohio St. 77, 40 N. E. 1001.

Statutes regulating the standard of baking powder used in the making of food have also been held constitutional.

Stolz v. Thompson, 44 Minn. 271, 46 N. W. 410; State v. Sherod, 80 Minn. 446, 50 L.R.A. 660, 81 Am. St. Rep. 268, 83 N. W. 417; State v. Layton, 160 Mo. 474, 62 L.R.A. 163, 83 Am. St. Rep. 487, 61 S. W. 171, 187 U. S. 356, 47 L. ed. 214, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 137.

A statute of the state of New York prohibiting the adulteration of coffee was held constitutional by this court in Crossman v. Lurman, 192 U. S. 189, 48 L. ed. 401, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 234.

The performance by boards of health of the duties intrusted to their care by the state legislature, although the fulfilment of these responsibilities carries with it the excreise of a reasonable diseretion, is not a delegation of legislative power reposed solely in the legislature, but an exercise of administrative and ministerial functions by agents best qualified to understand the conditions of the ease, and to appreeiate the necessities of the exercise of their power.

Barbier v. Connolly, 113 U. S. 27, 28 L. ed. 923, 5 Sup. Ct. Rep. 357; Dent v. West Virginia, 129 U. S. 114, 32 L. ed. 623, 9 Sup. Ct. Rep. 231; Crowley v. Christensen, 137 U. S. 91, 34 L. ed. 623, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 13; Marshall Field & Co. v. Clark, 143 U. S. 649, 36 L. ed. 294, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 495; Re Kollock, 165 U. S. 526, 41 L. ed. 813, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 444; Davis v. Massachusetts, 167 U. S. 43, 42 L. ed. 71, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 731; Wilson v. Eureka City, 173 U. S. 32, 43 L. ed. 603, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 317; Gundling v. Chicago, 177 U. S. 183, 44 L. ed. 725, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 633; Fiseher v. St. Louis, 194 U. S. 361, 48 L. ed. 1018, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 673; Jacobson v. Massachusetts, 197 U. S. 11, 49 L. ed. 643, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 358; Re Flaherty, 105 Cal. 558, 27 L.R.A. 529, 38 Pac. 981; Fitts v. Atlanta, 121 Ga. 567, 67 L.R.A. 803, 104 Am. St. Rep. 167, 49 S. E. 793; Blue v. Beach, 155 Ind. 121, 50 L.R.A. 64, 80 Am. St. Rep. 195, 56 N. E. 89; Isenhour v. State, 157 Ind. 517, 87 Am. St. Rep. 228, 62 N. E. 40; Hengehold v. Covington, 108 Ky. 752, 57 S. W. 495; State v. Broadbelt, 89 Md. 565, 45 L.R.A. 433, 73 Am. St. Rep. 205, 43 Atl. 773; Love v. Recorder's Ct. Judge (Love v. Phalen) 128 Mich. 552, 55 L.R.A. 618, 87 N. W. 785; Com. v. Plaisted, 148 Mass. 375, 2 L.R.A. 142, 12 Am. St. Rep. 566, 19 N. E. 224; Polinsky v. People, 73 N. Y. 65; People ex rel. Neehameus v. Warden, 144 N. Y. 529, 27 L.R.A. 718, 39 N. E. 686; State v. Briggs, 45 Or. 366, 77 Pac. 750, 78 Pac. 361.

Beeause offieials abuse their power, the law granting them such powers is not invalid and violative of the Federal Constitution.

Powell v. Pennsylvania, 127 U. S. 678, 686, 32 L. ed. 253, 257, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 992, 1257; Williams v. Mississippi, 170 U. S. 213, 225, 42 L. ed. 1012, 1016, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 583; People ex rel. Neehameus v. Warden, supra.

The cases passing upon the questions of class legislation which have arisen in this court are far too numerous to include within the limits of a brief. For that reason we have submitted to the court but a few of the decisions in which that question has been presented to the court for consideration.

Slaughter-House Cases, 16 Wall. 36, 21 L. ed. 394; Missouri v. Lewis (Bowman v. Lewis) 101 U. S. 22, 25 L. ed. 989; Barbier v. Connolly, supra; Soon Hing v. Crowley, 113 U. S. 703, 28 L. ed. 1145, 5 Sup. Ct. Rep. 730; Missouri P. R. Co. v. Humes, 115 U. S. 512, 519, 29 L. ed. 463, 465, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 110; Hayes v. Missouri, 120 U. S. 68, 30 L. ed. 578, 7 Sup. Ct. Rep. 305; Missouri P. R. Co. v. Mackey, 127 U. S. 205, 32 L. ed. 107, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1161; Powell v. Pennsylvania, 127 U. S. 678, 687, 32 L. ed. 253, 257, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 992, 1257; Walston v. Nevin, 128 U. S. 578, 32 L. ed. 544, 9 Sup. Ct. Rep. 192; Dent v. West Virginia, 129 U. S. 114, 32 L. ed. 623, 9 Sup. Ct. Rep. 231; Bell's Gap R. Co. v. Pennsylvania, 134 U. S. 232, 33 L. ed. 892, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 533; Crowley v. Christensen, 137 U. S. 86, 34 L. ed. 620, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 13; Paeifie Exp. Co. v. Seibert, 142 U. S. 339, 35 L. ed. 1035, 3 Inters. Com. Rep. 810, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 250; Giozza v. Tiernan, 148 U. S. 657, 37 L. ed. 599, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 721; Columbus Southern R. Co. v. Wright, 151 U. S. 470, 38 L. ed. 238, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 396; Marchant v. Pennsylvania R. Co. 153 U. S. 380, 38 L. ed. 751, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 894; St. Louis & S. F. R. Co. v. Mathews, 165 U. S. 1, 41 L. ed. 611, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 243; Jones v. Brim, 165 U. S. 180, 41 L. ed. 677, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 282; Davis v. Massachusetts, 167 U. S. 43, 42 L. ed. 71, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 731; Central Loan & T. Co. v. Campbell Commission Co. 173 U. S. 84, 43 L. ed. 623, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 346; Fiseher v. St. Louis, 194 U. S. 361, 48 L. ed. 1018, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 673; Jacobson v. Massachusetts, 197 U. S. 11, 49 L. ed. 643, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 358.

Mr. Justiee Day delivered the opinion of the court:

Simon Lieberman was arrested and held for trial by a magistrate of the city of New York, charged with violating § 66 of the sanitary code of New York city. After being committed to the custody of the warden of the eity prison, plaintiff in error sued out a writ of habeas eorpus.

At the hearing before a justice of the supreme court at special term, the writ was dismissed, and the prisoner remanded to the custody of the warden. Upon appeal to the appellate division of the supreme court, the order of the special term was affirmed. This judgment was affirmed by the court of appeals of the state of New York (175 N. Y. 440, 67 N. E. 913), and the case remitted to the supreme court, where judgment was entered on the remittitur. The case was then brought here by writ of error.

The section of the sanitary code complained of is as follows:

"Sec. 66. No milk shall be received, held, kept, either for sale or delivered in the city of New York, without a permit in writing from the board of health, and subject to the conditions thereof."

The violation of the sanitary code is made a misdemeanor. That the board of health had power to pass the sanitary code, which includes this section, is not open to question here, as it has been affirmatively decided in the state court. The objections on Federal grounds for our consideration are two-fold: [558] *First, that the section under consideration devolves upon the board of health absolute and despotic power to grant or withhold permits to milk dealers, and is, therefore, not due process of law; second, that singling out the milk business for regulation is a denial of the equal protection of the laws to people engaged therein.

The record discloses that the plaintiff in error, engaged in selling milk in the city of New York before his arrest, had a permit, which was revoked by the board of health. He was thereafter found engaged through an agent in selling milk without a permit. In the testimony it appears, in a conversation between the plaintiff in error and an inspector in the department of health, the latter admitted that Lieberman's milk "stood well."

The right of the state to regulate certain occupations which may become unsafe or dangerous when unrestrained, in the exercise of the police power, with a view to protect the public health and welfare, has been so often and so recently before this court that it is only necessary to refer to some of the cases which sustain the proposition that the state has a right, by reasonable regulations, to protect the public health and safety. Boston Beer Co. v. Massachusetts, 97 U. S. 25, 24 L. ed. 989; New Orleans Gaslight Co. v. Louisiana Light & H. P. & Mfg. Co. 115 U. S. 650, 29 L. ed. 516, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 252; Crowley v. Christensen, 137 U. S. 86, 34 L. ed. 620, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 13; Lawton v. Steele, 152 U. S. 133, 38 L. ed. 385, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 499; Jacobson v. Massachusetts, 197 U. S. 11, 49 L. ed. 643, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 358; California Reduction Co. v. Sanitary Reduction Works, 199 U. S. 306, ante, 204, 26 Sup. Ct. Rep. 100; Gardner v. Michigan, 199 U. S. 325, ante, 212, 26 Sup. Ct. Rep. 106.

The contention of counsel for plaintiff in error is not that a business so directly affecting the health of the inhabitants of the city as the furnishing of milk may not be the subject of regulation under the authority of the state, but that the court of appeals of New York has sustained this right of regulation to the extent of authorizing the board of health to exercise arbitrary power in the selection of those it may see fit to permit to sell milk under the section quoted; and, thus construed, it works the deprivation of the plaintiff in error's liberty and property [559] *without due process of law. We do not so understand the decision of the highest court of New York. As we read it, the authority sustained is the grant of power to issue or withhold permits in the honest exercise of a reasonable discretion. In the opinion of the appellate division, whose judgment was affirmed in the court of appeals, it was said:

"Such regulations, however, should be uniform, and the board should not act arbitrarily; and if this section of the sanitary code vested in them arbitrary power to license one dealer [in a lawful commodity] and refuse a license to another similarly situated, undoubtedly it would be invalid (Yick Wo v. Hopkins, 118 U. S. 356, 30 L. ed. 220, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1064; Gundling v. Chicago, 177 U. S. 183, 44 L. ed. 725, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 633; Noel v. People, 187 Ill. 587, 52 L. R. A. 287, 79 Am. St. Rep. 238, 58 N. E. 616; Dunham v. Rochester, 5 Cow. 462; Brooklyn v. Breslin, 57 N. Y. 591); but such was not its purpose, nor is that its fair construction. It is unnecessary now to determine whether the action of the board in refusing or revoking such a permit would be judicial, and thus reviewable by mandamus or certiorari, or whether, if the authority should be arbitrarily or improperly exercised, the only remedy would be an application for the removal of the officers; for those are questions that may arise in the administration of the law, but do not go to its validity. The section, properly construed, does not permit unjust discrimination, and, therefore, it is valid." [81 App. Div. 132, 80 N. Y. Supp. 1108.]

The court of appeals, affirming the decision of the appellate division, did not speak with equal emphasis upon this point, but it leaves no doubt that it sustained the statute as authorizing the exercise of a reasonable discretion. While that court held that the discretion to grant or withhold permits might be vested in a board of health with opportunities to know and investigate local conditions and surroundings, it is further said:

"In the case before us the requirement of § 66 of the sanitary code, that the relator should not sell milk without a permit, is reasonable, and violates neither Federal nor state Constitution, is in accordance with law and long-established precedent.

[560] *"In the argument of this case several questions have been discussed that are not presented by the appeal. It is, for instance, argued that, even conceding a permit to be necessary, the provision that the holder is to be 'subject to the conditions thereof' cannot be sustained for a variety of reasons suggested.

"It is a complete answer that the form of the permit is not in the record; it does not appear that it has attached to it conditions reasonable or otherwise. We consequently express no opinion on the subject.

"What we have already said applies with equal force to the argument that the permit might be loaded with conditions, the nature of which is not limited or stated; that it may be used to build up monopoly, to help a favored few as opposed to the many; that there is no other statute which presents such possibilities for blackmail and oppression. These and many other like criticisms are indulged in by appellant.

"If the question was before us, the well-settled canon of construction permits of no such argument.

"It is presumed that public officials will discharge their duties honestly and in accordance with the rules of law."

We do not think that this language leaves any question as to the disposition of the highest court of New York to prevent the oppression of the citizen or the deprivation of his rights, by an arbitrary and oppressive exercise of the power conferred. That this court will not interfere because the states have seen fit to give administrative discretion to local boards to grant or withhold licenses or permits to carry on trades or occupations, or perform acts which are properly the subject of regulation in the exercise of the reserved power of the states to protect the health and safety of its people, there can be no doubt. In Davis v. Massachusetts, 167 U. S. 43, 42 L. ed. 71, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 731, an ordinance of the city of Boston, providing that no person shall make any public address in or upon the public grounds, except in accordance with a permit from the mayor, was held not in conflict with the 14th Amendment to the Constitution of the United States. In Wilson v. Eureka City, 173 U. S. 32, 43 L. ed. 603, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 317, an ordinance [561] requiring persons *to obtain written permission from the mayor or president of the city council, or, in their absence, a councilor, before moving a building upon any of the public streets of the city, was sustained as not violative of the Federal Constitution. In the opinion of the court a number of instances were given in which acts were prohibited except with the consent of an administrative board, and which were sustained as proper exercises of the police power. In Gundling v. Chicago, 177 U. S. 183, 44 L. ed. 725, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 633, an ordinance was sustained permitting the mayor to license persons to deal in cigarettes when he was satisfied that the person applying for the license was of good character and reputation, and a suitable person to be intrusted with their sale. And in the recent case of Jacobson v. Massachusetts, 197 U. S. 11, 49 L. ed. 643, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 358, this court sustained a compulsory vaccination law which delegated to the board of health of cities or towns the determination of the necessity of requiring the inhabitants to submit to compulsory vaccination. And in Fischer v. St. Louis, 194 U. S. 361, 48 L. ed. 1018, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 673, an ordinance of the city of St. Louis providing that no dairy or cow stable should thereafter be built or established within the limits of the city, and no such stable not in existence at the time of the passage of the ordinance should be maintained on any premises, unless permission should have been first obtained from the municipal assembly by ordinance, was sustained as a proper exercise of the police power. After sustaining the right to vest in a board of men acquainted with the local conditions of the business to be carried on, power to grant or withhold permits, this court said:

"It has been held in some of the state courts to be contrary to the spirit of American institutions to vest this dispensing power in the hands of a single individual (Chicago v. Trotter, 136 Ill. 430, 26 N. E. 359; Re Frazee, 63 Mich. 396, 6 Am. St. Rep. 310, 30 N. W. 72; State v. Fiske, 9 R. I. 94; Baltimore v. Radecke, 49 Md. 217, 33 Am. Rep. 239; Sioux Falls v. Kirby, 6 S. D. 62, 25 L. R. A. 621, 60 N. W. 156), and in others that such authority cannot be delegated to the adjoining lot owners (St. Louis v. Russell, 116 Mo. 248, 20 L. R. A. 721, 22 S. W. 470; Ex parte Sing Lee, 96 Cal. 354, 24 L. R. A. 195, 31 Am. St. Rep. 218, 31 Pac. 245). But the authority to delegate that discretion to a board appointed *for that purpose is sustained by the [562] great weight of authority (Quiney v. Kennard, 151 Mass. 563, 24 N. E. 860; Com. v. Davis, 162 Mass. 510, 26 L. R. A. 712, 44 Am. St. Rep. 389, 39 N. E. 113), and by this court the delegation of such power, even to a single individual, was sustained in Wilson v. Eureka City, 173 U. S. 32, 43 L. ed. 603, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 317, and Gundling v. Chicago, 177 U. S. 183, 44 L. ed. 725, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 633."

These cases leave in no doubt the proposition that the conferring of discretionary power upon administrative boards to grant or withhold permission to carry on a trade or business which is the proper subject of regulation within the police power of the state is not violative of rights secured by the 14th Amendment. There is no presumption that the power will be arbitrarily exercised, and when it is shown to be thus exercised against the individual, under sanction of state authority, this court has not hesitated to interfere for his protection, when the case has come before it in such manner as to authorize the interference of a Federal court. Yick Wo v. Hopkins, 118 U. S. 356, 30 L. ed. 220, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1064. In the case of Jacobson v. Massachusetts, 197 U. S. 11, 49 L. ed. 643, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 358, it was insisted that the compulsory vaccination ordinance was broad enough to require a person to submit to compulsory vaccination when his physical condition might be such as to render such treatment dangerous to life and even cruelly oppressive. But it was held that the case presented no such situation; that the person complaining of the enforcement of the ordinance was, for aught that appeared, an adult in good health and a proper subject for vaccination; that the supreme court of Massachusetts had not sustained the authority of the board in the extreme case supposed, and that the individual complaining made no case wherein the operation of the statute deprived him of his constitutional right of protection. So, in the present case, there is nothing in this record to show why the permit which had been granted to the plaintiff was revoked or the conditions upon which, in the exercise of the power conferred by § 66, a permit to carry on the business was granted or withheld. It is true that a conversation was proved in which the milk inspector said to Lieber-[563] man that the milk *sold by him "stood well;" but there is nothing to show upon what ground the action of the board was taken. For aught that appears, he may have been conducting his business in such wise, or with such surroundings and means, as to render it dangerous to the health of the community; or his manner of selling or delivering the milk may have been objectionable. There is nothing in the record to show that the action against him was arbitrary or oppressive and without a fair and reasonable exercise of that discretion which the law reposed in the board of health. We have, then, an ordinance which, as construed in the highest court of the state, authorizes the exercise of a legal discretion in the granting or withholding of permits to transact a business which, unless controlled, may be highly dangerous to the health of the community, and no affirmative showing that the power has been exerted in so arbitrary and oppressive a manner as to deprive the appellant of his property or liberty without due process of law.

In such cases it is the settled doctrine of this court that no Federal right is invaded, and no authority exists for declaring a law unconstitutional, duly passed by the legislative authority, and approved by the highest court of the state. Nor do we think there is force in the contention that the plaintiff in error has been denied the equal protection of the laws because of the allegation that the milk business is the only business dealing in foods which is thus regulated by the sanitary code. All milk dealers within the city are equally affected by the regulations of the sanitary code. It is primarily for the state to select the kinds of business which shall be the subject of regulation, and if the business affected is one which may be properly the subject of such legislation, it is no valid objection that similar regulations are not imposed upon other businesses of a different kind. Soon Hing v. Crowley, 113 U. S. 703, 28 L. ed. 1145, 5 Sup. Ct. Rep. 736; Fischer v. St. Louis, 194 U. S. 361, 48 L. ed. 1018, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 673.

We find no error in the judgment of the Supreme Court of New York, and the same is affirmed.

*Mr. Justice Holmes: I do not gather [564] from the statute or from the decision of the court of appeals that the action of the board of health was intended to be subject to judicial revision as to its reasonableness. But whether it was or was not, I agree that the statute, which in substance is older than the 14th Amendment, was not repealed or overthrown by the adoption of that Amendment.

PETER O. SJOLI, Plff. in Err.,
v.
CHARLES DRESCHEL.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 564–569.)

Public lands—railroad land grants—indemnity selections—necessity of approval.— No interest in lands within the indemnity limits of the land grant to the Northern Pacific Railroad Company, made by the act of July 2, 1864 (13 Stat. at L. 365, chap. 217), was acquired by that company by virtue of a filing of its list of selections of such lands to supply deficiencies within the place limits, but such lands remained open as before to settlement or occupation under the pre-emption or homestead laws until the selections were formally approved by the Secretary of the Interior.

NOTE.—As to land grants to railroads—see note to Kansas P. R. Co. v. Atchison, T. & S. F. R. Co. 28 L. ed. U. S. 794.

[No. 79.]

Submitted November 27, 1905. Decided December 18, 1905.

IN ERROR to the Supreme Court of the State of Minnesota to review a judgment which affirmed a judgment of the District Court of Ottertail County, in that state, in favor of defendant in an action of ejectment. Reversed and remanded for further proceedings.

See same case below, 90 Minn. 108, 95 N. W. 763.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Mr. Moses E. Clapp submitted the cause for plaintiff in error.

Mr. William E. Hale submitted the cause for defendant in error.

Mr. Justice Harlan delivered the opinion of the court:

This case was tried upon a stipulation of facts. It involves the title to the northeast quarter of the southeast quarter of section 5, township 133 north, of range 42, west of the 5th principal meridian. Minnesota, which is situated opposite to and coterminous with a part of the line of the Northern Pacific Railroad as definitely located on the 21st day of November, 1871, and is within the first indemnity limits of the grant of public lands made by the act of Congress of July 2d, 1864, in aid of the construction by the Northern Pacific Railroad Company of a railroad and telegraph line from Lake Superior to Puget sound, on the Pacific coast. 13 Stat. at L. 365, chap. 217.

The state court adjudged that plaintiff, Sjoli, was not entitled to the land, and that the defendant, Dreschel, who asserts title under the railroad company, was the owner.

From the numerous cases in this court relating to the above act of July 2d, 1864, the following propositions are to be deduced:

That the railroad company will not acquire a vested interest in particular lands, within or without place limits, merely by filing a map of general route and having the same approved by the Secretary of the Interior, although, upon the definite location of its line of road, and the filing and acceptance of a map thereof in the office of the Commissioner of the General Land Office, the lands within primary or place limits, not theretofore reserved, sold, granted, or otherwise disposed of, and free from pre-emption or other claims or rights, become segregated from the public domain, and no rights in such place lands will attach in favor of a settler or occupant who becomes such after definite location;

That no rights to lands within indemnity limits will attach in favor of the railroad company until after selections made by it with the approval of the Secretary of the Interior;

*That up to the time such approval is given, lands within indemnity limits, although embraced by the company's list of selections, are subject to be disposed of by the United States, or to be settled upon and occupied under the pre-emption and homestead laws of the United States; and, [566]

That the Secretary of the Interior has no authority to withdraw from sale or settlement lands that are within indemnity limits which have not been previously selected, with his approval, to supply deficiencies within the place limits of the company's road.†

These principles, it would seem, make it easy to determine the present case, the controlling facts in which are undisputed. Let us see.

The plaintiff, Sjoli, a qualified entryman, settled upon the land in dispute in 1884, with the intention in good faith to perfect his title under the homestead laws. He grubbed and broke about 2½ acres, built a house and stable thereon, and moved into the house with his family on the 4th day of October, 1884. He has lived upon the premises continuously with his family ever since that time. At the time of the bringing of this action he had broken about 22 acres, constructed 220 rods of fencing, and made improvements of the value of $500. In 1889 he applied at the proper local land office to make entry of this land under the [567] homestead laws. That *application was rejected because the land was then erroneously supposed to be within the granted limits of the St. Paul, Minneapolis, & Manitoba Railroad Company. No appeal from that order seems to have been taken. But Sjoli did not abandon the land or his claim upon it; for, in 1895, and relying upon his settlement of 1884, he again applied at the proper land office to enter the land under the homestead laws. His application was resisted by the Northern Pacific Railroad Company, and, upon a hearing before the local land office as between him and that company, in March, 1895, the case was decided in his favor. Subsequently, Sjoli having made his final proofs, as required by the homestead laws, a patent was issued to him under date of June 18th, 1901. His title rests upon that patent.

†Hewitt v. Schultz, 180 U. S. 139, 45 L. ed. 463, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 309; Nelson v. Northern P. R. Co. 188 U. S. 109, 47 L. ed. 406, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 302; United States v. Northern P. R. Co. 152 U. S. 284, 296, 38 L. ed. 443, 448, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 598; Northern P. R. Co., v. Sanders, 166 U. S. 620, 634, 635, 41 L. ed. 1139, 1144, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 671; Menottl v. Dillon, 167 U. S. 703, 42 L. ed. 333, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 945; United States v. Oregon & C. R. Co. 176 U. S. 28, 42, 44 L. ed. 358, 364, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 261; St. Paul & P. R. Co. v. Northern P. R. Co. 139 U. S. 1, 5, 35 L. ed. 77, 79, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 389; St. Paul & S. C. R. Co. v. Winona & St. P. R. Co. 112 U. S. 720, 726, 28 L. ed. 872, 874, 5 Sup. Ct. Rep. 334; Missouri, K. & T. R. Co. v. Kansas P. R. Co. 97 U. S. 491, 501, 24 L. ed. 1095, 1098; Cedar Rapids & M. River R. Co. v. Herring, 110 U. S. 27, 28 L. ed. 56, 3 Sup. Ct. Rep. 485; Grinnell v. Chicago, R. I. & P. R. Co. 103 U. S. 739, 26 L. ed. 456; Kansas P. R. Co. v. Atchison, T. & S. F. R. Co. 112 U. S. 414, 28 L. ed. 794, 5 Sup. Ct. Rep. 208; Wilcox v. Eastern Oregon Land Co. 176 U. S. 51, 44 L. ed. 368, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 269; Northern P. R. Co. v. Miller, 7 Land Dec. 109, 120; Northern P. R. Co. v. Davis, 19 Land Dec. 87, 90; Spicer v. Northern P. R. Co. 10 Land Dec. 440, 443; Northern P. R. Co. v. McCrimmon, 12 Land Dec. 554; Northern P. R. Co. v. Plumb, 16 Land Dec. 80.

Dreschel's claim to the land arises out of a contract made by him April 21st, 1900, with the Northern Pacific Railway Company, by which that corporation agreed to sell to him the land in question. The parties agree that that company succeeded to whatever rights belonged to the Northern Pacific Railroad Company.

If the railway company was not entitled to the land as between it and Sjoli,—if it had no interest to sell,—then the defendant Dreschel has no claim as between himself and the plaintiff.

We have seen that Sjoli's settlement upon the land was in 1884, and his original application to enter it was in 1889; whereas, the railroad company made and filed its list of selections of lands within indemnity limits to supply alleged deficiencies in place limits in 1885, Sjoli being still in occupancy of the land. But, as already stated, the result of the cases in this court is that the railroad company did not acquire an interest in any particular lands within the indemnity limits merely by filing its lists of selections, nor until its selections were approved by the Secretary of the Interior.

In Musser v. McRae, 38 Minn. 409, 411, 38 N. W. 103, the supreme court of Minnesota had occasion to construe the act of Congress granting lands in aid of the Chi-[568] cago, St. Paul, Minneapolis & *Omaha Railway Company. That act provided among other things that if, when the line of railroad should be definitely fixed, the United States have sold, or rights of pre-emption should have attached to any such granted sections or parts thereof, then, in lieu thereof, any agent to be appointed by the governor might select, subject to the approval of the Secretary of the Interior, from the lands of the United States, so much land as should be equal to those sold or pre-empted, etc. Chief Justice Gilfillan, speaking for that court, said: "As to the lands in place, the title attached upon the definite location of the line of road. As soon as that was done, the acts pointed out the lands. As to those to be taken for deficiencies, it was necessary that something more than fixing the line of the road should be done; it was necessary that there should be a selection, and an approval of such selection by the Secretary of the Interior. Until that was done, the title granted did not attach to any lands outside of the 10-section [place] limit." In the later case of Resser v. Carney, 52 Minn. 397, 400, 54 N. W. 89, referring to the grant of 1864 to the Northern Pacific Railroad Company, the same court said: "The selection of indemnity lands, which was to be made 'under the direction of the Secretary of the Interior' (13 Stat. at L. 367, chap. 217, § 3) did not become effectual, nor did the title pass from the United States, at least until the selection was approved, or in some way sanctioned by the Secretary of the Interior," etc. These cases are in accord with the decisions of this court above cited.

Now, it is stipulated in this case that the Secretary of the Interior has never approved the selection by the railroad company of the land here in question to supply deficiencies in place limits. So that, when Sjoli settled upon the land, it was, so far as the railroad company was concerned, part of the unappropriated public lands open to settlement under the homestead laws. The railroad company had no direct legal interest in it. The company's unapproved selections did not, therefore, stand in the way of the lands being occupied and entered under the homestead laws. The mere filing of its lists of selections of indemnity *lands did not have the effect to [569] exclude them from occupancy under the preemption or homestead laws. On the contrary, notwithstanding the filing of such lists, they remained open, as before, to settlement or occupancy under those laws, until the selections were formally approved by the Secretary of the Interior, and the lands withdrawn from settlement or sale. No such approval ever occurred.

It results that the patent issued to Sjoli is evidence of the better title and must prevail. His settlement upon the land, with the intention to perfect his title under the homestead laws, was not a violation of the act of 1864. On the contrary, he thereby acquired, within the meaning of the act of 1864, a claim upon the land which was perfected by the patent issued to him by the United States. The learned state court erred in not so holding, and in adjudging that the Northern Pacific Railway Company acquired an interest in the land immediately upon filing its list of selections, and that the defendant in error was the owner of it. The relief asked by the plaintiff should have been granted.

The judgment of the Supreme Court of Minnesota is reversed and the cause remanded for further proceedings not inconsistent with this opinion.

Reversed.

Mr. Justice Brewer did not participate in the decision of this case.

---

[570]*RUSSIAN-AMERICAN PACKING COMPANY, Appt.,
v.
UNITED STATES.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 570–579.)

1. Public lands—rights of settlers in Alaska.—No intention on the part of Congress to permit rights to public lands in Alaska to be initiated by a settlement made after the enactment of the act of May 17, 1884 (23 Stat. at L. 24, chap. 53), can be gathered from the provision of § 8 of that act that "the Indians or other persons in said district shall not be disturbed in the possession of any lands actually in their use or occupation, or now claimed by them, but the terms under which such persons may acquire title to such lands is reserved for future legislation by Congress," especially when considered with a subsequent clause of that section that "nothing contained in this act shall be construed to put in force in said district the general land laws," and with the provision of § 12 for the appointment of a commission to report the facts to enable Congress to determine what limitations or conditions should be imposed when the land laws should be extended to the district.

2. Public lands—settlers in Alaska—reservation for fish-culture station.—Any rights previously acquired under the act of March 3, 1891 (26 Stat. at L. 1100, chap. 561), §§ 12, 13 (U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, pp. 1467, 1468), by settlement upon and survey of public lands in Alaska, were terminated by the proclamation of the President that the land in question was reserved for the purpose of establishing a fish-culture station, in accordance with the declaration of § 14 of that act, that the provisions of the two preceding sections shall not be so construed as to warrant the sale of any lands belonging to the United States which shall be reserved for public purposes or selected for fish culture stations.

3. Public lands—trespassers—recovery for improvements.—The value of improvements made on public lands in Alaska by a mere trespasser, occupying the land without a shadow of title, cannot be recovered from the United States upon the selection of the land in question by the government, in accordance with the act of March 3, 1891, (26 Stat. at L. 1100, chap. 561), § 14, for a fish-culture station.

[Nos. 85, 86.]

Argued November 29, 1905. Decided December 18, 1905.

APPEAL from the Court of Claims to review a judgment rejecting a claim for the value of improvements erected on public lands in Alaska which have been selected by the government for a fish-culture station. Affirmed.

See same case below, 39 Ct. Cl. 460.

Statement by Mr. Justice Brown:

This is an appeal from a judgment of the court of claims, rejecting a claim of the Russian-American Packing Company for [571] the value of certain improvements erected by it on the island of Afognak, off the coast of Alaska. The packing company was incorporated in 1889, under the laws of California, for the purpose of carrying on the business of packing salmon on the island of Afognak; and for that purpose purchased and shipped materials for a cannery and buildings to be used in canning salmon, and also, without authority or license from the United States, took possession of a tract of about 159.52 acres of land, and erected thereon buildings, machinery, etc., at a cost of about $45,000. Prior to this time no one had been in possession of this tract. Claimants remained in possession for four years, and until December 24, 1892, and carried on a canning business at a profit of about $100,000, about $35,000 of which was subsequent to the passage of the act of March 3, 1891 [26 Stat. at L. 1095, chap. 561, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 1535].

On April 1, 1892, claimant applied to the Surveyor General for a survey of the tract, under the act of 1891, and deposited in the subtreasury at San Francisco $433.80, as the estimated cost of such survey. The survey was made, was approved March 15, 1893, and forwarded to the Commissioner of the General Land Office. Prior to December 24, 1892, the tract so occupied had not been reserved by the United States for fish culture or any other purpose; nor had the same been purchased or applied for by any other person. On that day the President issued a proclamation [27 Stat. at L. 1052] declaring the whole island reserved for the purpose of establishing thereon a United States fish-culture station, and warned all persons to depart therefrom. In July, 1893, claimant was informed of this proclamation by agents of the government, and ordered to leave the island, which it did, and has not returned thereto. On January 15, 1895, the Commissioner of the General Land Office, in passing upon the survey transmitted to him, addressed a letter to the Surveyor General, calling attention to the President's proclamation, and rejected the survey on that ground, as well as upon the ground that the survey was not in square form, as required by statute. No appeal was taken from his decision.

[572] *The court found as a conclusion of law that claimant was not entitled to recompense for the value of the improvements, nor for the loss of profits arising from its removal from the island, but was entitled to recover the amount deposited for the expense of the survey.

Mr. Alexander Britton argued the cause, and, with Mr. Aldis B. Browne, filed a brief for appellant.

Mr. Frederick De Courcy Faust argued the cause, and, with Assistant Attorney General Pradt, filed a brief for appellee.

Mr. Justice Brown delivered the opinion of the court:

It is well understood that the mere settlement upon public lands, without taking some steps required by law to initiate the settler's right thereto, is wholly inoperative as against the United States. Landsdale v. Daniels, 100 U. S. 113, 116, 25 L. ed. 587, 588; Maddox v. Burnham, 156 U. S. 544, 39 L. ed. 527, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 448; Northern P. R. Co. v. Colburn, 164 U. S. 383, 41 L. ed. 479, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 98.

Petitioner, however, bases its right to recover upon certain statutes which, it is insisted, recognized the right of the petitioner to settle upon this island and make the improvements in question. The first of these is the act of May 17, 1884, "providing a civil government for Alaska" (23 Stat. at L. 24, chap. 53), wherein it was enacted by § 8 "that the Indians or other persons in said district shall not be disturbed in the possession of any lands actually in their use or occupation, or now claimed by [576] *them, but the terms under which such persons may acquire title to such lands is reserved for future legislation by Congress."

It is quite clear that this section simply recognized the rights of such Indians or other persons as were in possession of lands at the time of the passage of the act, and reserved to them the power to acquire title thereto after future legislation had been enacted by Congress. As the petitioner did not take possession of this land until five years after the act of 1884 was passed, it was a mere trespasser, and not in a position to avail itself of any contract which might be extorted from the language of the act in favor of the Indians or other persons who might have been in possession of the land at the passage of the act.

That this act was intended merely as a preliminary to future legislation and for the temporary protection of Indians and other settlers is made more manifest by § 12 of the same act:

"That the Secretary of the Interior shall select two of the officers to be appointed under this act, who, together with the governor, shall constitute a commission to examine into and report upon the condition of the Indians residing in said territory, what lands, if any, should be reserved for their use, what provision shall be made for their education, what rights by occupation of settlers should be recognized, and all other facts that may be necessary to enable Congress to determine what limitations or conditions should be imposed when the land laws of the United States shall be extended to said district."

So far from Congress intending by this act to invite a settlement upon public lands in Alaska, a contrary inference arises from a subsequent clause of § 8, that "nothing contained in this act shall be construed to put in force in said district the general land laws of the United States."

We come now to the act of March 3, 1891 (26 Stat. at L. 1100, chap. 561), § 12 (U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, pp. 1467, 1468) of which provides:

"Sec. 12. That any citizen of the United States twenty-one years of age, and any association of such citizens, and any corporation incorporated under the laws of the United States or of any state or territory of the United States, now authorized *by law [577] to hold lands in the territories, now or hereafter in possession of and occupying public lands in Alaska for the purpose of trade or manufactures, may purchase not exceeding one hundred and sixty acres, to be taken as near as practicable in a square form, of such land at two dollars and fifty cents per acre. . . ."

Section 13 provides for a survey, a deposit of the cost of such survey, a report to the Commissioner of the General Land Office, and an approval by him of the survey, and for the final issue of the patent. Section 14 of the act is important, and reads as follows:

"Sec. 14. That none of the provisions of the last two preceding sections of this act shall be so construed as to warrant the sale of any lands belonging to the United States

. . . to which the natives of Alaska have prior rights by virtue of actual occupation, or which shall be selected by the United States Commissioner of Fish and Fisheries on the island of Kadiak and Afognak for the purpose of establishing fish-culture stations, . . . and there shall be reserved in all patents issued under the provisions of the last two preceding sections the right of the United States to regulate the taking of salmon and to do all things necessary to protect and prevent the destruction of salmon in all the waters of the lands granted frequented by salmon."

Even if § 14 had not been enacted, it would not follow that petitioner, by §§ 12 and 13, became entitled to a patent of the United States by procuring a survey of such lands. We have had occasion in several cases to hold that, although the occupation and cultivation of public lands with a view to pre-emption confers a preference over others in the purchase of such lands by the bona fide settler, which will enable him to protect his possession against other individuals, it does not confer a vested right as against the United States in the land so occupied. Such a vested right, under the pre-emption laws, is only obtained when the purchase money has been paid, and receipt from the proper land officer given to the [578] purchaser. *Until this has been done it is competent for Congress to withdraw the land from entry and sale, though this may defeat the inchoate right of the settler. Frisbie v. Whitney, 9 Wall. 187, 19 L. ed. 668. When this payment is made, the other prerequisites having been complied with, the settler is then entitled to a certificate of entry from the local land office and ultimately to a patent. Yosemite Valley Case (Hutchings v. Low) 15 Wall. 77, 87, 21 L. ed. 82, 85; Campbell v. Wade, 132 U. S. 38, 33 L. ed. 242, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 9; Shiver v. United States, 159 U. S. 491, 40 L. ed. 231, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 54.

The case of Lytle v. Arkansas, 9 How. 314, 13 L. ed. 153, is much relied upon by the petitioner and is carefully criticized and distinguished by Mr. Justice Field in the Yosemite Valley Case. In that case proofs were taken and decided both by the register and the receiver of the land office to be sufficient, and the money was paid by the claimant, and received by the commissioner; but, through misconduct or neglect, the register refused afterward to permit claimant to enter the section, and it was held that the right of the pre-emptor thus acquired could not be impaired by a selection of land by a subsequent act of Congress. Commenting on this case Mr. Justice Field observed in the Yosemite Valley Case (p. 93, L. ed. 87) that—"The whole difficulty in the argument of the defendant's counsel arises from his confounding the distinction made in all the cases whenever necessary for their decision between the acquisition by the settler of a legal right to the land occupied by him as against the owner, the United States, and the acquisition by him of a legal right as against other parties to be preferred in its purchase when the United States have determined to sell. It seems to us little less than absurd to say that a settler or any other person, by acquiring a right to be preferred in the purchase of property, providing a sale is made by the owner, thereby acquires a right to compel the owner to sell, or such an interest in the property as to deprive the owner of the power to control its disposition."

But if there were any doubt regarding the rights of the petitioner in connection with the above case, they are completely resolved by the language of § 14 of the act, which declares *that the provisons of the [579] preceding sections shall not be so construed as to warrant the sales of any lands belonging to the United States which shall be reserved for public purposes, or selected by the Commissioner of Fish and Fisheries on the islands of Kadiak and Afognak, for the purposes of establishing a fish-culture station. As the President exercised the rights thus reserved, and declared the whole island appropriated for the purpose of establishing a fish-culture station, and warned all persons to depart therefrom, it is clear that the rights, if any, previously acquired by the settlement, were terminated by the proclamation. Petitioner gained no additional consideration from the improvements put upon the land, since, if for no other reason, these were made prior to the act of 1891, when it was a mere trespasser, and occupying the land without a shadow of title.

Affirmed.

ROYAL PACKING COMPANY,
v.
UNITED STATES.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 579.)

[No. 86.]

See same case below, 39 Ct. Cl. 566.

PER CURIAM.

This case depends upon a similar state of facts, involves the same question of law, and is also affirmed.

[580] *SOFRE L. ALEXANDER, Appt.,
v.
SEFERINO CROLLOTT, Justice of the Peace, etc.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 580, 581.)

Prohibition—to restrain excess of jurisdiction—other remedy.—The existence under N. M. Code, § 3358, of the right to appeal to the district court from judgments of a justice of the peace in actions of forcible entry and detainer, justifies the territorial supreme court in refusing to restrain the justice from taking further proceedings in actions of that nature in which judgment had been given against a defendant claiming to be the owner of the property, and alleging a want of jurisdiction to determine the question of ownership in such a proceeding.

[No. 118.]

Submitted November 27, 1905. Decided December 18, 1905.

APPEAL from the Supreme Court of the Territory of New Mexico to review a judgment quashing a writ of prohibition issued out of that court to compel a justice of the peace to refrain from further proceedings in actions of forcible entry and detainer. Affirmed.

Statement by Mr. Justice Brown:

This is an appeal from a judgment of the supreme court quashing a writ of prohibition issued by that court to the defendant Crollott, a justice of the peace of the county of Bernalillo, which commanded him to desist and refrain from any further proceedings in five several actions of forcible entry and detainer, instituted by one Cleland before said justice and against Alexander and four other parties.

An appeal was taken from the order quashing the writ to this court.

Mr. Neill B. Field submitted the cause for appellant.

Mr. William B. Childers submitted the cause for appellee.

Mr. Justice Brown delivered the opinion of the court:

Although a writ of prohibition will lie to an inferior court where it is acting manifestly beyond its jurisdiction, such writ will issue only when there is no other remedy. Smith v. Whitney, 116 U. S. 167, 29 L. ed 601, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 570; Re Cooper, 143 U. S. 472, 495, 36 L. ed. 232, 239, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 453; Re Rice, 155 U. S. 403, 39 L. ed. 201, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 149; Re New York*[581] S. S. Co. 155 U. S. 531, 39 L. ed. 249, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 183.

By his answer Alexander claimed to be the owner of the property, and alleged a want of jurisdiction on the part of the justice to determine the question of ownership in a proceeding for forcible entry and detainer. The justice decided against him. Under such circumstances he should have taken an appeal to the district court under § 3358 of the New Mexican Code, which provides that "an appeal shall be allowed to the district court in all cases wherein judgment may be hereafter rendered in forcible entry and unlawful detainer, or both." No reason is apparent why this appeal was not taken.

The fact that the judgment may have been void will not prevent its reversal upon appeal (Capron v. Van Noorden, 2 Cranch, 126, 2 L. ed. 229; Kempe v. Kennedy, 5 Cranch, 173, 3 L. ed. 70; Scott v. Sandford, 19 How. 393, 473, 518, 566, 15 L. ed. 691, 728, 747, 767; Mansfield, C. & L. M. R. Co. v. Swan, 111 U. S. 379, 382, 28 L. ed. 462, 463, 4 Sup. Ct. Rep. 510; Mexican Nat. R. Co. v. Davidson, 157 U. S. 208, 39 L. ed. 675, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 563; Jordan v. Dennis, 7 Met. 590; Waters v. Randall, 8 Met. 132; Striker v. Mott, 6 Wend. 465; Langford v. Monteith, 102 U. S. 145, 26 L. ed. 53), nor does the requirement of a bond obviate the necessity of an appeal. It is one of the ordinary incidents of litigation.

Affirmed.

ECLIPSE BICYCLE COMPANY, Appt.,
v.
WILLARD M. FARROW.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 581–592.)

1. Reference — scope — accounting for royalties under sale of invention.— Royalties upon any device found to come within a contract for the sale of an invention are within the scope of a reference to an auditor to state the account, under a decree declaring, in general terms, the rights of the complainant to royalties upon all devices manufactured by the defendant and embodying the inventions mentioned in the contract, although both the bill and the decree specifically mentioned but a single device, the bill averring complainant's ignorance of details and want of means of learning them except by discovery, and praying a disclosure, obviously intended to include substitutes for his invention.

2. Patents—sale of invention—royalties

NOTE.—On prohibition as substitute for writ of error or appeal—see note to Walcott v. Wells, 9 L.R.A. 59.

On superintending control and supervisory jurisdiction of the superior over the inferior or subordinate tribunal—see note to State ex rel. Fourth Nat. Bank v. Johnson, 51 L.R.A. 33.

—effect of partial rejection of claims.—The refusal of patents for some of the claims of invention only exonerates the vendee of such invention from any obligation to pay further royalties on devices made and sold by it which do not embody what remains of the claims, where the contract requires the payment of royalties on all devices embodying the invention until final adverse action by the Patent Office.

3. Sale—rescission—duty to return benefits.—The vendee in a contract for the sale of an invention cannot rescind for failure of consideration because of the rejection of patents for some of the claims, without returning to the vendor those parts of the supposed invention for which patents were allowed.

4. Patents—sale of invention—royalties—effect of lack of novelty.—The lack of novelty in a supposed invention does not, until the final adverse action by the Patent Office, which is to terminate the contract for its sale, relieve the vendee of its obligation under the contract to pay royalties "on all the devices made or sold embodying the invention," where the vendee took an assignment of the inventor's right, title, and interest, took charge of his applications for patents, and agreed to defend the invention against infringement.

5. Patents—sale of invention—royalties—use of device not embodying the invention.—The obligation of the vendee in a contract for the sale of an invention of an improved automatic coaster brake for bicycles to pay royalties on all devices made or sold embodying the invention, and to use due business diligence to push their sale, cannot be so extended as to require an account for the manufacture and sale of a new device, accomplishing the same results, but differing radically in construction and operation, which may reasonably and honestly have been regarded as superior to the vendor's invention.

[Nos. 40, 217.]

Argued November 3, 6, 1905. Decided December 18, 1905.

APPEALS from the Court of Appeals of the District of Columbia to review a decree which affirmed, with some modifications, a decree of the Supreme Court of that District in favor of complainant in a suit to compel an accounting for royalties due under a contract for the sale of an invention; and, in the event of such decree being held not to be final for the purpose of appeal, to review a decree of the Court of Appeals of the District affirming a judgment of the Supreme Court, entered pursuant to the mandate of the Court of Appeals on the first appeal. Decree reversed and case remanded with directions to reinstate the auditor's report so far as it disallows a certain claim.

See same case below, 24 App. D. C. 311; on prior appeal, 23 App. D. C. 411.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Messrs. A. S. Worthington and Howard L. Osgood argued the cause, and, with C. Schuyler Davis and D. S. Mackall, filed a brief for appellant.

Messrs. Henry M. Earle and John C. Gittings argued the cause and filed a brief for appellee.

Mr. Justice Holmes delivered the opinion of the court:

This is an appeal from a final decree upon a bill for an account. As there was a technical doubt whether the decree first appealed from was final, a second decree was entered and a second appeal taken; but no point is made upon that matter here. There is one question and one case. See 16 App. D. C. 468, 18 App. D. C. 101.

The bill was brought upon an agreement under seal, dated June 5, 1897, of which the material portions are as follows: It begins with a recital that Farrow has invented certain improvements in bicycles, etc., pertaining to automatic mechanism for coasting and braking, for which he has made two numbered applications for patents and intends to file additional ones, and that the Eclipse Bicycle Company desires to acquire the entire right and title "to said inventions as described in the above *identified applica- [583] tions, and any letters patent that may be issued thereon," and to all improvements that may be made by Farrow upon the same. Then Farrow conveys to the company "his entire right, title, and interest in and to the inventions in bicycles, as fully described and claimed in the applications above referred to," letters patent and improvements as above. The company is to pay $2,500 within certain short times as advanced payments on royalties, and to pay royalties, as specified, "on all the devices made or sold embodying the invention above referred to," and to that end to make returns of the number of devices sold. The title is to revert to Farrow in default of payment for more than sixty days. Arrangements are made for taking out foreign patents, and then the company agrees to "defend said invention against piracy or infringement," and to "use due business diligence in the manufacture and sale of the devices embodied in said letters patent, and to push the sale by all proper and legitimate enterprise." Then follow further agreements as to taking out foreign patents, and finally it is covenanted that in case Farrow "for any reason fails to procure letters patent of the United States for the improvements above referred to, the [company] shall be relieved from the payment of all royalties from and after the date of final adverse action of the Patent Office on the application or applications for pat-cnts for said improvements." The invention described was an automatic brake and coaster, one of the applications being for a hub brake, the other for a tire brake, both operating on the rear wheel by back pedaling.

The bill alleges that, soon after this agreement was made, one Morrow, the defendant's general manager, applied for a patent on a device in effect the same as Farrow's, accomplishing the same result and being a mere mechanical equivalent for the same, that he forthwith assigned a half interest to the company's president, and that the company began to manufacture and sell the Morrow device. It further charges a failure to use the diligence which the company covenanted to use in pushing the Farrow device, and a sale of substituted things. A supple-[584] mental *bill alleges that, upon the consummation of the sale of Farrow's interest, the company caused an assignment to it of Farrow's application to be made, and a power of attorney to be executed by Farrow to the company's attorney for the purpose of permitting the company to prosecute applications for patents, after which, under its rules, the Patent Office would recognize Farrow no more. It charges that the company, thus having the whole matter in his own hands and power, is failing to prosecute the applications, and will allow the claims to be rejected or lapse upon points easily obviated, in furtherance of a scheme to substitute the reproduction of Farrow's device and thus, it is implied, to get rid of the contract.

The answer does not need to be stated. It admits the contract, but denies the plaintiff's case, charges him with fraud, and sets up that his invention had been anticipated by a patent to Stover and Hance and otherwise, and that it was impossible to obtain a patent for it, and that, therefore, the defendant was not bound by the contract further. The case went to a hearing and a decree was made to the effect that the plaintiff was entitled to royalties upon all the devices manufactured by the defendant embodying the inventions mentioned in the plaintiff's applications, and specifically upon devices manufactured under the patent to Morrow, and the cause was referred to an auditor to state the account. This decree was affirmed by the court of appeals for the District. 16 App. D. C. 468. It was found that one of Farrow's applications was placed in interference after its patentability had been allowed, and thereupon was abandoned, his acquiescence not appearing, and that the other was not contested, and, after some modification, was allowed and authorized to go to an issue, but was permitted by the company to lapse. The purchase by the company of the Stover and Hance patent, and an interest in the Morrow patent, and the adoption of the latter for the purpose of evading the contract with Farrow, were found.

After the decree which we have mentioned, the defendant moved for leave to amend its answer, and to introduce new testimony, *on [585] the grounds that the plaintiff knew that the broad claim for a coasting device in combination with a back-pedaling device had been anticipated by the Stover and Hance patent when he made the contract, that the defendant had been under a misapprehension as to the scope of the contract and of the suit until the former decision, and that it now had learned that there were other patents which would defeat any broad claim on the part of Farrow, etc. The motion was allowed by the supreme court, but, on a second special appeal, the court of appeals held that the supreme court was not at liberty to allow the motion after the decree directing an account had been affirmed by the court of appeals, until leave had been granted by the latter; and also held that no sufficient grounds for an amendment were shown, as no fraud on the plaintiff's part was made out, and it appeared that the company knew of the Stover and Hance patent and sufficiently understood the situation when it made the contract; and as the company certainly knew the facts when its former answer was filed. 18 App. D. C. 101. We are satisfied that the company suffered no injustice by this decision, and, in view of our conclusion upon the merits, we need say no more about it.

The case went to an account, and, before the auditor, Farrow sought to make the defendant account not only for the Morrow device heretofore mentioned, but also for another, known as Exhibit E 10, which the company had been manufacturing since the bill was filed. The auditor rejected this claim on the ground that an important part of the Farrow device was not used in E 10, that there was a radical difference in both construction and operation, and that one could not be called the mechanical equivalent of the other. On exceptions the auditor was directed by the supreme court to include royalties on E 10 in his account. Accordingly he made a further report, which, after some subordinate modifications, was confirmed by the supreme court and by the court of appeals (23 App. D. C. 411), and the defendant ordered to pay the amount found due. From this decree the defendant appeals. It takes the technical objection *that E. 10 was not within the [586] scope of the bill or the reference, and the substantial one that it was not within the scope of the contract. There is also an objection to the allowance of interest, because it was not claimed in the earlier hearing, but, as the defendant says, was waived.

We do not perceive any sufficient reason for saying that the plaintiff was estopped to claim interest. As to the technical objections to including E 10 in the account, the bill charges that a large number of devices similar to Farrow's are being manufactured and sold by the defendant, avers the plaintiff's ignorance of details and want of means of learning them except by discovery, and prays for disclosure of the number of both the devices manufactured, sold, and held by the defendant. The word "both" means in the context the Farrow brake and the Farrow coaster, and the disclosure obviously is intended to include substitutes. An account is prayed of the Farrow brakes and of the device substituted by the defendant for the same. This, we think, means not merely the specific Morrow device previously referred to, but any device the defendant might be using, in view of the plaintiff's alleged ignorance, as is made plainer by the fact that the bill goes on to pray that any improvement or elaboration in the original device may be declared to have been made by the defendant for the benefit of the parties to the contract. The decree directing an account specifically mentions the first Morrow device, it is true; but it declares in general terms the rights of the plaintiff to royalties upon all devices manufactured by the defendant and embodying the inventions mentioned in the contract, and directs an account in accordance with the decree. We are of opinion that these terms warranted the auditor in charging royalties upon any device found to come within the contract, and we agree with the court of appeals that the defendant had sufficient opportunity to contest the claim, and that therefore the objection is purely formal. No special point is made of the fact that the use was after the filing of the bill.

The real questions in the case are whether the first-mentioned *Morrow device and [587] the subsequent E 10 fall within the scope of the contract, and these questions depend more upon a careful construction of that instrument than upon nice discriminations between the patents that were or might have been issued. If either of the contrivances used embodies the invention described in Farrow's applications, then the defendant is bound to account for it by the express terms of its covenant, unless the contract is at an end. It is argued that the contract is at an end, that there was a total failure of consideration, because, it is said, there was no invention disclosed by Farrow. In answer to this it is enough to say that, although patents were refused upon some of his claims irrespective of any fault of the defendant, others were allowed, and there was no such final adverse action of the Patent Office upon either application as a whole as to exonerate the defendant by the terms of the agreement which we have recited. An appreciable part of Farrow's supposed invention was upheld and remained in the defendant's hands. We are spared the necessity of considering how much, or whether there was so considerable a failure of what was expected that it would have warranted a rescission of the contract outside of its express terms, by the fact that the defendant still keeps what was assigned to it. On February 15, 1898, it wrote to Farrow that it could not get a patent that was worth a pinch of snuff; but, so far from tendering a reconveyance, went on to say that if the work which the company was turning out "holds up all right, we may be able to work your brake in with ours, but as to this it is uncertain and we doubt it." Of course the defendant could not rescind the contract without returning what it had received under it. So the contract remained in force. See United States v. Harvey Steel Co. 196 U. S. 310, 315, 316, 49 L. ed. 492, 493, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 240.

We come back to the construction of the contract. The royalty is to be paid on the "invention above referred to." The use of the word "invention" does not open the state of the art and allow the defendant to meet the plaintiff's claim by proving that he had invented nothing new. The royalty is to *be paid on the invention described in the [588] specified applications—that is to say, on the contrivances there described—unless and until there is final adverse action by the Patent Office. That is the measure of the defendant's self-protection. It could not have asked or been allowed more. For it took an assignment of Farrow's right, title, and interest, took charge of his applications, and agreed to defend the invention against infringement, which, of course, involved maintaining its novelty and patentability. It had all Farrow's interests in its hands, and it took the risk of their worth, except as against what the Patent Office might do. It should be repeated that, so far as the company made any device embodying Farrow's invention, by the fair construction of its express covenant it was bound to account, whether the manufacture was ostensibly Farrow's or not, and he was not left merely to an action for such damages as he could prove.

On the other hand, the contract was not made on the footing that no coaster or no combination of coaster and brake ever had been invented, and that the whole field belonged to Farrow. Both parties knew something of the state of the art. The very facts which show that they stood on an equal footing, and that the company was not deceived by Farrow, show that. The contract shows the same thing on its face. It recites that Farrow has invented not a mechanism for coasting and braking, but an improvement pertaining to such mechanism. It was a contract having definite reference to the course of the Patent Office, and was for the contents of the application already filed. The application recognizes the existence of coasters. So that the contract only embraces what the parties reasonably may be understood to have expected to be patented. Furthermore, the provision for the cessation of payments on final adverse action must be applied to such claims as were rejected for want of novelty; and, after such rejection, Farrow can make the defendant account only for the use of devices embodying what remained of his claims. Obviously, also, the fact that, subject to the foregoing qualifications, the defendant took [589] the risk of *the value of Farrow's alleged invention, even when coupled with its covenant to use due business diligence in pushing their sale, did not preclude it from using any later invention, if one were made which superseded Farrow's and did not embody it. Due business diligence would not require it to enter into a hopeless contest, and would not prevent it from avoiding such a contest by purchase. In that event it would not be accountable to Farrow for royalties on the new machine. See Thorn Wire Hedge Co. v. Washburn & M. Mfg. Co. 159 U. S. 423, 40 L. ed. 205, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 94.

Applying this construction to the case, there is little difficulty in arriving at our judgment. The defendant at the original hearing, when the first Morrow device alone was in question, offered no evidence to controvert that of the plaintiff's expert that it was a palpable attempt to evade Farrow's rights. Its argument upon that point before us depended largely upon the contention that, in view of the state of the art, Farrow's claims must be narrowly limited, and gave too little effect to the contract. It is evident from the latter as well as from the evidence that a patent of a certain breadth was expected. The plaintiff, on the other hand, did not chiefly rely upon maintaining that the second device, E 10, would have been an infringement of any patent that the contract can be taken to have contemplated, but depended mainly upon construing the contract as binding the defendant to pay royalties if any other than Farrow's braking and coasting device were used. Therefore a summary statement of the nature of the different devices is all that is necessary to complete our disposition of the case.

In Farrow's application and Morrow's first device there was the same clutch mechanism on the rear wheel to permit coasting, and in both a contrivance for bringing a brake shoe to bear upon the rear wheel by back pedaling. Farrow accomplished this result by means of a hood pivoted to the bicycle frame, embracing the upper run of the chain and having a pivoted tooth or pawl. With the hood is connected a rod having the brake shoe on its end. Back pedaling, causing the chain to *slacken, lets it drop [590] down upon the pawl and engage it, and thereby pulls back the hood and rod and brings the brake shoe to bear. By a second device, which the defendant is not in a position to say was not patentable, the brake was applied by the front instead of the rear sprocket wheel, which, in case of back pedaling, engaged a lever and put on the brake. Morrow used the front sprocket wheel and made it apply a lever with a brake shoe by means of a clutch. The details of the means of application differ, but it cannot be doubted that, assuming the novelty in Farrow's invention which the contract assumes, Morrow, in the language of the contract, was embodying that invention. It covered the very thing which Farrow's invention was expected and mainly relied on to supply. Taking into account the fact that the defendant did not make due efforts to carry out his application, and that it certainly does not appear that the Morrow device was so much, if at all, better than Farrow's, that due business diligence did not require the company still to push the latter, we are of opinion that on this item it properly was held to account.

Farrow also embraced a hub brake in his applications. One of his devices was to have the rear sprocket wheel connect with the hub of the rear wheel by a screw clutch. When the sprocket wheel was moving forward it was screwed into fixed connections with the hub. When the pedals were held fast, so as to hold the sprocket wheel also fast through the medium of the chain, the bicycle, continuing its motion, unscrewed the sprocket wheel from the hub, disconnected it, and coasted. Back pedaling brought a projection on a spring in and attached at one end to the rear sprocket and encircling the hub, into contact with a fixed point on the frame, and thus caused the spring to embrace the hub so long as pressure was applied. On the pressure being released, the spring expanded and allowed the hub to revolve loosely within it. In the coasting or braking, it will be seen, the sprocket wheel was moved along its axis a short distance outward from the rear wheel, thus giving a slant to the chain. When a forward movement was resumed, the [591] tendency *of the chain under the pressure upon it to get back into a straight line was enough to carry the sprocket wheel inward again upon its axis so as to lock it once more to the rear wheel by the screw clutch. There are further details but this simple outline is enough for our purposes, which are only those of broad comparison and contrast.

In Exhibit E 10 the characteristic lateral motion of the sprocket wheel on the extension of the hub does not appear, and neither Farrow's rotating brake spring nor his lever is used. The engagements are effected by the movement of a clutch ring with cam inclines, the sprocket wheel having co-operating cam inclines. When the sprocket wheel moves forward, the latter cam inclines ride upon the former, force the clutch ring inward, and allow it to grasp the hub by friction, and revolve with it. On back pedaling the square shoulders of the cam inclines engage, the clutch ring is moved backward with the sprocket wheel, and cam inclines on the inner side of the ring force a brake ring inward into a hollow conical brake shoe connected with the frame of the machine, and having no rotary movement. The brake shoe thus is forced inwardly into a brake cup and effects the braking by its friction. In this case, as in the former, a general indication of the nature of the device is sufficient on the question whether the latter embodies the former in the sense of the contract. This question is answered by the description which we have given. It is true that in both the sprocket wheel is arranged to engage or disengage with the main wheels of the machine, to allow coasting and to brake by a reverse action of the rider's feet. But the methods by which these results are accomplished are so different that it is only on the assumption that Farrow was, in the broadest sense, a pioneer, and had covered the whole ground, or at least that the contract put him in that position relatively to the defendant, that the claim in respect of E 10 could be allowed. It is not pretended that Farrow occupied such a position as an inventor, and our construction of the contract does not give it the supposed extent. The auditor found that [592] there was a radical *difference between the contrivances in construction and operation, and there has not been and could not be a finding to the contrary. The ground on which the account was ordered was that the contract required it, notwithstanding all the difference which the auditor found. We could not come to that conclusion unless we at least were satisfied that it was inconsistent with due business diligence in pushing Farrow for the defendant to take up with E 10. The witnesses pointed out important superiorities in the latter, which we need not repeat, in the way of avoiding clogging by mud or ice, in applicability to a chainless machine, in more immediate and certain operation, and in requiring a less continuous exercise of force. On these points they were not contradicted. If, as we think, E 10 did not embody Farrow's invention, and if the company reasonably and honestly thought it a better thing, it had a right to do what it did. We cannot say that it was not warranted in its preference of E 10, or that it was not honest in its choice. It follows that, with regard to this, the decree must be reversed.

There was evidence that the defendant had sold out to another company of a nearly similar name. It is enough to say that it does not appear that the defendant is not still in existence, but, on the contrary, it would seem that the corporation still exists.

Decree reversed and case remanded with directions to reinstate the auditor's first report so far as the same disallows a claim in respect of E 10.

---

*MINNESOTA IRON COMPANY, Plff. in Err., [593]

v.

MARK M. KLINE.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 593–598.)

Constitutional law—equal protection of the laws—legislative abrogation of fellow-servant rule.—The equal protection of the laws is not denied by construing the proviso excepting cases of injuries sustained by railway employees "while engaged in the construction of a new road or any part thereof not open to public travel or use," from the provisions of Minn. Gen. Stat. 1894, § 2701, abrogating the fellow-servant rule, as only exempting incomplete railroads, and therefore as not excepting from the operation of the statute an accident on a narrow-gauge track on which dump cars were run by a mining company for the purpose of stripping the earth from the surface of its mine.

[No. 96.]

Argued December 5, 1905. Decided December 18, 1905.

NOTE.—As to the validity of class legislation—see notes to State v. Goodwill, 6 L.R.A. 621; and State v. Loomis, 21 L.R.A. 789.

As to constitutional equality of privileges, immunities, and protection—see note to Louisville Safety Vault & T. Co. v. Louisville & N. R. Co. 14 L.R.A. 579.

IN ERROR to the Supreme Court of the State of Minnesota to review a judgment reversing a judgment of the District Court of the County of St. Louis, in that state, in favor of defendant in an action to recover damages for personal injuries, and remanding the cause for judgment in plaintiff's favor on the verdict of the jury. Affirmed.

See same case below, 93 Minn. 63, 100 N. W. 681.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Mr. Frank B. Kellogg argued the cause, and, with Messrs. W. W. Billson and Joseph B. Cotton, filed a brief for plaintiff in error:

The irrationality of the distinction between new and old roads was acknowledged by the supreme court of the state in Schneider v. Chicago, B. & N. R. Co. 42 Minn. 68, 43 N. W. 783.

An invidious distinction in favor of a single class is as obnoxious to the equality clause as a similar discrimination against a particular class.

Connolly v. Union Sewer Pipe Co. 184 U. S. 540, 554, 46 L. ed. 679, 687, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 431.

Nor is it necessary that the character of the discrimination or the attendant circumstances should justify an inference of malice, ill-will, or corrupt favoritism on the part of the legislature. It is enough that no rational basis for the discrimination can be discerned.

Smyth v. Ames, 169 U. S. 466, 42 L. ed. 819, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 418; Cotting v. Kansas City Stock Yards Co. (Cotting v. Godard) 183 U. S. 79, 112, 46 L. ed. 92, 109, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 30.

In all cases it must appear, not only that a classification has been made, but also that it is one based upon some reasonable ground.

Gulf, C. & S. F. R. Co. v. Ellis, 165 U. S. 150, 165, 41 L. ed. 666, 671, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 255.

While good faith and a knowledge of existing conditions on the part of the legislature is to be presumed, yet, to carry that presumption to the extent of always holding that there must be some undisclosed and unknown reason for subjecting certain individuals or corporations to hostile and discriminating legislation is to make the protecting clauses of the 14th Amendment a mere rope of sand, in no manner restraining state action.

Gulf, C. & S. F. R. Co. v. Ellis, 165 U. S. 154, 41 L. ed. 667, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 255.

Legal discriminations cannot be based upon diversities of condition not logically and reasonably related to them.

Gulf, C. & S. F. R. Co. v. Ellis, 165 U. S. 150, 155, 165, 41 L. ed. 666, 668, 671, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 255; Magoun v. Illinois Trust & Sav. Bank, 170 U. S. 283, 42 L. ed. 1037, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 594; Atchison, T. & S. F. R. Co. v. Matthews, 174 U. S. 96, 43 L. ed. 909, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 609; Lake Shore & M. S. R. Co. v. Smith, 173 U. S. 684, 43 L. ed. 858, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 565; Barbier v. Connolly, 113 U. S. 27, 31, 28 L. ed. 923, 924, 5 Sup. Ct. Rep. 375; Connolly v. Union Sewer Pipe Co. 184 U. S. 540, 552, 563, 46 L. ed. 679, 686, 691, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 431.

Decisions holding fellow-servant statutes valid are clearly distinguishable from the case at bar. The statute in each case considered made a classification based upon the peculiar hazards incident to the use and operation of railroads. In no case which we have been able to find has such a classification as this been sustained; and, if it is once conceded that the legislature may make this classification, there is no limit to its power. It may make a railroad liable for the negligence of its employees in grading a railroad, and exempt a contractor in grading a street. It may make the employees of a corporation liable, and not those of an individual. This statute cannot, therefore, be brought within any of the rules laid down by this court.

Missouri P. R. Co. v. Mackey, 127 U. S. 205, 32 L. ed. 107, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1161; Tullis v. Lake Erie & W. R. Co. 175 U. S. 348, 44 L. ed. 192, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 136; Chicago, R. I. & P. R. Co. v. Stahley, 11 C. C. A. 88, 27 U. S. App. 157, 62 Fed. 363; Chicago, K. & W. R. Co. v. Pontius, 157 U. S. 209, 39 L. ed. 675, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 585.

Constructions placed by the state court upon the laws of the state, whether common or statutory, are reviewable here so far as necessary to determine whether the party bringing up the case has been denied by the state court any right or immunity secured to him by the Constitution of the United States.

Gibson v. Mississippi, 162 U. S. 565, 591, 40 L. ed. 1075, 1081, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 904; Atchison, T. & S. F. R. Co. v. Matthews, 174 U. S. 100, 43 L. ed. 911, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 609; Yick Wo v. Hopkins, 118 U. S. 356, 366, 30 L. ed. 220, 225, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1064; Chicago, B. & Q. R. Co. v. Chicago, 166 U. S. 226, 248, 41 L. ed. 979, 988, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 581; Scott v. McNeal, 154 U. S. 34, 44–48, 38 L. ed. 896, 901, 902, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1108.

The statute and its proviso should be read in the light of the railroad business as known to Minnesota and its legislators when the statute was framed and enacted.

Funk v. St. Paul City R. Co. 61 Minn.

435, 29 L.R.A. 208, 52 Am. St. Rep. 608, 63 N. W. 1099.

The proviso, instead of being used as a key to the object and policy of the law, as it should have been, has, despite the strong presumption of legislative rationality in which the courts ought to indulge, been regarded as arbitrary and inexplicable.

Schneider v. Chicago, B. & N. R. Co. 42 Minn. 68, 43 N. W. 783.

Legislation of this character is designed for the joint benefit of the employee and the public.

Missouri P. R. Co. v. Mackey, 127 U. S. 209, 210, 32 L. ed. 109, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1161; Williams v. Northern Lumber Co. 113 Fed. 382; Herrick v. Minneapolis & St. L. R. Co. 31 Minn. 11, 47 Am. Rep. 771, 16 N. W. 413.

Mr. Samuel A. Anderson argued the cause, and, with Mr. George M. Nelson, filed a brief for defendant in error:

The national courts uniformly follow the construction of the Constitution and statutes of a state, given by its highest judicial tribunal, in all cases which involve no question of general or commercial law, and no question of right under the Constitution and laws of the nation.

Kibbe v. Stevenson Iron Min. Co. 136 Fed. 147; Bolles v. Brimfield, 120 U. S. 759, 763, 30 L. ed. 786, 788, 7 Sup. Ct. Rep. 736; Detroit v. Osborne, 135 U. S. 492, 499, 34 L. ed. 260, 262, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1012; Gut v. Minnesota, 9 Wall. 35, 37, 19 L. ed. 573, 574; Fairfield v. Gallatin County, 100 U. S. 47, 50, 52, 25 L. ed. 544, 545, 546; Bank of Hamilton v. Dudley, 2 Pet. 492, 7 L. ed. 496; Union Nat. Bank v. Bank of Kansas City, 136 U. S. 223, 235, 34 L. ed. 341, 346, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1013.

The supreme court of Minnesota upheld the constitutionality of the statute in question by limiting its operation to that class of railroad employees that is exposed to the hazards and dangers incident and peculiar to the actual operation of railroads.

Lavallee v. St. Paul, M. & M. R. Co. 40 Minn. 249, 41 N. W. 974; Schneider v. Chicago, B. & N. R. Co. 42 Minn. 68, 43 N. W. 783; Johnson v. St. Paul & D. R. Co. 43 Minn. 222, 8 L.R.A. 419, 45 N. W. 156; Pearson v. Chicago, M. & St. P. R. Co. 47 Minn. 9, 47 N. W. 302; Steffenson v. Chicago, M. & St. P. R. Co. 45 Minn. 355, 11 L.R.A. 271, 47 N. W. 1068; Mikkelson v. Truesdale, 63 Minn. 137, 65 N. W. 260; Blomquist v. Great Northern R. Co. 65 Minn. 69, 67 N. W. 804; Kreuzer v. Great Northern R. Co. 83 Minn. 385, 86 N. W. 413.

The manifest purpose of the statute is to give its benefit to employees engaged in the hazardous business of operating railroads. When thus limited, it is constitutional. When extended further, it becomes unconstitutional.

Deppe v. Chicago, R. I. & P. R. Co. 36 Iowa, 52; Missouri P. R. Co. v. Haley, 25 Kan. 35; Union P. R. Co. v. Harris, 33 Kan. 416, 6 Pac. 571.

Logically and on constitutional grounds the statute was necessarily held to be applicable to persons or corporations operating railroads in their own private business, where they expose their employees to hazards and dangers of like character to those to which employees of commercial roads are exposed.

Schus v. Powers-Simpson Co. 85 Minn. 447, 69 L.R.A. 887, 89 N. W. 68; Roe v. Winston, 86 Minn. 77, 90 N. W. 122; Kibbe v. Stevenson Iron Min. Co. supra.

State legislation such as the statute in question, construed as it has been by the state supreme court of Minnesota and the supreme court of Kansas, is within the police power of the state, is a proper exercise thereof, and does not violate the Constitution of the United States.

Missouri P. R. Co. v. Mackey, 127 U. S. 205, 32 L. ed. 107, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1161; Minneapolis & St. L. R. Co. v. Herrick, 127 U. S. 210, 32 L. ed. 109, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1176.

Statutes passed by the state legislatures in exercise of the police power are not necessarily designed for the protection or welfare of the public generally, as distinguished from those of a particular class, as employees exposed to peculiar hazards.

Holden v. Hardy, 169 U. S. 366, 42 L. ed. 780, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 383; St. Louis Consol. Coal Co. v. Illinois, 185 U. S. 203, 46 L. ed. 872, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 616.

Mr. Justice Holmes delivered the opinion of the court:

This is an action for the loss of an arm by the plaintiff, the defendant in error, while repairing an engine of the defendant, through the negligence of a fellow servant. A statute of Minnesota reads as follows: "Every railroad corporation owning or operating a railroad in this state shall be liable for all damages sustained by any agent or servant thereof by reason of the negligence of any other agent or servant thereof, without contributory negligence on his part, when sustained within this state, and no contract, rule, or regulation between such corporation and any agent or servant shall impair or diminish such liability; provided, that nothing in this act shall be so construed as to render any railroad company liable for damages sustained by any employee, agent, or servant while engaged in the construction of a new road, or any part thereof, not open to public travel or use." Minn. Gen. Stat. 1894, § 2701. The track on which the accident happened was a narrow gauge track, on which dump cars were run by the defendant, a mining company, for the purpose of stripping the earth from the surface of its mine. The plaintiff had a verdict which afterwards was set aside by the trial court on the [597] ground that if the statute were *construed to apply to this case it would be contrary to the 14th Amendment of the Constitution of the United States. This ruling was reversed by the supreme court of the state and judgment was entered on the verdict. 93 Minn. 63, 100 N. W. 681. The case then was brought here.

The supreme court of Minnesota construed the act to apply to this case, and held it constitutional when so construed. Of course, if the statute as interpreted is not within the prohibitions of the 14th Amendment, we do not interfere with the construction adopted by the state court. The state court held that the act was confined to the dangers peculiar to railroads, and did not discriminate against railroad companies merely as such. It read the proviso as only exempting incomplete roads, marking the time when the statute should take effect, and not as confining it to roads intended for public travel. Before us it was argued that when the statute was passed there were no private railroads in the state, and that, if the proviso is taken to mean what the court said, the discrimination is senseless and unjustified; whereas, if it be taken to confine the statute to public roads after public travel has begun, the distinction may be maintained. We are of a different opinion. Some time must be fixed when the law shall begin to operate, and the time when the road is finished is a natural and proper time. There may be unavoidable and exceptional dangers before the track is finished and while cars are being run over it for construction purposes, and the legislature might think it proper that the servant should take the risk of these even if the negligence of a fellow servant co-operated, just as he takes the risk of the known peculiar dangers when he sets about repairing the effects of an accident. The fact that there may be also dangers like those on the finished road does not prevent the legislature from considering the situation as a whole and keeping the old rule on practical grounds until the exceptional risks come to an end. It was assumed in argument that the statute would not apply to a road like the present if it were built in aid of the construction of a public railroad which was not yet *completed. We see noth- [593] ing in the decision or the statute to warrant the assumption, and therefore need not discuss what the effect of such an exception would be. Of course, there is no objection to legislation being confined to a peculiar and well-defined class of perils, and it is not necessary that they should be perils which are shared by the public, if they concern the body of citizens engaged in a particular work. Holden v. Hardy, 169 U. S. 366, 42 L. ed. 780, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 383.

It was not argued that the statute was bad as interfering unduly with freedom of contract. There is no doubt that that freedom may be limited where there are visible reasons of public policy for the limitation. Holden v. Hardy, 169 U. S. 366, 391, 42 L. ed. 780, 790, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 383. The constitutionality of the law, so far as it merely does away with the exception as to the negligence of fellow servants from the general law of master and servant in the case of railroads, is not disputed. Missouri P. R. Co. v. Mackey, 127 U. S. 205, 32 L. ed 107, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1161. The whole case is put on the proviso, and the argument with regard to that is merely one of the many attempts to impart an overmathematical nicety to the prohibitions of the 14th Amendment.

Judgment affirmed.

MEMORANDA

OF

CASES DISPOSED OF WITHOUT OPINIONS.

EX PARTE: IN THE MATTER OF LEONIDAS M. LAWSON et al. [No. —, Original.]

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 599.)

Motion for Leave to File Petition for a Writ of Mandamus.

Messrs. Chas. C. Dey, Ogden Hiles, Charles J. Hughes, Jr., L. R. Rogers, and John A. Street for petitioners.

October 16, 1905. Denied.

SAMUEL W. WATKINS, Plaintiff in Error, v. AMERICAN NATIONAL BANK OF DENVER. [No. 259.]

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 599.)

In Error to the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Eighth Circuit.

See same case below, 67 C. C. A. 110, 134 Fed. 36.

Mr. George H. Noyes for plaintiff in error.

Messrs. T. J. O'Donnell and R. T. McNeal for defendant in error.

October 16, 1905. Dismissed for the want of jurisdiction. Ex parte Jones, 164 U. S. 691, 41 L. ed. 601, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 222; Press Pub. Co. v. Monroe, 164 U. S. 105, 41 L. ed. 367, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 40; Arbuckle v. Blackburn, 191 U. S. 405, 48 L. ed. 239, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 148; Spencer v. Duplan Silk Co. 191 U. S. 526, 48 L. ed. 287, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 174; Wabash R. Co. v. Flannigan, 192 U. S. 29, 48 L. ed. 328, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 224.

Petition for Writ of Certiorari denied.

E. A. WIMBISH, Superintendent, etc., Appellant, v. HENRY JAMISON. [No. 163.]

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 599.)

Appeal from the District Court of the United States for the Southern District of Georgia.

See same case below, 130 Fed. 351.

Mr. Minter Wimberly for appellant.

Mr. Alexander Akerman for appellee.

October 16, 1905. Final order reversed with costs, and cause remanded, with a direction to quash the writ and dismiss the petition. Minnesota v. Brundage, 180 U. S. 499, 45 L. ed. 639, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 455; Davis v. Burke, 179 U. S. 399, 45 L. ed. 249, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 210; New York v. Eno, 155 U. S. 89, 39 L. ed. 80, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 30; Pepke v. Cronan, 155 U. S. 100, 39 L. ed. 84, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 34.

CEDAR RAPIDS WATER COMPANY, Plaintiff in Error, v. CITY OF CEDAR RAPIDS et al. [No. 3.]

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 600.)

In Error to the Supreme Court of the State of Iowa.

See same case below, 118 Iowa, 234, 91 N. W. 1081.

Mr. Charles A. Clark for plaintiff in error.

Mr. John N. Hughes for defendants in error.

October 23, 1905. Dismissed for want of jurisdiction. Kimball v. Kimball, 174 U. S. 158, 43 L. ed. 932, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 639; Mills v. Green, 159 U. S. 651, 40 L. ed. 293, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 132; California v. San Pablo & T. R. Co. 149 U. S. 308, 37 L. ed. 747, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 876; Little v. Bowers, 134 U. S. 547, 33 L. ed. 1016, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 620.

PEOPLE OF THE STATE OF ILLINOIS ex rel. FRANK O. ANDERSON, Plaintiff in Error, v. WILLIAM VREDENBURGH, Insurance Superintendent, etc. [No. 15.]

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 600.)

In Error to the Supreme Court of the State of Illinois.

See same case below, 207 Ill. 316, 69 N. E. 775.

Mr. Charles H. Aldrich for plaintiff in error.

Mr. Geo. W. Wall for defendant in error.

October 23, 1905. Dismissed for want of jurisdiction. Schlosser v. Hemphill, 198 U. S. 173, 49 L. ed. 1000, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 654.

CONTINENTAL INSURANCE COMPANY, Plaintiff in Error, v. WILLIAM VREDENBURGH, Insurance Superintendent, etc. [No. 16.]

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 600.)

In Error to the Supreme Court of the State of Illinois.

See same case below, 207 Ill. 512, 69 N. E. 779.

Mr. Charles H. Aldrich for plaintiff in error.

Mr. George W. Wall for defendant in error.

October 23, 1905. Dismissed for want of jurisdiction. Schlosser v. Hemphill, 198 U. S. 173, 49 L. ed. 1000, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 654.

NICHOLAS BOWDEN, Executor, etc., et al. Appellants, v. CITY & COUNTY OF SAN FRANCISCO. [No. 17.]

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 600.)

Appeal from the Circuit Court of the United States for the Northern District of California.

Messrs. S. W. and E. B. Holladay for appellants.

Messrs. Percy V. Long, W. I. Brobeck, and John S. Partridge for appellee.

October 23, 1905. Decree affirmed with costs. Hoadley v. San Francisco (Clark v. San Francisco) 124 U. S. 645, 31 L. ed. 556, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 659, 94 U. S. 4, 24 L. ed. 34, 50 Cal. 273, 70 Cal. 320, 12 Pac. 125; Townsend v. Greeley, 5 Wall. 326, 18 L. ed. 547; Grisar v. McDowell, 6 Wall. 379, 18 L. ed. 868; Holladay v. San Francisco, 124 Cal. 352, 57 Pac. 146; Board of Education v. Martin, 92 Cal. 209, 28 Pac. 799; Trenouth v. San Francisco, 100 U. S. 251, 25 L. ed. 626.

GEORGE E. GREEN, Appellant, v. CLINTON D. MACDOUGALL, United States Marshal, etc. [Nos. 250, 251, 252.]

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 601.)

Appeals from the District Court of the United States for the Northern District of New York.

See same case below, 136 Fed. 618.

Mr. John G. Johnson for appellant.

The Attorney General, the Solicitor General, and Assistant to the Attorney General Purdy for appellee.

October 23, 1905. Final orders affirmed with costs. Beavers v. Henkel, 194 U. S. 73, 48 L. ed. 882, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 605; Benson v. Henkel, 198 U. S. 1, 49 L. ed. 919, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 569; Hyde v. Shine, 199 U. S. 84, 50 L. ed. 90, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 760; Greene v. Henkel, 183 U. S. 249, 46 L. ed. 177, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 218.

JOHN J. DELAHANTY, Plaintiff in Error, v. WILLIAM T. PITKIN et al. [No. 26.]

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 602.)

In Error to the Supreme Court of Errors of the State of Connecticut.

See same case below, 76 Conn. 412, 56 Atl. 881.

Messrs. Lewis E. Stanton and Sidney E. Clarke for plaintiff in error.

Messrs. Charles E. Perkins and Wm. Waldo Hyde for defendants in error.

October 30, 1905. Dismissed for the want of jurisdiction. Giles v. Teasley, 193 U. S. 146, 48 L. ed. 655, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 359; Remington Paper Co. v. Watson, 173 U. S. 443, 43 L. ed. 762, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 456; Smalley v. Laugenour, 196 U. S. 93, 49 L. ed. 400, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 216; Wabash R. Co. v. Flannigan, 192 U. S. 29, 48 L. ed. 328, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 224.

FARMERS' LOAN & TRUST COMPANY et al. Appellants, v. CITY OF SIOUX FALLS et al. [No. 296.]

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 601.)

Appeal from the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Eighth Circuit.

See same case below, 131 Fed. 890.

Messrs. D. T. Watson, Bartlett Tripp, John H. Voorhees, Park Davis, and Chas. O. Bailey for appellants.

Messrs. Hosmer H. Keith and R. H. Warren for appellees.

October 23, 1905. Dismissed for the want of jurisdiction. Arbuckle v. Blackburn, 191 U. S. 405, 48 L. ed. 239, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 148; Newburyport Water Co. v. Newburyport, 193 U. S. 562, 48 L. ed. 795, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 553; Underground R. Co. v. New York, 193 U. S. 416, 48 L. ed. 733, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 494; Skaneateles Waterworks Co. v. Skaneateles, 184 U. S. 354, 46 L. ed. 585, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 400; McCain v. Des Moines, 174 U. S. 168, 43 L. ed. 936, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 644.

Petition for Writ of Certiorari denied.

EDWARD WHITE, Appellant, v. AUGUSTA PATTEN GLOVER et al. [No. 36.]

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 602.)

Appeal from the Court of Appeals of the District of Columbia.

See same case below, 23 App. D. C. 389.

Messrs. E. F. Colladay, L. T. Michener, Clayton E. Emig, and Chester H. Krum for appellant.

Messrs. Corcoran Thom and Henry P. Blair for appellees.

November 6, 1905. Decree affirmed with costs.

THOMAS R. SHAW, Receiver, etc., Plaintiff in Error, v. NATIONAL GERMAN-AMERICAN BANK OF ST. PAUL, MINN. [No. 115.]

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 603.)

In Error to the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Eighth Circuit.

See same case below, 65 C. C. A. 620, 132 Fed. 658.

Mr. Guy C. H. Corliss for plaintiff in error.

Mr. J. W. Lusk for defendant in error.

November 13, 1905. Judgment affirmed with costs. California Nat. Bank v. Kennedy, 167 U. S. 362, 42 L. ed. 198, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 831; First Nat. Bank v. Hawkins, 174 U. S. 364, 43 L. ed. 1007, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 739; Scott v. Deweese, 181 U. S. 202, 45 L. ed. 822, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 585; Matteson v. Dent, 176 U. S. 521, 44 L. ed. 571, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 419.

Case remanded to the Circuit Court of the United States for the District of Minnesota.

HARRY J. CANTWELL et al., Plaintiffs in Error, v. STATE OF MISSOURI. [No. 38.]

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 602.)

In Error to the Supreme Court of the State of Missouri.

See same case below, 179 Mo. 245, 78 S. W. 569.

Messrs. Harry J. Cantwell and John E. Risley for plaintiffs in error.

Messrs. Herbert S. Hadley, North T. Gentry, and John H. Murphy for defendant in error.

November 6, 1905. Judgment affirmed with costs. Holden v. Hardy, 169 U. S. 366, 42 L. ed. 780, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 383; Jacobson v. Massachusetts, 197 U. S. 11, 49 L. ed. 643, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 358; Jackson ex dem. Hart v. Lamphire, 3 Pet. 280, 7 L. ed. 679.

CITIZEN'S NATIONAL BANK et al., Plaintiffs in Error, v. COMMONWEALTH OF KENTUCKY, use, etc., of BOYLE COUNTY. [No. 43.]

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 603.)

In Error to the Court of Appeals of the State of Kentucky.

See same case below, 25 Ky. L. Rep. 2100, 80 S. W. 158.

Mr. Robert T. Quisenberry for plaintiffs in error.

Mr. John W. Yerkes for defendant in error.

November 13, 1905. Dismissed for the want of jurisdiction. Schlosser v. Hemphill, 198 U. S. 173, 49 L. ed. 1000, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 654.

IN THE MATTER OF WILLIAM W. BIERCE, LIMITED, Petitioner. [No. 14, Original.]

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 603.)

Petition for a Writ of Mandamus against the chief justice and associate justices of the Supreme Court of the Territory of Hawaii, commanding them to grant an appeal, or, in the alternative, for a Writ of Certiorari to bring the case before the Supreme Court of the United States.

See same case below, 16 Haw. 418.

Mr. Chas. H. Aldrich for petitioner.

No opposition.

December 4, 1905. Leave to file petition for Writs of Mandamus or Certiorari granted, and, on consideration thereof and of the record presented therewith, it is ordered that an appeal be, and it is hereby, allowed, without prejudice, from the judgment of the Supreme Court of the Territory of Hawaii in the case of Bierce v. Hutchins, 16 Haw. 418, on appellant giving bond in the penal sum of $1,000, conditioned according to law, and approved by the chief justice of said supreme court or an associate justice thereof.

ALLISON D. GIBBS, Plaintiff in Error, v. ROBERT S. McDOUGALL. [No. 42.]

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 602.)

In Error to the Supreme Court of the Philippine Islands.

Messrs. John F. Shafroth, Platt Rogers, and F. E. Gregg for plaintiff in error.

No appearance for defendant in error.

November 13, 1905. Dismissed for the want of jurisdiction. Schlosser v. Hemphill, 198 U. S. 173, 49 L. ed. 1000, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 654.

JOHN C. GORE, JR., et al., Appellants, v. UNITED STATES et al. [No. 66.]

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 604.)

Appeal from the Circuit Court of the United States for the Northern District of California.

Mr. Hamilton Gay Howard for appellants.

Messrs. H. G. Platt and Richard Bayne for appellees.

December 4, 1905. Dismissed for want of jurisdiction. Gwin v. United States, 184 U. S. 672, 46 L. ed. 746, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 526; Lau Ow Bew v. United States, 144 U. S. 47–56, 36 L. ed. 340–343, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 517; American Constr. Co. v. Jacksonville, T. & K. W. R. Co. 148 U. S. 372–383, 37 L. ed. 486–491, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 758; Borgmeyer v. Idler, 159 U. S. 408, 40 L. ed. 199, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 34; Muse v. Arlington Hotel Co. 168 U. S. 430, 42 L. ed. 531, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 109; act of March 3, 1891 (26 Stat. at L. 826, chap. 517, §§ 5 & 6, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, pp. 549, 550).

WABASH RAILROAD COMPANY, Plaintiff in Error, v. GENEVIEVE HALSTEAD MATHEW. [No. 92.]

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 605.)

In Error to the Kansas City Court of Appeals, State of Missouri.

See same case below (Mo. App.) 78 S.W. 271.

Mr. W. H. Blodgett for plaintiff in error.

Mr. Grant I. Rosenzweig for defendant in error.

December 11, 1905. Judgment affirmed, with 10 per cent damages, in addition to interest and costs.

LEONIDAS M. LAWSON et al., Petitioners, v. UNITED STATES MINING COMPANY. [No. 264.]

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 605.)

Petition for a Writ of Certiorari to the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Eighth Circuit.

Messrs. Ogden Hiles, Charles J. Hughes, Jr., L. R. Rogers, and C. C. Dey for petitioners.

Messrs. Geo. Sutherland, Waldemar Van Cott, and Edward M. Allison, Jr., for respondent.

October 16, 1905. Granted.

MOBILE TRANSPORTATION COMPANY, Appellant, v. CITY OF MOBILE et al. [No. 103.]
(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 604.)

Appeal from the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Fifth Circuit.

See same case below, 60 C. C. A. 689, 125 Fed. 1003.

Messrs. Frederick G. Bromberg and Eugene H. Lewis for appellant.

Messrs. Harry T. and Gregory L. Smith for appellees.

December 11, 1905. Dismissed for want of jurisdiction. Act March 3, 1891 (26 Stat. at L. 826, chap. 517, § 6, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 549); Colorado Cent. Consol. Min. Co. v. Turck, 150 U. S. 138, 37 L. ed. 1030, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 35; Rouse v. Letcher, 156 U. S. 47, 39 L. ed. 341, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 266; Carey v. Houston & T. C. R. Co. 161 U. S. 115, 40 L. ed. 638, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 537; Ex parte Jones, 164 U. S. 691, 41 L. ed. 601, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 222; Gableman v. Peoria, D. & E. R. Co. 179 U. S. 335, 339, 45 L. ed. 220, 223, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 171; Arbuckle v. Blackburn, 191 U. S. 405, 48 L. ed. 239, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 148; Spencer v. Duplan Silk Co. 191 U. S. 526, 48 L. ed. 287, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 174; Mobile Transp. Co. v. Mobile, 187 U. S. 482, 47 L. ed. 269, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 170; Mobile Transp. Co. v. Mobile, 195 U. S. 631, 49 L. ed. 353, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 789.

R. J. WALBRIDGE, Petitioner, v. W. P. WALKER & Co. [No. 265.]
(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 605.)

Petition for a Writ of Certiorari to the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Fifth Circuit.

See same case below, 68 C. C. A. 569, 136 Fed. 19.

Mr. R. L. Batts for petitioner.

No opposition.

October 16, 1905. Denied.

P. S. BAILEY, Petitioner, v. THOMAS F. WILLEFORD. [No. 277.]
(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 606.)

Petition for a Writ of Certiorari to the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Fourth Circuit.

See same case below, 136 Fed. 382.

Mr. H. J. Haynsworth for petitioner.

Mr. Robert B. Redwine for respondent.

October 16, 1905. Denied.

JOSEPH BISSO et al., Petitioners, v. MALVINA L. QUINETTE. [No. 279.]
(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 606.)

Petition for a Writ of Certiorari to the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Fifth Circuit.

See same case below, 136 Fed. 825.

Messrs. L. C. Quintero and John D. Grace for petitioners.

No opposition.

October 16, 1905. Denied.

JOSEPH R. DELAMAR, Petitioner, v. UTAH-NEVADA COMPANY. [No. 255.]
(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 605.)

Petition for a Writ of Certiorari to the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Ninth Circuit.

See same case below, 66 C. C. A. 179, 133 Fed. 113.

Mr. E. S. Pillsbury for petitioner.

Messrs. James G. Maguire, W. H. Metson, and J. T. Houx for respondent.

October 16, 1905. Denied.

LEWIS C. BURNES et al., Petitioners, v. FRANCES B. BURNES et al. [No. 271.]
(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 605.)

Petition for a Writ of Certiorari to the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Eighth Circuit.

See same case below, 137 Fed. 781.

Messrs. Stephen S. Brown, John E. Dolman, A. P. Jetmore and S. M. Gardenhire for petitioners.

Messrs. O. M. Spencer, Frank Hagerman and Vinton Pike for respondents.

October 16, 1905. Denied.

BIG SIX DEVELOPMENT COMPANY, Petitioner, v. S. DUFFIELD MITCHELL. [No. 276.]
(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 606.)

Petition for a Writ of Certiorari to the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Eighth Circuit.

See same case below, 1 L.R.A.(N.S.) 332, 138 Fed. 279.

Messrs. Frank Hagerman and Jno. W. Halliburton for petitioner.

Mr. S. Duffield Mitchell pro se.

October 16, 1905. Denied.

ÆTNA INDEMNITY COMPANY, Petitioner, v. WILLIAM M. LADD et al. [No. 410.]
(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 606.)

Petition for a Writ of Certiorari to the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Ninth Circuit.

See same case below, 68 C. C. A. 274, 135 Fed. 636.

Messrs. Joseph C. Campbell, Wm. H. Metson and Geo. M. MacKellar for petitioner.

Messrs. C. E. S. Wood and Geo. H. Williams for respondents.

October 16, 1905. Denied.

J. B. ORCUTT COMPANY et al., Petitioners, v. CHARLES H. GREEN et al. [No. 400.]
(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 606.)

Petition for a Writ of Certiorari to the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Second Circuit.

Messrs. Chas. Cowles Tucker, J. Miller Kenyon, and Reginald S. Huidekoper for petitioners.

Mr. H. D. Bailey for respondents.

October 23, 1905. Granted.

AMERICAN SURETY COMPANY OF NEW YORK, Petitioner, v. CAMPBELL & ZELL COMPANY. [No. 379.]

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 607.)

Petition for Writ of Certiorari to the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the First Circuit.

See same case below, 138 Fed. 531.

Mr. Henry Wheeler for petitioner.

Mr. Byron E. Croiwell for respondent.

October 23, 1905. Denied.

P. SANFORD ROSS, INCORPORATED, Petitioner, v. THE STEAMSHIP "CITY OF BIRMINGHAM," etc. [No. 418.]

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 607.)

Petition for Writ of Certiorari to the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Second Circuit.

See same case below, 138 Fed. 555.

Mr. Robert D. Benedict for petitioner.

Mr. Charles S. Haight for respondent.

October 23, 1905. Denied.

T. W. HARRISON, Petitioner, v. REMINGTON PAPER COMPANY. [No. 423.]

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 607.)

Petition for a Writ of Certiorari to the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Eighth Circuit.

See same case below, 140 Fed. 385.

Messrs. W. H. Rossington and Chas. Blood Smith for petitioner.

No opposition.

October 23, 1905. Denied.

ERIE RAILROAD COMPANY, Petitioner, v. ERIE & WESTERN TRANSPORTATION COMPANY. [No. 433.]

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 607.)

Petition for a Writ of Certiorari to the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Seventh Circuit.

Messrs. C. E. Kremer and W. O. Johnson for petitioner.

Messrs. Harvey D. Goulder, S. H. Holding, and F. S. Masten for respondent.

October 30, 1905. Granted.

UNITED STATES OF AMERICA et al., Petitioners, v. WILLIAM B. KIRK. [No. 442.]

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 607.)

Petition for a Writ of Certiorari to the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Second Circuit.

See same case below, 137 Fed. 753.

The Attorney General and the Solicitor General for petitioners.

Messrs. Abram J. Rose and Alfred C. Pette for respondent.

November 6, 1905. Denied.

PRESSED STEEL CAR COMPANY, Petitioner, v. JOHN M. HANSEN. [No. 445.]

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 608.)

Petition for a Writ of Certiorari to the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Third Circuit.

See same case below, 137 Fed. 403.

Mr. Philander C. Knox for petitioner.

Messrs. D. T. Watson and Geo. B. Gordon for respondent.

November 6, 1905. Denied.

EARL A. THISSELL, Petitioner, v. U. S. BOBBIN & SHUTTLE COMPANY. [No. 425.]

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 608.)

Petition for a Writ of Certiorari to the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the First Circuit.

See same case below, 137 Fed. 1.

Mr. Warren Ozro Kyle for petitioner.

Messrs. Cyrus M. Van Slyck and Wm. M. Richardson for respondent.

November 13, 1905. Denied.

WESTERN WOOLEN MILL COMPANY, Petitioner, v. NORTHERN ASSURANCE COMPANY OF LONDON. [No. 440.]

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 608.)

Petition for Writ of Certiorari to the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Eighth Circuit.

See same case below, 139 Fed. 637.

Messrs. W. H. Rossington and Chas. Blood Smith for petitioner.

Messrs. Chas. J. Green and Ralph W. Breckenridge for respondent

November 27, 1905. Denied.

HARWAY DYEWOOD & EXTRACT MANUFACTURING COMPANY et al., Petitioners, v. HEMOLIN COMPANY. [No. 273.]

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 608.)

Petition for a Writ of Certiorari to the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Second Circuit.

See same case below, 138 Fed. 54.

Mr. W. P. Preble, Jr., for petitioners.

Mr. Harold Binney for respondent.

December 4, 1905. Denied.

ALEXANDER VON FABER-CASTELL, Petitioner, v. JOHN EBERHARD FABER. [No. 403.]

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 609.)

Petition for a Writ of Certiorari to the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Second Circuit.

See same case below, 139 Fed. 257.

Messrs. Joseph H. Choate and Frederick W. Hinrichs for petitioner.

Mr. Benjamin F. Tracy for respondent.

December 4, 1905. Denied.

AMERICAN SEWAGE DISPOSAL COMPANY OF BOSTON, Petitioner, v. CITY OF PAWTUCKET. [No. 444.]

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 609.)

Petition for a Writ of Certiorari to the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the First Circuit.

See same case below, 138 Fed. 811.

Mr. Edward P. Payson for petitioner.

Mr. Wm. R. Tillinghast for respondent.

December 4, 1905. Denied.

HAYES YOUNG TIE PLATE COMPANY, Petitioner, v. ST. LOUIS TRANSIT COMPANY. [No. 456.]

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 609.)

Petition for a Writ of Certiorari to the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Eighth Circuit.

See same case below, 137 Fed. 80.

Messrs. James L. Hopkins, Alfred A. Eicks, and J. S. Barker for petitioner.

No opposition.

December 4, 1905. Denied.

SEWERAGE & WATER BOARD OF NEW ORLEANS, Petitioner, v. NATIONAL CONTRACTING CO. [No. 502.]

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 609.)

Petition for a Writ of Certiorari to the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Fifth Circuit.

See same case below, 141 Fed. 325.

Messrs. Omer Villere and S. L. Gilmore for petitioner.

No opposition.

December 11, 1905. Denied.

CHEUNG HIM NIM, Appellant, v. UNITED STATES [No. 146]; CHEW HING, Appellant, v. UNITED STATES [No. 147]; LEE YUE, Appellant, v. UNITED STATES [No. 148]; CHIN CHEW FONG, etc., Appellant, v. UNITED STATES [No. 149]; CHEUNG PANG, Appellant, v. UNITED STATES [No. 150].

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 609.)

Appeals from the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Ninth Circuit.

Mr. Oliver Dibble for appellants.

The Attorney General for appellee.

October 10, 1905. Dismissed, per stipulation, on motion of Mr. Solicitor General Hoyt for the appellee.

GIUSEPPE MARMO, Appellant v. WILLIAM C. NICOLL, Sheriff of the County of Essex, N. J. [No. 428.]

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 610.)

Appeal from the Circuit Court of the United States for the District of New Jersey.

Mr. Charles F. Wilson for appellee.

No one opposed.

October 10, 1905. Docketed and Dismissed with costs, on motion of Mr. Charles F. Wilson for the appellee.

NEW YORK LIFE INSURANCE COMPANY, Plaintiff in Error, v. ANNIE E. ENGLISH. [No. 41.]

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 610.)

In Error to the Court of Civil Appeals of the First Supreme Judicial District of the State of Texas.

See same case below, 79 S. W. 616.

Messrs. George W. Hubbell, Jas. H. McIntosh, and Frederic D. McKenney for plaintiff in error.

Messrs. John Wharton Clark & Winchester Kelso for defendant in error.

October 10, 1905. Dismissed with costs, on motion of Mr. Frederic D. McKenney for the plaintiff in error.

TACOMA MILL COMPANY, Petitioner, v. BLACK HILLS & NORTHWESTERN RAILWAY COMPANY et al. [No. 76.]

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 610.)

On Writ of Certiorari to the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Ninth Circuit.

See same case below, 63 C. C. A. 544, 129 Fed. 312.

Messrs. James M. Ashton, E. C. Hughes, and Frederic D. McKenney for petitioner.

Mr. James B. Howe for respondents.

October 10, 1905. Dismissed, per stipulation, on motion of Mr. Frederic D. McKenney for the petitioner.

WABASH RAILROAD COMPANY, Plaintiff in Error, v. W. H. SUMMERS. [No. 93.]

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 610.)

In Error to the Kansas City Court of Appeals, State of Missouri.

Mr. W. H. Blodgett for plaintiff in error.

No appearance for defendant in error.

October 10, 1905. Dismissed with costs, on motion of counsel for the plaintiff in error.

C. M. BARNES, MAYOR, etc., et al., Appellants, v. C. W. TURNER et al. [No. 109.]
(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 611.)
Appeal from the Supreme Court of the Territory of Oklahoma.
Messrs. Henry E. Asp and L. E. Payson for appellants.
No appearance for appellees.
October 10, 1905. Dismissed with costs, on motion of counsel for the appellants.

NATIONAL ACCIDENT SOCIETY, Plaintiff in Error, v. WILLIAM BRUCE MARTIN, Judge, etc. [No. 120]
(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 611.)
In Error to the Supreme Court of Appeals of the State of Virginia.
Mr. James E. Heath for plaintiff in error.
No appearance for defendant in error.
October 10, 1905. Dismissed with costs, on motion of counsel for the plaintiff in error.

GALEN E GREEN, Plaintiff in Error, v. DAVID STEWART. [No. 132.]
(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 611.)
In Error to the Court of Appeals of the District of Columbia.
Mr. John Ridout for plaintiff in error.
Mr. Charles W. Clagett for defendant in error.
October 10, 1905. Dismissed with costs, on motion of counsel for the plaintiff in error.

PABLO UBARRI et al., Plaintiffs in Error, v. PEDRO C. CORREA Y RODRIGUEZ et al. [No. 136.]
(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 611.)
In Error to the District Court of the United States for the District of Porto Rico.
Mr. N. B. K. Pettingill for plaintiffs in error.
No appearance for defendants in error.
October 10, 1905. Dismissed with costs, on motion of counsel for the plaintiffs in error.

CHICAGO & ERIE RAILROAD COMPANY, Plaintiff in Error, v. J. W. JACOBY, Administrator, etc. [No. 143.]
(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 612.)
In Error to the Supreme Court of the State of Ohio.
Mr. John H. Doyle for plaintiff in error.
No appearance for defendant in error.
October 10, 1905. Dismissed with costs, on motion of counsel for the plaintiff in error.

WABASH RAILROAD COMPANY, Plaintiff in Error, v. JOHN SLOOP. [No. 189.]
(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 612.)
In Error to the Kansas City Court of Appeals, State of Missouri.
Mr. W. H. Blodgett for plaintiff in error.
No appearance for defendant in error.
October 10, 1905. Dismissed with costs, on motion of counsel for the plaintiff in error.

WILLIAM C. JUTTE, Plaintiff in Error, v. MONONGAHELA RIVER CONSOLIDATED COAL & COKE COMPANY. [No. 205.]
(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 612.)
In Error to the Supreme Court of the State of Pennsylvania.
Messrs. Wm. B. Rodgers and Henry A. Davis for plaintiff in error.
No appearance for defendant in error.
October 10, 1905. Dismissed with costs, on motion of counsel for the plaintiff in error.

JERRY E. DONOVAN, Plaintiff in Error, v. MICHAEL T. BERRY. [No. 364.]
(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 612.)
In Error to the Superior Court of the State of Massachusetts.
See same case below, 188 Mass. 353, 74 N. E. 603.
Mr. Arthur D. Hill for plaintiff in error.
Mr. John J. Winn for defendant in error.
October 10, 1905. Dismissed with costs, per stipulation.

UNITED STATES, Appellant, v. MISSOURI, KANSAS, & TEXAS RAILWAY COMPANY et al. [No. 2.]
(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 612.)
Appeal from the Circuit Court of the United States for the District of Kansas.
The Attorney General for appellant.
No appearance for appellees.
October 10, 1905. Dismissed, on motion of Mr. Solicitor General Hoyt for the appellant.

ERIE RAILROAD COMPANY, Plaintiff in Error, v. GEORGE H. MINOR. [No. 4.]
(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 613.)
In Error to the Supreme Court of the State of New York.
See same case below in Appellate Division, 73 App. Div. 621, 76 N. Y. Supp. 513; in Court of Appeals, 171 N. Y. 566, 64 N. E. 454.
Mr. Adelbert Moot for plaintiff in error.
Mr. Charles B. Wheeler for defendant in error.
October 10, 1905. Dismissed with costs, pursuant to the Nineteenth Rule.

CHARLES E DAWSON et al., Plaintiffs in Error, v. THOMAS E. WAGGAMAN, Collector, etc. [No. 23.]

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 613.)

In Error to the Court of Appeals of the District of Columbia.

Mr. D. W. Baker for plaintiffs in error.

Mr. Irving Williamson for defendant in error.

October 11, 1905. Dismissed with costs, on authority of counsel for plaintiffs in error.

THOMAS E. DAVIS, Plaintiff in Error, v. JACOB LIVING et al. [No. 8.]

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 613.)

In Error to the Supreme Court of Appeals of the State of West Virginia.

Mr. Maynard F. Stiles for plaintiff in error.

No appearance for defendants in error.

October 11, 1905. Dismissed with costs, pursuant to the Tenth Rule.

UNITED STATES OF AMERICA v. A. C. McELROY MANUFACTURING COMPANY. [No. 28.]

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 613.)

On a Certificate from the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Third Circuit.

The Attorney General for United States of America.

Mr. F. B. Bracken for the manufacturing company.

October 16, 1905. Dismissed, on motion of Mr. Solicitor Gencral Hoyt for the United States.

PREFERRED TONTINE MERCANTILE COMPANY et al., Plaintiffs in Error, v. STATE OF MISSOURI ex rel. LUTHER S. HICKMAN, Supervisor, etc. [No. 135.]

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 613.)

In Error to the Supreme Court of the State of Missouri.

See same case below, 184 Mo. 160, 82 S. W. 1075.

Mr. James H. Harkless for plaintiffs in error.

No appearance for defendant in error.

October 27, 1905. Dismissed with costs, on motion of counsel for the plaintiffs in error.

UNITED STATES v. LEE SI KUM [No. 139]; UNITED STATES v. MAH QUONG KAY [No. 140].

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 614.)

On Certificates from the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Ninth Circuit.

The Attorney General for the United States.

No appearance for other side.

October 30, 1905. Dismissed, on motion of Mr. Solicitor General Hoyt for the United States.

HENRY LOCKHART et al., Appellants, v. H. C. LEEDS et al. [No. 45.]

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 614.)

Appeal from the Supreme Court of the Territory of New Mexico.

Mr. J. H. McGowan for appellants.

Mr. W. B. Childers for appellees.

November 1, 1905. Dismissed with costs, on motion of counsel for the appellants.

CUMULATIVE CREDIT COMPANY, Appellant, v. MOTLEY H. FLINT. [No. 47.]

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 614.)

Appeal from the Circuit Court of the United States for the Southern District of California.

Mr. John B. Larner for appellant.

No appearance for appellee.

November 2, 1905. Dismissed with costs, pursuant to the Tenth Rule.

PAUL DEROBERT v. NEVADA N. STRANAHAN. [No. 48.]

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 614.)

On a Certificate from the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Second Circuit.

Mr. John A. Garver for Derobert.

The Attorney General for Stranahan.

November 7, 1905. Stricken from the docket for want of prosecution.

JOSÉ ANTONIO FERNANDEZ et al., Plaintiffs in Error, v. SALVADOR LUGO. [No. 59.]

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 614.)

In Error to the District Court of the United States for the District of Porto Rico.

Mr. James S. Harlem for plaintiffs in error.

Mr. C. C. Lancaster for defendant in error.

November 8, 1905. Dismissed with costs, pursuant to the Tenth Rule.

HARRY F. HARRIS, Plaintiff in Error, v. GEORGE F. ELLIOTT et al. [No. 60.]
(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 615.)
In Error to the Court of Appeals of the District of Columbia.
See same case below, 24 App. D. C. 11.
Messrs. D. W. Baker and Frank J. Hogan for plaintiff in error.
The Attorney General for defendants in error.
November 8, 1905. Dismissed with costs, on motion of Mr. Frank J. Hogan for the plaintiff in error.

HOBART S. BIRD, Appellant, v. JOSÉ BERRIOS, Warden, etc. [No. 457.]
(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 615.)
Appeal from the Supreme Court of Porto Rico.
Mr. Gilbert E. Roe for appellant.
No appearance for appellee.
November 8, 1905. Dismissed with costs, on motion of counsel for appellant.

RUDOLPH F. THEURER, Executor, etc., et al., Plaintiffs in Error, v. UNITED STATES. [No. 498.]
(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 615.)
In Error to the Circuit Court of the United States for the District of Louisiana.
The Attorney General for defendant in error.
No opposition.
December 4, 1905. Docketed and dismissed, on motion of Mr. Solicitor General Hoyt for the defendant in error, and cause remanded to the Circuit Court of the United States for the Eastern District of Louisiana.

LUCIAN H. ALEXANDER, Plaintiff in Error, v. CITY OF TACOMA et al. [No. 499.]
(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 615.)
In Error to the Supreme Court of the State of Washington.
Mr. David A. Gourick for defendants in error.
No opposition.
December 4, 1905. Docketed and dismissed with costs, on motion of Mr. David A. Gourick for the defendants in error.

ANN FRANCIS, Plaintiff in Error, v. PETER J. FRANCIS et al. [No. 113.]
(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 616.)
In Error to the Supreme Court of the State of Michigan.
Mr. Henry M. Duffield for plaintiff in error.
No appearance for defendants in error.
December 6, 1905. Dismissed with costs, pursuant to the Tenth Rule.

LA COMPAÑIA DE LOS FERROCARRILES DE PUERTO RICO, Plaintiff in Error, v. JOSÉ CASUELA GEIGEL. [No. 280.]
(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 615.)
In Error to the District Court of the United States for the District of Porto Rico.
Messrs. Frederic D. McKenney, Francis H. Dexter, J. Spalding Flannery for plaintiff in error.
Mrs. Ellen Spencer Mussey for defendant in error.
December 6, 1905. Dismissed with costs, on motion of Mr. Frederic D. McKenney for the plaintiff in error.

J. T. WIYGUL & SONS, Plaintiffs in Error, v. KANSAS CITY, MEMPHIS, & BIRMINGHAM RAILROAD COMPANY. [No. 121.]
(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 616.)
In Error to the Supreme Court of the State of Mississippi.
Mr. Fred Beall for plaintiffs in error.
Messrs. L. F. Parker, A. B. Browne, and Alex. Britton for defendant in error.
December 7, 1905. Dismissed with costs, pursuant to the Tenth Rule.

JOHN H. MITCHELL, Plaintiff in Error, v. UNITED STATES. [No. 409.]
(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 616.)
In Error to the Circuit Court of the United States for the District of Oregon.
Mr. John M. Thurston for plaintiff in error.
The Attorney General for defendant in error.
December 11, 1905. Upon suggestion of death of plaintiff in error, case abated, and writ of error dismissed, on motion of Mr. John M. Thurston for the plaintiff in error.

CHARLES A. DE ARNAUD, Plaintiff in Error, v. FRED. C. AINSWORTH. [No. 128.]
(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 616.)
In Error to the Court of Appeals of the District of Columbia.
Mr. F. P. B. Sands for plaintiff in error.
No appearance for defendant in error.
December 11, 1905. Dismissed with costs, pursuant to the Tenth Rule.

WILLIAM F. TRYBER, Appellant, v. McGREGOR CREAMERY ASSOCIATION et al. [No. 129.]
(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 617.)
Appeal from the Circuit Court of the United States for the Western District of Texas.
Mr. W. J. Moroney for appellant.
No appearance for appellees.
December 11, 1905. Dismissed with costs, pursuant to the Tenth Rule.

CASES

ARGUED AND DECIDED

IN THE

SUPREME COURT

OF THE

UNITED STATES

AT

OCTOBER TERM, 1905.

Vol. 200

REFERENCE TABLE

OF SUCH CASES

DECIDED IN U. S. SUPREME COURT,

OCTOBER TERM, 1905,

AND REPORTED HEREIN,

VOLUME 200,

AS ALSO APPEAR IN

OFFICIAL REPORTER'S EDITION.

Off. Rep. 200 U. S.	Title.	Here in
1–2	United States ex rel. Drury v. Lewis	343
2–4	" "	344
6–7	" "	345
7–8	" "	346
9	Albright v. New Mexico ex rel. Sandoval	346
9–12	" "	347
12	" "	348
12	Nutt v. Knut	348
13–14	" "	350
14–16	" "	351
16–20	" "	352
20–22	" "	353
22	Knoxville Water Co. v. Knoxville	353
25–28	" "	356
28–30	" "	357
30–32	" "	358
32–35	" "	359
35–37	" "	360
37–38	" "	361
38–39	Owensboro Waterworks Co. v. Owensboro	361
39–41	" "	362
41–45	" "	363
45–47	" "	364
47	" "	365
48–49	Peoria Gas & Electric Co. v. Peoria	365
49–55	" "	366
55–57	" "	367
57	Guardian Trust & Deposit Co. v. Fisher	367
58–59	" "	368
64–65	" "	372
65–68	" "	373
68–70	" "	374
71	Howard v. Perrin	374
71–72	" "	375
73–78	" "	376
78–75	" "	377
76	Kolze v. Hoadley	377
76–78	" "	378
78–79	Kolze v. Hoadley	379
82–83	" "	380
83–85	" "	381
85–86	" "	382
87	Campbell v. California	382
90–92	" "	386
92–94	" "	387
94–95	" "	388
96	Herrick v. Boquillas Land & Cattle Co.	388
96–99	" "	389
99–101	" "	390
101–102	" "	391
103	Sarralles v. Esbri	391
103–106	" "	392
106–108	" "	393
108–111	" "	394
111–113	" "	395
113–116	" "	396
116–118	" "	397
118–120	Montana Catholic Missions v. Missoula County	398
120–123	" "	399
123–124	" "	400
126–128	" "	402
128–130	" "	403
130	Speer v. Colbert	403
131–132	" "	404
132–135	" "	405
135–137	" "	406
140–142	" "	411
142–145	" "	412
145–147	" "	413
148	Meade v. Portland	413
148–149	" "	414
149–151	" "	415
151–154	" "	416
159–161	" "	419
161–164	" "	420
164	" "	421
164	Howard v. Kentucky	421
170–171	" "	424
171–174	" "	425
174–176	" "	426

Off. Rep. 200 U. S.	Title.	Here in
176	Louisville &. N. R. Co. v. Deer	426
177–178	" "	427
179	Cincinnati, P. B. S. & P. Packet Co. v. Bay	428
182–184	" "	432
184–186	" "	433
186	Ballman v. Fagin Ballman v. United States	433
192–194	" "	436
194–196	" "	437
197	United States for Use of Hill v. American Surety Co.	437
199–201	" "	439
201–203	" "	440
203–205	" "	441
206	Alabama Great Southern R. Co. v. Thompson	441
211	" "	444
211–214	" "	445
214–216	" "	446
216–218	" "	447
218–220	" "	448
221	Cincinnati, N. O. & T. P. R. Co. v. Bohon	448
221–222	" "	449
222–225	" "	450
225–226	" "	451
226	Armour Packing Co. v. Lacy	451
227–229	" "	452
229	" "	453
233–235	" "	456
235–237	" "	457
237–238	" "	458
239	Hallenborg v. Cobre Grande Copper Co.	458
239–242	" "	459
242–243	" "	460
244	" "	462
244–247	" "	463
247–248	" "	464
248	" "	464
248	Graham v. Folsom	464
249–250	" "	467
250–252	" "	468
253–255	" "	469
255–257	Carter v. Hawaii	470
257	Warner v. Grayson Talbott v. Grayson Wood v. Grayson	470
258–259	" "	471
258–261	" "	472
261–262	" "	473
267–268	" "	475
268–271	" "	476
271–273	" "	477
273	Gunter v. Atlantic Coast Line R. Co.	477
277–279	" "	481
279–281	" "	482
281–284	" "	483
284–286	" "	484
286–288	" "	485
288–291	" "	486
291–293	" "	487
293–296	Carfer v. Caldwell	488
296–297	" "	489
298	Guss v. Nelson	489
298–299	" "	490
302–303	" "	491
304	San Antonio Traction Co. v. Altgelt	491
304–305	San Antonio Traction Co. v. Altgelt	492
305–307	" "	493
307–310	" "	494
310	" "	495
310–311	Hibernia Savings & Loan Soc. v. San Francisco	495
313–314	" "	496
314–316	" "	497
316	Martin v. Texas	497
318–320	" "	498
320–321	" "	499
321	United States v. Detroit Timber & Lumber Co. Martin - Alexander Lumber Co. v. United States	499
322–324	" "	500
328–330	" "	502
330–332	" "	503
332–334	" "	504
334–337	" "	505
337–339	" "	506
339–340	" "	507
341–342	Southern P. R. Co. v. United States	507
342	" "	508
348–350	" "	510
350–353	" "	511
353	" "	512
354–355	Southern P. R. Co. v. United States	512
355–356	" "	513
357–359	" "	514
359–360	" "	515
361	New York, N. H. & H. R. Co. v. Interstate Commerce Commission Interstate Commerce Commission v. Chesapeake & O. R. Co.	515
381–382	" "	517
382–385	" "	518
385–387	" "	519
387–389	" "	520
389–392	" "	521
392–394	" "	522
394–397	" "	523
397–399	" "	524
399–402	" "	525
402–404	" "	526
404–405	" "	527
405	Rector v. City Deposit Bank Co.	527
409	" "	528
409–412	" "	529
410–414	" "	530
414–416	" "	531
416–419	" "	532
419–420	" "	533
420	Rector v. Commercial Nat. Bank	533
421	" "	535
421–424	" "	536
424	" "	537
425–426	First Nat. Bank v. Converse	537
426–428	" "	538
428–430	" "	539
430–435	" "	540
435–437	" "	541
437–439	" "	542
439–442	" "	543
442–444	" "	544

Off. Rep. 200 U. S.	Title.	Here in
444–445	First Nat. Bank v. Converse	545
446	Security Mut. Life Ins. Co. v. Prewitt	545
446–448	" "	546
449–450	" "	549
450	Travelers Ins. Co. v. Prewitt	549
450	" "	550
451	United States v. Bitter Root Development Co.	550
451–452	" "	551
452–454	" "	552
454–457	" "	553
457–459	" "	554
459–462	" "	555
462–464	" "	556
464–465	" "	557
471–472	" "	560
472–474	" "	561
474–477	" "	562
477–479	" "	563
479	" "	564
480	Looney v. Metropolitan R. Co.	564
480–481	" "	565
481–482	" "	566
482–484	" "	567
484–487	" "	568
487–488	" "	569
488–490	United States v. New York & C. Mail S. S. Co.	569
490–493	" "	570
493–495	" "	571
495	" "	572
496	Missouri v. Illinois	572
517–518	" "	577
518–520	" "	578
520–523	" "	579
523–525	" "	580
525–526	" "	581
527	Strickley v. Highland Boy Gold Min. Co.	581
529	Strickley v. Highland Boy Gold Min. Co.	582
529–532	" "	583
532–535	Whitney v. Dresser	584
535–536	" "	585
536	Southern P. Co. v. Interstate Commerce Commission; Southern Cal. R. Co. v. Same; Atchison T. & S. F. R. Co. v. Same; Santa Fe P. R. Co. v. Same; Southern P. Co. v. Same	585
537–538	" "	586
538–541	" "	587
541–542	" "	588
550–552	" "	592
552–555	" "	593
555–557	" "	594
557–559	" "	595
559–561	" "	596
561	Chicago B. & Q. R. Co. v. Illinois ex rel. Grimwood	596
562	" "	601
563–565	" "	602
565–567	" "	603
567–581	" "	604
581–584	" "	605
584–586	" "	606
586–589	" "	607
589–591	" "	608
591–593	" "	609
593–596	" "	610
596–598	" "	611
598–601	" "	612
601	United States v. Clark	613
606–608	" "	616
608–609	" "	617
611–625	Memorandum Cases	619–626

THE DECISIONS

OF THE

Supreme Court of the United States

AT

OCTOBER TERM, 1905.

[1]*UNITED STATES ex rel. RALPH W. DRURY and John Dowd, Appts.,
v.
EDWARD LEWIS, Warden of the Common Jail of Allegheny County, Pennsylvania.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 1-8.)

Habeas corpus—Federal interference with state administration of criminal law.—Relief by habeas corpus is properly refused in a Federal circuit court to persons in the military service of the United States, held in the custody of state authorities to answer to a charge of homicide which is asserted by them to have been committed in the discharge of their duty, under the Federal Constitution and laws, to apprehend the deceased for a larceny of property from a Federal arsenal, where there is conflicting evidence on the question whether or not the deceased had surrendered before the fatal shot was fired.

[No. 126.]

Argued December 12, 1905. Decided January 2, 1906.

APPEAL from the Circuit Court of the United States for the Western District of Pennsylvania to review an order denying relief by habeas corpus to persons in the military service of the United States, held in the custody of the state authorities to answer to a charge of homicide. Affirmed.

See same case below, 129 Fed. 823.

Statement by Mr. Chief Justice Fuller:

Ralph W. Drury and John Dowd were indicted in the court of oyer and terminer for the county of Allegheny, Pennsylvania, on two counts,—the first charging them with murder, and the second with manslaughter, in the homicide of one William H. Crowley, September 10, 1903. They were admitted to bail in the sum of $5,000 each, and having been subsequently surrendered, obtained a writ of habeas corpus from the circuit court of the United States for the western district of Pennsylvania. The case on the hearing was thus stated by Acheson, J., holding the circuit court:

"On September 10th, 1903, Ralph W. Drury was a commissioned officer of the United States Army, of the rank of second lieutenant, and had under his command a detachment of twenty enlisted men, of whom John Dowd was one, stationed at Allegheny arsenal, in the city of Pittsburg, in Allegheny county, Pennsylvania, this arsenal being a subpost of Ft. Niagara, New York. From time to time before September 10th, 1903, some copper down spouts and eve troughs had been stripped from some of the buildings on the arsenal grounds and the material stolen, and other depredations, such as the breaking of window lights, had been committed on the arsenal property. Lieut. Col. Robertson, the commanding officer at Ft. Niagara, on the occasion of an inspection of Allegheny arsenal, in July, 1903, had directed Lieut. Drury to use his best endeavors to stop the depredations, and to that end ordered him to establish a patrol of the guards day and night upon the arsenal grounds, and to apprehend and arrest any person or persons committing depredations on the arsenal property. Shortly before 10 o'clock on the morning of September 10th, 1903, having received word that some persons were stealing copper from one of the buildings on the arsenal grounds, Lieut. Drury took John Dowd, then on guard duty, and another private soldier (each of the latter being armed with a rifle and ammunition), [3]and, passing out of *the arsenal grounds through the gate on Butler street, the three proceeded by way of Butler street and Almond alley towards the Allegheny Valley Railroad. Drury informed the two men of the reported stealing of copper, and instructed them to continue down Almond alley and arrest any person coming from the arsenal. Drury himself left Almond alley at the corner of Willow street, and went by Willow street to Fortieth street (which runs along, but outside of, the arsenal wall), and proceeded down Fortieth street to its foot, where were congregated three or four half-grown boys or young men, among whom was William H. Crowley, aged about nineteen or twenty years. These persons fled in different directions when they saw Lieut. Drury approaching. Crowley ran from the foot of Fortieth street away from the arsenal property in the direction of Forty-first street, keeping on or near the Allegheny Valley Railroad. When he was about 100 yards from the arsenal wall, Crowley was shot by Dowd, who aimed and fired his rifle at Crowley. At the time of the shooting, Drury, Dowd, and Crowley were all off the ground belonging to the United States. Each one of the three then stood either upon a street of the city, on the Allegheny Valley Railroad, or on private property. The rifle ball struck Crowley's left thigh, inflicting a mortal wound, from which he died on the evening of the same day,—September 10th, 1903.

NOTE.—On habeas corpus in the Federal courts—see notes to Re Reinitz, 4 L.R.A. 236; State ex rel. Cochran v. Winters, 10 L.R.A. 616; Re Huse, 25 C. C. A. 4; and Tinsley v. Anderson, 43 L. ed. U. S. 91.

"Thus far the facts are not open to dispute under the testimony. But as to the circumstances attending the shooting of Crowley, the evidence is conflicting, and leads to opposite conclusions of fact as one or other version of the affair given by the witnesses is accepted. Dowd testifies, and the petitioners have produced other evidence tending to show, that as Crowley fled, he was called on several times by Dowd, who followed him, to halt, with warning that, unless he halted, Dowd would fire; that Crowley did not halt, but continued his flight, and, to prevent his escape behind or through a lumber pile, Dowd fired, and that Drury did not order Dowd to fire, and was not connected with the shooting save [4]by the fact that he ordered the *arrest of any person coming from the arsenal. On the other hand, two witnesses who were present (Mrs. Long and Miss Terwillerger) testify that before the shot was fired Crowley stopped, turned around, and facing the pursuing soldier (Dowd), threw up his hand, said, 'Don't shoot, I will come back,' or 'I will give up,' and just then Lieut. Drury said 'Fire' and Dowd fired the shot that killed Crowley. The testimony of at least one other witness tends to corroborate the account of the transaction given by the two named women, as above recited. It is not for me to say whether or not the witnesses who have testified thus on the part of the commonwealth are mistaken.

"In view of all the evidence herein, should this court interfere to prevent the trial of the petitioners upon the indictment in the state court,—take the petitioners out of the custody of the authorities of the state, and discharge them finally, without trial by any civil court in the regular administration of justice? This is the question which confronts me." 129 Fed. 823.

The court entered an order discharging the writ, and remanding petitioners to the custody of the warden of the jail of Allegheny county, and from that order this appeal was allowed and prosecuted.

Assistant to the Attorney General Purdy argued the cause and filed a brief for appellants:

The commonwealth of Pennsylvania is without jurisdiction to prosecute the petitioners on the charge of murder, for the reason that the homicide was committed by the petitioners while in the discharge of a duty imposed upon them by the Constitution and laws of the United States.

Re Neagle (Cunningham v. Neagle) 135 U. S. 1, 34 L. ed. 55, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 658.

United States officers, and other persons held in custody by state authority for doing acts which they are authorized or required to do by the Constitution and laws of the United States, are entitled to be released from such custody; and the writ of habeas corpus is the appropriate remedy for that purpose.

Ibid.; Re Waite, 81 Fed. 359; Ohio v. Thomas, 173 U. S. 276, 43 L. ed. 699, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 453.

The petitioners upon this appeal are entitled to have this court examine the evidence and determine the facts in this case, and to decide whether or not these petitioners are entitled to be discharged from the custody of the warden.

Storti v. Massachusetts, 183 U. S. 138, 143, 46 L. ed. 120, 124, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 72; Re Neagle, supra.

In the absence of any specific law upon the subject, the petitioners were charged with the duty of arresting persons guilty of stealing government property under their custody.

Re Neagle, supra.

At the time of the commission of the homicide there existed a specific law of the United States under which these petitioners were acting in making the arrest.

Army Regulations, § 771, p. 107.

Regulations lawfully prescribed by one of the executive departments of the government have the force and effect of law.

Campbell v. Waite, 31 C. C. A. 403, 59 U. S. App. 734, 88 Fed. 102.

If the laws of the United States imposed upon these petitioners the duty to arrest Crowley for the felony which he had committed, they were justified in making use of whatever force was necessary for the purpose of performing such duty, even to the extent of firing upon Crowley, if in no other way he could be apprehended.

Bl. Com. bk. 4, p. 292; 2 Hale, P. C. pp. 88, 89; Fost. C. L. p. 271; Rex v. Howarth, 1 Moody, C. C. 207; Reg. v. Murphy, 3 Crawford & D. C. C. 20; 1 East, P. C. p. 298; 1 Hale, P. C. p. 481; Rex v. Finnerty, 1 Crawford & D. C. C. 167; 1 Hawk. P. C. p. 881; 1 Russell, Crimes, p. 666; Queen v. Dadson, 2 Denison, C. C. 35; Conraddy v. People, 5 Park. Crim. Rep. 234; Com. v. Long, 17 Pa. Super. Ct. 641; Brish v. Carter, 98 Md. 445, 57 Atl. 210; State ex rel. Olson v. Leindecker, 91 Minn. 277, 97 N. W. 972; Brooks v. State, 114 Ga. 6, 39 S. E. 877; People v. Glennon, 37 Misc. 1, 74 N. Y. Supp. 794; Kirk v. Garrett, 84 Md. 383, 35 Atl. 1089; People v. Hoehstim, 36 Misc. 562, 73 N. Y. Supp. 626; Wakely v. Hart, 6 Binn. 316; Brooks v. Com. 61 Pa. 352, 100 Am. Dec. 645; United States ex rel. Flynn v. Fuellhart, 106 Fed. 911; 3 Wharton, Crim. Law, § 2928.

Even though this court should decide that Dowd used more force in attempting to make the arrest than he was warranted in using under the law, nevertheless, since he was engaged in performing a duty imposed upon him by a law of the United States, the state courts of Pennsylvania are without jurisdiction to call him to account for the excessive use of force in performing a duty which the Federal laws commanded.

Ex parte Jenkins, 2 Wall. Jr. 543, Fed. Cas. No. 7,259; Re Waite, 81 Fed. 359.

No counsel for appellee.

Mr. Chief Justice Fuller delivered the opinion of the court:

In Baker v. Grice, 169 U. S. 284, 290, 42 L. ed. 748, 750, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 323, an appeal from the final order of the circuit court of the United States for the northern district of Texas, in habeas corpus, it was said:

"The court below had jurisdiction to issue the writ, and to decide the questions which were argued before it. Ex parte Royall, 117 U. S. 241, 29 L. ed. 868, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 734; Whitten v. Tomlinson, 160 U. S. 231, 40 L. ed. 406, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 297. In the latter case most of the prior authorities are mentioned. From these cases it clearly appears, as the settled and proper procedure, that while circuit courts of the United States have jurisdiction, under the circumstances set forth in the foregoing statement, to issue the writ of habeas corpus, yet those courts ought not to exercise that jurisdiction by the discharge of a prisoner unless in cases of peculiar urgency; and that instead of discharging, they will leave the prisoner to be dealt with by the courts of the state; that after a final determination of the case by the state court, the Federal courts will even then generally leave the petitioner to his remedy by writ of error from *this court. [7] The reason for this course is apparent. It is an exceedingly delicate jurisdiction given to the Federal courts by which a person under an indictment in a state court, and subject to its laws, may, by the decision of a single judge of the Federal court, upon a writ of habeas corpus, be taken out of the custody of the officers of the state, and finally discharged therefrom, and thus a trial by the state courts of an indictment found under the laws of a state be finally prevented. Cases have occurred of so exceptional a nature that this course has been pursued. Such are the cases Re Loney (Thomas v. Loney) 134 U. S. 372, 33 L. ed. 949, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 584, and Re Neagle (Cunningham v. Neagle) 135 U. S. 1, 34 L. ed. 55, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 658; but the reasons for the interference of the Federal court in each of those cases were extraordinary, and presented what this court regarded as such exceptional facts as to justify the interference of the Federal tribunal. Unless this case be of such an exceptional nature, we ought not to encourage the interference of the Federal court below with the regular course of justice in the state court."

The rule thus declared is well settled, and, in our judgment, it was properly applied in this case. Crowley was a citizen of Pennsylvania, not in the service of the United States, and was killed in or near a street of the city of Pittsburg, and not on property belonging to the United States or over which the United States had jurisdiction.

The homicide occurred within the territorial jurisdiction of the court of oyer and terminer, which, as Judge Acheson observed, was the only civil court which could have jurisdiction to try petitioners for the alleged unlawful killing, and the indictment presented a case cognizable by that court.

The general jurisdiction, in time of peace, of the civil courts of a state over persons in the military service of the United States, who are accused of a capital crime or of any offense against the person of a citizen, committed within the state, is, of course, not denied.

But it is contended on behalf of the government that the state court was absolutely without jurisdiction to try petitioners for the killing of Crowley, because the homi-
[8] cide was committed *by them "while in the lawful performance of a duty and obligation imposed upon them by the Constitution and laws of the United States." The argument is that Crowley had been guilty of the crime of larceny, and could have been indicted and prosecuted on the charge of felony in the district court of the United States, under § 5439 of the Revised Statutes (U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 3675), or under § 5391 (U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 3651), the United States having jurisdiction over the Allegheny arsenal property, and the Pennsylvania laws making what Crowley is alleged to have done a felony. Hence that it was the duty of petitioners to arrest Crowley, and to surrender him to the Federal authorities for prosecution. And it is insisted that the fact is "established that Crowley met his death while attempting to escape arrest." But there was a conflict of evidence as to whether Crowley had or had not surrendered; and it is conceded that if he had, it could not reasonably be claimed that the fatal shot was fired in the performance of a duty imposed by the Federal law, and the state court had jurisdiction.

The circuit court was not called on to determine the guilt or innocence of the accused. That was for the state court if it had jurisdiction, and this the state court had, even though it was petitioner's duty to pursue and arrest Crowley (assuming that he had stolen pieces of copper), if the question of Crowley being a fleeing felon was open to dispute on the evidence; that is, if that were the gist of the case, it was for the state court to pass upon it, and its doing so could not be collaterally attacked. The assertion that Crowley was resisting arrest, and in flight when shot, was matter of defense, and Ex parte Crouch, 112 U. S. 178, 28 L. ed. 690, 5 Sup. Ct. Rep. 96, is in point.

We have repeatedly held that the acts of Congress in relation to habeas corpus do not imperatively require the circuit courts to wrest petitioners from the custody of state officers in advance of trial in the state courts, and that those courts may decline to discharge, in the proper exercise of discretion. We think that discretion was properly exercised in this case.

Final order affirmed.

346

*GEORGE F. ALBRIGHT, Appt., [9]

v.

TERRITORY OF NEW MEXICO ex rel. JESUS M. SANDOVAL.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 9–12.)

Appeal—from territorial supreme court—money value of matter in dispute.—The liability to a fine on a judgment of ouster in quo warranto proceedings, or the possible effect of such judgment in subsequent litigation over the emoluments of the office, does not make the matter in dispute in the quo warranto proceedings after the term of office has expired measureable by some sum or value in money, and thus bring the judgment within the scope of the provisions of the act of March 3, 1885 (23 Stat. at L. 443, chap. 355, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 572), for appeals from the territorial supreme courts to the Supreme Court of the United States.

[No. 229.]

Submitted November 27, 1905. Decided January 2, 1906.

APPEAL from the Supreme Court of the Territory of New Mexico to review a judgment affirming, with slight modifications, a judgment of ouster in quo warranto proceedings, entered by the District Court of Bernalillo County, in that territory, pursuant to the mandate of the territorial Supreme Court on a former appeal. Dismissed for lack of jurisdiction.

See same case below (N. M.), 79 Pac. 719; on former appeal, 78 Pac. 204.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Mr. William B. Childers submitted the cause for appellant.

Mr. Neill B. Field submitted the cause for appellee.

Mr. Chief Justice Fuller delivered the opinion of the court:

This was a proceeding in quo warranto, brought in the district court of Bernalillo county, New Mexico, July 20, 1903, by the territory on the relation of Jesus M. Sandoval against George F. Albright, it being alleged that Sandoval was duly elected to the office of assessor of Bernalillo county for the term of two years from the first day of January, 1903; that he duly qualified and entered on the discharge of the duties of the office; and that he had never resigned, va-

NOTE.—As to review by the United States Supreme Court of territorial decisions—see note to Miners' Bank v. Iowa, 13 L. ed U. S. 867.

As to amount necessary to give United States Supreme Court jurisdiction—see notes to Schunk v. Moline, M. & S. Co. 37 L. ed. U. S. 256; and Commercial Bank v. Buckingham, 12 L. ed. U. S. 169.

cated, or abandoned the office, and ever since his election and qualification had continued to discharge the duties thereof. It was fur-
[10] ther alleged that on *March 23, 1903, respondent, Albright, without authority of law, unlawfully usurped the office, and took possession of the assessor's room in the courthouse, and of the books and papers, and other insignia of office, claiming office by virtue of a pretended appointment by the board of county commissioners of Bernalillo county, made under the authority of an act of the legislative assembly of the territory of New Mexico, entitled "An Act to Create the County of Sandoval," approved March 10, 1903, as amended by an act entitled "An Act to Amend Section 3 of an Act Entitled 'An Act to Create the County of Sandoval,'" approved March 12, 1903.

Judgment was rendered by the district court in favor of Albright, August 3, 1903, and carried to the supreme court of the territory, which reversed the judgment, and remanded the cause with directions to the court below to reinstate it and proceed in accordance with the views expressed in its opinion. 78 Pac. 204. The mandate was filed below October 19, 1904, and on the 19th of November the district court entered judgment "that the respondent, George F. Albright, has unlawfully usurped, and does unlawfully usurp, the office of assessor of the county of Bernalillo and territory of New Mexico, from the relator, Jesus Maria Sandoval, the lawful incumbent of the said office; that the said respondent, George F. Albright do henceforth cease and desist from in any manner intermeddling with, or attempting to perform the duties, or exercise the functions of, the office of assessor of the county of Bernalillo aforesaid. and that he forthwith deliver up to the relator the records, books, papers, and furniture, and all other things appertaining to the office of assessor of the county of Bernalillo and territory of New Mexico, as the lawful custodian thereof," and for costs.

The case was again carried to the supreme court and heard upon a motion to dismiss and on the merits, and February 24, 1904, the court denied the motion to dismiss, modified the judgment of the district court by striking out the words "and that he forthwith deliver up to the relator the records, books, papers, furniture, and all other things [11] appertaining to the office of assessor *of the county of Bernalillo and territory of New Mexico, as the lawful custodian thereof," and affirmed the judgment as so modified. 79 Pac. 719. On the same day an appeal was allowed to this court, a supersedeas bond given, which was approved March 9, 1905, and the record was filed here April 17. The case comes before us on a motion to dismiss.

The ground assigned for the motion is the expiration of the term of the office of assessor of the county of Bernalillo, and the consequent lack of power to grant appellant any effectual relief. But the same motion has already been considered and denied by the supreme court of the territory, and its renewal here amounts to no more than an assignment of error to the action of that court in this regard, to be passed on and disposed of as such, if otherwise we have jurisdiction of the case. If we have not, the appeal must be dismissed, even though for reasons not put forward in support of the motion. The opinion of the supreme court fully discussed the authorities on the subject of the right to have a review of the judgment on appeal after the expiration of the term of office involved in the proceeding in quo warranto. The court refused to dismiss the writ, holding that the statute (9 Anne, chap. 20, § 5), providing that, in addition to judgment of ouster, fine and costs may be imposed, was a part of the common law of the territory, and also that the judgment might affect the rights of the parties in another litigation in relation to the emoluments of the office.

The appeal to this court was taken under the statute of March 3, 1885 (23 Stat. at L. 443, chap. 355, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 572). Shute v. Keyser, 149 U. S. 649, 37 L. ed. 884, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 960.

Both sections of that act apply to cases where there is a matter in dispute measureable by some sum or value in money, although the amount is not restricted under the 2d section. Washington & G. R. Co. v. District of Columbia, 146 U. S. 227, 36 L. ed. 951, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 64; Farnsworth v. Montana, 129 U. S. 104, 32 L. ed. 616, 9 Sup. Ct. Rep. 253. In proceedings in quo warranto, such as those in this case, the alleged usurpation is the matter in dispute, and the liability to a fine on judgment of ouster does not make that matter measureable by some sum or value in money. As in criminal cases, *the fine is, "in the eye [12] of the law, a punishment for the offense committed, and not the particular object of the suit." United States v. More, 3 Cranch, 159, 174, 2 L. ed. 397, 402. Moreover, appellant could hardly be allowed to invoke our jurisdiction on the ground that, if his appeal were sustained, he might be fined on a new judgment.

The term of office had expired before the rendition of judgment by the territorial supreme court, and as to the effect of the judgment of ouster in a suit to recover emoluments for the past, that is collateral, even though the judgment might be conclusive in such subsequent action. New England Mortg. Secur. Co. v. Gay, 145 U. S. 123, 36 L. ed. 646, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 815; Washington & G. R. Co. v. District of Columbia, 146 U. S. 227, 36 L. ed. 951, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 64.

Appeal dismissed.

CALVIN R. NUTT, Julia W. Nutt, and Lilly N. Ward, Plffs. in Err.,

v.

S. PRENTISS KNUT and John K. Nutt, Administrator de bonis non c. t. a. of the Estate of Haller Nutt, Deceased.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 12-22.)

1. Error to state court—Federal question.—A party who insists that a judgment cannot be rendered against him consistently with the statutes of the United States may be fairly held, within the meaning of U. S. Rev. Stat. § 709, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 575, providing for writs of error from the Supreme Court of the United States to the state courts, to assert a right and immunity under such statutes, although they may not give the party himself a personal or affirmative right that could be enforced by direct suit against his adversary.

2. Claims—against United States—assignment before allowance.—So far as the contract for the prosecution of a claim against the United States makes the payment of the compensation for services rendered thereunder a lien upon the claim and upon any draft, money, or evidence of indebtedness which may be issued thereon, it is repugnant to U. S. Rev. Stat., § 3477, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 2320, annulling assignments of such claims or of any part or interest therein, made in advance of the allowance of the claim.

3. Claims—against United States—compensation for prosecution—effect of unlawful assignment.—The illegality, under U. S. Rev. Stat. § 3477, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 2320, of a clause in a contract for the prosecution of a claim against the United States, making the payment of compensation for the services rendered thereunder a lien upon the claim and upon any draft, money, or evidence of indebtedness that may be issued thereon, does not invalidate so much of the contract as provides for the payment for such services of a sum equal to one third of the amount allowed on the claim.

[No. 78.]

Argued November 29, 1905. Decided January 2, 1906.

IN ERROR to the Supreme Court of the State of Mississippi to review a decree which affirmed a decree of the Chancery Court of Adams County, in that state, enforcing a claim for compensation for services in prosecuting a claim against the United States. Affirmed.

See same case below, 84 Miss. 465, 36 So. 689; on first appeal, 83 Miss. 365, 102 Am. St. Rep. 452, 35 So. 686.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Mr. A. S. Worthington argued the cause and filed a brief for plaintiffs in error:

The decision of the state court that the contract with Denver was not void under the laws of the United States raised a Federal question, and this court has jurisdiction by writ of error to review such decision.

Udell v. Davidson, 7 How. 769, 12 L. ed. 907; Walworth v. Kneeland, 15 How. 348, 14 L. ed. 724; Daniels v. Tearney, 102 U. S. 415, 26 L. ed. 187; Anderson v. Carkins, 135 U. S. 483, 34 L. ed. 272, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 905; Logan County Nat. Bank v. Townsend, 139 U. S. 67, 35 L. ed. 107, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 496; McCormick v. Market Nat. Bank, 165 U. S. 538, 41 L. ed. 817, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 433; Price v. Forrest, 173 U. S. 410, 43 L. ed. 749, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 434.

The contract upon which this defendant recovered judgment is absolutely void under § 3477 of the Revised Statutes (U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 2320).

Trist v. Child (Burke v. Child) 21 Wall. 441, 22 L. ed. 623; Spofford v. Kirk, 97 U. S. 484, 24 L. ed. 1032; Hager v. Swayne, 149 U. S. 242, 37 L. ed. 719, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 841; Ball v. Halsell, 161 U. S. 72, 40 L. ed. 622, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 554; Owens v. Wilkinson, 20 App. D. C. 51; Providence Tool Co. v. Norris, 2 Wall. 45, 17 L. ed. 868.

NOTE.—On the general subject of writs of error from United States Supreme Court to state courts—see notes to Martin v. Hunter, 4 L. ed. U. S. 97; Hamblin v. Western Land Co. 37 L. ed. U. S. 267; Kipley v. Illinois, 42 L. ed. U. S. 998; and Re Buchanan, 39 L. ed. U. S. 884.

On what adjudications of state courts can be brought up for review in the Supreme Court of the United States by writ of error to those courts—see note to Apex Transp. Co. v. Garbade, 62 L. R. A. 513.

On how and when questions must be raised and decided in a state court in order to make a case for a writ of error from the Supreme Court of the United States—see note to Mutual L. Ins. Co. v. McGrew, 63 L.R.A. 33.

On what the record must show respecting the presentation and decision of a Federal question in order to confer jurisdiction on the Supreme Court of the United States on a writ of error to a state court—see note to Hooker v. Los Angeles, 63 L.R.A. 471.

As to what is the record for this purpose—see note to Home for Incurables v. New York, 63 L.R.A. 329.

As to what claims constitute valid demands against a state—see Northwestern & P. H. Bank v. State, 42 L.R.A. 33.

Without regard to § 3477, this decree should be reversed because the services rendered by Knut were, in part at least, such that the public policy of the United States will not permit compensation to be recovered for them.

Trist v. Child (Burke v. Child) 21 Wall. 452, 22 L. ed. 625; McMullen v. Hoffman, 174 U. S. 653, 43 L. ed. 1123, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 839; Owens v. Wilkinson, supra.

Mr. Frederic D. McKenney argued the cause, and, with Messrs. T. C. Catchings and John Spalding Flannery, filed a brief for defendants in error:

The record shows that there were other parties to the judgments of the state supreme court, jointly interested therein with the plaintiffs in error, who have not joined in the writ of error, nor been eliminated from the cause by an order of severance, nor have they been served with notice of the proceedings in error.

Meagher v. Minnesota Thresher Mfg. Co. 145 U. S. 608, 611, 36 L. ed. 834, 835, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 876; Feibelman v. Packard, 108 U. S. 14, 27 L. ed. 634, 1 Sup. Ct. Rep. 138; Estis v. Trabue, 128 U. S. 225, 32 L. ed. 437, 9 Sup. Ct. Rep. 58; Mason v. United States, 136 U. S. 581, 34 L. ed. 545, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1062; Hardee v. Wilson, 146 U. S. 179, 36 L. ed. 933, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 39.

In order to enable this court to review the judgment of the state supreme court, the intention to raise a Federal question must clearly appear from express averments, and not by inferences to be drawn from the record; and the claim of title or immunity under the Federal law must have been expressly asserted at the first opportunity occurring in the course of the progress of the cause. In the case at bar such opportunity clearly occurred at the time of the filing of the response to the petition.

F. G. Oxley Stave Co. v. Butler County, 166 U. S. 648, 655, 41 L. ed. 1149, 1152, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 709; Colorado Cent. Consol. Min. Co. v. Turck, 150 U. S. 138, 37 L. ed. 1030, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 35; Borgmeyer v. Idler, 159 U. S. 408, 40 L. ed. 199, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 34.

A contract legal upon its face and at its inception does not become illegal because, in its execution, one of the parties thereto may have done something contrary to the policies of the law.

Barry v. Capen, 151 Mass. 99, 6 L.R.A. 808, 23 N. E. 735; Jernegan v. Osborn, 155 Mass. 207, 29 N. E. 520.

If the state court in fact committed error in deciding a contract within the express terms of the prohibition of the Federal law to be valid, not even that fact would confer upon this court jurisdiction to review and reverse the judgment complained of.

Leyson v. Davis, 170 U. S. 36, 42 L. ed. 939, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 500; Allen v. Arguimbau, 198 U. S. 149, 49 L. ed. 990, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 622.

The sole purpose of the statute was to protect the government, and not the parties to the assignment.

Goodman v. Niblack, 102 U. S. 556, 26 L. ed. 229.

On a writ of error to review the judgment of a state court, nothing is open for reexamination but questions of law arising upon the face of the record. The facts found by the state court will furnish the basis for the decision of this court.

Quimby v. Boyd, 128 U. S. 489, 32 L. ed. 503, 9 Sup. Ct. Rep. 147; Dower v. Richards, 151 U. S. 658, 38 L. ed. 305, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 452; Egan v. Hart, 165 U. S. 188, 41 L. ed. 680, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 300; Thayer v. Spratt, 189 U. S. 346, 47 L. ed. 845, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 576; Adams v. Church, 193 U. S. 510, 48 L. ed. 769, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 512.

Messrs. T. C. Catchings and O. W. Catchings also filed a brief for defendants in error:

No Federal question is presented.

Walworth v. Kneeland, 15 How. 348, 14 L. ed. 724; Aldrich v. Ætna Ins. Co. 8 Wall. 491, 19 L. ed. 473; Dubuque & S. C. R. Co. v. Richmond, 15 Wall. 3, 21 L. ed. 118; Conde v. York, 168 U. S. 642, 42 L. ed. 611, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 234.

The plaintiffs in error were not parties to the judgment rendered by the supreme court of Mississippi, and therefore are not entitled to invoke the jurisdiction of this court to review that judgment.

Payne v. Niles, 20 How. 221, 15 L. ed. 896; Guion v. Liverpool, L. & G. Ins. Co. 109 U. S. 173, 27 L. ed. 895, 3 Sup. Ct. Rep. 108.

The fact that they were allowed to appeal from the decree of the chancery court of Adams county, Mississippi, to the supreme court of Mississippi, cannot affect the question as to their right to bring the cause here by writ of error.

Bayard v. Lombard, 9 How. 551, 13 L. ed. 254.

The contract between General Denver and Mrs. Julia A. Nutt, executrix, through which the defendants in error claim, was not an assignment or transfer of an interest in the claim of the estate of Haller Nutt against the United States.

Taylor v. Bemiss, 110 U. S. 43, 28 L. ed 64, 3 Sup. Ct. Rep. 441; Wright v. Tebbitts, 91 U. S. 252, 23 L. ed. 320.

A contract for the professional services of an attorney would not be within the condemnation of U. S. Rev. Stat. § 3477, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 2320, even though it might, in terms, attempt to convey an interest in the claim for the purpose of compensating him for the professional services to be rendered.

Stanton v. Embrey, 93 U. S. 548, 23 L. ed. 983.

There can be no doubt, we think, under the ruling in Price v. Forrest, 173 U. S. 410, 43 L. ed. 749, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 434, that General Denver, or the defendant in error, as his assignee, might have enforced this lien by a bill in any court of equity having jurisdiction to have a receiver appointed, and to compel Mrs. Nutt to deliver the draft to the receiver, and to indorse it so that he could collect the money. This would have been the means by which he would have enforced his lien upon the contract.

In Sanborn v. Maxwell, 18 App. D. C. 245, the court of appeals for the District of Columbia appointed a receiver, and enforced such a lien in just such a case.

If the court should be of opinion, however, that so much of the contract as stipulates for this lien is violative of § 3477, U. S. Rev. Stat., the stipulation that General Denver should receive a sum equal to 33⅓ per cent of the amount which might be allowed cannot be at all affected thereby, inasmuch as the two stipulations are independent of each other and clearly severable.

Gelpcke v. Dubuque, 1 Wall. 222, 17 L. ed. 520; Rand v. Mather, 11 Cush. 1, 59 Am. Dec. 131; Leavitt v. Palmer, 3 N. Y. 19, 51 Am. Dec. 333; Treadwell v. Davis, 34 Cal. 601, 94 Am. Dec. 770; Casady v. Woodbury County, 13 Iowa, 117.

Unless the court should be of the opinion that, by its terms, the contract was clearly an assignment or transfer of an interest in the claim of the estate of Haller Nutt against the United States, it must hold, in accordance with well-established principles, that it was not such an assignment or transfer. That is to say, if there be any doubt as to whether the contract was legal or illegal, the doubt must be resolved in favor of its legality.

Hobbs v. McLean, 117 U. S. 576, 29 L. ed. 944, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 870; Clay v. Allen, 63 Miss. 426; Merrill v. Melchior, 30 Miss. 516; Wilkins v. Riley, 47 Miss. 313.

The object of § 3477, U. S. Rev. Stat. was to protect the government, and not the claimant, and to prevent frauds upon the Treasury. When a claim has been adjudged, and the money paid to the claimant, the purpose of the statute has been fully accomplished, and the government has no concern as to the disposition of the money. When the money has been paid by the government the statute ceases to have any operation.

Price v. Forrest, suprd; Bailey v. United States, 109 U. S. 432, 27 L. ed. 988, 3 Sup. Ct. Rep. 272; Hobbs v. McLean, supra; Freedman's Sav. & T. Co. v. Shepherd, 127 U. S. 494, 32 L. ed. 163, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1250; Jernegan v. Osborn, 155 Mass. 207, 29 N. E. 520; York v. Conde, 147 N. Y. 486, 42 N. E. 193.

Mr. Justice Harlan delivered the opinion of the court:

This suit was brought in the chancery court of Adams county, Mississippi, the plaintiff being S. Prentiss Knut, a defendant in error, and the defendants being the administrator, heirs, and devisees of Haller Nutt, deceased.

It was based upon a written contract between the late James W. Denver and the (then) executrix of Haller Nutt, deceased, as follows: "That the party of the first part (Denver) agrees to take exclusive charge and control of a certain claim which the party of the second part (executrix of Nutt's estate) holds against the government of the United States, for the use of property and for property of which the said Haller Nutt and his estate was deprived by the acts of officers, soldiers, and employees of the United States in Louisiana and Mississippi, in the years 1863, 1864, and 1865, amounting to one million of dollars, more or less, and to prosecute the same before any of the courts of the United States, and upon appeal to the Supreme Court of the United States, or before any of the departments of government, or before the Congress of the United States, or before any officer or commission or convention specially authorized to take cognizance of said claim, or through any diplomatic negotiations as may be deemed by him for the best interests of the party of the second part. And in consideration therefor the party of the second part agrees to pay the party of the first part a sum equal to 33⅓ per cent of the amount which may be allowed on said claim, the payment of which is hereby made a lien upon said claim and upon any draft, money, or evidence of indebtedness which may be issued thereon. This agreement *not to be affected by any [14] services performed by the claimant, or by any other agents or attorneys employed by him. All expenses of printing, costs of court, and commission fees for taking testimony, are to be charged to the party of the second part, and the party of the second part agrees to execute from time to time such powers of attorney as may be convenient or necessary for the successful prosecution and collection of said claim.

No revocation of any authority conferred on the party of the first part by this agreement, or any power of attorney relating to the business covered by the same, to be valid."

On the same day the executrix of Nutt executed to Denver a power of attorney, constituting the latter her attorney "irrevocable," for her and in her name and stead "to prosecute a certain claim against the government of the United States, for property used and for property of which said Haller Nutt and his estate was deprived by United States officers, soldiers, and employees in Louisiana and Mississippi, amounting to $1,000,000, more or less, before any court of the United States, or before any of the departments of the government, or before the Congress of the United States, or before any officer or commission or convention specially authorized to take cognizance of said claim, or through any diplomatic negotiations, to collect the same; and from time to time to furnish any further evidence necessary, or that may be demanded, giving and granting to my said attorney full power and authority to do and perform all and every act and thing whatsoever requisite and necessary to be done in and about the premises, as fully to all intents and purposes as I might or could do if personally present at the doing thereof, with full power of substitution and revocation, and to receipt and sign all vouchers and bonds of indemnity or appeal, and to indorse all drafts and vouchers in my name, either by or without indicating it is done by procuration, which may be requisite in the prosecution or collection of said claim, hereby ratifying and confirming all that my said attorney or his substitute may or shall lawfully do, or cause to be done by virtue hereof."

[15] *The petition shows, and it is not disputed, that the plaintiff succeeded to all the rights, whatever they were, of Denver under the above contract, and that, as the result of his labors, Congress at different times appropriated, on account of the Nutt claim, the sums of $35,556.17 and $89,999.88. 23 Stat. at L. 586, chap. 237, 32 Stat. at L. 212, chap. 887. Prior to the bringing of the present suit the plaintiff had received his "due share" of the first appropriation, but has not received his full part of the last one. He therefore sought payment, in accordance with the contract, for the balance due him on account of the said sum of $89,999.88, appropriated to and received by the Nutt estate.

The plaintiff subsequently amended his petition, and asked that, in the event of his not being entitled to compensation under the Denver contract, he have judgment for such sum as his services were reasonably worth, which he alleged to be $30,000.

Some of the defendants by their answers put the plaintiff upon proof of his case, but submitted to the court the question of the reasonableness of his claim for fees.

Three of the defendants, while not denying that plaintiff had been recognized by the executrix and subsequent administrators of Nutt's estate as the attorney of record against the United States government, yet denied any legal liability of the estate by reason of such recognition. They averred that "the original contract and power of attorney, as assignee of which petitioner claims to recover from the present administrator 33 1/3 per cent of said sum of $89,999.88, were contrary to good morals and public policy, were null and void, so far as they undertook to vest a right to a contingent fee in said Denver, and conferred upon said Denver no rights for the recovery of any fee against this estate which a court would recognize and enforce. And respondents further charge that said petitioner, as assignee of said Denver, occupies no better position than his assignor had, and that as such assignee he has no standing in this court for the enforcement of said void contract, or for the enforcement of any claim whatever for professional services rendered by him, or alleged to have been rendered by him, in behalf of said *estate, in connection [16] with said claim against the United States government."

Upon the final hearing of the case in the court of original jurisdiction the chancellor rendered a decree holding that the Denver contract was "violative of the United States statute laws, and being further of the opinion that complainant, in the prosecution of said claim under said contract before the Congress of the United States, in procuring and attempting to procure appropriations for the payment thereof, did procure personal solicitations to be made of members of Congress of the United States in behalf of said claim, and, for the reasons stated, is not entitled to the relief prayed for in his petition, doth order, adjudge, and decree that complainant's petition be and the same is hereby dismissed at his cost, for which let execution issue."

Upon appeal to the supreme court of Mississippi the judgment was reversed, and that court, proceeding to render such decree as, in its opinion, should have been rendered, adjudged that the plaintiff was entitled "to his prayer for 33 1/3 per centum of the amount collected by the administrator ($89,993.83), in full for any advances made by him and all services," less any payments made. 83 Miss. 365, 102 Am. St. Rep. 452. 35 So. 686. The cause was remanded for an account to be taken and for an order directing the administrator to pay to Knut any balance of that per cent unpaid. The accounting was had in the inferior state court, Knut being charged with $10,000 paid on June 10th, 1902, and allowed interest. The result was a decree that the plaintiff have and receive from the administrator of Haller Nutt's estate the sum of $22,143.30, with 6 per cent interest. That decree, upon appeal, was affirmed by the supreme court of Mississippi.

The first question is one of the jurisdiction of this court. The present plaintiffs in error based their defense in part upon § 3477 of the Revised Statutes (U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 2320),† which declares absolutely null and void certain transfers and assignments of claims against the United States. They insisted that the contract sued on was in violation of that statute; and that they and the estate of Nutt were protected by its provisions against any judgment whatever in favor of the plaintiff. In every substantial sense, therefore, they asserted a right and immunity under a statute of the United States, and such right and immunity was denied to them by the supreme court of Mississippi. That court ex-[19] pressly *adjudged that the contract was not, on its face, in violation of the statutes of the United States, and could legally be the basis of a valid claim against the Nutt estate. The case, so far as our jurisdiction is concerned, is therefore within § 709 of the Revised Statutes (U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 575), which authorizes this court to re-examine the final judgment of the highest court of a state, "where any title, right, privilege, or immunity" is claimed under a statute of the United States, and the decision is against such title, right, privilege, or immunity specially set up or claimed. A party who insists that a judgment cannot be rendered against him consistently with the statutes of the United States may be fairly held, within the meaning of § 709, to assert a right and immunity under such statutes, although the statutes may not give the party himself a personal or affirmative right that could be enforced by direct suit against his adversary. Such has been the view taken in many cases where the authority of this court to review the final judgment of the state courts was involved. Logan County Nat. Bank v. Townsend, 139 U. S. 67, 72, 35 L. ed. 107, 110, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 496; Dubuque & S. C. R. Co. v. Richmond, 15 Wall. 3, 21 L. ed. 118; Swope v. Leffingwell, 105 U. S. 3, 26 L. ed. 939; Anderson v. Carkins, 135 U. S. 483, 486, 34 L. ed. 272, 274, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 905; McNulta v. Lochridge, 141 U. S. 327, 35 L. ed. 796, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 11; Metropolitan Nat. Bank v. Claggett, 141 U. S. 520, 35 L. ed. 841, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 60; McCormick v. Market Nat. Bank, 165 U. S. 538, 546, 41 L. ed. 817, 820, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 433; California Nat. Bank v. Kennedy, 167 U. S. 362, 42 L. ed. 198, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 831. We perceive no sufficient reason to modify the views expressed in those cases as to our jurisdiction. It is true there are some cases which, it is contended, justify a contrary view. We will not now stop to examine those cases narrowly, and to declare wherein they may be in conflict with the cases above cited. Suffice it to say that, upon a careful reconsideration of the whole subject, and after reviewing all the cases bearing upon the precise question of jurisdiction now before us, we reaffirm the views expressed in the above-cited cases, as demanded by the statutes regulating the jurisdiction of this court.

We now come to the merits of the case as affected by § 3477 of the Revised Statutes (U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 2320). That section, as we have seen, declares null and void all transfers and assignments of a *claim upon the United States, or of any part [20] or share thereof, or any interest therein, whether absolute or conditional, and whatever may be the consideration thereof, and all powers of attorney, orders, or other authorities for receiving payment of any such claim, or of any part or share thereof, unless they are freely made and executed after the allowance of the claim, the ascertainment of the amount due, and the issuing of a warrant for the payment thereof. This statute has been the subject of examination in many cases. Spofford v. Kirk, 97 U. S. 484, 24 L. ed. 1032; United States v. Gillis, 95 U. S. 407, 24 L. ed. 503; Erwin v. United †"§ 3477. All transfers and assignments made of any claim upon the United States, or of any part or share thereof, or interest therein, whether absolute or conditional, and whatever may be the consideration therefor, and all powers of attorney, orders, or other authorities for receiving payment of any such claim, or of any part or share thereof, shall be absolutely null and void unless they are freely made and executed in the presence of at least two attesting witnesses, after the allowance of such a claim, the ascertainment of the amount due, and the issuing of a warrant for the payment thereof. Such transfers, assignments, and powers of attorney must recite the warrant for payment, and must be acknowledged by the person making them before an officer having authority to take acknowledgments of deeds, and shall be certified by the officer; and it must appear by the certificate that the officer, at the time of the acknowledgment, read and fully explained the transfer, assignment, or warrant of attorney to the person acknowledging the same."

States, 97 U. S. 392, 24 L. ed. 1065; Goodman v. Niblack, 102 U. S. 556, 26 L. ed. 229; Ball v. Halsell, 161 U. S. 72, 40 L. ed. 622, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 554; Freedman's Sav. & T. Co. v. Shepherd, 127 U. S. 494, 32 L. ed. 163, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1250; Hobbs v. McLean, 117 U. S. 567, 29 L. ed. 940, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 870; St. Paul & D. R. Co. v. United States, 112 U. S. 733, 28 L. ed. 861, 5 Sup. Ct. Rep. 366; Bailey v. United States, 109 U. S. 440, 27 L. ed. 990, 3 Sup. Ct. Rep. 270; Price v. Forrest, 173 U. S. 410, 43 L. ed. 749, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 434.

If regard be had to the words as well as to the meaning of the statute, as declared in former cases, it would seem clear that the contract in question was, in some important particulars, null and void upon its face. We have in mind that clause making the payment of the attorney's compensation a lien upon the claim asserted against the government, and upon any draft, money, or evidence of indebtedness issued thereon. In giving that lien from the outset, before the allowance of the claim, and before any services had been rendered by the attorney, the contract, in effect, gave him an interest or share in the claim itself and in any evidence of indebtedness issued by the government on account of it. In effect or by its operation it transferred or assigned to the attorney, in advance of the allowance of the claim, such an interest as would secure the payment of the fee stipulated to be paid. All this was contrary to the statute; for its obvious purpose, in part, was to forbid anyone who was a stranger to the original transaction to come between the claimant and the government, prior to the allowance of a claim, and who, in asserting his own interest or share in the claim, pending its examination, might embarrass the conduct of the business on the part of the officers of [21] the government. We are of opinion *that the state court erred in holding the contract, on its face, to be consistent with the statute.

It does not follow, however, that, for this error, the judgment must be reversed. There is a provision in the contract of 1882 which can stand alone, and which was not in violation of the statute; namely, the one evidencing an agreement on the part of Nutt's executrix to pay to the attorney for his services a sum equal to 33 1/3 per cent of the amount allowed on the claim. Wylie v. Coxe, 15 How. 415, 14 L. ed. 753; Wright v. Tebbitts, 91 U. S. 252, 23 L. ed. 320; Taylor v. Bemiss, 110 U. S. 43, 28 L. ed. 64, 3 Sup. Ct. Rep. 441. Such an agreement did not give the attorney any interest or share in the claim itself, nor any interest in the particular money paid over to the claimant by the government. It only established an agreed basis for any settlement that might be made, after the allowance and payment of the claim, as to the attorney's compensation. It simply created a legal obligation upon the part of the estate, which, if not recognized after the collection of the money, could have been enforced by suit for the benefit of the attorney, without doing violence to the statute or to the public policy established by its provisions. The decree below may then be regarded as only giving effect to the agreement as to the basis upon which the attorney's compensation was to be calculated. It did not assume to give him any lien upon the claim, or any priority in the distribution of the money received by Nutt's personal representative from the United States, nor upon any other money in his hands. Indeed, no lien is asserted by the plaintiff in his pleadings. While the original petition asserted his right to be paid in accordance with the contract, the plaintiff claimed, if he could not be paid under the contract, that he be compensated according to the reasonable value of his services.

Much was said in argument as to the nature of the services rendered by the plaintiff,—the charge being that his services were of the kind called lobby services, for which, consistently with public policy and public morals, no recovery could be had in any court. Trist v. Child (Burke v. Child) 21 Wall. 441, 22 L. ed. 623; McMullen v. Hoffman, 174 U. S. 639, 43 L. ed. 1117, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 839. *We have seen that the state [22] court of original jurisdiction was of opinion the suit was for lobbying services, and on that ground denied all relief. But the supreme court of Mississippi held that the record did not establish such a case, and we accept that view of the evidence in the cause.

Finding in the record no error of law as to any question which may be properly reviewed by this court, the judgment of the state court is affirmed.

The CHIEF JUSTICE and Mr. Justice White concur in the result.

KNOXVILLE WATER COMPANY, Appt.,
v.
MAYOR AND ALDERMEN OF THE CITY OF KNOXVILLE, et al.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 22–38.)

1. Courts—jurisdiction of Federal circuit court—case arising under Federal Constitution.— A case arising under the Constitution of the United States, of which a Federal circuit court has original jurisdiction without regard to the citizenship of the parties, is made by a bill filed by a water company to restrain the municipal construction of a waterworks system on the ground that it had a contract with the municipality, giving it exclusive privileges, the obligations of which, it insists, would be impaired by the establishment of municipal waterworks, under the authority of subsequent legislation.

NOTE.—As to Federal question as conferring jurisdiction on United States courts—see notes to Montana Ore-Purchasing Co. v.

2. Constitutional law—impairment of contract obligations—municipal construction of waterworks.—The obligation of an agreement by a municipality to give a water company an exclusive franchise for thirty years as against "any other person or corporation" is not impaired by the municipal establishment of its own independent system of waterworks, under subsequent legislative authority.

3. Municipal corporations—grants of special privileges—powers not devested by implication.—A municipal grant of a waterworks franchise is not to be construed by implication to devest the municipality of its power to construct an independent waterworks system of its own.

[No. 123.]

Argued December 11, 12, 1905. Decided January 2, 1906.

APPEAL from the Circuit Court of the United States for the Eastern District of Tennessee to review a judgment sustaining a demurrer to, and dismissing, a bill to enjoin the municipal construction of a waterworks system on the ground that the complainant had a contract with the municipality, giving it exclusive privileges, the obligation of which, it insists, will be impaired by such action on the part of the municipality. Affirmed.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Mr. Charles T. Cates, Jr., argued the cause, and, with Messrs. R. E. L. Mountcastle and Samuel G. Shields, filed a brief for appellant:

A contract entered into within the authority of a municipal corporation shall receive the same construction as though it had been entered into between individuals. The purpose of the contract was not to govern the inhabitants of the city, but to obtain a private benefit for both the city and its inhabitants,—that is, the purpose was within the business and proprietary powers of the city, as distinguished from its governmental and legislative functions.

Illinois Trust & Sav. Bank v. Arkansas City, 34 L.R.A. 518, 22 C. C. A. 171, 40 U. S. App. 257, 76 Fed. 271; Cunningham v. Cleveland, 39 C. C. A. 211, 98 Fed. 657; Western Sav. Fund Soc. v. Philadelphia, 31 Pa. 175, 72 Am. Dec. 730; Bailey v. New York, 3 Hill, 531, 38 Am. Dec. 669; Brumm v. Pottsville Water Co. 9 Sadler (Pa.) 483, 22 W. N. C. 137, 12 Atl. 855.

Courts may place themselves in the situation of the parties who made the contract and view the circumstances as they viewed them, so as to judge of the meaning of the words, and of the correct application of the language to the thing described.

Goddard v. Foster, 17 Wall. 123, 143, 21 L. ed. 589, 595; Guarantee Co. of N. A. v. Mechanics Sav. Bank & T. Co. 26 C. C. A. 146, 47 U. S. App. 91, 80 Fed. 766.

Although a contract may, in terms, bind but one party, yet the law will imply corresponding and correlative obligations, when that is necessary to carry out the intention of the parties and prevent the contract from being ineffectual.

Churchward v. Queen, L. R. 1 Q. B. 173; Barton v. McLean, 5 Hill, 256; Manistee Iron Works Co. v. Shores Lumber Co. 92 Wis. 21, 65 N. W. 863; Delaware & H. Canal Co. v. Pennsylvania Coal Co. 8 Wall. 288, 19 L. ed. 353.

The law implies duties and obligations in a contract other than those which are expressed, and the implied duties and obligations are as much a part of the contract as those expressed. Or, to express it differently, what is implied in a statute, pleading, or contract is as much a part of it as what is expressed.

United States v. Babbit, 1 Black, 55, 17 L. ed. 94; Rhode Island v. Massachusetts, 12 Pet. 723, 9 L. ed. 1260; Union Depot Co. v. Chicago, K. & N. R. Co. 113 Mo. 213, 20 S. W. 792; Parsons, Contr. 8th ed. 515.

There is no more reason to permit a municipal corporation to repudiate its solemn obligations, entered into for value, than there is to permit an individual to do so. Good faith and fair dealings should be exacted of the one equally with the other.

Los Angeles City Water Co. v. Los Angeles, 103 Fed. 71[1].

This case is ruled by the decision of this court in Walla Walla v. Walla Walla Water Co. 172 U. S. 1, 43 L. ed. 341, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 77.

Boston & M. Consol. Copper & S. Min. Co. 35 C. C. A. 7; and Bailey v. Mosher, 11 C. C. A. 308.

As to what laws are void as impairing obligation of contracts—see notes to Franklin County Grammar School v. Bailey, 10 L.R.A. 405; Fletcher v. Peck, 3 L. ed. U. S. 162; McCanna & F. Co. v. Citizens' Trust & Surety Co. 24 C. C. C. A. 20; and Montana Ore-Purchasing Co. v. Boston & M. Consol. Copper & S. Min. Co. 35 C. C. A 12.

On exclusive character of waterworks franchise—see note to Re Barre Water Co. 9 L.R.A. 195.

Vicksburg Waterworks Co. v. Vicksburg, 185 U. S. 65–82, 46 L. ed. 808–816, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 585.

While the action of municipal corporations is to be held strictly within the powers expressly or by necessary implication conferred upon them, yet, within these limits, they are to be favored by the courts. Powers expressly granted, or neccssarily implied, are not to be defeated or impaired by a stringent construction.

Dill. Mun. Corp. 4th ed. § 91, note 2; Smith v. Madison, 7 Ind. 86; Memphis v. Adams, 9 Heisk. 518, 24 Am. Rep. 331; Indianapolis v. Indianapolis Gaslight & Coke Co. 66 Ind. 407.

The rights conferred by said contract upon appellant are entirely inconsistent with a reserved purpose, on the part of the city authorities of Knoxville, to render the investment of appellant absolutely worthless as soon as it might be completed, by the erection of waterworks of their own.

Troy Water Co. v. Troy, 200 Pa. 453, 50 Atl. 259; White v. Meadville, 177 Pa. 643, 34 L.R.A. 567, 35 Atl. 693.

Is not the city estopped to deny the exclusive character of appellant's rights, even in the streets of the city, for the limited period of thirty years?

2 Dill. Mun. Corp. 4th ed. §§ 460, 675; Dennis v. Rainey, 8 Baxt. 501; Memphis v. Looney, 9 Baxt. 130; Sims v. Chattanooga, 2 Lea, 695; London & N. Y. Land Co. v. Jellico, 103 Tenn. 320, 52 S. W. 995; Memphis Gaslight Co. v. Memphis, 93 Tenn. 612, 30 S. W. 25.

These are no longer open questions, but have been adjudicated in favor of the contention here made by appellant.

Knoxville v. Knoxville Water Co. 107 Tenn. 647, 61 L.R.A. 888, 64 S. W. 1075, 189 U. S. 434, 435, 47 L. ed. 887, 890, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 531.

The contracts relied upon by appellant are protected by the Constitution of the United States.

Walla Walla v. Walla Walla Water Co. supra; Los Angeles v. Los Angeles City Water Co. 177 U. S. 558, 44 L. ed. 886, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 736; Detroit v. Detroit Citizens' Street R. Co. 184 U. S. 368, 46 L. ed. 592, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 410; Vicksburg Waterworks Co. v. Vicksburg, 185 U. S. 65, 46 L. ed. 808, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 585; St. Paul Gaslight Co. v. St. Paul, 181 U. S. 142, 45 L. ed. 788, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 575.

Mr. John W. Green argued the cause, and, with Mr. John W. Culton, filed a brief for appellees:

The contract which complainant claims has been impaired does not, either in terms or by implication, purport to be made by legislative authority or sanction. A municipal ordinance not passed under supposed legislative authority cannot be regarded as a law of the state, within the meaning of the constitutional prohibition against state laws impairing the obligations of contracts.

Hamilton Gaslight & Coke Co. v. Hamilton, 146 U. S. 266, 36 L. ed. 967, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 90.

Before this court can be asked to determine whether a statute has impaired the obligation of a contract, it must be made to appear that there was a legal contract subject to impairment, and some ground to believe that it has been impaired.

New Orleans v. New Orleans Waterworks Co. 142 U. S. 79, 35 L. ed. 943, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 142.

The presumption is against the creation of an exclusive franchise; and, where the grant itself does not in terms confer conclusive rights, none will be implied.

Long Island Water Supply Co. v. Brooklyn, 166 U. S. 685, 41 L. ed. 1165, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 718; Skaneateles Waterworks Co. v. Skaneateles, 184 U. S. 354, 363, 46 L. ed. 585, 591, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 400; Bienville Water Supply Co. v. Mobile, 175 U. S. 109, 44 L. ed. 92, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 40; Joplin v. Southwest Missouri Light Co. 191 U. S. 150, 156, 157, 48 L. ed. 127, 129, 130, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 43; Helena Waterworks Co. v. Helena, 195 U. S. 383, 49 L. ed. 245, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 40; Cooley, Const. Lim. 4th ed. pp. 493–495; Jackson County Horse R. Co. v. Interstate Rapid Transit R. Co. 24 Fed. 306; Clarksville & R. Turnp. Co. v. Montgomery County, 100 Tenn. 417, 58 L.R.A. 155, 45 S. W. 345; Charles River Bridge v. Warren Bridge, 11 Pet. 545, 9 L. ed. 823.

The public is favored by the courts where questions of this character arise.

Stein v. Bienville Water Supply Co. 141 U. S. 67, 35 L. ed. 622, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 892; Hamilton Gaslight & Coke Co. v. Hamilton, 146 U. S. 263, 36 L. ed. 967, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 90.

Persons dealing with public corporations are charged with notice of their right to contract upon the subject-matter, and in the manner contemplated. If there is no legal authority for the contract, that authority cannot be created through the application of any doctrine or principle of estoppel, acceptance, or ratification. The contract cannot be enforced.

1 Abbott, Mun. Corp. §§ 249, 280.

In Nashville v. Hagan, 9 Baxt. 495, the supreme court of Tennessee held that the city of Nashville was not liable for the price of certain material, bought and used by it for the improvement of its waterworks system, because the contract therefor was made without authority, and because there was no general law or ordinance authorizing the execution of said contract.

If a contract which a municipal corporation had no power to make in the first instance should be held good upon the doctrine of estoppel or acquiescence, a new power other than the legislature would then accomplish by indirection that which the law expressly declares cannot be accomplished by direction.

Westerly Waterworks Co. v. Westerly, 80 Fed. 611.

Mr. Justice Harlan delivered the opinion of the court:

This suit was brought by the Knoxville Water Company, a corporation of Tennessee, against the city of Knoxville, a municipal corporation of the same state, and [26]against certain individual *citizens of Tennessee, constituting the waterworks commission of that city.

Are the rights which the plaintiff sought to protect secured by the Constitution of the United States in any such sense as to make the case—the parties all being citizens of Tennessee—one arising under that instrument, and therefore one of which the circuit court could take original cognizance? An answer to these questions, it would seem, requires for their intelligent solution a somewhat extended statement of the facts.

The water company, by its charter granted in 1877, was authorized to establish waterworks of sufficient capacity to furnish the corporate authorities and inhabitants of Knoxville with water. To that end it was empowered to lay down pipes through the streets, lanes, and alleys of the city; bringing into the city a sufficent supply of water by means of pipes or tanks, or in any other way; construct reservoirs; supply with water the inhabitants of the city and its environs, and all who may be along the lines of the company's pipes; erect hydrants or fire plugs; and contract with the inhabitants and with the corporate authorities of the city or any incorporated companies for the use of water, charging such price for the same as might be agreed upon between the company and the parties.

Prior to 1882,—taking the allegations of the bill to be true, since the case went off in the circuit court upon demurrer to the bill,—the city of Knoxville determined to establish a system of waterworks, and to that end it purchased certain real estate. But that scheme having been abandoned, or having been ascertained to be unwise and impracticable at that time, the city advertised for bids and proposals by responsible parties for the erection of waterworks, which, after being built, it was to have the option of purchasing at a time to be agreed upon.

The advertisement brought two competitive propositions, one by the city water company and the other by the present plaintiff. The proposition of the plaintiff was accepted, and thereupon the city and the plaintiff, on the 1st day of July, 1882, *entered into an agreement or contract which[27] is the foundation of this suit.

By that agreement the water company stipulated (omitting many minor details): That it would erect and establish on the land acquired by the city a system of waterworks, with reservoir and all necessary mains, pipes, hydrants, machinery, buildings, and other appurtenances and incidents sufficient to supply the city with water to be taken from the Tennessee river at the site purchased by the city for that purpose, —the waterworks and fixtures throughout to be of first-class materials, capable of furnishing 2,000,000 gallons of water every twenty-four hours, and affording an uninterrupted daily supply to the city of such quantity as might be required, not exceeding the amount above specified, and the reservoir to be built on a specified site, and to have a capacity of 3,200,000 gallons of water. The company was to furnish water free of charge (except the rental of hydrants) from hydrants for the sprinkling of streets and flushing of gutters and sewers along, on, or under such streets as were curbed, guttered, or sewered; also, free of charge, water for all purposes of the fire department and for supplying the city hall buildings, office, and prison. It was to purchase at the price of $7,800 the property then already acquired by the city for the purpose of erecting waterworks, including lands, plans, specifications, drawings, maps, etc., and to pay therefor within thirty days from the execution of the agreement, and before the construction of said works. It engaged to supply private consumers with water at a rate not to exceed 5 cents per hundred gallons, the cost of introducing from the mains, and the cost of meter when used, to be borne by such private parties. The work of construction was to be commenced within thirty days from the execution of the agreement, and the works to be completed, ready for use, within twelve months thereafter. The company was to maintain the waterworks stipulated to be built by it in such condition as would enable it to comply with its undertakings for the period of thirty years from January 1st, 1883, unless the city should become the owner of the same *within that[28] period. At its own expense it was to establish with the waterworks a system of telegraphic fire alarms of such quality and efficiency as those in general use in cities, consisting of two alarm boxes in each of the (then) eight wards of the city, with proper telegraphic connections with a central station.

In consideration of the promises and undertakings by the water company, as set out in the above agreement, the city covenanted and agreed, among other things, "not to grant to any other person or corporation, any contract or privilege to furnish water to the city of Knoxville, or the privilege of erecting upon the public streets, lanes, or alleys, or other public grounds, for the purpose of furnishing said city or the inhabitants thereof with water for the full period of thirty years from the 1st day of August, A. D. 1883, provided the company comply with the requirements and obligations imposed and assumed by them under and by virtue of this agreement;" also, "to pay to said company for rent of the seventy-five hydrants hereinbefore stipulated to be erected $50 each per annum, payable in quarterly instalments on the last day of each quarter, beginning on the day upon which the city shall commence receiving a supply of water from said works, and for any additional hydrants erected for the use of the city it will pay in the same manner at the rate of not more than $50 each per annum. . . ." Recognizing the benefit and advantage accruing to it and to its citizens from the construction of the waterworks and the erection of hydrants, the city also covenanted and agreed with the water company "to pay, in addition to the annual rent of $50, as hereinbefore provided, and as an additional annual rent for the said seventy-five hydrants, a sum equal to that which, under the laws of the state and the ordinances and resolutions of the city, would be annually assessed as taxes for city purposes and uses on property of the same kind, quantity, and value as that owned by the said water company within the corporate limits of the city of Knoxville: Provided, that the said additional [29] annual rental shall only *be paid for the term of five years next following 1st of August, 1894, and no longer."

It was further mutually agreed and understood between the parties that at the expiration of fifteen years from the time fixed for the completion of the waterworks, the city should have the right, upon giving one year's notice of such purpose and intention, to purchase from the company the waterworks provided for, and all the property, rights, franchises, and privileges thereto belonging; by negotiations, if the terms could in that way be agreed upon, or if not, then at any time for a consideration to be fixed and determined by appraisers; and if not purchased at the end of fifteen years, the waterworks plant, franchises, rights, privileges, etc., could be purchased by the city upon the same terms and conditions, and in the same way, at the expiration of each and every year thereafter. But in no case was such right of purchase to exist or be exercised unless due notice thereof was given one year before the expiration of the period aforesaid or either of them. If the parties differed as to price, the matter, the agreement provided, was to be determined by appraisers designated in a particular way, and whose award should be final and conclusive. It was further stipulated that the water company should not transfer, set over, or assign the agreement for the construction of the waterworks to any company, corporation, or individual whatsoever.

By an ordinance adopted October 20th, 1899, the city consented to the consolidation of the Knoxville Water Company and the Lonsdale-Beaumont Water Company, and made certain changes both in the contract between the latter company and the town of West Knoxville and in the above agreement of 1882. It is not necessary to set out these changes.

We come now to the act of the Tennessee legislature of February 2d, 1903, passed avowedly for the purpose of enabling the city to exercise the option it had under the agreement of 1882 and the ordinance of 1899 to purchase and acquire the plant and property of the water company, and maintain it for the benefit of its people. To that end the act authorized the city *to issue bonds to an amount sufficient for [30] that purpose, upon the agreed valuation of the parties, or, in default of same, upon a valuation to be ascertained and fixed by appraisers, and to such additional amount as would be necessary in making additions to the plant, including real estate required for such additions. It was, however, provided that bonds should not be issued unless approved by the assent of two thirds of the qualified voters of the city, expressed at an election duly held to ascertain their wishes. The execution of the provisions of the act was committed to a waterworks commission, to be created by the city council, and to have the power to make all contracts for the maintenance and extension of the plant.

Subsequently, the legislature passed the act of April 3d, 1903, (also amending the above act of February 2d, 1903), whereby the city was authorized to acquire, own, and operate a system of waterworks, either by purchase or construction, and for that purpose power was given to issue interest-bearing coupon bonds to an amount not exceeding $750,000, under the restrictions named in the act. The act created a waterworks commission of five members, to be elected by the city council, and to have the entire supervision, under prescribed restrictions, of the purchase or construction, operation and maintenance, of any system of waterworks established under the sanction of the act. The act embodied, among others, a provision authorizing and directing the commissioners to obtain from the water company a written proposition for the sale of its plant, franchises, etc., to the city of Knoxville, giving the price and terms of payment, together with the opinion of competent, disinterested experts as to the cost and present value of the plant; the commission to secure plans, specifications, and estimates of the cost of the construction of a new system of waterworks, and to report all matters to the city council for its consideration, but not to close any contract for the purchase or construction of waterworks until it had been duly authorized to do so by the city council after the proposition shall have been ratified by a vote of the people.

[31] *If the city determined to construct, equip, and maintain its own system of waterworks, then, for the purpose of securing sites for pumping stations and other necessary purposes, including the laying of mains and water pipes, and sites for reservoirs and filtering galleries, extensions, improvements and alterations, it was given the right of condemnation of grounds within and without its corporate limits.

There is no need to refer to other provisions of the agreement of 1882. But it may be said in this connection that an election was held on the 2d day of July, 1903; and the city council—having express authority to declare the result of the election—declared, by ordinance, that 1,818 votes had been cast in favor of, and only 239 votes against, an issue of bonds for the construction by the city of a system of waterworks. It may be also stated, in this connection, that after the passage of the two acts of 1903, and before the above election, some correspondence ensued between the water commission and the water company in reference to the purchase of the latter's plant. But the parties failed to agree as to the mode of ascertaining the value of the company's plant, and negotiations ceased. It is not important to inquire which side, if either, was to blame in this matter. Suffice it to say that the city council, on or about May 20th, 1904, conceived and was about to enter a plan of establishing a system of city waterworks wholly independent of, and in competition with, that maintained by the water company.

The present suit was brought upon the theory that the legislative enactments of 1903 were laws impairing the obligations of the contract of 1882 between the water company and the city, as well as upon the theory that the maintenance by the city of a system of waterworks in competition with those of the water company would inevitably destroy the value of the latter's property, and be a taking, under the sanction of the state, of the company's property for public use without compensation, in violation of the due process of law enjoined by the 14th Amendment.

*The substantial relief asked was a per- [32] petual injunction restraining the city, its agents or officers, and the waterworks commission, from entering into any contract for the construction of a separate, independent, and competing plant, and from issuing any bonds for such a purpose.

Upon the question of the jurisdiction of the circuit court to take cognizance of this case, without regard to the citizenship of the parties, but little need be said. The water company, as we have seen, insists that the agreement of 1882 constituted a contract, whereby it acquired, for a given period, an exclusive right, by means of pipes laid in the public ways and a system of works established for that purpose, to supply water for the use of the city and its inhabitants. It also insists, as just stated, that the obligation of this contract will be impaired if the city, proceeding under the acts of the legislature and under the ordinances in question, establishes and maintains an independent, separate system of waterworks in competition with those of the water company. These questions having been aptly raised by the company's bill, the case is plainly one arising under the Constitution of the United States.

The fundamental question in the case is whether the city, by the agreement of 1882, or in any other way, has so tied its hands by contract that it cannot, consistently with the constitutional rights of the water company, establish and maintain, a separate system of waterworks of its own. If the city made no such contract, that will be an end of the case; for, in the absence of a contract protected by the Constitution of the United States, the circuit court could not take cognizance of the dispute between the parties, all citizens of Tennessee; and it could not be said that any taking of private property for public use could arise merely from the construction and maintenance by the city of a waterworks plant.

The principles which must control in determining the scope and obligations of the agreement of 1882 have been clearly outlined in our decisions. We may assume, for purposes of the present discussion, but without deciding, that the city of Knox-[33] ville *was invested by the legislature with full authority, or that, under its general municipal powers, it could bind itself by contract, to give to a single corporation or company the exclusive right, for a specified period, to supply water for the use of itself and its inhabitants. It will yet be conceded that whatever authority it possessed in this matter was granted solely for the public good, and that in every substantial, legal sense the agreement with the water company is to be deemed a public grant, entitling that company to exercise certain public functions that appertain to the city as a municipal corporation.

Although the doctrines which must control in determining the scope of such a grant are clearly settled and are familiar, it may be well to recall the words of some of the adjudged cases. In Charles River Bridge v. Warren Bridge, 11 Pet. 420, 544, 547, 548, 9 L. ed. 773, 822, 824, the doctrine announced was that government, possessing powers that affect the public interests, and having entered into a contract involving such interests, is not, by means merely of implications or presumptions, to be disarmed of powers necessary to accomplish the objects of its existence; that any ambiguity in the terms of such a contract must operate against the corporation, and in favor of the public, and the corporation can claim nothing but what is clearly given by the act; that it can never be assumed that the government intended to diminish its powers of accomplishing the ends of its creation; and that those who insist that the government has surrendered any of its powers, or agreed that they may be diminished, must find clear warrant for such a contention before it can be heeded. "Grants of franchises and special privileges are always to be construed most strongly against the donee, and in favor of the public." Such were the words of this court in St. Clair County Turnp. Co. v. Illinois, 96 U. S. 63, 68, 24 L. ed. 651, 652. The universal rule in doubtful cases—this court said in Oregon R. & Nav. Co. v. Oregonian R. Co. 130 U. S. 1, 26, 32 L. ed. 837, 842, 9 Sup. Ct. Rep. 409—is that "the construction shall be against the grantee, and in favor of the government." As late as Coosaw Min. Co. v. South Carolina, 144 U. S. 550, 562, 36 L. ed. 537, 542, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 689, 691, this court said: "The [34] doctrine is firmly established that only *that which is granted in clear and explicit terms passes by a grant of property, franchises, or privileges in which the government or the public has an interest. † Statutory grants of that character are to be construed strictly in favor of the public, and whatever is not unequivocally granted is withheld; nothing passes by mere implication. ‡ This principle, it has been said, 'is a wise one, as it serves to defeat any purpose concealed by the skilful use of terms to accomplish something not apparent on the face of the act, and thus sanctions only open dealing with legislative bodies.' Slidell v. Grandjean, 111 U. S. 412, 438, 28 L. ed. 321, 330, 4 Sup. Ct. Rep. 475." We have never departed from or modified these principles, but have reaffirmed them in many cases. §

It is true that the cases to which we have referred involved in the main the construction of legislative enactments. But the principles they announce apply with full force to ordinances and contracts by municipal corporations in respect of matters that concern the public. The authorities are all agreed that a municipal corporation, when exerting its functions for the general good, is not to be shorn of its powers by mere implication. If, by contract or otherwise, it may, in particular circumstances, restrict the exercise of its public powers, the intention to do so must be manifested by words so clear as not to admit of two different or inconsistent meanings.

Turning, now, to the agreement of 1882, we fail to find in it any words necessarily importing an obligation on the part of the city not to establish and maintain waterworks of its own during the term of the water company. It is said that the *com-
[35] pany could not possibly have believed that the city would establish waterworks to be operated in competition with its system, for such competition would be ruinous to the water company, as its projectors, on a †Rice v. Minnesota & N. W. R. Co. 1 Black, 358, 380, 17 L. ed. 147, 153; Northwestern Fertilizing Co. v. Hyde Park, 97 U. S. 659, 666, 24 L. ed. 1036, 1038; Hannibal & St. J. R. Co. v. Missouri River Packet Co. 125 U. S. 260, 271, 31 L. ed. 731, 735, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 874; Central Transp. Co. v. Pullman's Palace Car Co. 139 U. S. 24, 49, 35 L. ed. 55, 64, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 478; Stein v. Bienville Water Supply Co. 141 U. S. 67, 80, 35 L. ed. 622, 627, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 892; State v. Pacific Guano Co. 22 S. C. 50, 83, 86.

‡Holyoke Water Power Co. v. Lyman, 15 Wall. 500, 21 L. ed. 33; The Binghamton Bridge (Chenango Bridge Co. v. Binghamton Bridge Co.) 3 Wall. 51, 75, 18 L. ed. 137, 143.

§ United States v. Arredondo, 6 Pet. 691, 738, 8 L. ed. 547, 564; Mills v. St. Clair County, 8 How. 581, 12 L. ed. 1206; Richmond, F. & P. R. Co. v. Louisa R. Co. 13 How. 81, 14 L. ed. 60; Dubuque & P. R. Co. v. Litchfield, 23 How. 66, 88, 16 L. ed. 500, 509; Newton v. Mahoning County, 100 U. S. 561, 25 L. ed. 712.

moment's reflection, could have perceived when the agreement of 1882 was made. On the other hand, the city may, with much reason, say that, having once thought of having its own waterworks, the failure to insert in that agreement a provision precluding it, in all circumstances, and during a long period, from having its own separate system, shows that it was not its purpose to so restrict the exercise of its powers, but to remain absolutely free to act as changed circumstances or the public exigencies might demand. The stipulation in the agreement that the city would not, at any time during the thirty years commencing August 1st, 1883, grant to any person or corporation the same privileges it had given to the water company, was by no means an agreement that it would never, during that period, construct and maintain waterworks of its own. For some reason, not distinctly disclosed by the record, the city abandoned the scheme it had at one time formed, of constructing its own system of waterworks. And it may be that it did not, in 1882, intend or expect ever again to think favorably of such a scheme. It may also be that the water company, having knowledge of what the city had done or attempted prior to 1882, deliberately concluded to risk the possibility of municipal competition, if the city would agree not to give to other persons or corporations the same privileges it had given to that company. The city did so agree, and thereby bound itself by contract to the extent just stated, omitting, as if purposely, not to bind itself further. The agreement, as executed, is entirely consistent with the idea that while the city, at the time of making the agreement of 1882, had no purpose or plan to establish and operate its own waterworks in competition with those of the water company, it refrained from binding itself not to do so, although willing to stipulate, as it did stipulate, that the grant to the water company should be exclusive as against all other persons or corporations. We are [36] therefore *constrained by the words of the agreement to hold that the city did not assume, by any contract protected by the Constitution of the United States, to restrict its right to have a system of waterworks, independent altogether of the system established and maintained by the water company. If this interpretation of the contract will bring hardship and loss to the water company, and to those having an interest in its property and bonds, the result (omitting now any consideration of the question of power) is due to the absence from the agreement between the parties of any stipulation binding the city not to do what, unless restrained, it now proposes to do.

While there is no case precisely like the present one in all its facts, the adjudged cases lead to no other conclusion than the one just indicated. We may well repeat here what was said in a somewhat similar case, where a municipal corporation established gas works of its own in competition with a private gas company which, under previous authority, had placed its pipes, mains, etc., in public streets to supply, and was supplying, gas for a city and its inhabitants: "It may be that the stockholders of the plaintiff supposed, at the time it became incorporated, and when they made their original investment, that the city would never do what evidently is contemplated by the ordinance of 1889. And it may be that the erection and maintenance of gas works by the city at the public expense, and in competition with the plaintiff, will ultimately impair, if not destroy, the value of the plaintiff's works, for the purposes for which they were established. But such considerations cannot control the determination of the legal rights of parties. As said by this court in Curtis v. Whitney, 13 Wall. 68, 70, 20 L. ed. 513, 514: 'Nor does every statute which affects the value of a contract impair its obligation. It is one of the contingencies to which parties look now in making a large class of contracts, that they may be affected in many ways by state and national legislation.' If parties wish to guard against contingencies of that kind they must do so by such clear and explicit language as will take their contracts out of the established rule that public grants, *susceptible of two constructions, must re- [37] ceive the one most favorable to the public." Hamilton Gaslight & Coke Co. v. Hamilton, 146 U. S. 258, 268, 36 L. ed. 963, 968, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 90; Skaneateles Waterworks Co. v. Skaneateles, 184 U. S. 354, 363, 46 L. ed. 585, 590, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 400.

So in Joplin v. Southwest Missouri Light Co. 191 U. S. 150, 156, 48 L. ed. 127, 129, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 43, which involved the question whether a city could establish its own electric plant in competition with that of a private corporation, the court said: "The limitation contended for is upon a governmental agency, and restraints upon that must not be readily implied. The appellee concedes, as we have seen, that it has no exclusive right, and yet contends for a limitation upon the city which might give it (the appellee) a practical monopoly. Others may not seek to compete with it, and if the city cannot, the city is left with a useless potentiality, while the appellee exercises and enjoys a practically exclusive right. There are presumptions, we repeat, against the granting of exclusive rights, and against limitations upon the powers of government."

Again, in the recent case of Helena Waterworks Co. v. Helena, 195 U. S. 383, 392, 49 L. ed. 245, 250, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 40, where a city established its own system of waterworks in competition with that of a private company, the court, observing that the city had not specifically bound itself not to construct its own plant, said: "Had it been intended to exclude the city from exercising the privilege of establishing its own plant, such purpose could have been expressed by apt words, as was the case in Walla Walla v. Walla Walla Water Co. 172 U. S. 1, 43 L. ed. 341, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 77. It is doubtless true that the erection of such a plant by the city will render the property of the water company less valuable and, perhaps, unprofitable; but if it was intended to prevent such competition, a right to do so should not have been left to argument or implication, but made certain by the terms of the contract." To the same effect, as to the principle involved, are Washington & C. Turnp. Co. v. Maryland, 3 Wall. 210, 213, 18 L. ed. 180, 182; Stein v. Bienville Water Supply Co. 141 U. S. 67, 81, 35 L. ed. 622, 628, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 892; Long Island Water Supply Co. v. Brooklyn, 166 U. S. 685, 41 L. ed. 1165, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 718.

It is, we think, important that the courts [38] should adhere firmly *to the salutary doctrine underlying the whole law of municipal corporations and the doctrines of the adjudged cases, that grants of special privileges affecting the general interests are to be liberally construed in favor of the public, and that no public body, charged with public duties, be held, upon mere implication or presumption, to have devested itself of its powers.

As, then, the city of Knoxville cannot be held to have precluded itself by contract from establishing its own independent system of waterworks, it becomes unnecessary to consider any other question in the case. The judgment of that court dismissing the bill must be affirmed.

It is so ordered.

Mr. Justice Brown, Mr. Justice White, Mr. Justice Peckham, and Mr Justice Holmes dissented.

OWENSBORO WATERWORKS COMPANY, of Owensboro, Kentucky, Appt.,

v.

CITY OF OWENSBORO.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 38–47.)

1. Courts—jurisdiction of Federal circuit court—case arising under Federal Constitution.—A suit to enjoin the diversion or intended diversion by a municipality of certain funds which, under legislative sanction, it had collected from taxpayers for a specific public object, but which were not applied to that object, on the theory that such failure of duty on the part of the municipality may ultimately cause increased taxation, and thereby deprive the taxpayers of their property without the due process of law guaranteed by U. S. Const., 14th Amend., if the full amount originally intended to be applied to the particular object named by the legislature is to be collected,—is not one arising under the Constitution of the United States, of which a Federal circuit court has original jurisdiction without regard to the citizenship of the parties.

2. Constitutional law—due process of law—acts of municipality in excess of its powers.—The acts of a municipal corporation cannot be said to be wanting in the due process of law guaranteed by U. S. Const., 14th Amend., if such acts, when done or ratified by the state, would not be inconsistent with that Amendment.

[No. 145.]

Submitted December 13, 1905. Decided January 2, 1906.

APPEAL from the Circuit Court of the United States for the Western District of Kentucky to review a decree dismissing, for want of jurisdiction, the bill in a suit to enjoin the diversion, by a municipal corporation, of funds which, under legislative sanction, it had collected from taxpayers for a specific public object. Affirmed.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Messrs. John D. Atchison and William T. Ellis submitted the cause for appellant. Messrs. Little & Slack were on the brief.

Mr. Charles S. Walker submitted the cause for appellee.

Mr. Justice Harlan delivered the opinion of the court:

The plaintiff in this suit, the Owensboro Waterworks Company, is a private corporation of Kentucky, while the defendant, the city of Owensboro, is a municipal corporation of the same commonwealth.

The bill was dismissed for want of juris-

NOTE.—As to Federal question as conferring jurisdiction on United States courts—see notes to Montana Ore-Purchasing Co. v. Boston & M. Consol. Copper & S. Min. Co. 35 C. C. A. 7, and Bailey v. Mosher, 11 C. C. A. 308.

As to what constitutes due process of law—see notes to Kuntz v. Sumption, 2 L.R.A. 655; Re Gannon, 5 L.R.A. 359; Ulman v. Baltimore, 11 L.R.A. 224; Gilman v. Tucker, 13 L.R.A. 304; People v. O'Brien, 2 L.R.A. 255; Pearson v. Yewdall, 24 L. ed. U. S. 436; and Wilson v. North Carolina, 42 L. ed. U. S. 865.

diction in the court below to hear and determine the cause, the circuit court being of opinion that the suit was not one arising under the Constitution or laws of the United States, and the matter in dispute not of sufficient value to give that court jurisdiction.

The case made by the bill was this:

On the 10th day of October, 1900, the common council of Owensboro adopted an ordinance authorizing the borrowing of money, upon the city's bonds, for the purpose of erecting a system of waterworks for supplying the city of Owensboro and its inhabitants with water. The ordinance provided for a submission to the voters of the question of issuing city bonds to the amount of $200,000, with which to raise money for the purpose just stated.

The election was held and the proposition was carried, more than two thirds of those voting approving the proposed issue of bonds.

By an ordinance of December 3d, 1900, bonds to the amount of $200,000 were directed to be issued, and $14,666.66 was [40] appropriated *out of the revenues and public moneys of the city for the payment of the semiannual interest on the bonds, and the creation of a fund for the ultimate payment of the principal thereof, such fund to be designated as the Owensboro water bond account.

By an ordinance approved March 11th, 1901, $14,666.66 was appropriated and set apart out of the revenues and funds of the city, to be raised by taxation or otherwise, each year, until the bonds were paid, for the purpose of paying the interest on the bonds semiannually, and for creating a sinking fund for the payment of the principal of the bonds. And, for the purpose of providing a fund for that purpose, it was ordained, the bill alleged, that there should be, and that there was thereby, levied upon all the taxable property of said city subject by law to taxation for municipal purposes, a direct annual tax for the year 1901, and for each succeeding year up to and including the year 1931, sufficient to raise the said sum of $14,666.66, to be collected annually with other municipal taxes, licenses, revenues, and public dues, and continuing from year to year until the ultimate payment of the bonds; and it was also, by the ordinance, ordained that no part of said funds should ever be used for, or appropriated to, any other purpose or use, except the payment of the principal and interest of the bonds; further, that provision to meet the requirements of said section be made in the annual budget and appropriation ordinance.

Pursuant to the ordinance of December 3d, 1900, the city executed 200 bonds of $1,000 each, bearing 4½ per cent interest per annum from their date,—January 1st, 1901,—payable semiannually, and transferable at delivery, and at the date of the bringing of this suit all of those bonds were, the bill alleged, in the possession or under the control of the city, "ready and about to be immediately sold and delivered to purchasers, with the exception of 7 bonds which the said mayor and council have already sold, and have received therefor the sum of $7,000."

In each of the years 1901, 1902, and 1903, the city, proceeding under ordinances adopted by the common council, levied an *ad valorem tax of $2 on each $100 worth [41] of property in the city subject to taxation, part of such tax—$14,666.66—to be appropriated annually for the payment of interest on the water bonds and for the creation of a sinking fund for the ultimate payment of the principal. A similar tax was also levied for 1904, of which $14,666.66 was appropriated to pay interest and create a sinking fund,—$8,000 to be paid on interest, and $6,666.66 to go into the sinking fund. So that under the levies made in 1901, 1902, and 1903, $44,000 had been collected for interest and the sinking fund, and $14,666.66 was to be collected for 1904.

Of the 200 bonds actually signed, 193 remain in the hands of the city, its officers and agents, and after applying the sum of $44,000, collected under the levies of 1901, 1902, and 1903, and the $14,666.66, to be collected under the levy of 1904, there will remain only $149,000 to be raised by the sale of bonds. Nevertheless, the city, by its agents and officers, claims to have authority, and proposes immediately to sell and dispose of, and, unless restrained, will sell and dispose of, the entire 193 bonds, amounting to $193,000. If that be done, then the city will have collected and realized $244,000 on account of the erection of the waterworks; whereas it was only authorized to raise $200,000 for that purpose. Of the $44,000 collected by the city, $20,000 has been expended for land on which the proposed water plant was to be erected, while $24,000 has been illegally expended for purposes other than those for which it was collected.

The bill further alleges that for each of the years 1901, 1902, and 1903, taxes were levied on the taxable property of plaintiff and other taxpayers of the city; that capitation, license, and franchiset axes were also assessed, levied, and collected by it; that all the taxes so levied were collected each year, from all sources, and for all purposes, were expended and exhausted each year, and none so collected, in either of said years, are now on hand; that no part of the $44,000 collected is on hand. nor has said city any means of replacing [42] same, except by levying *and collecting taxes from the taxpayers of said city for that purpose, and this it had no legal authority to do; that by the payment of the $44,000 the city paid and extinguished that amount of bonds, and bonds to that amount should be surrendered by said city and cancelled, and that by law complainant and other taxpayers have the right to have said bonds so surrendered and cancelled.

The bill proceeds: "Your orator says said bonds are negotiable by delivery, and are on the footing of commercial obligations, and if said 193 bonds, or any of them, shall be sold and transferred for value, to innocent bona fide purchasers, then complainant and all other taxpayers of said city would be compelled to pay the full amount of all of said 200 bonds, and the full amount of all interest accrued, or to accrue thereon. It says defendant and its officers and agents purpose, and are now endeavoring, to immediately sell and transfer said 193 bonds, and coupons attached, to some person for value, and are doing this without giving such persons any notice or information of the facts herein stated, or of any facts pertaining to the collection or disposition of any part of said $44,000, and purpose to continue said efforts without giving to any person, to whom said bonds may be offered, any notice or information pertaining thereto, and said prospective purchasers have no notice, knowledge, or information of any of said facts, so far as complainant is advised or believes, and, unless restrained and prevented, defendant and its officers and agents will immediately sell said bonds and coupons to some person or persons, for value, who have no notice or information in regard to said transaction, and will do so without giving such persons any notice or information as to said facts, and thus complainant and its property, and said other taxpayers and their property, will be burthened with the payment of said entire 200 bonds and interest, and, by the means aforesaid, and without due process of law, deprived of the right to have credit on said debt for said $44,000 heretofore paid by them, and be compelled to pay said 200 bonds and all interest accrued and to accrue thereon.

[43] *"Your orator says that by article 14 of the Amendments to the Constitution of the United States it is provided that no state shall 'deprive any person of life, liberty, or property, without due process of law;' but your orator says that if more than 149 of said bonds shall be sold to innocent purchasers, without notice, which defendant city is about to do, that it and the taxpayers for whom it sues, will be forced to pay such excess, both principal and interest, without opportunity to plead, or to be heard as to matters herein alleged, and so deprived of their property without due process of law, and the amount in controversy here exceeds $2,000."

The relief prayed was that the defendant, its officers and agents, be perpetually enjoined and restrained from selling or disposing of any of the bonds in excess of 149 in number, and, before selling them, to detach and destroy all coupons for interest that have heretofore matured or that may mature before the date when the bonds may be sold, and be ordered and compelled to cancel and surrender all of the bonds, and all coupons pertaining thereto, in excess of 149, and that the bonds and coupons be destroyed, and if the $14,666.66 levied May 16th, 1904, should be collected before the sale was made of the bonds, that said sum be applied to the extinguishment of the debt and interest, and the bonds and interest coupons be destroyed, and not sold, as prayed for in regard to the money heretofore collected; also that defendant be enjoined and restrained from levying and collecting from complainant and all the other taxpayers of the city, or their property, any taxes in excess of a sufficient amount to create a sinking fund with which to pay the 149 bonds, when sold, and the 7 bonds, already sold, and to pay the interest to accrue thereon upon the 7 bonds heretofore sold, and to accrue upon the 149 bonds, after they were sold.

The plaintiff further prayed that the sum of $44,000, paid by the taxpayers of the city, be adjudged to have satisfied that amount of the bonds, and that it have such further or other relief in the premises as the nature of the case required.

The bill presents the case of the diversion, or the intended diversion, by a municipal corporation, of certain funds which, under legislative sanction, it had collected from taxpayers for a specific public object, which funds were not applied to the object for which they were raised, and which failure of duty on the part of the corporation so to apply them may ultimately cause increased taxation if the full amount originally intended to be applied to the particular object named by the legislature is to be collected.

*We share with the court below the diffi- [45] culty in understanding how such a case can be regarded as one arising under the Constitution of the United States. It certainly must be one of that character in order to sustain the jurisdiction of the circuit court,—the parties all being citizens of Kentucky.

In support of their contention that the present suit arises under the Constitution of the United States, and is within the original cognizance of the circuit court, without regard to the citizenship of the parties, the learned counsel for the appellant cites certain cases in this court which hold that the prohibitions of the 14th Amendment "refer to all the instrumentalities of the state,—to its legislative, executive, and judicial authorities,"—and consequently, "whoever, by virtue of public position under a state government, deprives another of any right protected under that Amendment against deprivation by the state, violates the constitutional inhibition; and, as he acts in the name and for the state, and is clothed with the state's power, his act is that of the state." Ex parte Virginia, 100 U. S. 339, 346, 347, 25 L. ed. 676, 679, 680; Neal v. Delaware, 103 U. S. 370, 397, 26 L. ed. 567, 574; Yick Wo v. Hopkins, 118 U. S. 356, 30 L. ed. 220, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1064; Gibson v. Mississippi, 162 U. S. 565, 40 L. ed. 1075, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 904; Chicago, B. & Q. R. Co. v. Chicago, 166 U. S. 226, 235, 41 L. ed. 979, 984, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 581.

These were all cases in which the right sought to be protected was held to have been granted or secured by the Constitution of the United States, but yet was violated by some agency or instrumentality proceeding under the sanction or authority of the state. But no right involved in the present case has its origin in, or is secured by, the Constitution of the United States. It is not contended that the legislative enactments, by the authority of which the city intends to establish and maintain a system of waterworks, are inconsistent either with the Constitution of Kentucky or the Constitution of the United States. The plaintiff, however, complains that the defendant city has not properly discharged its duties under the laws of the state. For the purposes of the present discussion, let this be taken as true; still, maladministration of its local affairs by a city's con-
[46] stituted *authorities cannot rightfully concern the national government, unless it involves the infringement of some Federal right. If the city authorities have received funds from taxation which ought strictly to have been applied to take up or cancel the bonds of the city, but have been used for other municipal purposes, and if, by reason of such misapplication of those funds, taxation may ultimately come upon the people for an amount beyond what the legislature originally intended,—if nothing more can be said,—the remedy must be found in the courts and tribunals of the state, and not in the Federal courts of original jurisdiction, where the controversy is wholly, as it is here, between citizens of the same state. When a Federal court acquires jurisdiction of a controversy by reason of the diverse citizenship of the parties, then it may dispose of all the issues in the case, determining the rights of parties under the same rules or principles that control when the case is in the state court. But, as between citizens of the same state, the Federal court may not interfere to compel municipal corporations or other like state instrumentalities to keep within the limits of the power conferred upon them by the state, unless such interference is necessary for the protection of a Federal right. There has been no actual invasion here of any right secured by the Constitution of the United States; nothing more, taking the allegations of the bill to be true, than a failure of a municipal corporation to properly discharge the duties which, under the laws of the state, it owes to its people and taxpayers. And there is here no deprivation of property without due process of law within the meaning of the 14th Amendment, even if it be apprehended that the defendant city may, at some future time, impose a tax in violation of its duty under the laws of the state.

The utmost that can be said of the present case, as disclosed by the bill, is that the municipal authorities of Owensboro have done some things outside or in excess of any power the city possessed. But this does not of itself show that they acted without the due process of law enjoined by the 14th *Amendment; for, if [47] what is complained of had been done directly by the state or by its express authority, or if the legislature could legally ratify that which the city has done, as it undoubtedly might do, no one would contend that there had been a violation of the due process clause of the amendment. It cannot be that the acts of a municipal corporation are wanting in the due process of law ordained by the 14th Amendment, if such acts, when done or ratified by the state, would not be inconsistent with that Amendment. Many acts done by an agency of a state may be illegal in their character when tested by the laws of the state, and may, on that ground, be assailed, and yet they cannot, for that reason alone, be impeached as being inconsistent with the due process of law enjoined upon the states. The 14th Amendment was not intended to bring within Federal control everything done by the state or by its instrumentalities that is simply illegal under the state laws, but only such acts by the states or their instrumentalities as are violative of rights secured by the Constitution of the United States. A different view would give to the 14th Amendment a far wider scope than was contemplated at the time of its adoption, or than would be consonant with the authority of the several states to regulate and administer the rights of their peoples, in conformity with their own laws, subject always, but only, to the supreme law of the land.

We are of opinion that this suit is not one arising under the Constitution of the United States, and, therefore, the parties being all citizens of Kentucky, it is not one of which the circuit court could take original cognizance.

Affirmed.

---

[48]*PEORIA GAS & ELECTRIC COMPANY, Appt.

v.

CITY OF PEORIA, Appellee.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 48-57.)

Contracts—combination to fix gas rates—effect of, on right to relief against municipal establishment of confiscatory rates.—An agreement between rival gas companies to fix the price for gas, in violation of the Illinois antitrust act of June 11, 1891 (Ill. Laws 1891, p. 206), does not, after they cease to act under it, defeat their right to invoke the due process of law clause of the Federal Constitution to prevent the enforcement of a municipal ordinance which, by establishing unremunerative rates, has the effect of taking private property for public use without just compensation.

[No. 33.]

Argued October 30, 1905. Decided January 2, 1906.

APPEAL from the Circuit Court of the United States for the Northern District of Illinois to review a judgment dismissing a bill to restrain the enforcement of a municipal ordinance fixing gas rates. Reversed.

Statement by Mr. Justice Brewer:

This was a bill filed in the circuit court of the United States for the northern district of Illinois by the Peoria Gas & Electric Company to restrain the enforcement of an ordinance passed by the defendant, fixing the price of gas. A decree was entered in the circuit court dismissing the bill, and the case was brought directly here, as involving a constitutional question.

The facts are these: Prior to 1899 for a period of many years the Peoria Gaslight & Coke Company had manufactured and furnished gas to the city of Peoria and its citizens. The business had been profitable and the stock was valuable. In 1899 the plaintiff company was organized to construct gas works in Peoria, and that city, by ordinance, granted to it a franchise permitting it to construct and operate a gas plant and lay mains along certain streets, etc. It is charged that in order to obtain *this fran- [49] chise the promoters of the plaintiff company represented that it was to be a Peoria company and enterprise, and that it would furnish gas at a cheaper rate than the old company; that in fact it was a scheme of certain Chicago capitalists, who, as soon as the ordinance was passed and the plant constructed, appeared as owners of substantially the entire stock. After the new company was organized and its plant constructed, the two companies became competitors, the competition being so sharp that in the early summer of 1900 the new company lowered its price to 30 cents per thousand cubic feet for both light and fuel gas. On July 31, 1900, after a conference between the managers of the two companies, both raised the rate to $1.15 net for light and 75 cents net for fuel gas, to take effect August 1, 1900. The announcements of this raise in the rates were published in the Peoria papers on the same day, each announcement being in precisely the same language. On September 4, 1900, the city passed an ordinance providing that the maximum price for gas should be 75 cents per thousand cubic feet, and that the gas to be furnished should not be less than eighteen candle power.

On September 18, 1900, the plaintiff filed this bill of complaint, setting forth its organization, the ordinance under which it was given authority to occupy certain streets and that of September 4, 1900; alleged that the latter ordinance was invalid, as establishing a rate which was not remunerative, and in effect confiscatory, and was thus taking private property for public use without just compensation, and depriving the plaintiff of its property without due process of law. The city answered, narrating the circumstances attending the organization of the plaintiff and the passage of the ordinance authorizing it to occupy the street and supply the city with gas, with the representation made at the time, and claimed an estoppel by reason thereof; showing also the rates which had been the result of competition, the raise in price by the two companies, charged that this was by agreement between the companies, alleged that the ordinance of September 4 was passed in good [50] faith and to *prevent extortion by the companies, and also that the rate fixed was reasonable. While the answer alleged that the fixing of the rates from the 1st of August was by agreement between the two corporations, it did not, in terms, plead that the agreement was in violation of any particular statute.

---

NOTE.—On contracts in restraint of trade—see notes to Leslie v. Lorillard, 1 L.R.A. 456; People v. North River Sugar Ref. Co. 2 L.R.A. 33; Bowman v. Phillips, 3 L.R.A. 632; Richardson v. Buhl, 6 L.R.A. 457; People ex rel. Peabody v. Chicago Gas Trust Co. 8 L.R.A. 500; National Benefit Co. v. Union Hospital Co. 11 L.R.A. 437; Western Wooden Ware Asso. v. Starkie, 11 L.R.A. 503; Lovejoy v. Michels, 13 L.R.A. 770; People v. North River Sugar Ref. Co. 9 L.R.A. 39: Oregon Steam Nav. Co. v. Winsor, 22 L. ed. U. S. 315; Fowle v. Park, 33 L. ed. U. S. 67; United States v. Trans-Missouri Freight Asso. 41 L. ed. U. S. 1008; Chicago, M. & St. P. R. Co. v. Wabash, St. L. & P. R. Co. 9 C. C. A. 666; and Cravens v. Carter-Crume Co. 34 C. C. A. 486.

On illegal trusts under modern antitrust laws—see note to Whitwell v. Continental Tobacco Co. 64 L.R.A. 689.

By consent a special commissioner was appointed to take the proofs and report the same, with his findings and conclusions thereon. He took an enormous amount of testimony, the printed record in this court amounting to 1,780 pages. From it he found and reported that the rate prescribed by the ordinance of September 4 did not furnish compensation, was confiscatory in its effect, and therefore unreasonable. Exceptions were taken by both sides to different portions of his findings and conclusions of law. On a hearing before the circuit court the question of the reasonableness of the rates prescribed was ignored, the court found that the increase in rates on August 1, 1900, was the result of an illegal combination between the two gas companies, and in violation of the Illinois antitrust law of 1891, that, therefore, the plaintiff was not entitled to any relief against the ordinance of September 4, and entered a decree dismissing the bill.

The antitrust act of Illinois, approved June 11, 1891 (Laws 1891, p. 206), forbids the entering into any "pool, trust, agreement, combination, confederation, or understanding . . . to regulate or fix the price of any article of merchandise or commodity," and punishes the same by fine. Sections 5 and 6 are as follows:

"5. Any contract or agreement in violation of any provision of the preceding sections of this act shall be absolutely void.

"6. Any purchaser of any article or commodity from any individual, company, or corporation transacting business contrary to any provision of the preceding sections of this act shall not be liable for the price or payment of such article or commodity, and may plead this act as a defense to any suit for such price or payment."

Subsequently and in 1893 another act was passed, which was *held by this court in [51] Connolly v. Union Sewer Pipe Co. 184 U. S. 540, 46 L. ed. 679, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 431, to constitute class legislation, and to be void. An amendment in 1897 to the act of 1891 was subject to the same objection. The supreme court of Illinois has since held that the act of 1891 was not repealed by the act of 1893 or the amendment of 1897, and is still in force. People ex rel. Akin v. Butler Street Foundry & Iron Co. 201 Ill. 236, 257, 66 N. E. 349; Chicago, W. & V. Coal Co. v. People, 214 Ill. 421, 454, 73 N. E. 770.

Messrs. E. C. Ritsher and William T. Abbott argued the cause, and, with Mr. W. T. Irwin, filed a brief for appellant.

Mr. Winslow Evans argued the cause and filed a brief for appellee.

Messrs. James Hamilton Lewis, Henry M. Ashton, and David K. Tone filed a brief on behalf of the city of Chicago, party to another pending case involving the question of the power of cities in Illinois to fix the price of gas.

Mr. William D. Guthrie filed a brief on behalf of Darius O. Mills, party to another pending case involving the question of power of cities in Illinois to fix the price of gas.

Mr. Justice Brewer delivered the opinion of the court:

This case was tried on one theory and decided on another. While that does not always and necessarily constitute error, yet, under the circumstances, as disclosed by the record, we *are of opinion that injus- [55] tice has probably resulted, and that there should be a reversal of the decree, and a further examination in the circuit court. As stated in the findings of the commissioner, the bill proceeds upon the theory that the ordinance of September 4, 1900, impaired the rights of contract theretofore existing between the parties, that its enforcement would constitute the taking of private property for public use without just compensation, that the penalties prescribed for a violation of the ordinance were exorbitant and not sanctioned by the laws of the state of Illinois, while the answer justified the provisions of the ordinance by the statements and representations made by the stockholders in the company to the city council at the time the plaintiff's franchise was sought, and alleged that the rate therein fixed was reasonable. On these questions the stress of the controversy was rested. The court entirely ignored them, and placed its decision on the single ground that the two companies had, by agreement, attempted to fix their prices, and therefore came within the scope of the Illinois antitrust law,—an act which had not been in terms referred to either in the pleadings or the report of the master.

There was no positive evidence, and no finding by the commissioner, of an agreement between the two companies, and while, from their action, an inference might be drawn that they had entered into some agreement in respect to rates on August 1, 1900, neither its terms, scope, nor duration were shown. It also appears from the testimony that that rate was continued by the old company only until January 1, 1901, when an even rate of $1 per thousand was established, and that this latter rate was, on September 1, 1901, also established by the new company,—the plaintiff herein. Whether this action of the new company in adopting the rate which had been kept in force by the old company since January 1, 1901, was the result of agreement, or an independent act on its part, is not shown. It appears further that in October, 1901, the plaintiff entered into a contract with the old company to supply it with gas for the use of its customers, and that, the latter [56] company desisting *temporarily from manufacture, this contract continued in force until August 19, 1902; but this was found by the commissioner to have been a purely private business arrangement between the companies, and without relation to the charges made by either to its customers. Doubtless it, together with the evidence of changes in holding of stock, tended to show at least a cessation of competition between the two companies, if not of a unity of control or agreement between them.

We shall assume that there was testimony from which the court justly found that the rates announced on August 1 were fixed by an agreement between the two companies. We shall also assume, though without deciding, that while that agreement was in force and the parties were acting under it, neither could recover for the gas that it furnished, nor could this plaintiff question the validity of the ordinance of September 4. But although the stringent provisions of the Illinois antitrust law may apply to the case of an agreement between two gas companies, fixing the price of gas, and even if, while the parties are proceeding under it, any party receiving gas may avoid payment therefor on that ground, and the city likewise be upheld in an ordinance establishing maximum rates which are not remunerative, yet the making of such an agreement does not subject the companies to a perpetual penalty. Parties making an agreement, unlawful by the antitrust act, may, while the agreement is in force, be subject to its penalties; but, whenever they cease to act under it, the penalties also cease. The punishment adheres to the offense, and stops when the offense itself stops. Now it is in evidence that the prices were changed by the old company on the 1st of January, 1901 (five months after the alleged agreement for a uniform rate), and that for months thereafter each company was charging a different rate; but the decree was one of absolute dismissal,—an adjudication that the ordinance of September 4 was valid,— an adjudication which became res judicata for all future litigation; and this in the face of the finding by the commissioner, undisturbed by the court, that the rates established by it are not remunerative, *and thus work a gradual [57] confiscation of the property belonging to the plaintiff.

We think that under the circumstances the decree should be reversed and the case remanded with instructions either to refer it to a commissioner for further findings, with leave to take additional testimony, if that be deemed necessary, showing the terms and duration of the alleged agreement between the two companies and how far it was acted upon by them, or that the court should itself undertake this investigation and make like findings.

The decree of the Circuit Court is reversed.

GUARDIAN TRUST & DEPOSIT COMPANY and Guarantee Trust & Deposit Company, Petitioners,

v.

B. J. FISHER, A. M. Scales, Assignee of A. A. Hinkle; A. M. Scales, Assignee of Hodgin, Pegram, & Co., and Helen G. Brown.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 57–70.)

1. Mortgage—priority as between corporate mortgage and judgments for torts.— Judgments against a water company in actions to recover the value of property alleged to have been destroyed by fire, as a result of the failure of the company to exercise reasonable care to furnish an adequate supply of water, are judgments for torts, within the meaning of N. C. Code, 1883, § 1255, subordinating the lien of corporate mortgages to judgments for torts committed by the corporation.

2. Mortgage—priority as between corporate mortgage and judgments for tort.— A judgment in tort, recovered against the corporate purchaser of a waterworks system encumbered with a mortgage executed by the original corporate owner, is entitled to priority over the lien of such mortgage, under N. C. Code, 1883, §1255, subordinating the lien of corporate mortgages to judgments for torts committed by the corporation, since to hold that only the interest in the property acquired by the purchasing corporation was responsible for damages caused by its negligence would defeat the purpose of the statute to make corporate property security against torts committed by the owner.

---

NOTE.—On priority as between mortgage and judgment—see notes to Manchester Locomotive Works v. Truesdale, 9 L.R.A. 140, and Vaughn v. Schmaisle, 10 L.R.A. 411.

[No. 75.]

Argued November 28, 1905. Decided January 2, 1906.

ON WRIT of Certiorari to the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Fourth Circuit, bringing up for review a case pending in that court on appeal from a decree of the Circuit Court for the Western District of North Carolina, to the effect that certain judgment creditors of a corporation were entitled to priority over the lien of a corporate mortgage. Decree of the Circuit Court affirmed.

See same case below, 115 Fed. 184.

Statement by Mr. Justice Brewer:

Section 1255 of the Code of North Carolina of 1883 reads:

"Mortgages of incorporate companies upon their property or earnings, whether in bonds or otherwise, hereafter issued, shall not have power to exempt the property or earning of such incorporations from execution for the satisfaction of any judgment obtained in courts of the state against such incorporation, for labor performed [nor for material furnished such incorporation], nor for torts committed by such incorporation, its agents or employees, whereby any person is killed, or any person or property injured, any clause or clauses in such mortgage to the contrary notwithstanding."

This was subsequently amended by leaving out the matter inclosed in brackets.

In 1887 a corporation was organized under the laws of North Carolina, which soon after secured the passage of an ordinance by the city of Greensboro, giving to it the exclusive right to the use of the streets, sidewalks, and public grounds for the purpose of constructing, operating, and maintaining a complete system of waterworks, A later ordinance provided that "said water company shall be responsible for all damage sustained by the city, or any individual or [59] individuals, *for any injury sustained from the negligence of the said company, either in the construction or operation of their plant."

The corporation constructed the waterworks and also executed a mortgage or deed of trust, conveying its entire property and plant to secure the payment of fifty thousand dollars of bonds. A subsequent mortgage or deed of trust was foreclosed and the title to the property passed to a new corporation, subject to the lien of the first mortgage. After its purchase the new corporation executed a further mortgage or deed of trust. Subsequently two fires occurred, destroying property belonging to the respondents. Actions were commenced in the superior court of Guilford county by the owners of the property destroyed against the new corporation, and judgments recovered, the judgment entries each reciting that the recovery was "for the injury and damage done him by the negligence of the defendant." 128 N. C. 375, 38 S. E. 912. Proceedings having been commenced in the circuit court of the United States to foreclose the existing mortgages, a decree was entered and a sale made. Thereupon the judgment creditors intervened, insisting that, in the distribution of the proceeds, they were entitled to priority over the mortgage liens by virtue of the statute above referred to. The circuit court decided in their favor. 115 Fed. 184. Its judgment was taken on appeal to the court of appeals, from which court the case was brought here on certiorari.

Messrs. John Peirce Bruns and Archibald H. Taylor argued the cause, and, with Mr. W. P. Bynum, Jr., filed a brief for petitioners:

The Federal cases uniformly and consistently hold that judgments in state courts against corporations of which the United States courts, for sufficient cause, have taken jurisdiction for the purpose of selling their property and distributing the proceeds and ascertaining all liens in their due order, etc., have no validity against mortgagees of such corporations who have properly invoked or obtained the jurisdiction of the United States court, unless such United States court, on examination of the facts upon which such judgments were obtained, itself, and for itself, pronounces such judgment valid, and awards and enforces such claim.

Brooks v. Burlington & S. W. R. Co. 101 U. S. 443, 25 L. ed. 1057; Wisconsin v. Pelican Ins. Co. 127 U. S. 292, 32 L. ed. 244, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1370; Central Trust Co. v. Condon, 14 C. C. A. 314, 31 U. S. App. 387, 67 Fed. 103; Louisville Trust Co. v. Cincinnati, 22 C. C. A. 334, 47 U. S. App. 36, 76 Fed. 296; Central Trust Co. v. Bridges, 6 C. C. A. 539, 16 U. S. App. 115, 57 Fed. 753; Central Trust Co. v. Hennen, 33 C. C. A. 189, 61 U. S. App. 714, 90 Fed.

595; Hassall v. Wilcox, 130 U. S. 503, 32 L. ed. 1005, 9 Sup. Ct. Rep. 590.

And, in deciding the question as to the validity or nature of the cause of action upon which the judgments were recovered in the state court by the interveners, respondents here, neither the court below, nor any United States court, could accept the decision of the state court of North Carolina in these proceedings, because the questions are questions of general jurisprudence which a United States court must decide for itself.

Curtis, Jurisprudence, 234; Burgess v. Seligman, 107 U. S. 33, 27 L. ed. 365, 2 Sup. Ct. Rep. 10; Swift v. Tyson, 16 Pet. 18, 10 L. ed. 871; Rowan v. Runnels, 5 How. 134, 12 L. ed. 85; Liverpool & G. W. Steam Co. v. Phenix Ins. Co. 129 U. S. 397, 32 L. ed. 788, 9 Sup. Ct. Rep. 469; Baltimore & O. R. Co. v. Baugh, 149 U. S. 368, 37 L. ed. 772, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 914; Venice v. Murdock, 92 U. S. 494, 23 L. ed. 583; New York C. R. Co. v. Lockwood, 17 Wall. 357, 21 L. ed. 627; Brooklyn City & N. R. Co. v. National Bank, 102 U. S. 14, 26 L. ed. 61; United States v. Peters, 5 Cranch, 115, 3 L. ed. 53; Pease v. Peck, 18 How. 600, 15 L. ed. 521; Folsom v. Township Ninety Six, 159 U. S. 626, 627, 40 L. ed. 283, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 174.

The simple and single question presented by this record, then, in the light of the foregoing authorities, is, What was the decision obligatory upon the United States court below, and this court, after these fires had taken place, and prior to the decision of the case arising out of one of them, in Gorrell v. Greensboro Water Supply Co. 124 N. C. 328, 46 L.R.A. 513, 70 Am. St. Rep. 598, 32 S. E. 720? Certainly there could have been none other than that this defendant water company was not liable for losses caused by these fires, either in contract or in tort. If this be true, Gorrell v. Greensboro Water Supply Co. and Fisher v. Greensboro Water Supply Co. 128 N. C. 375, 38 S. E. 912, decided after the rights of all parties had accrued, cannot change the law of the United States courts.

Lake Shore & M. S. R. Co. v. Prentice, 147 U. S. 101, 37 L. ed. 97, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 261; Knox County v. Ninth Nat. Bank, 147 U. S. 92, 37 L. ed. 93, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 267.

Even if this were a judgment for a tort committed by the Greensboro Water Supply Company, there is nothing for such judgments to operate upon, except such title as the Greensboro Water Supply Company received when the property was sold to it, subject to the lien of the Guarantee Trust & Safe Deposit Company, the first mortgagee herein mentioned.

Julian v. Central Trust Co. 53 C. C. A. 438, 115 Fed. 956, 193 U. S. 103–109, 48 L. ed. 635–638, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 399.

A question as to the liability of a railway company, determined in a suit to which the company was a party, is not res judicata against a mortgage bondholder of the company, when no one claiming under the mortgage was a party.

Bancroft v. Wicomico County, 121 Fed. 875, Affirmed in 135 Fed. 977.

The doctrine of the United States courts, and of all the state courts, with one exception, and of the English courts, in respect to the causes of action asserted by these interveners, the respondents here, against the defendant, the Greensboro Water Company, supplying water under ordinance or contract to the city, is that such company is not liable, for its failure to furnish an adequate and proper supply to a citizen not having a direct contract with the company itself, for damage to his property, whether the suit be founded on contract or tort.

Boston Safe Deposit & T. Co. v. Salem Water Co. 94 Fed. 240; Atkinson v. New Castle Waterworks Co. L. R. 2 Exch. Div. 445; Davis v. Clinton Waterworks Co. 54 Iowa, 60, 37 Am. Rep. 185, 6 N. W. 126; New Orleans Gaslight Co. v. Louisiana Light & H. P. & Mfg. Co. 115 U. S. 651, 29 L. ed. 517, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 252; Vrooman v. Turner, 69 N. Y. 280, 25 Am. Rep. 195; Becker v. Keokuk Waterworks Co. 79 Iowa, 419, 18 Am. St. Rep. 377, 44 N. W. 694; Britton v. Green Bay & Ft. H. Waterworks Co. 81 Wis. 48, 29 Am. St. Rep. 856, 51 N. W. 84; Hayes v. Oshkosh, 33 Wis. 314, 14 Am. Rep. 760; Nickerson v. Bridgeport Hydraulic Co. 46 Conn. 24, 33 Am. Rep. 1; Eaton v. Fairbury Waterworks Co. 37 Neb. 546, 21 L.R.A. 653, 40 Am. St. Rep. 510, 56 N. W. 201; Beck v. Kittanning Waterworks Co. 8 Sadler (Pa.) 237, 11 Atl. 300; Stone v. Uniontown Water Co. 4 Pa. Dist. R. 431; Phœnix Ins. Co. v. Trenton Water Co. 42 Mo. App. 118; Howsmon v. Trenton Water Co. 119 Mo. 304, 23 L.R.A. 146, 41 Am. St. Rep. 654, 24 S. W. 784; Fitch v. Seymour Water Co. 139 Ind. 214, 47 Am. St. Rep. 258, 37 N. E. 982; Foster v. Lookout Water Co. 3 Lea, 42; Ferris v. Carson Water Co. 16 Nev. 44, 40 Am. Rep. 485; Fowler v. Athens City Waterworks Co. 83 Ga. 219, 20 Am. St. Rep. 313, 9 S. E. 673; Mott v. Cherryvale Water & Mfg. Co. 48 Kan. 12, 15 L.R.A. 375, 30 Am. St. Rep. 267, 28 Pac. 989; Bush v. Artesian Hot & Cold Water Co. 4 Idaho, 618, 95 Am. St. Rep. 161, 43 Pac. 69; Wainwright v. Queens County Water Co. 78 Hun, 146, 28 N. Y. Supp. 987; House v. Houston Waterworks Co. 88 Tex. 233, 28 L.R.A. 532, 31 S. W. 179; Akron

Waterworks Co. v. Brownless, 10 Ohio C. C. 620; Wheeler v. Cincinnati, 19 Ohio, 19, 2 Am. Rep. 368; Tainter v. Worcester, 123 Mass. 311, 25 Am. Rep. 90; Vanhorn v. Des Moines, 63 Iowa, 447, 50 Am. Rep. 750, 19 N. W. 293; Howard v. San Francisco, 51 Cal. 52; Black v. Columbia, 19 S. C. 412, 45 Am. Rep. 785; Mendel v. Wheeling, 28 W. Va. 262, 57 Am. Rep. 664; 2 Dill. Mun. Corp. 4th ed. ¶ 976, note; Allen & C. Mfg. Co. v. Shreveport Waterworks Co. 113 La. 1091, 68 L.R.A. 650, 104 Am. St. Rep. 525, 37 So. 980; Blunk v. Dennison Water Supply Co. 71 Ohio St. 250, 73 N. E. 210; Nichol v. Huntington Water Co. 53 W. Va. 348, 44 S. E. 292; Wilkinson v. Light, Heat, & Water Co. 78 Miss. 401, 28 So. 877.

Torts, and contracts and the breaches thereof, and the distinction between them, and definitions thereof, are certainly part of the system of general jurisprudence of this land, and, as such, must be defined and determined by this court and the United States courts below it, independently of state courts and their changing or novel decisions, the product of their respective local influences. Therefore, the wrongs complained of by the respondents in their causes of action, set out in their judgments upon which they intervene herein, are not wrongs independent of contract, are not wrongs that can be defined as such, without the allegation of the particular stipulations of the contract, and so are not torts, within the generally understood meaning of that word, which is plainly the meaning attached to it in § 1255 of the Code of North Carolina. Nor are the actions maintainable lawfully upon the theory that the wrongs are torts rather than breaches of contract.

Bouvier, Law Dict. Torts, 1124; Atlantic & P. R. Co. v. Laird, 164 U. S. 399, 41 L. ed. 487, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 120; Wright v. Augusta, 78 Ga. 241, 6 Am. St. Rep. 256; Fowler v. Athens City Waterworks Co. 83 Ga. 222, 20 Am. St. Rep. 313, 9 S. E. 673; Boston Safe Deposit & T. Co. v. Salem Water Co. 94 Fed. 240; Hodges v. Wilmington & W. R. Co. 105 N. C. 171, 10 S. E. 917.

This court has itself determined this question, that a water company owes no duty or obligation to the city, citizens, or taxpayers of a community, to furnish water at all, much less of any adequate pressure or quantity, except such as may be imposed upon it by contract lawfully entered into.

Skaneateles Waterworks Co. v. Skaneateles, 184 U. S. 362, 46 L. ed. 590, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 400.

The case of Coy v. Indianapolis Gas Co. 146 Ind. 655, 36 L.R.A. 535, 36 N. E. 17, was relied on by respondents below, and seemed to impress the judge of the United States circuit court as showing that such a company owed public duties outside of the contract, the breach of which might be considered a tort. But this same supreme court of Indiana said that a water supply company owes no such duty, and a breach of the ordinance containing the contract between it and the city cannot be made the subject of an action of tort or of any action whatever.

Fitch v. Seymour Water Co. 139 Ind. 214, 47 Am. St. Rep. 258, 37 N. E. 982.

Unless the breach of the terms of the contract is also the breach of a legal duty independent of the contract, it cannot be a tort, whatever be the form of the action employed. The legal duty must be a duty imposed by law, either common or statutory.

Cooley, Torts, 2d ed. 104; Addison, Torts, 6th ed. pt. 1, § 14, p. 20; 1 Jaggard, Torts, p. 6, note 15; 1 Chitty, Pl. 16th Am. ed. p. 152; Langford v. United States, 101 U. S. 346, 25 L. ed. 1012; Gibbons v. United States, 8 Wall. 276, 19 L. ed. 454; McCahan v. Hirst, 7 Watts, 178.

The judgment against a company in the position of the new company could not be used to disturb the property of the grantee of the old company, and, if the tort be looked upon as the commission of the old company, and a judgment obtained against the old company, no execution could be issued thereon against the new company, which had received the property prior to the happening of the so-called tort.

Fidelity Ins. Trust & S. D. Co. v. Norfolk & W. R. Co. 90 Fed. 175; Julian v. Central Trust Co. 115 Fed. 957, Affirmed in 193 U. S. 93, 48 L. ed. 629, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 399.

Mr. Aubrey L. Brooks argued the cause and filed a brief for respondents:

The judgments here presented are not only decisive of the matters about which they purport to speak, but have the sanction and approval of the highest court of the state of North Carolina, and, as such, are entitled to full faith and credit when presented to the United States court for payment.

Mills v. Duryee, 7 Cranch, 484, 3 L. ed. 413; Hampton v. McConnel, 3 Wheat. 234, 4 L. ed. 378; Crapo v. Kelly, 16 Wall. 610, 21 L. ed. 430; Christmas v. Russell, 5 Wall. 302, 18 L. ed. 478; Hanley v. Donoghue, 110 U. S. 1, 29 L. ed. 535, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 242; M'Elmoyle v. Cohen, 13 Pet. 312–324, 10 L. ed. 177–183; Thompson v. Whitman, 18 Wall. 457, 21 L. ed. 897; Hilton v. Guyot, 159 U. S. 113, 40 L. ed. 95, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 139; Bryar v. Campbell, 177 U. S. 649, 44 L. ed. 926, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 794; Harris v. Balk, 198 U. S. 215, 49 L. ed. 1023, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 625; Mayhew v. Thatcher, 6 Wheat. 129, 5 L. ed. 223; Bank of State of Alabama

v. Dalton, 9 How. 528, 13 L. ed. 244; Public Works v. Columbia College, 17 Wall. 521, 21 L. ed. 687; Chicago & A. R. Co. v. Wiggins Ferry Co. 108 U. S. 18, 27 L. ed. 636, 1 Sup. Ct. Rep. 614, 617; Kansas City, Ft. S. & M. R. Co. v. Morgan, 21 C. C. A. 478, note, 47 U. S. App. 1, 76 Fed. 429; Central Trust Co. v. Charlotte, C. & A. R. Co. 65 Fed. 257; Huntington v. Attrill, 146 U. S. 685, 686, 36 L. ed. 1134, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 224.

When a new form is given to an old corporation, or the same is reorganized under a new charter, taking in its new organization the place of the old one, embracing substantially the same incorporators, in the same territory, it will be presumed or held to be a continued existence of the same corporation, although different powers are possessed under the new charter and different officers administer its affairs, and is not, in law and in effect, a new and distinct creation of corporate capacity or liability.

Broughton v. Pensacola, 93 U. S. 266, 269, 23 L. ed. 896, 897.

The effect of merger or reorganization was to create a novation so far as the creditors of the old company were concerned, and to substitute the new one as debtor for it.

2 Cook, Stock & Stockholders, § 669, note 3; 1 Spelling, Corp. § 93; Friedenwald Co. v. Asheville Tobacco Works, 117 N. C. 544, 23 S. E. 490.

The purpose of the legislature was, by this enactment, to afford protection for judgments of the nature and class herein contended for.

Pocahontas Coal Co. v. Henderson Electric Light & P. Co. 118 N. C. 236, 24 S. E. 22; Potter's Dwarr. Stat. p. 128.

Upon foreclosure of a railroad mortgage, a judgment for personal injury will take precedence over the mortgage in the distribution of the proceeds of sale.

Finance Co. v. Charleston, C. & C. R. Co. 61 Fed. 369.

When sale under execution, or otherwise, is made of mortgaged property, the property still remains subject to the old mortgage in the hands of the new debtor, and, if the beneficiary in the old mortgage dislikes his new debtor, he has ample redress, to wit, foreclosure; but, if he prefers to continue the indebtedness with the new debtor, he must bear whatever burden the law imposes upon the property.

Providence Inst. for Savings v. Jersey City, 113 U. S. 506, 28 L. ed. 1102, 5 Sup. Ct. Rep. 612; Wilmington & W. R. Co. v. Burnett, 123 N. C. 214, 31 S. E. 602; Brine v. Hartford F. Ins. Co. 96 U. S. 634, 24 L. ed. 861; Connecticut Mut. L. Ins. Co. v. Cushman, 108 U. S. 51, 27 L. ed. 648, 2 Sup. Ct. Rep. 236; Toledo, D. & B. R. Co. v. Hamilton, 134 U. S. 300, 33 L. ed. 907, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 546.

The rights of tort judgment creditors to the protection given by the North Carolina statute have been frequently passed upon by the supreme court of that state in recent decisions, and in every instance the statute has been upheld and the relief therein afforded granted.

Pocahontas Coal Co. v. Henderson Electric Light & P. Co. supra; Langston v. Greenville Land & Improv. Co. 120 N. C. 132, 26 S. E. 644; Wilmington & W. R. Co. v. Burnett, supra.

No agreement made by the bondholders, whereby property is undertaken to be removed from the operation of the statute, is valid in law.

East Tennessee, V. & G. R. Co. v. Frazier, 139 U. S. 288, 35 L. ed. 196, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 517; Howe v. Harper, 127 N. C. 356, 37 S. E. 505.

Any contract or understanding made or had by and between the bondholders of the Greensboro Water Company and the Greensboro Water Supply Company, or with the Guardian Trust & Safe Deposit Company, whereby the statutory effect of the intervener's judgments would be impaired by the lessening of the legal means of their enforcement, would be invalid, inasmuch as it would impair the obligation of the contract, and such an arrangement would be void in law.

Wolff v. New Orleans (United States ex rel. Wolff v. New Orleans) 103 U. S. 358, 367, 26 L. ed. 395, 399; Cooley, Const. Lim. 4th ed. 241; Angell & A. Priv. Corp. 7th ed. §§ 332, 333; Mt. Pleasant v. Beckwith, 100 U. S. 514, 528–534, 25 L. ed. 699, 702–704; Swain v. Seamens, 9 Wall. 274, 19 L. ed. 560.

The bondholders having participated in the reorganization of the old Greensboro Water Company and merged it into a corporation known as the Greensboro Water Supply Company, and having agreed to the mortgage of July 1st, 1896 (wherein provision is made for the payment of the interest on said bonds), the mortgage of July 1st, 1896, is, in contemplation of law, a new mortgage and a waiver of the mortgage of May 10, 1888.

Cook, Corp. Law, 3d ed. § 793.

In jurisdictions where all forms of action have been abolished the inquiry should be, not as to the remedy formerly given at common law, but as to the real nature of the right.

Keener, Quasi Contracts, 160.

The defendant water company is a quasi public corporation, subject to the same rules of law as railroad, telegraph, and gas companies, and likewise liable to the public in the same manner to perform all duties imposed by the law upon such corporations.

Griffin v. Goldsboro Water Co. 122 N. C. 206, 41 L.R.A. 240, 30 S. E. 319.

Failure to do so is a breach of duty and at the same time a violation of the contract, for which it can be sued in tort or contract.

Young v. Western U. Teleg. Co. 107 N. C. 384, 9 L.R.A. 669, 22 Am. St. Rep. 883, 11 S. E. 1044; Chitty, Pl. 11th Am. ed. 133, 383; Robinson v. Threadgill, 35 N. C. (13 Ired. L.) 41; Williamson v. Dickens, 27 N. C. (5 Ired. L.) 260; Bond v. Hilton, 44 N. C. (Busbee, L.) 308, 59 Am. Dec. 552; Solomon v. Bates, 118 N. C. 315, 54 Am. St. Rep. 725, 24 S. E. 478; Fisher v. Greensboro Water Supply Co. 128 N. C. 375, 38 S. E. 912; Atlantic & P. R. Co. v. Laird, 164 U. S. 399, 41 L. ed. 487, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 120.

The water company clearly owed a duty, independent of the contract, to perform the obligations which, by its charter and franchise, it had undertaken to do.

Walla Walla v. Walla Walla Water Co. 172 U. S. 9, 43 L. ed. 345, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 77; New Orleans Gaslight Co. v. Louisiana Light & H. P. Mfg. Co. 115 U. S. 650, 29 L. ed. 516, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 252; Dill. Mun. Corp. 3d ed. § 691; Haugen v. Albina Light & Water Co. 21 Or. 411, 14 L.R.A. 424, 28 Pac. 244.

The complaints filed in the respondents' suits in the state courts allege facts sufficient to sustain an action in tort, even independent of the contract.

Addison, Torts, Wood's ed. §§ 27, 28, 1288; Webb's Pollock, Torts, 20, 69, 70; Bigelow, Torts, p. 11; Coy v. Indianapolis Gas Co. 146 Ind. 655, 36 L.R.A. 535, 46 N. E. 17; 2 Addison, Contr. 1119; Cincinnati, H. & I. R. Co. v. Eaton, 94 Ind. 474, 48 Am. Rep. 179; Brown v. Chicago, M. & St. P. R. Co. 54 Wis. 342, 41 Am. Rep. 41, 11 N. W. 356, 911.

Mr. Justice Brewer delivered the opinion of the court:

It is contended that neither the plaintiff in the pending suit nor the bondholders whom it represents were parties or privies to the actions in the state court; that therefore the judgments of the latter court were not conclusive in the foreclosure proceeding as to the nature of the causes of action; that whether they were for torts or breaches of contracts is for the determination of the Federal court, and further, that when the property passed from the old to the new water company, it passed subject to the fifty-thousand dollar mortgage, and that under this statute, if applicable at all, only the interest in the property acquired by the second water company was responsible for the damages caused by its negligence. On the other hand, it is contended that the statute deals with judgments,—not claims for damages caused by negligence; that the decision of the state court as to the nature of the cause of action is as much a part of the judgment as the determination of the amount to be recovered; that a judgment which in terms is for damages caused by negligence, if entered by a court having jurisdiction, is made by the statute superior to any mortgage; that, by the mortgage, the mortgagee and the bondholders it represents agree to accept such judgment as conclusive, and to subordinate their mortgage to its lien; that to hold that the transfer of property encumbered by a mortgage from one company to another puts that mortgage outside the statute practically destroys its beneficial intent; that such has been the holding of the supreme court of the state, and is a holding which the Federal courts will follow.

*We shall assume, without deciding, that [65] the nature of the causes of action upon which the state judgments were rendered is open for consideration in the Federal court in the foreclosure proceeding. The statute subordinates the mortgage to judgments for torts. Now, what is the judgment? It is a determination that, upon the facts stated, the plaintiff is entitled to recover so much money. It may not be essential that it recite whether the facts stated show a breach of contract or a tort, but it is essential that the judgment should be considered as a determination that, upon those facts, the plaintiff is entitled to recover. And it must be assumed that under the statute the mortgagee and the bondholders it represents agree to accept the judgment as conclusive in this respect, or, if not conclusive, at least prima facie evidence. In this foreclosure proceeding the record of the proceedings in the state courts was introduced in evidence. Taking the Fisher Case, for illustration, the complaint set out fully the contract made between the city of Greensboro and the water company, and the proceedings by which the title to the property passed from the one company to the other; alleged the destruction by fire of the plaintiff's property, and that he was free from all negligence in the matter. It added:

"The plaintiff alleges, . . . that the defendant company was culpably negligent and wilfully careless of its duty and obligations, both to the city of Greensboro and its inhabitants, under the said contract, and by virtue also of the duties, obligations, and responsibilities which it assumed when it undertook to supply water to the city of Greensboro and its inhabitants for a stipulated price, which was paid to it by the said city."

It then set forth as matters of negligence on the part of the water company the "carelessly, wilfully, and negligently failing to keep a sufficient quantity of water in its storage water tank in the said city of Greensboro, necessary for the purpose of extinguishing fire, together with the other uses to which it was applied;" also a fail-
[66] ure "to keep its pumping engine *ready at all times, and particularly on the day of the fire above referred to, to supply the needed fire pressure, in that it negligently failed to keep a suitable person at said engine or pumping house, or near the same, for the purpose of responding to the demands for water for the extinguishment of fire, and especially did it fail so to do at the time the property of the plaintiff was burned;" and closed with this averment: "That it was through no fault of the plaintiff that the said fire occurred, or that the same was not immediately extinguished; but that the negligence and omissions of duty, heretofore complained of on the part of the defendant company, was the proximate cause of the destruction of his property, whereby the defendant company becomes liable therefor."

The answer consisted mainly of denials in separate paragraphs of the averments in corresponding paragraphs of the complaint, specifically denying the validity of the contracts between the city and the original water company. Questions were submitted to the jury and answers returned, establishing the making of the contracts, the attempt on the part of the company to perform its stipulations, its failure to do so successfully, and also that the plaintiff was injured by the negligence of the defendant.

Upon this record the supreme court of North Carolina ruled that the action was one in tort, saying:

"We think the plaintiff was entitled to judgment as prayed for. There was an express and legal obligation upon the part of the defendant to provide and furnish ample protection against fires, and a breach of that obligation and a consequential damage to the plaintiff. Although action may have been maintained upon a promise implied by law, yet an action founded in tort was the more proper form of action, and the plaintiff so declared. He stated the facts out of which the legal obligation arose, fully, and also the obligation itself, and the breach of it, and the damage resulting from that [67] breach. 1 Chitty, Pl. 155; *5 Thomp. Corp. § 6340." 128 N. C. 375, 379, 38 S. E. 912.

From the conclusion thus reached we are not inclined to dissent, and for these reasons: One may acquire by contract an opportunity for acts and conduct in which parties other than those with whom he contracts are interested, and for negligence in which he is liable in damages to such other parties. A company is chartered to construct and operate a railroad. Proceeding thereunder it constructs and operates its road. Nothing may be said in the charter in reference to the manner in which the road shall be operated or the particular acts which it must do. Yet, without any such specification, it is under an implied obligation to exercise reasonable care in both construction and operation. If, from undue speed, failure to give proper warnings, or other like acts or omissions, individuals are injured, they may recover for such injuries, and their actions to recover sound in tort. Doubtless in the same transaction there may be negligence and breach of contract. If a railroad company contracts to carry a passenger, there is an implied obligation that he will be carried with reasonable care for his safety. A failure to exercise such care, resulting in injury to the passenger, gives rise to an action ex contractu for breach of the contract, or as well to an action for the damages on account of the negligence,—an action sounding in tort. But where there is no contract, and the injuries result from a failure of the corporation to exercise reasonable care in the discharge of the duties of its public calling, actions to recover therefor are strictly and solely actions ex delicto. Pollock, in his treatise, groups torts into three classes, in the last of which he specifies "breach of absolute duties specially attached to the occupation of fixed property, to the ownership and custody of dangerous things, and to the exercise of certain public callings." Webb's Pollock, Torts, p. 7. This, it is said, implies the existence of some absolute duty not arising from personal contract with the other party to the action.

*And here we are met with the contention [68] that, independently of contract, there is no duty on the part of the water company to furnish an adequate supply of water; that the city owes no such duty to the citizen, and that contracting with a company to supply water imposes upon the company no higher duty than the city itself owed, and confers upon the citizen no greater right against the company than it had against the city; that the matter is solely one of contract between the city and the company, for any breach of which the only right of action is one ex contractu on the part of the city. It is true that a company contracting with a city to construct waterworks and supply water may fail to commence performance. Its contractual obligations are then with the city only, which may recover damages, but merely for breach of contract. There would be no tort, no negligence, in the total failure on the part of the company. It may also be true that no citizen is a party to such a contract, and has no contractual or other right to recover for the failure of the company to act; but, if the company proceeds under its contract, constructs and operates its plant, it enters upon a public calling. It occupies the streets of the city, acquires rights and privileges peculiar to itself. It invites the citizens, and if they avail themselves of its conveniences, and omit making other and personal arrangements for a supply of water, then the company owes a duty to them in the discharge of its public calling, and a neglect by it in the discharge of the obligations imposed by its charter, or by contract with the city, may be regarded as a breach of absolute duty, and recovery may be had for such neglect. The action, however, is not one for breach of contract, but for negligence in the discharge of such duty to the public, and is an action for a tort. "The fact that a wrongful act is a breach of a contract between the wrongdoer and one person does not exempt him from the responsibility for it as a tort to a third person injured thereby." Osborne v. Morgan, 130 Mass. 102, 104, 39 Am. Rep. 437. See also Emmons v. Alvord, 177 Mass. 466, 470, 59 [69] N. E. 126. An individual may be *under no obligation to do a particular thing, and his failure to act creates no liability; but if he voluntarily attempts to act and do the particular thing, he comes under an implied obligation in respect to the manner in which he does it. A surgeon, for instance, may be under no obligation, in the absence of contract, to assume the treatment of an injured person, but if he does undertake such treatment, he assumes likewise the duty of reasonable care in such treatment. The owner of a lot is not bound to build a house or store thereon, but if he does so he comes under an implied obligation to use reasonable care in the work to prevent injury therefrom to others. Holmes, Common Law, p. 278. Even if the water company was under no contract obligations to construct waterworks in the city or to supply the citizens with water, yet, having undertaken to do so, it comes under an implied obligation to use reasonable care; and if, through its negligence, injury results to an individual, it becomes liable to him for the damages resulting therefrom, and the action to recover is for a tort, and not for breach of contract.

With reference to the contention that only the interest in the property acquired by the second water company was responsible for the damages caused by its negligence,—a contention which, if sustained, would result in giving priority to the fifty-thousand dollar mortgage,—the argument is that by the statute "mortgages of incorporate companies . . . shall not have power to exempt the property or earnings of such incorporations . . . for torts committed by such incorporation;" that the torts were committed by the second water company; that its purchase was of the property of the first company, subject to the fifty-thousand dollar mortgage, and therefore over that property thus encumbered, and that only, were the judgments given priority. There is, doubtless, force in this contention. But this is not a penal statute, to be construed strictly, but remedial in its nature, and to be construed liberally, to carry into effect the intention of the legislature and provide the adequate remedy which it intended. *The [70] obvious purpose was to make the corporate property situate in the state security against torts committed by its owner, and it would materially impair, if not wholly destroy, the statute, and thus set at naught that purpose, if the corporation constructing the plant could place a mortgage thereon for its entire value, and then, by sale, to a new corporation, enable the purchaser to use that property discharged of all substantial responsibility. In reference to a kindred question arising under the same statute, the supreme court of North Carolina said in Wilmington & W. R. Co. v. Burnett, 123 N. C. 210, 214, 31 S. E. 602, that under such construction "this statute would be a false light held out to such claimants to induce them to furnish material and labor,—thinking they had a security, when in fact they had none."

It is more reasonable to hold that the statute imposes upon the investment made by a corporate company in its plant a responsibility for torts committed by it or any subsequent corporate owner, and that that responsibility cannot be avoided by any mortgage or other encumbrance voluntarily placed upon the property. Security to the individual citizen is to go hand in hand with the franchise and privilege granted by the state. We see no other question requiring notice, and the decree of the Circuit Court is affirmed.

Mr. Justice White, Mr. Justice Peckham, and Mr. Justice McKenna dissented.

---

*C. E. HOWARD, Appt., [71]

v.

E. B. PERRIN.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 71-75.)

1. Evidence—documentary—public records.—A certified copy of the records of the General Land Office, including the certificate of local land officers that, on the records of their office, there were no homestead, pre-emption, or other valid claims to certain lands within the place limits of the grant to the Atlantic & Pacific Railroad Company, made by the act of July 27, 1866 (14 Stat. at L. 292, chap. 278), and that the land had not been returned or denominated as swamp or mineral land,—is competent evidence, under U. S. Rev. Stat. § 891, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 672, on the question of the title of one claiming as grantee from the railroad company.

2. Public lands—railroad land grants—selection or approval.— The title to land within the place limits of the grant to the Atlantic & Pacific Railroad Company, made by the act of July 27, 1866 (14 Stat. at L. 292, chap. 278), passed on the completion of the road, without any selection or approval by the Secretary of the Interior, unless the land was within the excepted classes.

3. Limitation of actions—adverse possession.—The two years limitation prescribed by Ariz. Rev. Stat. 1887, ¶ 2301, reenacted as Ariz. Rev. Stat. 1901, ¶ 2941, for suits to recover real property from one claiming by possession only, in which defendant is not required to show title or color of title as against plaintiff who shows no better right, is not applicable to an action by one claiming the title as grantee of the railroad company to land within the place limits of the grant made by the act of July 27, 1866 (14 Stat. at L. 292, chap. 278), to the Atlantic & Pacific Railroad Company.

4. Waters—appropriation—percolating waters.—Percolating water, oozing through the soil beneath the surface in an undefined and unknown channel, is not within the provisions of Ariz. Rev. Stat. 1887, ¶¶ 3199, § 1, 3201, § 3, for the appropriation of water from rivers, creeks, or streams of running water.

[No. 110.]

Submitted December 6, 1905. Decided January 2, 1906.

APPEAL from the Supreme Court of the Territory of Arizona to review a judgment affirming a judgment of the District Court of Coconino County, in that territory, in favor of plaintiff in an action to recover possession of real property. Affirmed.

See same case below (Ariz.), 76 Pac. 460.

Statement by Mr. Justice Brewer:

This action was commenced on July 13, 1898, in the district court of Coconino county, Arizona, to recover possession of a quarter section of land, together with damages for its detention. The defendant, in addition to the denials in his answer of plaintiff's title, filed a cross complaint, praying a decree in his favor on account of certain alleged water rights. A trial resulted in a judgment for plaintiff, which was affirmed by the supreme court of the territory, to review which judgment this appeal was taken. A statement of facts was prepared by the supreme court, which statement was in substance that the land was within the place limits and a part of the land granted to the Atlantic & Pacific Railroad Company by act of Congress, approved July 27, 1866 (14 Stat. at L. 292, chap. 278); that the grant was accepted by the company, a map of definite location duly filed *and approved, and the railroad completed [72] and accepted in the year 1884; that in April, 1894, the lands along this part of the road were surveyed and this tract found to be the northwest ¼ of section 15, township 25 north, range 3 west, of Gila and Salt river meridian; that the survey was accepted and approved by the Surveyor General, and also by the Commissioner of the General Land Office; that on June 27, 1896, this tract, together with others, was duly and regularly selected by the railroad company as a portion of the lands to which it was entitled under the act of Congress; that on July 27, 1896, the filing of the list of such selections was allowed by the register and receiver of the United States land office at Prescott, Arizona, by them approved, the land certified to be public lands of the United States within the place limits of the grant, and free from all other claims; that thereupon such list so certified was forwarded to the Land Department at Washington, and has since remained on file in that office; that the cost of the survey and all fees allowed by law had been paid; that the land is nonmineral in character, neither swamp land nor claimed as such, nor within any reservation, and that there is no valid claim against it on file or of record in the land office of the district in which it is situated; and that on January 13, 1897, the railroad company conveyed the land to the plaintiff. The statement of fact further shows that the only water upon the land is percolating water, oozing through the soil beneath the surface, in an undefined and unknown channel; that in 1889 the defendant's grantor entered upon the land, then unoccupied and unsurveyed, sank a well, and by running tunnels therefrom collected water in an arroyo, and conveyed the same by pipes to troughs and a reservoir for watering stock; that in 1892 the defendant's grantor conveyed the NOTE.—On land grants to railroads—see note to Kansas P. R. Co. v. Atchison, T. & S. F. R. Co. 28 L. ed. U. S. 794.

On rights in subterranean waters—see note to Southern P. R. Co. v. Dufour, 19 L.R.A. 92.

On correlative rights in percolating waters—see note to Katz v. Walkinshaw, 64 L.R.A. 236.

land to him by quitclaim deed, and that on July 16, 1895, he posted on the dwelling house on the premises a notice in accordance with the territorial act of 1886 (Arizona Laws, 1893, p. 135), that he had appropriated all the water in a certain defined underground channel, and recorded a copy of such notice in the public records;
[73] that the *defendant and his grantor had been in the exclusive, open, and notorious possession, with the knowledge of plaintiff, of the land, improvements, and water ever since the year 1889, claiming by right of possession only; that they had never diverted any water from the land, or used, or caused the same to be used, elsewhere by any person.

Mr. Everett E. Ellinwood submitted the cause for appellant:

It was not the intention of Congress to admit incompetent evidence under guise of a certificate.

United States v. Jones, 8 Pet. 395, 8 L. ed. 986; United States v. Forsythe, 6 McLean, 584, Fed. Cas. No. 15,133; United States v. Buford, 3 Pet. 12, 7 L. ed. 585; Hoyt v. United States, 10 How. 109, 13 L. ed. 348; Bruce v. United States, 17 How. 437, 15 L. ed. 129; United States v. Case, 49 Fed. 270.

The burden was on the plaintiff to show, not only that the land was within the general limits of the grant, but also that it was not a portion of lands excepted from the grant.

Corinne Mill Canal & Stock Co. v. Johnson, 156 U. S. 574, 39 L. ed. 537, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 409.

Whether the Atlantic & Pacific Railroad Company was entitled to the land in question—that is, whether it was of the character of lands granted—is a question that can only be determined by the Land Department.

Steel v. St. Louis Smelting & Ref. Co. 106 U. S. 450, 27 L. ed. 227, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 389; Heath v. Wallace, 138 U. S. 573, 34 L. ed. 1063, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 380; Cosmos Exploration Co. v. Gray Eagle Oil Co. 190 U. S. 301, 47 L. ed. 1064, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 692.

It in no way appears in the record that the Secretary of the Interior, or the Commissioner of the General Land Office has ever approved the selection, or decided that the lands were of the character granted, or come to any conclusion in regard to it.

The fact that the railroad company duly listed said lands, and that the register and receiver allowed and approved the filing thereof, and certified the same to the Commissioner of the General Land Office, cannot give appellee equitable title.

Barden v. Northern P. R. Co. 154 U. S. 288, 38 L. ed. 992, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1030.

The courts will take judicial notice of the rules and regulations made by that department.

Caha v. United States, 152 U. S. 211, 38 L. ed. 415, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 513.

The words "suits to recover possession" have a known legal meaning, and it must be assumed that the expression is used in its legal sense.

Hamilton v. Rathbone, 175 U. S. 421, 44 L. ed. 222, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 155; Gardner v. Collins, 2 Pet. 93, 7 L. ed. 359.

The supreme court of California, in Katz v. Walkinshaw, 141 Cal. 116, 64 L.R.A. 236, 99 Am. St. Rep. 35, 70 Pac. 663, 74 Pac. 766, laid down the doctrine that, since the common-law rule that an owner of land was the absolute owner of percolating waters beneath the surface of his land could not be equitably applied to the state of California by reason of its peculiar physical conditions, such rule was not adopted in such state as a part of the English common law.

The natural and physical conditions of the territory of Arizona, and the necessities of its people, being distinctly and in every particular similar to those of California, of which the court will undoubtedly take judicial notice, it follows that the reasoning of the court in the case of Katz v. Walkinshaw may be applied with almost binding force to the facts of the case at bar.

Mr. Edward M. Doe submitted the cause for appellee.

Mr. Justice Brewer delivered the opinion of the court:

The statement of facts discloses a title in the plaintiff (now appellee) sufficient to sustain the judgment for the recovery of possession, although no patent had been issued. Deseret Salt Co. v. Tarpey, 142 U. S. 241, 35 L. ed. 999, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 158.

The certified copy of the records and papers in the General Land Office was competent evidence. Rev. Stat. § 891, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 672. This section determines the question of competency, but not of materiality. Some of the letters, between the officials of the railroad company may not have been material, but there was nothing in them prejudicial. The certificate of the local land officers was competent to show that on the records of their office were no homestead, pre-emption, or other valid claims, and that the land had not been returned or denominated as swamp or mineral land. It is true there was no positive evidence that there were no minerals in the land, and, of course, nothing to show affirmatively that a mine might not be discovered prior to the issue of the patent, but the same could have been said of the showing in Deseret Salt Co. v. Tarpey, 142 U. S. 241, 35 L. ed. 999, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 158. While the question of mineral was not discussed at that time, and was first fully considered in Barden v. Northern P. R. Co. 154 U. S. 288, 38 L. ed. 992, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1030, it appears from the opinion of the majority in the latter case that there [74] was no intention to disturb the former *ruling. Neither is there anything in Corinne Mill, Canal, & Stock Co. v. Johnson, 156 U. S. 574, 39 L. ed. 537, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 409, to the contrary. In that case a judgment of the supreme court of Utah against a grantee of the railroad company was affirmed, but it was affirmed on the ground that the record did not purport to contain all the evidence, and, under those circumstances, we could not assume that there was not evidence to fully sustain the judgment of the territorial court, or that it was not in fact based upon an adjudication by the Land Department of the presence of mineral.

It must also be noticed that this land was within the place limits of the Atlantic & Pacific Company, and that, therefore, on the completion of the road, and without any selection or approval thereof by the Secretary of the Interior, the title passed unless the tract was within the excepted classes, and there was no testimony tending to show that it was. On the contrary, the testimony pointed in the other direction.

It is further claimed by appellant that he was protected by a statute of limitations of the territory, paragraph 2301, Arizona Rev. Stat. 1887, re-enacted as ¶ 2941, Arizona Rev. Stat. 1901, which reads:

"(2941) Sec. 7. In all cases when the party in possession claims real property by right of possession only, suits to recover the possession from him shall be brought in two years after the right of action accrues, and not afterwards, and in such case the defendant is not required to show title or color of title from and under the sovereignty of the soil, as provided in the preceding section, as against the plaintiff who shows no better right."

But this applies only in cases of mere possessory rights, and is without force after the passing of the full legal or equitable title from the government. Such was the construction placed on the statute by the supreme court of Arizona, and is undoubtedly correct. The language is clear. The claim of the defendant is a "right of possession only," and the limitation applies solely against a "plaintiff who shows no better right." To hold that the section [75] gives to a mere occupation of public *land a title by prescription against one subsequently acquired from the United States would limit the full control of the government over its landed property, and qualify or destroy the effect of its patent or grant. Toltec Ranch Co. v. Cook, 191 U. S. 532, 48 L. ed. 291, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 166, does not conflict with this, for there a possession sufficient for the running of the statute of limitations was held after the full equitable title had passed from the government; and when such title has passed the land comes under the dominion of the state, and is subject to its laws. But in this case the possession had not been long enough to create under the Arizona laws a defense to a title, legal or equitable; and the sole reliance was upon this section, which only applies to contests between possessory rights.

The remaining question arises under the cross complaint of the appellant, who claims a prior appropriation of all the water flowing in a subterranean stream which had been reached by digging a well, relying on these provisions of the Arizona Revised Statutes of 1887:

"(3199) Sec. 1. All rivers, creeks, and streams of running water in the territory of Arizona are hereby declared public, and applicable to the purposes of irrigation and mining, as hereinafter provided."

"(3201) Sec. 3. All the inhabitants of this territory, who own or possess arable and irrigable lands, shall have the right to construct public or private acequias, and obtain the necessary water for the same from any convenient river, creek, or stream of running water."

We need not stop to inquire whether these sections apply to subterranean streams, because the finding of fact, which is sustained by the testimony, is "that the only water upon said land is percolating water, oozing through the soil beneath the surface in an undefined and unknown channel." Of course this excludes the idea of a "river, creek, or stream of running water."

We see no error in the record, and the judgment of the Supreme Court of Arizona is affirmed.

---

*FRED H. KOLZE, Administrator, etc., et al., Appts. [76]

v.

CHARLOTTE E. HOADLEY.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 76–86.)

Courts—jurisdiction of Federal circuit court—suits by assignees.—The relief sought by way of foreclosure of certain trust

---

NOTE.—As to diverse citizenship as ground of Federal jurisdiction—see notes to Shipp v. Williams, 10 C. C. A. 247; Mason v. Dullagham, deeds stamps the suit as one to recover the contents of a chose in action, which can only be maintained in the Federal circuit court under the act of August 13, 1888 (25 Stat. at L. 434, chap. 866, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 508), § 1, where the assignor could have sued in that court if no assignment had been made, although the bill also prays for a cancelation of a release of the trust deeds to the grantor, as in fraud of the rights of the complainant, who held the deeds and the notes secured thereby as collateral security for a loan to the trustee.

[No. 91.]

Submitted December 5, 1905. Decided January 2, 1906.

APPEAL from the Circuit Court of the United States for the Northern District of Illinois to review a decree of foreclosure. Reversed and remanded with instructions to dismiss the bill for want of jurisdiction.

Statement by Mr. Justice Brown:

This was an appeal from a decree of the circuit court in favor of the plaintiff, Charlotte E. Hoadley, a citizen of Massachusetts, against Abraham L. Day and other defendants, among whom were Fred H. Kolze, administrator of the estate of Friederich Kolze, deceased, Lina Kolze, his widow, Louisa Kolze, his daughter, and Charles E. Stade, trustee, all citizens of Illinois, foreclosing three trust deeds given [77] by Day to secure *promissory notes in the aggregate amount of $5,400. The appeal was granted solely upon the question of jurisdiction.

The point involved requires a statement of facts at some length. They are substantially as follows:

Friederich Kolze sold and conveyed certain real estate to Day by warranty deed dated and acknowledged November 15, 1897, for a stated consideration of $45,000,—namely, $1,000 in cash and the remainder in notes secured by trust deeds. To secure such notes, Day executed three trust deeds to one Stade as trustee, conveying the real estate in question, which were dated November 17, and acknowledged and recorded November 24, 1897. Kolze thereupon intrusted the notes and trust deeds to Stade, a nephew, in whom he seemed to have great confidence, the notes being executed by Day to his own order, and by him indorsed in blank.

On February 17, 1898, Stade took the notes and trust deeds securing the same, and pledged them to Charlotte E. Hoadley as collateral security to his own notes, upon which Hoadley then advanced, or secured to be advanced, a large sum of money.

By deed dated and acknowledged November 23, 1897, but not delivered or recorded until June 30, 1898, Day reconveyed the premises to Kolze, and by deed of release, dated and acknowledged October 27, 1898, and recorded October 29, 1898, Stade, as trustee, fraudulently released said three trust deeds to Kolze, reciting a consideration of $1 and other valuable considerations, and further reciting that the notes secured thereby had been canceled.

By deed dated October 29, 1898, Kolze, now deceased, and the appellant Lina Kolze, his wife, conveyed said premises to Louisa Kolze, their daughter, upon an expressed consideration of $12,000, although the grantee was not a bona fide purchaser, and said conveyance was made to her to hold for the benefit of the family.

For the ostensible purpose of securing the payment of the purchase money, said Louisa Kolze executed a trust deed to *secure her promissory note of $10,000, to [78] Percy V. Castle, as trustee. This deed was dated October 27, 1898, acknowledged October 28, 1898, and recorded October 29, 1898, the appellant Fred H. Kolze, as administrator of the estate of his father, being the owner of said notes and trust deeds, subject, as was alleged, to the rights of the plaintiff, Hoadley.

Subsequently, on or about April 21, 1899, the notes and trust deeds of Day, upon default by Stade in the payment of his note, were sold in accordance with the terms of the collateral note, and were bought in by, and became the property of, the appellee, Hoadley.

The bill prayed that the release deed executed by Stade to Friederich Kolze be declared fraudulent and void as against the notes and trust deeds executed by Day and now owned by the plaintiff; that the rights of all the defendants be declared subject to those of the plaintiff under the notes and deeds held by her; that a receiver be appointed and an account had, and the defendants be decreed to pay whatever was due under the notes and trust deeds, and, in default thereof, that the premises be sold and the defendants be held liable for any deficiency upon such sale, and that they all be foreclosed of their right of redemption.

27 C. C. A. 296; Seddon v. Virginia, T. & C. Steel & I. Co. 1 L.R.A. 108; Myers v. Murray, N. & Co. 11 L.R.A. 216; Roberts v. Lewis, 36 L. ed. U. S. 579; Emory v. Greenough, 1 L. ed. U. S. 640; Strawbridge v. Curtiss, 2 L. ed. U. S. 435; and M'Donald v. Smalley, 7 L. ed. U. S. 287.

On Federal jurisdiction of suits by assignee of chose in action—see notes to Goldsmith v. Holmes, 1 L.R.A. 817; Republic Iron Min. Co. v. Jones, 2 L.R.A. 746; and American Freehold Land & Mortg. Co. v. Thomas, 12 L. R. A. 681.

The defendants moved to dismiss the amended bill for want of a proper allegation of diversity of citizenship, which was overruled; and thereupon defendants interposed a plea to the jurisdiction upon the ground that the defendants were all citizens of the state of Illinois; that the suit was brought by plaintiff as the assignee of one William P. Smith, to whom the notes had been hypothecated by Stade to secure his (Stade's) note, and also to secure Smith for the faithful performance by Stade of a certain contract of employment; that upon the failure of Stade to pay his note and carry out his contract, said mortgage notes and trust deeds signed by Day were sold on or about April 21, 1899, and were bought in by and became the property of the plaintiff; that Stade and Smith, "the successive assignors" of the appellee, were [79] citizens of the *state of Illinois, the same state of which Day, the maker of the notes, was also a resident, and that by reason of the fact that said suit could not have been prosecuted in a Federal court if no transfer or assignment had been made, the circuit court had no jurisdiction of the case.

This plea was held to be insufficient, and the defendants, failing to answer, were defaulted, and a decree thereafter entered to the effect that Stade, as trustee, had fraudulently released the trust deeds; that the trust deeds were valid as liens upon the premises; that the rights of Louisa Kolze, subsequent grantee under the warranty deed, as well as the deed of Kolze, were subject and subsequent to the rights of the plaintiff as the owner of the notes and deeds signed by Day; that the property be sold and the defendants foreclosed of their equity of redemption.

Thereupon defendants appealed to this court solely upon the question of jurisdiction.

Mr. John T. Richards submitted the cause for appellants:

The circuit court shall have no jurisdiction over suits for the recovery of the contents of promissory notes or other choses in action brought in favor of assignees or transferees, except over —(1) suits upon foreign bills of exchange; (2) suits that might have been prosecuted in such court to recover the said contents if no assignment or transfer had been made; (3) suits upon choses in action payable to bearer and made by a corporation.

Newgass v. New Orleans, 33 Fed. 196; 1 Foster, Fed. Pr. 3d ed. p. 82; New Orleans v. Quinlan, 173 U. S. 191, 43 L. ed. 664, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 329.

The phrase "suits to recover the contents of a chose in action" includes suits to foreclose mortgages.

Black, Mortg. p. 567, 1 Foster, Fed. Pr. p. 83.

Hence, when the mortgagor and mortgagee are citizens of same state, an assignee of the mortgagee, though a citizen of another state, cannot maintain a bill for foreclosure in the Federal courts.

Black, Mortg. p. 567; Sheldon v. Sill, 8 How. 441, 12 L. ed. 1147; Shoecraft v. Bloxham, 124 U. S. 730, 31 L. ed. 574, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 686; Blacklock v. Small, 127 U. S. 96, 32 L. ed. 70, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1096; Hill v. Winne, 1 Biss. 275, Fed. Cas. No. 6,503.

Where Federal jurisdiction is dependent upon the citizenship of the plaintiff's assignor at the time of the commencement of the suit, the citizenship of the latter must affirmatively appear somewhere in the record.

Robertson v. Cease, 97 U. S. 649, 24 L. ed. 1059; Anderson v. Watt, 138 U. S. 702, 34 L. ed. 1081, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 449; North American Transp. & T. Co. v. Morrison, 178 U. S. 267, 44 L. ed. 1064, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 869.

The defect is ground for a motion to dismiss at any stage of the proceedings.

Florida C. & P. Co. v. Bell, 176 U. S. 327, 44 L. ed. 490, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 399; Blackburn v. Portland Gold Min. Co. 175 U. S. 574, 44 L. ed. 278, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 222; Municipal Invest. Co. v. Gardiner, 62 Fed. 954.

But the court should, of its own motion, dismiss the suit whenever it discovers the defect.

North American Transp. Co. v. Morrison, supra.

Dismissal may be ordered upon motion of the defendant, or by the court, of its own motion.

Wetmore v. Rymer, 169 U. S. 120, 42 L. ed. 684, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 293; Nashua & L. R. Corp. v. Boston & L. R. Corp. 136 U. S. 356, 374, 34 L. ed. 363, 368, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1004; Mexican C. R. Co. v. Pinkney, 149 U. S. 200, 37 L. ed. 702, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 859; Lake County v. Dudley, 173 U. S. 243, 43 L. ed. 684, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 398.

The duty to dismiss is peremptory whenever it is properly made to appear that the court has no jurisdiction.

Lake County v. Dudley, supra; Morris v. Gilmer, 129 U. S. 315, 325, 32 L. ed. 690, 694, 9 Sup. Ct. Rep. 289; Anderson v. Watt, 138 U. S. 694, 34 L. ed. 1078, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 449.

It is the duty of the Supreme Court, on appeal, to see that the jurisdiction of the circuit court has in no respect been imposed upon.

Morris v. Gilmer, 129 U. S. 315, 32 L. ed. 690, 9 Sup. Ct. Rep. 289; Nashua & L. R. Corp. v. Boston & L. R. Corp. 136 U. S. 356, 34 L. ed. 363, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1004.

Mr. Herman W. Stillman submitted the cause for appellee:

The purpose of the restriction as to suits by assignees was to prevent the making of assignments of choses in action for the purpose of giving jurisdiction to the Federal courts. In construing the statute in question, the courts will look to the spirit of the act, and will consider the real relation of the parties; and, if it appears from all the circumstances that the assignment could not have been colorable for the purpose of conferring jurisdiction, then, the reason of the restriction being gone, the jurisdiction of the United States courts will attach.

Holmes v. Goldsmith, 147 U. S. 150, 37 L. ed. 118, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 288; Farmington v. Pillsbury, 114 U. S. 138, 29 L. ed. 114, 5 Sup. Ct. Rep. 807; Chase v. Sheldon Roller-Mills Co. 56 Fed. 625.

The restriction against suits by assignees of promissory notes or choses in action in United States courts, unless such suit might have been prosecuted in such court to recover the said contents if no assignment or transfer had been made, has reference to diverse citizenship only. No disqualification of the assignor, other than want of diverse citizenship, will prevent suit by the assignee.

Chase v. Sheldon Roller-Mills Co. supra; Bowden v. Burnham, 8 C. C. A. 248, 19 U. S. App. 448, 59 Fed. 752.

The language of the act, above quoted, implies, in order that the denial of jurisdiction at the suit of an assignee shall apply, that, but for the assignment, a claim would exist on the part of the assignor against the original debtor. When a claim would not exist on the part of the assignor had no assignment been made, the reason of the act will be wanting, and jurisdiction will attach.

Holmes v. Goldsmith, supra; Wachusett Nat. Bank v. Sioux City Stove Works, 56 Fed. 321; Chase v. Sheldon Roller-Mills Co. supra.

Jurisdiction depends upon the status of the parties at the commencement of the suit.

Emsheimer v. New Orleans, 186 U. S. 33, 46 L. ed. 1042, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 770.

The circuit court of the United States has jurisdiction of a suit brought by the indorsee of a promissory note against his immediate indorser, whether a suit would lie by the indorser against the mortgagor or not, upon the ground that the indorsee does not claim through an assignment, but upon a new contract between himself and the indorser.

Young v. Bryan, 6 Wheat. 146, 5 L. ed. 228; Superior v. Ripley, 138 U. S. 93, 34 L. ed. 914, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 288.

If the presence of Day, an unnecessary party to the foreclosure, prevented the exercise of jurisdiction, which is not conceded, the impediment was removed by his dismissal.

Conolly v. Taylor, 2 Pet. 556, 7 L. ed. 518.

Under the circumstances of this case, the principal relief sought was the setting aside of the release deed. Having jurisdiction for that purpose, the court properly retained it for complete relief.

Ober v. Gallagher, 93 U. S. 199, 23 L. ed. 829; Deshler v. Dodge, 16 How. 622, 14 L. ed. 1084.

Mr. Justice Brown delivered the opinion of the court:

The sole question presented by the record in this case is whether this is a suit to recover the contents of a chose in action in favor of an assignee, which could not have been prosecuted if no assignment or transfer had been made.

By § 1 of the act of August 13, 1888 [25 Stat. at L. 434, chap. 866, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 508], it is provided that no circuit nor district court shall "have cognizance of any suit . . . to recover the contents of any promissory note or other chose in action in favor of any assignee, or of any subsequent holder, . . . unless such suit might have been prosecuted in such court to recover the said contents if no assignment or transfer had been made." This language is taken from the original judiciary act of 1789 [1 Stat. at L. 73, chap. 20, § 11, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 508], and has been in force, except for a few years, since the foundation of the government.

In construing this clause the decisions of this court have settled the following propositions:

1. That a suit to recover the contents of a promissory note or other chose in action is a suit to recover the amount due upon such note, or the amount claimed to be due upon an account, personal contract, or other chose in action. Sere v. Pitot, 6 Cranch, 332, 3 L. ed. 240; Deshler v. Dodge, 16 How. 622, 631, 14 L. ed. 1084, 1088; Bushnell v. Kennedy, 9 Wall. 387, 19 L. ed. 736; Shoecraft v. Bloxham, 124 U. S. 730, 31 L. ed. 574, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 686.

*In Corbin v. Black Hawk County, 105 U. S. 659, 26 L. ed. 1136, a suit to compel the specific performance of a contract was held to be within the statute, Mr. Justice Blatchford observing (page 665, L. ed. [83] 1138): "The contents of a contract, as a chose in action, in the sense of § 629 (U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 503), are the rights created by it in favor of a party in whose behalf stipulations are made in it which he has a right to enforce in a suit founded on the contract; and a suit to enforce such stipulations is a suit to recover such contents."

2. That a suit to foreclose a mortgage is within the inhibition of the act, and can only be maintained where the assignor was competent to file the bill. Sheldon v. Sill, 8 How. 441, 12 L. ed. 1147; Blacklock v. Small, 127 U. S. 96, 32 L. ed. 70, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1096.

3. That the bill or other pleading must contain an averment showing that the suit could have been maintained by the assignor if no assignment had been made. Turner v. Bank of North America, 4 Dall. 8, 1 L. ed. 718; Mollan v. Torrance, 9 Wheat. 537, 6 L. ed. 154; Bradley v. Rhines (Bradley v. Hunt) 8 Wall. 393, 19 L. ed. 467; Anderson v. Watt, 138 U. S. 694, 702, 34 L. ed. 1078, 1081, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 449; Robertson v. Cease, 97 U. S. 649, 24 L. ed. 1057; Brock v. Northwestern Fuel Co. 130 U. S. 341, 32 L. ed. 905, 9 Sup. Ct. Rep. 552.

4. That a suit may be maintained between the immediate parties to a promissory note as indorser and indorsee, provided the requisite diversity of citizenship appears as between them, or upon a new contract arising subsequently to the execution of the original, notwithstanding a suit could not have been maintained upon the original contract. In such case the original contract may be considered to ascertain the amount of the damages. Young v. Bryan, 6 Wheat. 146, 5 L. ed. 228; Bank of United States v. Moss, 6 How. 31, 12 L. ed. 331; Superior v. Ripley, 138 U. S. 93, 34 L. ed. 914, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 288; Mollan v. Torrance, 9 Wheat. 537, 6 L. ed. 154; Marine & River Phosphate Min. & Mfg. Co. v. Bradley. 105 U. S. 175, 26 L. ed. 1034.

This is primarily a suit to foreclose certain mortgages. Instead of setting up the mortgages, their maturity and nonpayment, and their assignment to plaintiff, leaving to the defendants to plead the release by Stade of October, 1898, as an extinguishment of the mortgages, she has chosen to set forth the entire facts, to attack the [84]release as fraudulent as against *her, and to insist that the original notes and trust deeds are valid in her hands, and to pray for a foreclosure of the same.

The gravamen of the suit and the object to be obtained are unaffected by the form of her bill. The suit is still, in substance, a suit to foreclose the trust deeds, and to remove the release as a cloud upon her title to them.

It may be that an action for fraud might have lain against the parties implicated, regardless of the citizenship of the parties from whom the plaintiff traced her title, or possibly a bill in equity to cancel the release deed of Stade and remove a cloud from the title. But where a bill is filed to foreclose a mortgage, and it appears by the bill itself that the mortgage has been fraudulently released to the mortgagor by a deed of which plaintiff had no notice, and the fraud is a mere incident, the bill is still one to recover the contents of a mortgage, within the meaning of the act, and will not lie in a Federal court unless the plaintiff's assignor might have maintained the bill if no assignment or transfer had been made. It would advantage the plaintiff nothing to obtain a cancelation of the release without also foreclosing the mortgage in the same or a subsequent suit, while a right to foreclose the mortgage could not be established without incidentally avoiding the release.

In this aspect of the case it would seem to me immaterial whether the plaintiff derived her title directly from Stade, to whom she had advanced money and afterwards purchased the notes and trust deeds as alleged in the bill, or through William P. Smith, who had obtained the notes and trust deeds from Stade, his debtor, since both Stade and Smith were citizens of the state of Illinois, and the inhibition of the statute would apply in either case.

The case of Blacklock v. Small, 127 U. S. 97, 32 L. ed. 70, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1096, is similar, and, we think, practically decisive of the one under consideration. A suit was brought in the circuit court for South Carolina by two daughters of John F. Blacklock, who were citizens of Georgia, against certain defendants, who were citizens of South Carolina. It seems that Blacklock had sold a house and lot in *Charleston to the defendant Small, who had[85] given back a bond and mortgage to secure a portion of the purchase money; that Blacklock subsequently assigned the bond to Alexander Robinson in trust, for his (Blacklock's) children; that Small pretended to pay the bond by making payment to Robinson in Confederate treasury notes; that upon receipt thereof, Robinson satisfied the mortgage and delivered up the bond to Small; that Robinson, in receiving such payment, violated his duty, and was guilty of a breach of trust; that Small, in attempting to pay the debt in illegal currency, with full notice of the trust, had not paid the debt; that the satisfaction of the mortgage was void; that its lien was still subsisting, and that Small was still liable for the amount due upon the bond. It was held that, as the suit was one against Small, founded upon contract, namely, his bond and mortgage in favor of plaintiffs, who claimed only under the assignment made by their father, John F. Blacklock, to the defendant Robinson, such suit would not lie, inasmuch as plaintiffs' assignor, John F. Blacklock, was a citizen of South Carolina and of the same state as Small. In answer to this it was insisted that the suit should not be considered as one founded upon the contract of Small, but as one for the delivery of the bond and mortgage by Small to the plaintiffs, founded on their wrongful detention, and that the foreclosure and sale of the premises prayed for was merely ancillary and incidental. The contention was held to be unsound, Mr. Justice Blatchford saying that the bill was clearly one for a decree for the amount of the bond and a sale of the mortgaged premises. In other words, the foreclosure and sale were treated as the main objects of the bill, and the breach of trust of Small as a mere incident. The cases of Deshler v. Dodge, 16 How. 622, 14 L. ed. 1084, and Bushnell v. Kennedy, 9 Wall. 387, 19 L. ed. 736, were cited and distinguished.

By analogy to Blacklock v. Small, we think the gravamen of this case must be treated as the foreclosure of the trust deeds in question, and the prayer for a cancelation of the release given by Stade to Friederich Kolze as a mere clearing of the way [86]*to a decree establishing the title of the plaintiff to the notes and trust deeds. As the plaintiff is thus compelled to trace her title through Stade or Smith, who are both citizens of Illinois, and neither of whom could have prosecuted this suit, she is affected by the same incompetency.

The case of Holmes v. Goldsmith, 147 U. S. 150, 37 L. ed. 118, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 288, on which the plaintiff relies, is not in point. That was an action by a nonresident against the maker of a note, who had signed it entirely for the benefit of the payee, who was really the party for whose use it was made. The maker and payee were citizens of the same state. The plaintiff, a bona fide holder, had paid full value for it to the payee, who had indorsed it to him. It was held the court had jurisdiction; that evidence showing the real relation of the parties was admissible, and that the jurisdiction of the circuit court "was properly put by the court below upon the proposition that the true meaning of the restriction in question was not disturbed by permitting the plaintiffs to show that, notwithstanding the terms of the note, the payee was really a maker or original promisor, and did not, by his indorsement, assign or transfer any right of action held by him against the accommodation makers."

The decree of the Circuit Court is therefore reversed, and the case remanded to that court, with instructions to dismiss the bill.

---

*GEORGE O. CAMPBELL, Benjamin F. Campbell, Corlista E. Jess, and Alonzo E. Campbell, Heirs-at-Law of Cornelia E. Campbell, Deceased, Plffs. in Err., [87]

v.

STATE OF CALIFORNIA.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 87–95.)

1. Error to state court—questions reviewable—statutory construction.—The Federal Supreme Court cannot, independently of the Federal questions involved, reverse a judgment of the highest court of a state on the ground that a state statute enacted after the judgment under review was rendered had the effect of depriving the state of the power to enforce such judgment.

2. Error to state court—Federal question—moot case.—The enactment by a state of a new inheritance tax law after a decision of the highest court of the state sustaining the previous legislation on that subject as against the contention that it denied the equal protection of the laws guaranteed by U. S. Const., 14th Amend., does not convert such Federal question into a moot question, so as to preclude a review in the Su-

---

NOTE.—As to taxes on succession and collateral inheritances—see notes to Re Howe, 2 L.R.A. 825; Wallace v. Myers, 4 L.R.A. 171; Com. v. Ferguson, 10 L.R.A. 240; Re Romaine, 12 L.R.A. 401; and Magoun v. Illinois Trust & Sav. Bank, 42 L. ed. U. S. 1037.

Error to state courts in cases presenting merely abstract or moot questions.

The question relied upon to sustain a writ of error from the Supreme Court of the United States to a state court must not be a merely abstract or moot one. Kimball v. Kimball, 174 U. S. 158, 43 L. ed. 932, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 639; Little v. Bowers, 134 U. S. 547, 33 L. ed. 1016, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 620.

Thus, where the question involved was the impairment of the obligation of a contract by certain assessments for taxation, and it appeared that the taxes had been paid under a compromise agreement, the Supreme Court of the United States refused to entertain jurisdiction. Little v. Bowers, supra.

Compliance by a foreign corporation with a judgment of the highest state court ousting it from doing business in the state until it should satisfy the requirements which the state laws exact of foreign corporations precludes any review of such judgment in the Federal Supreme Court, although, in another similar suit pending in the state courts, such judgment is pleaded as decisive of all or some of the issues. American Book Co. v. Kansas, preme Court of the United States, unless it is obvious that such new legislation relieved the plaintiffs in error from their obligations under the earlier law.

3. Constitutional law—equal protection of the laws—validity of state inheritance tax.—Brothers and sisters of a decedent may be subjected to the burden of the inheritance tax imposed by Cal. Stat. 1893, p. 193, as amended by Cal. Stat. 1899, p. 10, without denying them the equal protection of the laws guaranteed by U. S. Const., 14th Amend., although such legislation does not impose any tax on such strangers to the blood as the wife or widow of a son or the husband of a daughter of the decedent.

[No. 70.]

Argued November 27, 28, 1905. Decided January 2, 1906.

IN ERROR to the Supreme Court of the State of California to review a decree affirming an order of the Superior Court of the City and County of San Francisco, in that state, for the payment of an inheritance tax by brothers and sisters of a decedent. Affirmed.

See same case below, 143 Cal. 627, 77 Pac. 674.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Mr. Charles H. Garoutte argued the cause, and, with Messrs. William N. Goodwin and Curtis H. Lindley, filed a brief for plaintiffs in error:

The basis of classification is blood relationship.

Don Passos, Inheritance Tax Law, p. 5; Minot v. Winthrop, 162 Mass. 113, 26 L.R.A. 259, 38 N. E. 512.

---

193 U. S. 49, 48 L. ed. 613, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 397.

The assertion that a state statute violates the Federal Constitution presents but a moot question, which confers no jurisdiction on the Supreme Court of the United States to review a judgment of a state court, where, in the case presented, the statute is not so applied as to deny a right claimed under such Constitution. Castillo v. McConnico, 168 U. S. 674, 42 L. ed. 622, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 229.

A decision by a state court, which denied the validity of an order for the issue of bonds by an irrigation district, rendered on a petition in a proceeding substantially ex parte before issue of the bonds, although a resident of the district appeared in answer and claimed a right under the Federal Constitution, will not sustain a writ of error from the United States Supreme Court, since the adjudication is simply of the right to make a contract, which is a purely moot question, unless the board shall see fit to exercise such right, the proceeding being substantially but one to secure evidence. Tregea v. Modesto Irrig. District, 164 U. S. 179, 41 L. ed. 395, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 52.

A decision by a state court, which denied the petition of a woman, claiming to be the decedent's widow, for revocation of letters of administration to others and for her own appointment as administratrix on the ground that a divorce in another state from her former husband was void, involves no Federal question which will warrant a review in the Supreme Court of the United States, where the possibility of issuing any letters of administration has been superseded by the probate of a subsequently discovered will. Kimball v. Kimball, 174 U. S. 158, 43 L. ed. 932, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 639.

A writ of error to review the judgment of a state court in an action for usurpation of public office, instituted on the relation of persons superseded therein by a legislative act challenged as unconstitutional, will be dismissed where the terms of office of all the parties to the suit, both relators and defendants, have expired. Tennessee v. Condon, 189 U. S. 64, 47 L. ed. 709, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 579.

A writ of error to review a judgment of a state court refusing to cancel the revocation of a permit to do business in the state, granted renewable annually to a foreign insurance company, must be dismissed where the permit itself has become of no effect by the lapse of one year since it was granted. Security Mut. L. Ins. Co. v. Prewitt, 202 U. S. 246, post, —, 26 Sup. Ct. Rep. 619.

And see note to Apex Transp. Co. v. Garbade, 62 L.R.A. 513, on What adjudications of state courts can be brought up for review in the Supreme Court of the United States by writ of error to those courts.

But the fact that there are no resident mortgagees in a particular case does not make the question of discrimination between nonresident and resident mortgagees by a state statute a merely abstract or moot question, so as to preclude a decision against the validity of the statute on writ of error to a state court, if such statute makes a discrimination against nonresident mortgagees with respect to sharing in the distribution of the assets of an insolvent foreign corporation. Sully v. American Nat. Bank, 178 U. S. 289, 44 L. ed. 1072, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 935.

In considering whether a state statute is repugnant to congressional legislation, the Supreme Court of the United States, on writ of error to a state court, can only consider the state statute in connection with the case before it. It cannot inquire whether, in another case arising upon a different state of facts, the statute may not produce results in conflict with the act of Congress, which the court will be bound to revise and correct. Austin v. Boston, 7 Wall. 694, 19 L. ed. 224.

And see note to State ex rel. Hill v. Dockery, 63 L.R.A. 571, on What questions the Federal Supreme Court will consider in reviewing the judgments of state courts.

Other notes discussing writs of error to state courts are: How and when questions must be raised and decided in a state court in order to make a case for a writ of error from the Supreme Court of the United States,—Mutual L. Ins. Co. v. McGrew, 63 L.R.A. 33; What the record must show respecting the Federal question and its decision,—Hooker v. Los Angeles, 63 L.R.A. 471; What is the record for this purpose,—Home for Incurables v. New York, 63 L.R.A. 329; The practice and procedure governing the transfer of causes to the Federal Supreme Court on writ of error or appeal,—Wedding v. Meyler, 66 L.R.A. 833.

It is the presence and recognition of this relationship with its reciprocal demands that obviates the necessity in the legislature of making one great class of all people. And it is for this reason that all persons do not stand alike before the law, and, therefore, constitutional discriminations may be made by dividing them into classes.

Black v. State, 113 Wis. 205, 90 Am. St. Rep. 853, 89 N. W. 522; Magoun v. Illinois Trust & Sav. Bank, 170 U. S. 283–296, 42 L. ed. 1037–1042, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 594.

In many instances the courts may not be able judicially to notice or declare that the classification made is purely arbitrary, and may, therefore, regard the question as a proper one for legislative consideration and determination, and, hence, may not interpose to declare that the legislative discretion has been abused. If, however, the legislature has singled out any class of persons or corporations, and imposed upon them restrictions or penalties from which others are exempt, and there is no reason why the former should be subject to the restriction and the latter not, the statute must be pronounced unconstitutional.

Gulf, C. & S. F. R. Co. v. Ellis, 165 U. S. 150, 41 L. ed. 666, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 255; Re Eight Hour Law, 21 Colo. 29, 39 Pac. 328; Braceville Coal Co. v. People, 147 Ill. 66, 22 L.R.A. 340, 37 Am. St. Rep. 206, 35 N. E. 62; Chicago, St. L. & N. O. R. Co. v. Moss, 60 Miss. 641; State v. Loomis, 115 Mo. 307, 21 L.R.A. 789, 22 S. W. 350; Magoun v. Illinois Trust & Sav. Bank, supra.

This court always applies the rule of reasonable ground.

Gulf, C. & S. F. R. Co. v. Ellis, 165 U. S. 150–157, 41 L. ed. 666–669, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 225; Connolly v. Union Sewer Piper Co. 184 U. S. 540–563, 46 L. ed. 679–691, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 431; Cotting v. Kansas City Stock Yards Co. (Cotting v. Godard) 183 U. S. 79, 46 L. ed. 92, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 30; American Sugar Ref. Co. v. Louisiana, 179 U. S. 89, 92–95, 45 L. ed. 102–105, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 43; Atchison, T. & S. F. R. Co. v. Matthews, 174 U. S. 96–101, 43 L. ed. 909–911, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 609; Orient Ins. Co. v. Daggs, 172 U. S. 557–562, 43 L. ed. 552–554, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 281; Missouri, K & T. R. Co. v. May, 194 U. S. 267, 48 L. ed. 971, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 638.

Especially is this a case where presumptions in favor of the validity of legislative action will not be indulged in to support the constitutionality of the act here involved. These presumptions may be invoked to support the constitutionality of some state legislation, but that principle of law cannot apply here. Of course, such a presumption cannot be invoked in all cases, for, if it could, there would be no constitutional limitation upon legislatures in making classifications.

Gulf, C. & S. F. R. Co. v. Ellis, 165 U. S. 150–154, 41 L. ed. 666–668, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 255; Magoun v. Illinois Trust & Sav. Bank, 170 U. S. 283, 42 L. ed. 1037, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 594.

No legislature, by adroit legislative classifications, should be allowed to classify persons out of the equal protection of the law. It is the highest duty of this court to condemn all attempts of that kind.

Smyth v. Ames, 169 U. S. 466–527, 42 L. ed. 819–842, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 418; Yick Wo v. Hopkins, 118 U. S. 366–369, 30 L. ed. 225, 226, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1064.

The principle of equality in placing the burdens of taxation upon the people is just as applicable here as if this were a law creating a direct property tax.

Railroad Tax Cases, 8 Sawy. 238, 13 Fed. 733.

Clear and hostile discriminations against particular persons and classes, especially such as are of an unusual character, unknown to the practice of our governments, might be obnoxious to the constitutional prohibition.

Bell's Gap R. Co. v. Pennsylvania, 134 U. S. 232–237, 33 L. ed. 892–895, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 33.

Inheritance laws must not discriminate between persons.

Magoun v. Illinois Trust & Sav. Bank, 170 U. S. 292, 42 L. ed. 1042, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 594.

Tested by the law of the country, the act of 1893, as amended in 1899, is a taxation act.

United States v. Perkins, 163 U. S. 625, 41 L. ed. 287, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1073; Magoun v. Illinois Trust & Sav. Bank, 170 U. S. 301, 42 L. ed. 1045, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 594; Plummer v. Colcr, 178 U. S. 115, 44 L. ed. 998, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 829; Dos Passos, Inheritance Tax Law, pp. 5, 37; Re Wilmerding, 117 Cal. 281, 49 Pac. 181; Re Campbell, 143 Cal. 627, 77 Pac. 674; Eyre v. Jacob, 14 Gratt. 427, 73 Am. Dec. 367; State v. Hamlin, 86 Me. 495, 25 L.R.A. 632, 41 Am. St. Rep. 569, 30 Atl. 76.

There is no vested right in the state to this tax at the death of decedent.

Dos Passos, Inheritance Tax Law, p. 423; Blackwell, Tax Titles, § 1047; 1 Desty, Taxn. p. 9; Flanigan v. Sierra County, 196 U. S. 553, 49 L. ed. 597, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 314; Re McPherson, 104 N. Y. 321, 58 Am. Rep. 502, 10 N. E. 685; Re Westurn, 152 N. Y. 99, 46 N. E. 315; Re Arnett, 49 Hun, 599, 2 N. Y. Supp. 428; Pacific Mail S. S. Co. v. Joliffe, 2 Wall. 450, 17 L. ed. 805.

The remedy provided by the act of 1893 for the collection of the tax is repealed, and the tax cannot be collected.

Re Stanford, 126 Cal. 112, 45 L.R.A. 788, 58 Pac. 462; Napa State Hospital v. Flaherty, 134 Cal. 317, 66 Pac. 322; Sonora v. Curtin, 137 Cal. 589, 70 Pac. 674; Gorley v. Sewell, 77 Ind. 318; Hampton v. Com. 19 Pa. 329; Santa Monica v. Guidinger, 137 Cal. 659, 70 Pac. 732.

Mr. U. S. Webb argued the cause, and, with Messrs. E. B. Power, Lewis F. Byington, and I. Harris, filed a brief for defendant in error:

The rule of constitutional classification adopted by the supreme court of the state of California and applied to this case is the correct rule, and is supported by the decisions of this court.

Re Campbell, 143 Cal. 623, 77 Pac. 674; Deyoe v. Superior Court, 140 Cal. 476, 98 Am. St. Rep. 73, 74 Pac. 28; Magoun v. Illinois Trust & Sav. Bank, 170 U. S. 283, 42 L. ed. 1037, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 594; Gulf, C. & S. F. R. Co. v. Ellis, 165 U. S. 150, 41 L. ed. 666, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 255; Orient Ins. Co. v. Daggs, 172 U. S. 557, 43 L. ed. 552, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 281; People v. Central P. R. Co. 105 Cal. 576, 38 Pac. 905; Ex parte Jentzsch, 112 Cal. 469, 32 L.R.A. 664, 44 Pac. 803; Re Wilmerding, 117 Cal. 281, 49 Pac. 181.

No right guaranteed by the 14th Amendment is invaded by the act in question.

Magoun v. Illinois Trust & Sav. Bank, Gulf, C. & S. F. R. Co. v. Ellis, and Orient Ins. Co. v. Daggs, supra.

The following cases uphold as constitutional inheritance tax laws making discriminations between relatives:

United States v. Perkins, 163 U. S. 625, 41 L. ed. 287, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1073; State v. Dalrymple, 70 Md. 294, 3 L.R.A. 372, 17 Atl. 82; Re Merriam, 141 N. Y. 479, 36 N. E. 505; State v. Hamlin, 86 Me. 495, 25 L.R.A. 632, 41 Am. St. Rep. 569, 30 Atl. 76; State v. Alston, 94 Tenn. 674, 28 L.R.A. 178, 30 S. W. 750; Minot v. Winthrop, 162 Mass. 113, 26 L.R.A. 259, 38 N. E. 512; Gelsthorpe v. Furnell (State ex rel. Gelsthorpe v. Furnell) 20 Mont. 299, 39 L.R.A. 170, 51 Pac. 267; Eyre v. Jacob, 14 Gratt. 428, 73 Am. Dec. 367; Re McPherson, 104 N. Y. 306, 58 Am. Rep. 502, 10 N. E. 685; Re Sherwell, 125 N. Y. 376, 26 N. E. 464; Kochersperger v. Drake, 167 Ill. 122, 41 L.R.A. 446, 47 N. E. 321; Billings v. People, 189 Ill. 472, 59 L.R.A. 807, 59 N. E. 798. See also Scholey v. Rew, 23 Wall. 331, 23 L. ed. 99; High v. Coyne, 93 Fed. 451.

Messrs. Lewis F. Byington and I. Harris filed a separate brief for defendant in error:

The act of 1905, even if it repeals the act of 1893 and the amendments thereto, does not affect the right of the state to its 5 per cent of the estates of persons who died prior to the 1st of July, 1905.

Prevost v. Grencaux, 19 How. 1, 15 L. ed. 572; Amat's Succession, 18 La. Ann. 405; Rixner's Succession, 48 La. Ann. 563, 32 L.R.A. 177, 19 So. 597; Rabasse's Succession, 49 La. Ann. 1413, 22 So. 767.

The same principle which makes the property of a decedent vest in his heir immediately at death vests the state with a certain percentage of it at the same time.

Billings v. Hall, 7 Cal. 1; Re Stanford, 126 Cal. 112, 45 L.R.A. 788, 58 Pac. 462.

Succession taxes are not taxes in the ordinary sense of the word, but a modification of the succession and inheritance laws decreeing that only a certain percentage of a man's property shall go to his heirs, and the rest shall remain the property of the sovereign state.

Minot v. Winthrop, 162 Mass, 113, 26 L.R.A. 259, 38 N. E. 512; State v. Ferris, 9 Ohio C. C. 298; State v. Hamlin, 86 Me. 495, 25 L.R.A. 632, 41 Am. St. Rep. 569, 30 Atl. 76; Re Collateral Inheritance Tax, 88 Me. 587, 34 Atl. 530; State v. Dalrymple, 70 Md. 294, 3 L.R.A. 372, 17 Atl. 82; United States v. Perkins, 163 U. S. 625, 41 L. ed. 287, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1073.

If the act of 1905 can be held to relieve the estates of persons who died prior to the 1st of July, 1905, it is to that extent unconstitutional.

Re Stanford (Cal.) 54 Pac. 259; Re Moore, 90 Hun, 162, 35 N. Y. Supp. 782.

The act of 1905, in spite of the formal repealing clause, must be held to be a continuation of the act of 1893 and its amendments, in so far as it affects the estates of persons who died prior to the 1st of July, 1905.

26 Am. & Eng. Enc. Law, 2d ed. p. 758; Central P. R. Co. v. Shackelford, 63 Cal. 261; Pacific Mail S. S. Co. v. Joliffe, 2 Wall. 450, 17 L. ed. 805, 6 Rose's Notes, p. 433; McMinn v. Bliss, 31 Cal. 127; Re Davis, 149 N. Y. 545, 44 N. E. 185; Re Sloane, 154 N. Y. 113, 47 N. E. 978; Provident Hospital & Training School Asso. v. People, 198 Ill. 495, 64 N. E. 1031; Re Scrimgeour, 80 App. Div. 388, 80 N. Y. Supp. 636; Collins v. Blake, 79 Me. 218, 9 Atl. 358; Re Prime, 136 N. Y. 347, 18 L.R.A. 713, 32 N. E. 1091.

The tax can be collected either under the old statute or the new, or under the general powers of the superior court in probate matters; or it may be collected by the ordinary civil action against the estate.

23 Am. & Eng. Enc. Law, 1st ed. p. 504; 27 Am. & Eng. Enc. Law, 2d ed. p. 342; Re Vanderbilt, 2 Connoly, 319, 10 N. Y. Supp. 239; State v. Poulterer, 16 Cal. 531; Bergin v. Haight, 99 Cal. 56, 33 Pac. 760; Re Burton, 93 Cal. 463, 29 Pac. 36; Pennie

v. Roach, 94 Cal. 521, 29 Pac. 956, 30 Pac. 106; Simons v. Bedell, 122 Cal. 347, 68 Am. St. Rep. 35, 55 Pac. 3.

[90] *Mr. Justice White delivered the opinion of the court:

In 1893 a law was enacted in California, imposing a charge on collateral inheritances and on bequests and devises. Cal. Stat. 1893, p. 193. The burdens which the law imposed were not laid upon inheritances, bequests, or devises in favor of the father, mother, husband, wife, children, brother, or sister of a decedent, or wife or widow of a son, or the husband of the daughter of the decedent, adopted children, and certain public and charitable corporations. In the year 1899 the law of 1893 was amended.. The amendment caused the charge imposed by the prior act to become applicable in the case of brothers and sisters of a decedent. This resulted because the amendment omitted brothers and sisters from the enumeration made in the act of 1893 of persons to whom the act was not to apply. Cal. Stat. 1899, p. 10.

In December, 1900, Cornelia E. Campbell died intestate in the city of San Francisco, and her estate was administered upon by the appropriate court. In December, 1901, a final decree was entered, apportioning the estate remaining, after the payment of certain specified amounts, among three brothers and a sister, who are of the plaintiffs in error in this court. One of the sums directed by the decree to be paid before distribution was a collateral inheritance charge of $488.70, under the act of 1893, as amended in 1899.

The brothers and sister appealed to the supreme court of California from that portion of the decree directing the payment of the charge just mentioned. The validity of the law imposing the burden was assailed upon various grounds of a local nature, and upon the Federal ground that the amendatory act of 1899, in so far as it purported to impose a charge on inheritances, bequests, or devises to brothers and sisters, denied the equal protection of the laws, and was hence repugnant to the 14th Amendment to the Constitution of the United States. The supreme court of California affirmed the decree. In doing so it held that the contentions of a local nature were without merit, [91] *and the act of 1893, as amended by the act of 1899, was not in conflict with the 14th Amendment. 143 Cal. 627, 77 Pac. 674.

With the questions of a local nature decided by the state court we are not concerned, and shall therefore confine our attention to the Federal question, that is, the alleged repugnancy to the 14th Amendment, imposing the burden in question on brothers and sisters.

The asserted repugnancy of the statute to the Constitution of the United States, as elaborately argued at bar, rests upon the proposition that the statute denied to brothers and sisters of a decedent the equal protection of the laws, because the statute embraced an inheritance, bequest, or devise in favor of a brother or sister, and did not include bequests or devises in favor of a wife or widow of a son or the husband of a daughter of the decedent.

Before coming to consider this subject we must notice a wholly independent question, which the plaintiffs in error assert renders a reversal necessary, irrespective of the merits of the contention based upon the Federal question.

In March, 1905, since the record on this writ of error was filed in this court, the state of California enacted a new inheritance tax law. Cal. Stat. 1905, p. 341. This act differs from the act of 1893, as amended in 1899, in many particulars. It includes within the classes subjected to the burdens imposed persons not embraced in the act of 1893 as amended, and whilst it does not except from its operation persons embraced in the prior act as amended, creates as to some of such persons a different rate, and carves out exemptions as to designated amounts of property, not found in the earlier act. Besides, by the act, brothers and sisters or a descendant of such brothers and sisters. and the wife or widow of a son or a husband of a daughter of a decedent, are made subject to a like charge, less, however, in rate than the one theretofore imposed upon a brother or sister. The act of 1905, as declared in its title, and as manifested by its provisions, was intended to cover generally the subject of inheritance taxes, and by necessary effect operated to amend and *re-enact the [92] prior laws on the subject. In the body of the act was contained a section (27), expressly repealing the act of 1893 and the amendments thereto, without embodying a clause saving the right of the state in respect to the charges which had accrued to the state under the prior acts.

The proposition is that the act of 1905 relieved the plaintiffs in error from the duty to pay resulting from the prior laws, even if those laws were not repugnant to the 14th Amendment, and, therefore, the contention is that it becomes our duty to so decide, and hence to reverse the judgment without passing upon the Federal question. The plaintiffs in error do not suggest that the writ of error be dismissed because, by the California statute, upon which they rely, the constitutional question has become merely a moot one, but their contention is that we should maintain jurisdiction and reverse upon the ground previously stated. We cannot assent to the proposition. The statute upon which it is based was enacted subsequently to the decision of the supreme court of California, and if that statute had the effect, as asserted, of depriving the state of power to enforce the judgment below rendered, the right to claim relief, based upon the action of the state, taken since the supreme court of California decided the case, will, we assume, be open to investigation in the state courts, if in deciding the Federal question adversely to the plaintiffs in error, we do not conclude the question referred to. Under these conditions we think it is our duty to decide the Federal question upon which the writ of error was prosecuted, and leave open the purely local question, which has arisen since the decision by the lower court.

Of course, of our own motion we must determine whether the enactment of the subsequent statute so obviously had the effect of relieving the plaintiffs in error from the burden imposed by the judgment below as to cause the Federal question to become merely a moot one. In view of the general and continuing nature of the legislation contained in the statute of 1905 (Bear Lake & River Waterworks & Irrig. Co. v. Garland, 164 U. S. 1, 11, 41 L. ed. 327, 331, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 7; Pacific Mail S. S. Co. v. Joliffe, 2 Wall. 450, 17 L. ed. 805), we are clearly of [93] the opinion that it cannot *be said that this case has become a moot one. Especially is this true when the ruling of the supreme court of California in Re Stanford, 126 Cal. 112, 45 L. R. A. 788, 58 Pac. 462, is considered. In that case, in 1897, while an appeal was pending in the supreme court of California from a decree directing the payment by the estate of Stanford of a charge or charges imposed by authority of the act of 1893, the legislature of California amended the act, and established certain exemptions, which it declared should apply to all property, which had passed by will, succession, or transfer after the approval of the act of 1893, except in those cases where the tax had been paid to the treasurer of the proper county. As to enforce the proper amendatory act would have relieved the estate of Stanford from the burdens of which complaint was made, the question presented to the supreme court of California was whether, if the burdens were authorized by the act of 1893, it was the duty of the court to apply the provisions of the amendatory act, and reverse the judgment pending before it, because the right to enforce the impositions had terminated by the effect of the amendatory act. After deciding that the act of 1893 authorized the burdens complained of, the court, in considering the terms of that statute, the nature and character of an inheritance tax, and the power of the state over the disposition of property in case of death, held that it was its duty to affirm the decree because of the vested right existing in the state under the act of 1893, and because the act of 1897, in attempting to abrogate such vested right, was repugnant to specified provisions of the Constitution of California. Putting aside, then, all question as to the operation of the statute of 1905, and reserving from any decree which we may render all rights, if any, in favor of the plaintiffs in error which may have arisen from the passage of that statute, we are brought to a consideration of the merits of the Federal question.

The contention is that the assailed law of California was repugnant to the 14th Amendment because it subjected to the burdens of an inheritance tax or charge brothers and sisters of a decedent, and did not subject to any burden such *strangers to the [94] blood as the wife or widow of a son or the husband of a daughter of a decedent. We do not stop to refer in detail to the many forms of argument by which the contention is sought to be sustained, but content ourselves with stating that, whatever be the form in which the propositions relied on are advanced, they all reduce themselves to and must depend upon the soundness of the contention that the 14th Amendment compels the states, in levying inheritance taxes, and, a fortiori, in regulating inheritances, to conform to blood relationship. That is to say, in their last analysis all the arguments depend upon the proposition that the 14th Amendment has taken away from the states their power to regulate the passage of property by death or the burdens which may be imposed resulting therefrom, because that amendment confines the states absolutely, both as to the passage of such property and as to the burdens imposed thereon, to the rule of blood relationship. To state the proposition is to answer it. Its unsoundness is demonstrated by previous decisions of this court. Magoun v. Illinois Trust & Sav. Bank, 170 U. S. 283, 42 L. ed. 1037, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 594; Orient Ins. Co. v. Daggs, 172 U. S. 557, 562, 43 L. ed. 552, 554, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 281. It is true that in the first of the cited cases it was expressly declared or impliedly recognized that in the exercise by a state of its undoubted power to regulate the burdens which might be imposed on the passage of property by death, a case might be conceived of where a burden would be so arbitrary as to amount to a denial of the equal protection of the laws. But this suggestion did not imply that the effect of the 14th Amendment was to control the states in the exercise of their plenary authority to regulate inheritances and to determine the persons or objects upon which an inheritance burden should be imposed. In this case there can be no doubt, if the right of a state be conceded to select the persons who may inherit, or upon whom the burden resulting from an inheritance may be imposed, the complaint against the statute is entirely without merit. The whole case, therefore, must rest upon the assumption that because the state of California has not followed the rule of blood relationship, [95] *but, as to particular classes, has applied the rule of affinity by marriage, therefore the constitutional provision guaranteeing the equal protection of the laws was violated. But, unless the effect of the 14th Amendment was inexorably to limit the states in enacting inheritance laws to the rule of blood relationship, such a regulation plainly involved the exercise of legislative discretion and judgment, with which the 14th Amendment did not interfere. Such a regulation cannot in reason be said to be an exercise of merely arbitrary power. To illustrate. It assuredly would not be an arbitrary exercise of power for a state to put in one class, for the purpose of inheritance or the burdening of the privilege to inherit, all blood relatives to a designated degree, excluding brothers and sisters, and to place all other and more remote blood relatives, including brothers and sisters, in a second class, along with strangers to the blood. This being true it cannot, without causing the equality clause of the 14th Amendment to destroy the powers of the states on a subject of a purely local character, be held that a classification which takes near relatives by marriage and places them in a class with lineal relatives is so arbitrary as to transcend the limits of governmental power. If this were not true, state legislation preferring a wife in the distribution of the estate of her husband to a brother or sister of the husband would be void as repugnant to the 14th Amendment. So also would be the provision in the California statute we are considering, preferring an adopted child of a decedent to a brother or sister. With the motives of public policy which may induce a state to prefer near relatives by affinity to collateral relatives, we are not concerned, since the 14th Amendment does not deprive a state of the power to regulate and burden the right to inherit, but at the most can only be held to restrain such an exercise of power as would exclude the conception of judgment and discretion, and which would be so obviously arbitrary and unreasonable as to be beyond the pale of governmental authority.

Affirmed.

*H. C. HERRICK, A. V. Noyes, Charles La- [96]
brosse, Leon Larrieu, W. S. Gray, and Peter Crane, Appts.,

v.

BOQUILLAS LAND & CATTLE COMPANY.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 96-102.)

1. Appeal from territorial supreme court—questions reviewable—sufficiency of evidence.—The sufficiency of the evidence to support the findings of fact is not open to consideration on appeal from a territorial supreme court to the Supreme Court of the United States, in the absence of any exception duly taken to rulings on the admission or rejection of evidence.

2. Private land claims—confirmation—effect of recital in patent.—A recital in a patent from the United States, confirming a Mexican land grant to the original grantees, "their heirs, successors in interest, and assigns," that two persons named therein had acquired an undivided interest in the land, which patent was based on a decree to that effect of the court of private land claims, established by the act of March 3, 1891 (26 Stat. at L. 854, chap. 539, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 765), is sufficient to establish a record title in the persons so named as against others holding merely by adverse possession, although, under §§ 8, 13, of that act, the confirmation of the grant by that court only quitclaims the title of the United States, and saves the rights of third parties.

3. Limitation of actions—retroactive effect.—The limitation of ten years, prescribed by Ariz. Rev. Stat. 1901, ¶ 2938, for actions to recover lands adversely held, has no application to such an action brought between the date when such statute was enacted and the date when, by its terms, the revision of the statutes was to take effect.

[No. 105.]

Submitted December 7, 1905. Decided January 2, 1906.

APPEAL from the Supreme Court of the Territory of Arizona to review a judgment which affirmed a judgment of the District Court in and for Cochise County, in that territory, in favor of plaintiff in an action of ejectment. Affirmed.

See same case below (Ariz.), 71 Pac. 924; on rehearing, 76 Pac. 612.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Mr. Ben Goodrich submitted the cause for appellants.

Mr. Francis J. Heney submitted the cause for appellee.

Mr. Justice White delivered the opinion of the court:

This is an action of ejectment, commenced

NOTE.—As to review by the United States Supreme Court of territorial decisions—see note to Miners' Bank v. Iowa, 13 L. ed. U. S. 867.

in August, 1901, by the appellee, to recover
[97] a tract of land containing 17,355.86 *acres, and damages for the alleged unlawful withholding of possession. It was alleged that the plaintiff was the owner and entitled to the possession of the described land, and that title had been in it or in its grantors and predecessors in interest ever since January 1, 1875; and the defendants—thirty in number—were alleged to have unlawfully withheld possession of the premises in dispute from about November 28, 1900. Some of the defendants filed disclaimers or failed to answer. The appellants and others jointly answered, relying solely on rights alleged to result from an asserted adverse possession by each of them of a portion of the demanded premises for more than twenty years prior to the bringing of the action. The case was tried to the court without a jury. The court made findings of fact and stated its conclusions of law thereon. Thereupon judgment was entered in favor of the plaintiff. On appeal, the supreme court of the territory affirmed the judgment; and the opinions delivered on the original hearing and on a rehearing are reported in 71 Pac. 924, and 76 Pac. 612. The supreme court adopted the findings of fact made by the trial court. The findings thus adopted as to the title and right of possession of the plaintiff were as follows:

"That on the 8th day of May, A. D. 1833, the Mexican government, by good and sufficient grant, conveyed to plaintiff's grantors and predecessors in interest the lands and premises herein described, being the lands and premises in controversy.

"That on the 14th day of December, in the year of our Lord one thousand and nine hundred, the government of the United States, by its letters patent, recognized and confirmed the validity of the said grant of lands in plaintiff's complaint, and hereinafter particularly described, to Ygnacio Elias Gonzales and Nepumoceno Felix, and to their heirs, successors in interest, and assigns forever; and found and decreed that W. R. Hearst and Phebe A. Hearst had acquired an undivided interest in such lands and premises of the said two grantees.

"That on the 3d day of July, 1901, the said W. R. Hearst and Phebe A. Hearst, by [98] deed in writing, conveyed all of their *said interest in and to the said lands and premises to the plaintiff herein, and that plaintiff has not since disposed of its title so acquired, or any part thereof, to said lands and premises."

In addition, the trial court, among its conclusions of law, incorporated the following:

"That plaintiff and its predecessors and grantors in interest have been, since the 1st day of January, 1875, and ever since have been, and still are, the owners and entitled to the possession of the lands and premises in plaintiff's complaint, and hereinafter particularly described, and each and every part and portion thereof."

The supreme court of the territory, in its opinion on the rehearing, held this latter statement to be not a mere conclusion of law, but the finding of an ultimate fact; and the court therefore adopted it as part of the findings of fact upon which it based the decree of affirmance. As to possession by the defendants, it was found as follows:

"That each and every of said defendants in this cause were, on the 14th of December, 1900, and had been for more than ten years next preceding that date, occupying various portions of the said lands and premises, and each and every of the said defendants who have failed to appear and answer herein have, since the last named date, withheld possession of divers portions of said lands and premises from the plaintiff and its grantors and predecessors in interest, and still and now so withhold the same; that since the said December 14, 1900, the annual value of the rents, issues, and profits of that part of said lands and premises so withheld from plaintiff by the said defendants is as follows, to wit: . . ."

This appeal was prosecuted.

On appeal from the supreme court of a territory our jurisdiction, apart from exceptions duly taken to rulings on the admission or rejection of evidence, is limited to determining whether the findings of fact support the judgment. Harrison v. Perea, 168 U. S. 311, 323, 42 L. ed. 478, 482, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 129, and cases cited. As on this record there is no question presented as to rulings of the court in respect *to the admission or [99] rejection of evidence, we can alone consider the sufficiency of the findings.

The errors assigned are sixteen in number, and resolve themselves into three classes:

1. Those which assert that the supreme court of the territory refused to consider the findings made by the trial court, and this embraces the 1st, 2d, and 5th assignments. But these assignments disregard the opinion of the supreme court of the territory, delivered on the rehearing, and do not require further notice.

2. Those which question the sufficiency of the evidence to support the findings of fact. These are numbered 8 and 13, and likewise need not be further referred to, as they address themselves to a matter not open for our consideration.

3. Assignments which, in various modes of statement, attack the sufficiency of the findings made by the trial court, and adopted by the supreme court of the territory, which include all of the assignments not already disposed of.

The contentions concerning the insufficiency of the findings to support the judgment are resolvable into two propositions, which we shall separately consider:

First. That, irrespective of the adequacy or inadequacy of the possession asserted by the defendants below, the findings are insufficient to sustain the legal conclusion of title in the plaintiff. This proposition rests upon the premise that the matter included in the conclusions of law of the trial court, which the supreme court held to be a finding of fact, and which it adopted as such, was but a mere conclusion of law, and, therefore, cannot be considered in determining the sufficiency of the findings of fact to sustain the deduction of law made by the court below as to title in the plaintiff. And with this premise it is insisted that if the findings of fact proper are alone considered, they are insufficient to establish title in the plaintiff, because, although they show the Mexican grant, and its confirmation and a conveyance by William R. and Phebe A. Hearst to the plaintiff of an undivided interest in the land, [100] the findings fail as against *defendant to show any title whatever in William R. and Phebe Hearst, or in the plaintiff as their grantee, derived from the grantees of the Mexican government.

Conceding, merely for the sake of argument, the correctness of the premise, we think the proposition based thereon is without merit, since the findings, without reference to the action of the court in adopting the particular finding referred to, sustain as against the defendants the conclusion as to title. Those findings are that the plaintiff held title to an interest in the land in controversy, acquired by reason of a conveyance made on the 3d day of July, 1901, by William R. and Phebe A. Hearst. They, moreover, established that the land thus conveyed was originally acquired by the predecessors and grantors of the plaintiff through a grant made by the Mexican government in 1833, and that "on the 14th day of December, in the year 1900, the government of the United States, by its letters patent, recognized and confirmed" said Mexican grant to two named individuals, "and to their heirs, successors in interest, and assigns forever; and found and decreed that W. R. Hearst and Phebe A. Hearst had acquired an undivided interest in such lands and premises of the said two grantors."

It is urged that the statement in the finding as to it having been decreed that there was an undivided interest in William R. and Phebe A. Hearst was adopted from a decree to that effect rendered by the court of private land claims, established under the act of March 3, 1891. 26 Stat. at L. 854, chap. 539, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 765. From this it is deduced that the recital in the patent as to the title in W. R. and Phebe A. Hearst was res inter alios, and that, in the absence of an express and substantive finding of title in the parties named from the grantee of the Mexican government, the mere recital on the subject in the patent furnished no support whatever for the legal conclusion that there was title. This is based upon the terms of §§ 8 and 13 of the act establishing the court of private land claims, wherein it was provided that the effect of the confirmation of a grant by that court should be *only to quitclaim the title, [101] and not to affect the interests of third parties. But, conceding that the patent, as asserted, is based on a decree of the court of private land claims, and that its recitals are controlled by the terms of the act creating that tribunal, the proposition is without merit. Knight v. United Land Asso. 142 U. S. 161, 188, 189, 35 L. ed. 974, 984, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 258. In that case it was held that although a patent which had been issued in consequence of the report of a tribunal appointed by Congress merely quitclaimed the rights of the United States, and saved the rights of third parties, it nevertheless was conclusive as to the existence of a record title upon those claiming to hold under rights which originated subsequent to the cession, and, a fortiori, as to a person claiming title by mere possession. By the application of this doctrine it follows that the judgment confirming the land grant and the patent thereunder, which specifically decreed an interest in the confirmed grant to the parties named, was adequate to establish a record title as against persons asserting the character of rights upon which the defendants relied.

Second. It is further insisted that, in view of the finding of the court below as to possession of the defendant for more than ten years prior to the commencement of the action, the findings are inadequate to sustain the legal conclusion of the right of the plaintiff to recover, because of the force and effect of the period of limitation prescribed in paragraph. 2938 of the Revised Statutes of Arizona for 1901. That paragraph is as follows:

"Any person who has a right of action for recovery of any lands, tenements, or hereditaments against another having peaceable and adverse possession thereof, cultivating, using, and enjoying the same, shall institute his suit therefor within ten years next after his cause of action shall have accrued, and not afterward."

The court below held, and its ruling on this subject is not questioned, that prior to the adoption of this revision of the Arizona statutes there was no statute of limitations in that territory barring a right of action [102] for the recovery of lands by *one claiming title against another holding merely by peaceable and adverse possession. The revision went into effect on September 1, 1901, and the present action was brought a few days prior to such date, viz., on August 26, 1901.

In approaching the question whether paragraph 2938 was applicable to the case, the court below assumed that the effect of the finding as to possession by defendants was to show peaceable and adverse possession by them for the period of ten years. The court, however, decided that under no canon of construction or rule giving a retroactive effect to a new statute of limitation could paragraph 2938 be made to apply to this case. Thus, suggesting the possible construction which might be claimed for the paragraph, it was said that if construed as absolutely barring causes of action existing at the time of its passage it was unconstitutional,—citing Sohn v. Waterson, 17 Wall. 596, 21 L.ed. 737. Further, that even if the statute were construed as providing that all actions existing at the time of the passage of the statute should be barred if not sued upon within the time which elapsed between the date of such passage and the date fixed for the going into effect thereof, this action was brought within such period, and the statute could not operate as a bar,—citing Wrightman v. Boone County, 82 Fed. 413, and various state decisions therein referred to. And, lastly, it was decided that if the paragraph was construed as not applying to a suit which, though commenced after the passage of the act, was pending at the time the same took effect, the statute had no application,—citing State, Vreeland, Prosecutor, v. Bergen, 34 N. J. L. 438.

We think the supreme court of the territory was clearly right in the views which it thus expressed, and therefore it committed no error in determining that under no possible hypothesis could the limitation prescribed in paragraph 2938 of the Revised Statutes of Arizona operate to bar the plaintiff's action, in view of the findings of fact in respect to the title of plaintiff.

Affirmed.

---

[103] *SUCCESSION OF JUAN SERRALLES, by Their Attorney in Fact, Eduardo Wellenkamp, Appts.,

v.

BELEN ESBRI, Widow of Cartagena.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 103-118.)

1. Appeal—from Porto Rico supreme court—case involving denial of right under Federal statute.— A judgment of the supreme court of Porto Rico requiring an indebtedness to be liquidated in United States currency at the rate of 100 cents for each peso of indebtedness, on the ground that the act of April 12, 1900 (31 Stat. at L. 77, 80, chap. 191), § 11, under which the debtor claimed the right to pay in such currency at the rate of 60 cents for each peso of indebtedness, had no application to the case, is reviewable in the Supreme Court of the United States under § 35 of that act, as denying a right claimed under a Federal statute.

2. Contracts—medium of payment.— United States currency at the rate of exchange prescribed by Congress in the act of April 12, 1900 (31 Stat. at L. 77, 80, chap. 191), § 11, and not at the rate of $1 for each peso of indebtedness, must be accepted in discharge of the obligation on account of a purchase in 1894 of a plantation in Porto Rico, which was to be satisfied with money current in the province at the rate of 100 centavos for each peso, since this provision evidently contemplated only such change in coins as might occur while Porto Rico remained under the same political power.

3. Constitutional law—impairment of contract obligations—legislation fixing medium of payment.— Contract obligations are not impaired by so much of the act of Congress of April 12, 1900 (31 Stat. at L. 77, 80, chap. 191), § 11, as requires United States currency at the rate of exchange prescribed by that act, and not at the rate of $1 for each peso of indebtedness, to be accepted in discharge of an obligation on account of a purchase in 1894 of a plantation in Porto Rico, which was to be satisfied with money current in the province at the rate of 100 centavos for each peso of indebtedness.

[No. 65.]

Argued November 27, 1905. Decided January 2, 1906.

APPEAL from the Supreme Court of Porto Rico to review a judgment which affirmed a judgment of the District Court of Ponce, requiring an indebtedness to be liquidated in United States currency at the rate of 100 cents for each peso of indebtedness, instead of at the rate of exchange prescribed by Congress in the Foraker act. Reversed and remanded for further proceedings.

Statement by Mr. Justice Peckham:

The appellee, plaintiff below, commenced this action, called a "declaratory action of greater import" (Porto Rico Law Civ. Proc.

NOTE.—As to what laws are void as impairing obligation of contracts—see notes to Franklin County Grammar School v. Bailey, 10 L.R.A. 405; McCanna & F. Co. v. Citizens' Trust & Surety Co. 24 C. C. A. 20; Montana Ore-Purchasing Co. v. Boston & M. Consol. Copper & S. Min. Co. 35 C. C. A. 19; and Fletcher v. Peck, 3 L. ed. U. S. 162.

arts. 480–482), to obtain payment of certain sums due on an indebtedness of the defendants (appellants), secured by mortgage, as stated in that instrument. She obtained judgment in her favor in the proper district court of Porto Rico, which was affirmed by the supreme court of the island, and the defendants have appealed from that [104] judgment *to this court. The sole question is whether the debt may be solved in American money at the rate of 60 cents thereof for each peso of indebtedness, or must $1 in American money be paid for each peso.

The following are the facts: One Nicholas Cartagena y Mangual desired to sell the fractional part, owned by him, of a sugar plantation, known as "Ursula," situated in the municipal district of Juana Diaz, in the province of Porto Rico, such fractional part being 18 per cent of the value of the whole plantation, valued at 80,000 pesos. The purchaser, Juan Serralles, agreed to pay for such share 18,000 pesos. Accordingly a deed of purchase and mortgage was made between the parties on the 1st day of September, 1894. That instrument contained the statement that the sale was effected "in consideration of the sum of 18,000 pesos, commercial money," which shall be paid by the purchaser in instalments, viz., "2,000 pesos on the 15th day of July, of the year 1898; 2,000 pesos on the same day and month of the year 1899; an equal sum of 2,000 pesos on the 15th day of July, 1900, and 3,000 pesos on the 15th day of July, of the years of 1901 to the year 1904, both inclusive, all of which to be paid in the money current in the commerce, whatever may be the coinage of the money that as such is in circulation or is accepted in this province, at the rate of 100 centavos (cents) of the money in circulation for each peso, excluding all kinds of paper money in circulation or to be issued, even if its circulation should be compulsory."

The instalments were to bear interest at the rate of 10 per cent per annum from the date of the deed, which interest was due and payable quarterly. The parties also declared "that the price for which said sale is made is the just and true value at present of the share and interest hereby sold and conveyed," they being "fully aware that that is the value that shall serve as a basis in the public sale that shall be held if the obligation is not paid, and its payment should be demanded judicially."

A few days after the execution and de-[105] livery of this instrument *it was discovered that Cartagena was not the owner of all of the one-eighteenth part of the plantation, because that interest was acquired during his marriage with his first wife, and was what is termed "conjugal partnership property," acquired for a valuable consideration during her life. When she died, her interest went to her children, and so the seller, Cartagena, owned the abovementioned fractional part of the plantation, with those children. It therefore became necessary to make another deed and mortgage, conveying the interest of all the owners of the fractional part of the plantation including such children. This was accordingly done, and on the 6th of October, 1894, another instrument, in the nature of a deed and mortgage, was executed by the proper parties, in ratification and extension of the first instrument, and which contains substantially the same provisions as the first instrument, and the payments were to be made to the parties conveying the premises in the proportion in which they were interested in that property. These 18,000 pesos were to be paid by the purchaser, at the same times mentioned in the former instrument, "in current commercial money, whatever the coinage may be of money which, with such character, be in circulation or accepted in this province, at the rate of 100 cents of the circulating medium for each peso, and to the exclusion of all paper money created or to be created, even though its circulation be compulsory."

On the 15th of September, 1900, a quarterly payment of interest became due under the terms of the mortgage, and the appellant proposed to pay it in American money then current, at an amount equivalent in value to the former provincial money, which was not then in circulation. This offer was refused. The appellee then commenced an action in a municipal court, to recover the interest due September 15, 1900, in American money, at the rate of $1 for each peso that was due. She obtained what is termed an "executory judgment" for such payment, and that judgment (of the municipal court) was affirmed by the district court, and the appellant then paid the *same. Upon quarterly in-[106] stalments of interest due December 15, 1900, and March 15, 1901, the appellants made the same offer to pay in American money of equivalent value of the provincial money or peso, which was not then in circulation, and the offer was again refused, and this declaratory action of greater import was then commenced, to recover one American dollar for each peso of indebtedness due up to the date of the commencement of suit, and to obtain a declaration that the future payments should be made in the same manner. Before the commencement of this action, in 1901, the province had been ceded to the United States, which (prior to the cession) had occupied it by its troops in 1898. On the 12th day of April, 1900, Congress passed an act (31 Stat. at L. 77, 80, chap. 191) § 11 of which (reproduced in the margin)† provided for retiring the Porto Rican coins and substituting American money therefor.

In the pleading on the part of the plain-[107]tiff below the foregoing *facts were averred, but no averment or contention was made that the so-called "executory judgment" which plaintiff had theretofore obtained constituted res judicata as to the question now in issue.

The defendants (appellants herein) put in an answer, setting up various facts unnecessary to be here adverted to.

They also averred that under § 11 of the act of Congress, above mentioned, they had the right to pay the instalments due on the mortgage, in American money at the established rate of 60 cents in the coin of the United States for one peso of Porto Rican coin.

The trial court, in its judgment, after reciting the existence of the executory judgment in the action above-described and also all the proceedings in the case before it, decreed the payment of the interest or instalments which might then be due, or thereafter to grow due, to the plaintiff, in United States coin at the rate of $1 thereof for each peso of indebtedness. Basing its decree wholly upon the literal language of the contract, the court said: "It appears that Don Juan Serralles y Colon bound himself to make the payments to said Cartagena, by virtue of the said contract of sale, in money current in commerce, of whatever coinage it may be, at the rate of 100 cents of the current money for each peso; it is plain and evident that the heirs of said Serralles are bound to pay in dollars all the instalments arising from the same contract, or the interest on the same, for dollars are the money current at present in this island."

An appeal was taken by the defendants to the supreme court on the ground, among others, that the judgment of the district court violated articles 1281 and 1283 of the Civil Code. The articles are as follows:

"Art. 1281. If the terms of a contract are clear and leave no doubt as to the intentions of the contracting parties, the literal sense of the stipulations shall be observed.

"If the words should appear contrary to the evident intention of the contracting parties, the intention shall prevail."

*"Art. 1283. However general the terms of[108] a contract may be, there should not be understood as included therein things and cases different from those with regard to which the persons interested intended to contract."

Further ground of appeal was the alleged violation of the 11th section of the act of Congress above mentioned, under which appellants claimed the right to pay in United States coin at the equivalent value of 60 cents for each peso.

The supreme court, in due time, after argument, affirmed the judgment of the court below on the law, holding that the contract was clear, and its literal terms must be complied with. It did not, nor did the district court, hold the prior judgment to be res judicata.

The court also denied the right claimed by the defendants under the above-mentioned act of Congress, to pay their indebtedness at the rate of 60 cents of American money for each peso of such indebtedness, on the ground that the act did not apply to such cases as the one before the court.

Mr. James S. Harlan argued the cause and filed a brief for appellants.

No brief was filed for appellee.

Mr. Justice Peckham, after making the foregoing statement, delivered the opinion of the court:

The question arises herein whether this court has jurisdiction to hear the case, up-

†Sec. 11. "That for the purpose of retiring the Porto Rican coins now in circulation in Porto Rico, and substituting therefor the coins of the United States, the Secretary of the Treasury is hereby authorized to redeem, on presentation in Porto Rico, all the silver coins of Porto Rico known as the peso, and all other silver and copper Porto Rican coins now in circulation in Porto Rico, not including any such coins that may be imported into Porto Rico after the first day of February, nineteen hundred, at the present established rate of sixty cents in the coins of the United States for one peso of Porto Rican coin, and for all minor and subsidiary coins the same rate of exchange shall be applied. The Porto Rican coins so purchased or redeemed shall be recoined at the expense of the United States, under the direction of the Secretary of the Treasury, into such coins of the United States now authorized by law as he may direct, and from and after three months after the date when this act shall take effect no coins shall be a legal tender, in payment of debts thereafter contracted, for any amount in Porto Rico, except those of the United States; and whatever sum may be required to carry out the provisions hereof, and to pay all expenses that may be incurred in connection therewith, is hereby appropriated, and the Secretary of the Treasury is hereby authorized to establish such regulations and employ such agencies as may be necessary to accomplish the purposes hereof: Provided, however, That all debts owing on the date when this act shall take effect shall be payable in the coins of Porto Rico now in circulation, or in the coins of the United States at the rate of exchange above named."

on appeal or otherwise. The action is one to recover the interest due on an indebtedness from the appellants to the appellee on account of the purchase by the former of a certain interest in a plantation in Porto Rico, owned by the testator of appellee, which indebtedness was secured by a mortgage. This action is in its nature something like one to foreclose a mortgage. The question arising in the case is in regard to the kind of money in which the indebtedness of appellants (both that due at the time of the [109] commencement of the *action and that accruing thereafter) should be paid, the appellee asserting her right to be paid in American money at the rate of $1 for each peso of indebtedness, while the appellants, on the contrary, assert their right under § 11 of the act of Congress of April 12, 1900, already mentioned, to pay the indebtedness in money or coins of the United States, at the rate of 60 cents in such coins for each peso of their indebtedness. This right was denied by the court below on the ground that there was a clear contract to pay as demanded by the appellee, and that the act of Congress had no application to the case. Judgment was accordingly given in favor of the appellee, that the appellants should pay to the appellee the indebtedness due or thereafter to grow due to her, at the rate of $1 in American money for each peso of their indebtedness. Appellants thus claimed a right under a statute of the United States, which was denied, and under § 35 of the Foraker act (April 12, 1900) this court has jurisdiction to review the judgment. Crowley v. United States, 194 U. S. 461, 48 L. ed. 1075, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 731; Rodriguez v. United States, 198 U. S. 156, 49 L. ed. 994, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 617.

The record also shows that a prior action had been commenced by appellee, in a municipal court of Porto Rico, between the same parties, to recover an instalment of interest due September 15, 1900, and that the same defense was there made in regard to the character of the money in which the debt should be paid. The municipal court in that case decided in favor of the appellee herein, and judgment to that effect having been duly entered, an appeal therefrom was taken to the district court, which affirmed the judgment, and the same was thereupon paid by the appellants herein. That judgment is not set up by the appellee as res judicata, and while it is recited in the judgments in this case both in the district and supreme courts as having been recovered, it is not held to be such by either of the courts, but in such judgments it is referred to as an "executory judgment," and by article 1477 of the Porto Rico "Law of Civil Procedure" (page 299) it is provided that "judgments rendered in executory actions shall not give rise *to the exception of res [110] judicata, the parties reserving their rights to institute the ordinary action on the same question." As the courts below have treated and denominated the prior judgment in the municipal court as an "executory judgment," obtained in an executory action, the reason for not holding the judgment to be res judicata becomes apparent when the above article of the Code is considered.

We come, then, to a consideration of the proper construction of the provisions in the two deeds, regarding the kind of money in which the debt is to be paid. They are set forth in the foregoing statement and are substantially alike, exeepting that the first deed, that of September, 1894, in speaking of the coinage, says that the payment is to be made in money that is in circulation or is accepted in the province, at the rate of 100 centavos (cents) of the money in circulation for each peso, and in the amended deed of October 6, 1894, the translator of the original Spanish leaves out the word "centavos," and gives what he regards as its proper translation,—the word "cents," —so that the provision reads that the money is to be paid at the rate of 100 "cents" of the circulating medium for each peso. These two deeds represented the same transaction, and were drawn, of course, in the Spanish language. In the first deed the interest of the children of Cartagena was not referred to, because of the mistaken assumption that Cartagena had the whole title, and, upon discovering the mistake, the second deed was made, conveying his interest and the interest of his children, amounting to one-eighteenth of the whole value of the plantation, as conveyed by that deed to the same purchaser. The later deed was regarded by all parties as a mere rectification and ratification of the first deed, and it is quite clear that the word "centavos," contained in the first deed, was used in both, and that the word "cents" is but a translation of the original Spanish word "centavos," which was used in this contract drawn in the Spanish language.

This is in truth assumed to be correct by counsel in the court below, in his communication to that court in behalf of the present *appellee (which forms part of the record [111] herein), as he there uses the word "cents," and then follows it by the use of the word "centavos."

It may be, therefore, stated as a fact that the original contract in the deeds provided for the payment in money current in the province at the rate of 100 centavos for each peso. There is no finding in so many words, as to the value of the peso mentioned in the contract. The Spanish word "centavo" is said to be, in Spanish and in South American countries, a small copper or nickel coin, in value six-tenths of a cent (actual), and one cent (nominal); the one-hundredth of a peso. See Standard Dictionary of the English language. The centavo being worth really six-tenths of a cent, and being the one-hundredth part of a peso, would, of course, make the peso worth 60 cents in American money.

The 11th section of the act of Congress, already mentioned, provides for the redemption of all silver coins of Porto Rico known as the peso, and all other copper and Porto Rican coins in circulation in Porto Rico "at the present established rate of 60 cents in the coins of the United States for one peso of Porto Rican coin, and for all minor and subsidiary coins the same rate of exchange shall be applied." The Congress thus fixed the rate of exchange in the redemption of these coins, and it must be assumed to have been fixed at the value of the peso in American coin.

From these facts it appears to us that there is no rational doubt that at the time when this contract was executed the peso in circulation in Porto Rico was worth not to exceed 60 cents, American money. At the time when the money was due under the contract, in September, 1900, it is admitted that all the pesos and centavos theretofore in circulation had been at that time redeemed by the United States, pursuant to the provisions of the act of Congress, and the money in circulation in Porto Rico was then and thereafter the money of the United States. This was the money current in commerce in Porto Rico and was in circulation and accepted therein as such [112] money. It *is now claimed by the appellee that, as the American money was the money of commerce, and was alone in circulation, she was entitled in September, 1900, under the provisions of the contract, to be paid 100 cents, or, in other words, $1 of that money for every peso of indebtedness owed by the appellants, either then due or thereafter to grow due. By calling the centavo a cent in American money, while worth but six-tenths of a cent, the claim is made that the contract really provided for the payment of 100 cents of American money for every peso of indebtedness. In other words, a centavo is made a cent, and it is said that the appellants promised to pay 100 cents per peso. This construction of the contract has been upheld by the courts below because, as it is said, the strict and plain letter of the contract calls for it, and the result is that the appellants are adjudged to pay over 60 per cent more than the value of the interest they purchased, and that much more than the value of the peso, and also that much more than the real amount of their debt. While it is true that the silver coinage of Porto Rico, known as the peso, and all other silver and copper coins which were in circulation on April 12, 1900, had been retired before September, 1900, and that the money then current in commerce in Porto Rico was American money, we do not, on that account, think that the appellee had the right to claim payment of $1 in American money for each peso of indebtedness. The centavo is not a cent. It is equal to but six-tenths of a cent, and the parties contracted, the one to pay and the other to receive, 100 centavos to the peso, not 100 cents to the peso. Although the translator seems to have assumed that the word "cents" was the correct and accurate translation of the word "centavos," it must be remembered that the contract was in fact to pay centavos, and that the centavos were in fact, as we think is plainly shown in this record, worth only about six-tenths of a cent, and that while 100 centavos were worth one peso, 100 American cents were worth $1, or above 60 per cent more than the same number of centavos. It is *entire-[113] ly incredible that either party ever meant any such result as is now contended for by the appellee. Even if it were conceded that the liberal and strict construction of the contract is as decided by the courts below, yet we are clear that such literal and strict construction does not express the real intention of the parties when the contract was made.

Articles 1281 and 1283 of the Civil Code of Porto Rico, set forth in the foregoing statement, show the law to be in Porto Rico substantially the same as it is here; that is, that where it is plain that a strict and literal construction of the contract does not convey the real meaning of the parties, such construction is not to be entertained. See cases cited in United States v. Utah, N. & C. Stage Co. 199 U. S. 414, ante, 251, 26 Sup. Ct. Rep. 69. In that case the strict and literal construction of the contract was contended, by the officers of the government, to be its proper construction, and hence, it was argued, when the contractor might, under the provisions of his contract, be required to perform new or additional mail, messenger, or transfer service, under the authority of the Postmaster General, without additional compensation, that then such official could require such additional service as arose by reason of the establishment of what amounted to a new station, which additional service required, above the normal increase of service, an additional distance to be traveled in wagons of over 300,000 miles. This court held that the parties never meant any such thing, and the judgment of the court of claims for the recovery of compensation for the extra distance traveled was affirmed.

On looking at this contract we are of opinion that it evidently contemplates only such change in coins as might occur while Porto Rico was under the same political power. It speaks of the payment of the debt in the money current in commerce, whatever may be the coinage of the money that, as such, is in circulation "in this province." The words "in this province" evidently did not contemplate any change of government, but only a possible change of coinage under the same government. It may be assumed that in 1894 no one [114] could have contracted *with reference to a war between Spain and the United States, which did not break out until four years thereafter, nor would anyone have contemplated the cession of Porto Rico to the United States, and the entire substitution of American money for that which had theretofore circulated in Porto Rico, and the retirement of all the other money.

The value of the interest sold in the plantation was agreed by both parties, at the time of the execution of the instrument of deed and mortgage, to be 18,000 pesos, and so it was plainly stated in that instrument. The transaction was a bona fide one, providing for actual conveyance of the interest in the plantation, and there was plainly no gambling in the possible changes in the value of the coin, which might take place under a foreign government, when the various payments were to be made. The parties evidently had no thought of the war, or of being transferred to a foreign government as a result thereof. Under the circumstances it is impossible to conceive of sane persons agreeing in this case upon the value of the interest purchased and sold, and then that the purchaser should further agree to pay over 60 per cent more than the value of the thing purchased if it should so happen in the future that different coinage might be in circulation under a different sovereignty, which would effect that result.

The question may be asked, What did the parties mean by this use of language, if they did not mean precisely what the courts below have said they did, and where is the justification for changing the interpretation as gathered from their language? It may not, perhaps, always be clear to see and determine what parties did mean by the language they used in a contract, and at the same time it may be perfectly clear they did not mean to contract with reference to what the courts below have called the literal and specific import of the language actually used. In this case we have no such difficulty. We have just stated what, in our opinion, the meaning really was, and that it was aimed at the possible change in coinage or of the value of the new coin under the decree of the government of Spain itself. *Why that [115] contingency should have presented itself is not stated clearly as a fact in either of the judgments of the courts below. (It may be here remarked that the judgments of those courts also partake of the nature of findings of fact and opinions of the court thereon.) There is a recital in the judgment or decree of the supreme court of what was stated by counsel for appellants in his written communication to the court, and which is part of the record, and that statement was, in substance, that the change was contemplated by the Spanish government at that time (1894), by which the peso then in circulation was to be retired, and another coin was to be issued which would be worth 60 instead of 57 cents to the peso, and it was with that contingency in mind that the parties provided as they did in the contract in question. It is true the supreme court does not find the fact of the existence of this intention on the part of the Spanish government, but, in giving a statement of what it regarded as the distinction between the case at bar and one theretofore decided by the same court, in a manner seemingly inconsistent with this decision here, the supreme court said:

"This case being different from what occurred in the case of Dona Josefa Cayol y Julia, and the agricultural corporation 'Balseiro and Gergetti,' which case was recently decided by this supreme court, and in which neither of the parties had expressed their will in so clear and explicit a manner as in the present case, nor could the case offer any difficulty, since the plaintiff herself had recognized in her complaint—and it was also proven in the course of the suit—that the clause of the deed, the application of which was being considered, and on which she based her claim that the purchasers Balseiro and Georgetti should pay her the interest on that part of the price, the payment of which had been postponed, in American currency without the discount fixed by the government of the United States for the money of this country, had been established by the parties in consideration of the exchange of the Mexican money, which had already been announced by the Spanish government *on that date when the contract [116] was made, for which reason this supreme court had to dismiss the appeal in cassation interposed by the plaintiff Dona Josefa Cayol, from the judgment rendered by the district court of Arecibo, denying the claim made by the said Dona Josefa Cayol, the court basing its decision precisely on this same article 1283 of the Civil Code, the application of which is the question at issue in the present appeal."

True, it appears to have been proved in that case, what the record does not show to have been specifically proved here, that there was at the time this contract was entered into a contemplated exchange of money to be circulated, and the contemplated change had been announced by the Spanish government at the time when the contract was made. But this fact is not a necessity, in order to maintain our view of the proper construction of the contract, for it simply furnishes what may be termed a presumption that the use of the language as to the payments was made with reference to this particular and contemplated exchange. The wholly incredible nature of the contract, if construed in the way the lower courts have done, is none the less apparent, and we cannot agree with a construction which binds the appellants to pay more than 60 per cent than the parties agreed the interest in the plantation was worth, and just that amount more than both parties supposed was to be paid.

In truth, a careful reading of the whole decree of the supreme court (while also considering that the recitals in that decree of matters contained in the appellants' brief were not negatived by the court as to matters of fact, the case being decided wholly upon the asserted strict construction of the contract) rather leads one to the conclusion that the court assumed the truth of those recitals as to the contemplated change of coinage, but regarded the fact as immaterial in view of what it thought to be the plain language of the contract. Of course we do not intimate that the court below was bound to deny the truth of the recitals or else it was to be taken as admitting it.

[117] We only *refer to it in passing, in connection with the language of the whole decree, and the reasons given for the judgment, as some ground for the belief that the court in fact assumed the truth of the recitals, but thought them wholly immaterial. The court also pays no heed to the evidence which was received upon the trial of the case, showing the manner in which settlements of existing debts had been made upon instruments like the one in question, with or without the particular clause as to payments, the evidence being that the debts were paid at the rate of exchange provided for in the act of Congress. This, of course, must have been upon the ground that the words of the contract, as construed by the court, governed.

In San Juan v. St. John's Gas Co. 195 U. S. 510, 49 L. ed. 299, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 108, the contention was that the money due the gas company for lighting the street lamps was payable in Porto Rican money, but this court said that the contract was for payment in current foreign money, exclusive of Spanish gold; and it was conceded that if the foreign current money was required by the contract, money of the United States, current at the time the contract was made, was within the contemplation of the parties. Such money was also current in the island when performance was due. The case does not cover the one at bar.

Nor is the debt payable at the rate of 100 cents for each peso, on the theory that the money in circulation at the time and place for the performance of the contract was the money in contemplation of the parties thereto in the absence of a contract for the payment in some other money. See 195 U. S. 510, 49 L. ed. 299, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 108, cases cited, page 520, L. ed. page 304, Sup. Ct. Rep. 108.

There was, as we have seen, no contract to pay in American money at the rate contended for by appellee. In providing for the withdrawal of all coins in circulation in Porto Rico, Congress provided at the same time for fixing the equivalent between those coins and American coins for the payment of all existing debts. This was simply fixing the value of those coins relatively to their value in American coin and with reference to the payment of debts then existing. All money then unpaid *on this mortgage [118] obligation was an existing debt within the act, and hence might be paid in American money at the rate of exchange therein specified. The withdrawal of the coins of Porto Rico in circulation at the time of the passage of the act of Congress, and provided for therein, did not take legal effect, so far as concerned debts then existing, except upon the condition that those debts might be solved in the coins of the United States, at the rate of exchange stated in th act. This did not impair or change the obligation of any contract, and was but an exercise of power to fix the value of the coins which were to be withdrawn, and to state the rate of exchange at which existing debts might be paid in American money; and as there was no contract to pay at any other rate, the act was valid and applied to this case.

We are of opinion that the appellants are entitled to pay the balance remaining unpaid of the debt secured by the mortgage in American money, at the rate of exchange prescribed by Congress.

The judgment of the court below is reversed and the case remanded for further proceedings in conformity with this opinion.

Reversed.

MONTANA CATHOLIC MISSIONS, Plff. in Err.,
v.
MISSOULA COUNTY, State of Montana.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 118-130.)

Courts—jurisdiction of Federal circuit court—lack of merit in claim of Federal question.—The claim that grazing cattle owned by a Jesuit society are exempt from state taxation, based either upon the theory that, because the income of the society was devoted to the charitable work of improving and educating the Indians on the Flathead reservation, in Montana, the entire beneficial use or ownership of the property taxed was in tribal Indians, or upon the ground that the Federal government, by permitting and approving the work of the society, and by aiding it from time to time by making appropriations in its behalf, had constituted it one of the agencies to carry out its obligation to the Indians,—is too clearly lacking in merit to confer jurisdiction on a Federal circuit court.

[No. 151.]

Submitted December 13, 1905. Decided January 2, 1906.

IN ERROR to the Circuit Court of the United States for the District of Montana to review a judgment dismissing, for want of jurisdiction, a suit to recover taxes alleged to have been illegally assessed. Affirmed.

Statement by Mr. Justice Peckham:

The plaintiff in error commenced this action in the circuit court of the United States for the district of Montana, to recover from the defendant the amount of certain back taxes, which it alleged had been illegally assessed, and which it had been compelled to pay in order to prevent the seizure and sale of the property owned by it, and upon which the taxes were levied. Both parties to the action were residents of the state of Montana at the time it was commenced. The defendant demurred to the complaint upon the ground, among others, that the court had no jurisdiction of the person of the defendant or of the subject-matter of the action. The demurrer was sustained by the court, and the complaint dismissed on the sole ground that it had no jurisdiction, and the court has certified the question of jurisdiction directly to this court, as provided for in the 5th section of the act of 1891. 26 Stat. at L. 827, chap. 517, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 549.

The following is the complaint:

The plaintiff above-named complains to the court, and alleges:

I. That it is, and since prior to the year 1890 has been, a corporation organized and existing under the provisions of chapter 34, fifth division of the Compiled Statutes of the state of Montana, relating to the incorporation of religious, benevolent, and other like societies, and that its purposes are set forth in its articles of incorporation as follows:

The particular business or object of said corporation shall be to hold the legal title to real estate in the territory of Montana, for the use and in trust for the Society of [120] Jesus, also to hold and in trust for said society all funds, property, and effects of said society, or any members thereof, or any person or persons, corporation or corporations, conveyed, transferred, delivered, or assigned to the said corporation, for the use and benefit of said society; to conduct, erect, govern, and maintain churches, colleges, schools, and libraries, and all other such necessary and useful enterprises as may be properly connected with the society and corporation. The general business and object of said corporation shall be to inculcate and further the interests of Christian education among the inhabitants of the territory of Montana, including the Indians and other residents on reservations within the said territory, and also to advance the interests of the Christian religion through the erection and maintenance of churches, colleges, and schools, and the preaching of the Gospel.

II. The Society of Jesus referred to in the said articles of incorporation is an association or order of ministers of the Gospel, none of the members of which can, under the rules of the said order, hold, or does hold, any property in his own right.

III. Plaintiff further avers that about the year 1854 the said Society of Jesus established a mission among the Flathead Indians, then residing in the western portion of what is now the state of Montana, and stationed among them members of the said order, with directions to teach, educate, enlighten, and care for the said Indians. That the said mission being so established, members of the said order so deputed went among the said Indians, and from about the year 1854 to the present time have continued in the work of teaching, educating, and enlightening the said Flathead Indians.

IV. The plaintiff further avers that since the creation of the Flathead Indian reservation in the state of Montana, members of the said order, commonly known as Jesuit Fathers, have, by the direction of said order and by permission of the Indians living and entitled to live within the same, and the government of the United States, been [121] permitted to reside within the said *reservation for the purpose of teaching and educating the Indians residing thereon, and that they have been, during all of said period, continuously engaged in the work of teaching and educating the said Indians.

NOTE.—As to Federal question as conferring jurisdiction on United States courts—see notes to Montana Ore-Purchasing Co. v. Boston & M. Consol. Copper & S. Min. Co. 35 C. C. A. 7, and Bailey v. Mosher, 11 C. C. A. 308.

V. That with the permission of the Indians inhabiting and entitled to inhabit the said reservation and the government of the United States, the said Jesuit Fathers have constructed on the said reservation, at great expense, extensive school buildings, with dormitories, and in connection therewith, for the purpose of teaching the said Indians the manual arts, a blacksmith shop, wagon shop, printing office, saddlery shop, shoe shops, bakeries, and other shops of like character, and, with the same purpose, cultivate fields and gardens.

VI. That for the more successful conduct of the training and education of the Indians, the said Jesuit Fathers take into their care and custody at tender ages the children of the said Indians, and keep them at the said schools, and clothe, feed, and house them until they arrive at mature years, and that they now have, and for more than ten years last past have had, in their charge and care, upwards of two hundred and fifty of the children of the Indians residing on, and entitled to reside on, the said reservation.

VII. That for many years the government of the United States, in recognition of the value of the work of the said Jesuit Fathers in the training and education of the said Indians, appropriated and paid to them large sums of money for the purpose of carrying on the said work of educating the said Indians and caring for their children, but that such contributions are no longer made by the government.

VIII. That with a view to provide means for the carrying on of the said work of educating the said Indians the said Jesuit Fathers have acquired a large band of neat cattle, which roam over and feed upon the said reservation. That the right to keep and graze the said cattle upon the lands included within the said reservation was, long prior to the year 1895, granted to the Jesuit Fathers by the Indians residing upon [122] the said reservation *and entitled to reside thereon, which right was confirmed by the acquiescence and permission of the government of the United States, and that the cattle now owned by them or by the plaintiff herein, as hereinafter set out, now graze upon the lands included within the said reservation by the express permission of the Indians residing and entitled to reside thereon, and of the government of the United States.

IX. That a large number of the said cattle are annually killed and consumed as food by the children of the Indians so residing on and entitled to reside on the said reservation, and who are under the care of the said Jesuit Fathers, as aforesaid, and by the fathers in charge of the said children, and assistants employed by them in the work of educating the said Indians, and that others of said cattle are annually shipped to Eastern markets, and the income derived from the sale of the same is devoted to, and used exclusively for, the work carried on by the said fathers on the said reservation, of educating the said Indians, as hereinbefore set out, and that all the said income is consumed in the said work.

X. That a large portion of the work of rounding up the said cattle, branding, and otherwise caring for them, slaughtering and shipping the same, is done by the Indians residing on the said reservation, under the direction of the said fathers, and that the said Indians are enabled by this employment to earn in part a livelihood, and are instructed and gain experience in the business and occupation of cattle raising, and are encouraged themselves to engage in it,—a business for the conduct of which the said reservation is particularly adapted.

XI. That prior to the year 1895 all property so as aforesaid acquired by the said Jesuit Fathers was conveyed to the plaintiff herein, to hold the same in trust for the said Jesuit Fathers, and that by such conveyance it now has the legal title to all of the cattle acquired by the said Jesuit Fathers on the said reservation, and the increases thereof. And plaintiff avers that it is, and at all times since its organization has been, an institution of purely public charity, and that all of the cattle now *owned by it, or which have been owned by [123] it since the year 1895, or at any time, have been and are used exclusively for educational purposes, as hereinbefore set forth.

XII. And plaintiff further avers that it is its purpose in the future to devote all cattle now on the said reservation, or which it may acquire thereon, and any income derived from the sale of the same, to the same purposes to which they have heretofore been devoted, as hereinbefore set out, and that it has no purpose now, nor has it had at any time any purpose, to devote any portion of said cattle or any income derived from the sale of the same to any purpose other than the education and training of the Indians residing or entitled to reside on the said reservation, and that it never has made, and does not contemplate making, any profit out of the raising of the said cattle, with the intent to devote the same to any other purpose.

XIII. And plaintiff avers that, notwithstanding the facts aforesaid, the defendant, county of Missoula, which is one of the counties of the state of Montana, through its treasurer, annually, since the year 1897, has demanded of the plaintiff that it pay to the said county taxes upon all cattle owned by it and being upon the said reservation, and threatened to seize and sell the said cattle or so much thereof as might be necessary to satisfy the taxes demanded unless the same should be paid.

XIV. That pursuant to such demand, and to prevent the seizure and sale of the said cattle, or so many thereof as might be necessary, the plaintiff, under protest, on or about November 23, 1898, paid to the said county and to its treasurer, who turned the same over to the said county as taxes claimed by it to be due on account of cattle owned by the said plaintiff on the said reservation for the years 1897 and 1898, the sum of $1,257.48; that the plaintiff, under protest, on or about November 22, 1899, paid to the said county and to its treasurer, who turned the same over to the said county, as taxes claimed by it to be due on account of cattle owned by the said plaintiff on said reservation for the year 1899, the sum of $867.82; that the plaintiff, under protest, on or about November 26, 1900, [124] paid *to the said county and its treasurer, who turned the same over to the said county, as taxes claimed by it to be due on account of cattle owned by the said plaintiff, on the said reservation for the year 1900, the sum of $661.20; and that plaintiff, under protest, on or about November 26, 1901, paid to the said county and to its treasurer, who turned the same over to said county, as taxes claimed by it to be due on account of cattle owned by the said plaintiff on the said reservation for the year 1901, the sum of $321.95; and plaintiff avers that it neither had nor owned any cattle "at any time since 1895," in the county of Missoula, state of Montana, except such cattle as it held on the said reservation as hereinbefore set out, and that the said taxes were exacted of it upon the said cattle. "All of which were reared on the said reservation, and fed on grasses and herbage grown thereon."

XV. And now plaintiff avers that the defendant is indebted to it on account of said payments, by it made, as hereinbefore set out, in the sum of three thousand one hundred and eight and 45/100 dollars ($3,108.45), with interest on the sum of $1,257.48 from the 23d day of November, 1898, amounting to $345.66; for interest on $867.82 from the 22d day of November, 1899, amounting to $169.35; for interest on the sum of $661.20 from the 26th day of November, 1900, amounting to $75.55; and for interest on the sum of $321.95 from the 26th day of November, 1901, amounting to the sum of $11.03.

Wherefore plaintiff demands judgment for said amounts, together with interest as above set forth, and for its costs.

Mr. Thomas J. Walsh submitted the cause for plaintiff in error:

When by reason of a Federal question being involved, the jurisdiction of the circuit court is properly invoked, it is not limited to a determination of the Federal question, but it may proceed and determine every question in the case.

New Orleans, M. & T. R. Co. v. Mississippi, 102 U. S. 135, 26 L. ed. 96; Little York Gold-Washing & Water Co. v. Keyes, 96 U. S. 199, 24 L. ed. 656; Briscoe v. Southern Kansas R. Co. 40 Fed. 277; Osborn v. Bank of United States, 9 Wheat. 821, 822, 6 L. ed. 224; Manigault v. Ward, 123 Fed. 707.

It is not necessary that the contention made by the plaintiff with reference to its rights under the Constitution or laws of the United States shall appear sound to the court. If the claim of the plaintiff is apparently made in good faith, and is not a frivolous one, the United States court has jurisdiction.

Illinois C. R. Co. v. Adams, 180 U. S. 28, 45 L. ed. 410, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 251; Illinois C. R. Co. v. Chicago, 176 U. S. 646, 44 L. ed. 622, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 509; St. Paul, M. & M. R. Co. v. St. Paul & N. P. R. Co. 15 C. C. A. 167, 52 U. S. App. 372, 68 Fed. 2; St. Louis, I. M. & S. R. Co. v. Davis, 132 Fed. 629.

The property of tribal Indians is not taxable by the state.

The Kansas Indians (Blue Jacket v. Jonnson County) 5 Wall. 757, 18 L. ed. 673.

To whatever extent these cattle are taxed, the lands of these Indians are rendered just so much less productive to them. The net results to them from their lands are diminished by just exactly the amount of the tax. It operates, in effect, the same as would a tax upon the lands.

Income Tax Cases (Pollock v. Farmers' Loan & T. Co.) 157 U. S. 429, 39 L. ed. 759, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 673; State, Sisters of Charity, Prosecutor, v. Chatham Twp. 52 N. J. L. 373, 9 L.R.A. 198, 20 Atl. 292.

The state can do nothing that will destroy or impair the efficacy of the guardianship of the United States over the Indians.

State v. Cooney, 77 Minn. 518, 80 N. W. 696; United States v. Rickert, 188 U. S. 432, 47 L. ed. 532, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 478.

The schools erected by the Fathers, as well as the various shops and mills in connection with them, and these cattle, became, and have become, means and instrumentalities of the general government to carry out its purposes and to fulfil its treaty obligations; and that the means and instrumentalities of the general government are not subject to taxation by the states is a proposition of Federal law that has long been settled.

M'Culloch v. Maryland, 4 Wheat. 316, 4 L. ed. 579; Page v. Pierce County, 25 Wash. 6, 64 Pac. 801; Van Allen v. The Assessors (Churchill v. Utica) 3 Wall. 573, 18 L. ed. 229.

There is no more right in the state to tax the cattle referred to in the complaint than there is to seize and sell for taxes on them the school appliances, the press in the printing shop, or the stock of supplies in the blacksmith shop, the wagon shop, or the harness shop.

Methodist Episcopal Church, South, Book Agents, v. Hinton, 92 Tenn. 188, 19 L.R.A. 289, 21 S. W. 321; State v. Fisk University, 87 Tenn. 233, 10 S. W. 284; New Haven v. Sheffield Scientific School, 59 Conn. 163, 22 Atl. 156; Cooper Hospital, Prosecutor, v. Burdsall, 63 N. J. L. 85, 42 Atl. 853; State, Sisters of Charity, Prosecutor, v. Chatham Twp. supra; State, Long Branch Firemen's Relief Asso., Prosecutor, v. Johnson. 62 N. J. L. 625, 43 Atl. 573; Cassiano v. Ursuline Academy, 64 Tex. 673; People ex rel. Blackburn v. Barton, 63 App. Div. 581, 71 N. Y. Supp. 933.

The property in question here is vested in a purely charitable corporation, is not subject, like the property of an individual, to be applied to such purposes as may suit the whim or caprice of the owner. But besides, it is, as has been declared by this court, impressed with a public character.

Church of Jesus Christ of L. D. S. v. United States, 136 U. S. 1, 34 L. ed. 481, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 792.

The appropriation of any part of the property upon which these taxes were levied to any purposes foreign to those for which the plaintiff in error was incorporated could be restrained by the state (People ex rel. Ellert v. Cogswell, 113 Cal. 129, 35 L.R.A. 269, 45 Pac. 270), which is permitted to maintain the action by reason of the public interest in the property as well as by reason of the fact that, from indefiniteness in the designation of the beneficiaries,—a characteristic of charitable trusts (Russell v. Allen, 107 U. S. 163, 27 L. ed. 397, 2 Sup. Ct. Rep. 327),—no individual can assert a sufficient definite legal interest in the property to maintain the action. Not only that, but the circumstances under which it was acquired by the plaintiff in error should doubtless furnish ground to a court of equity to compel it to discharge its obvious moral obligation to devote it exclusively to the benefit of the Indians on the reservation. These circumstances furnish abundant ground for the claim that the permission of the government, and of the Indians, to the Fathers, to graze and rear these cattle on the reservation, was given only in pursuance of a tacit and implied agreement on their part that they would devote the same to the nurture, education, and enlightenment of the Indians.

2 Perry, Tr. 733.

An agreement may be implied from the acts of the parties, the circumstances and conditions of their business relations, and particularly by reason of, or pursuant to, a uniform practice extending through years, though express words may not have been employed to indicate the agreement.

Hayes. v. Union Mercantile Co. 27 Mont. 264, 70 Pac. 975; Rice v. Rice, 104 Mich. 371, 62 N. W. 833.

Trusts raised in consequence of an agreement on the part of a party acquiring property to hold it for, or devote it to, specific purposes, are not at all uncommon.

3 Pom. Eq. Jur. 1055.

Often equity implies such an understanding without anything like a definite agreement on the part of the donor so to hold it.

Curdy v. Berton, 79 Cal. 420, 5 L.R.A. 189, 12 Am. St. Rep. 157, 21 Pac. 858.

If the plaintiff in error claims in good faith, and not wholly without reason, that the Indians are interested in the cattle in question, the jurisdiction is properly invoked, and the court must then determine whether that interest in fact exists, and, if it does, whether, by reason of it, the property is exempt.

City R. Co. v. Citizens' Street R. Co. 166 U. S. 557, 41 L. ed. 1114, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 653.

It is true the complaint does not point out the specific provision of the Constitution or the particular statute or treaty that is to be construed, or in virtue of which the right is claimed; but it is not essential, and it would violate all rules of pleading, to do so.

Crystal Springs Land & Water Co. v. Los Angeles, 76 Fed. 153; Bridge Proprs. v. Hoboken Land & Improv. Co. 1 Wall. 116–143, 17 L. ed. 571–576; McCullough v. Virginia, 172 U. S. 102–118, 43 L. ed. 382–388, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 134.

No counsel for defendant in error.

Mr. Justice Peckham, after making the foregoing statement, delivered the opinion of the court:

There is nothing on the face of the complaint above set forth to show either the existence of any question involving the construction or application of the Federal Constitution, or that the constitutionality of any law of the United States, or the validity or construction of any treaty made under its authority, was drawn in question. This must appear in the complaint by the statement in legal and logical form, such as good pleading requires. Arbuckle v. Blackburn, 191 U. S. 405, 413, 48 L. ed. 239, 241, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 148; Spencer v. Duplan Silk Co. 191 U. S. 526, 530, 48 L. ed. 287, 290, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 174. It must appear that the suit really and substantially involves a controversy of such a character. This pleading seems simply to be a claim that the plaintiff is exempt from taxation on the cattle which it owns, because it is an institution of purely public charity; and it would seem from that fact that it was claiming such exemption under some act of the state of Montana, and that its right to recover back these taxes depended [127] upon a statute of that state. *There is no provision in the Federal Constitution, neither is there any Federal law, nor any treaty between the United States and the Indians, that is referred to in the complaint, and it is not averred therein that the claim of the plaintiff to be exempt from taxation is founded upon any constitutional provision or law or treaty of the United States. It cannot be assumed, from any averment in the complaint, that the alleged right of a private owner of property to be exempt from taxation thereon, because it was devoted to purposes of charity among the Indians, was founded upon any Federal ground. On the contrary, it would seem to be plain that it was based upon some statute of the state wherein the tax was imposed and collected, which exempted from state taxation property wholly devoted to charity. The case is, therefore, not one which, from the subject-matter of the controversy, is apparently and in its essence of a Federal nature, or one that involved any of the foregoing questions of Federal right. Swafford v. Templeton, 185 U. S. 487, 46 L. ed. 1005, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 783.

But it is now urged that the entire beneficial use or ownership of the property taxed is in tribal Indians, and that it is, therefore, not subject to taxation by or under state authority; also that the property is made use of by the Federal government, and that it is one of the means and instrumentalities adopted by it through which it carries out its governmental purposes; and such property is, therefore, not subject to be taxed by the state.

That the entire beneficial use or ownership of the property taxed is in tribal Indians, while the legal title only is in plaintiff, is not alleged in the complaint, and such a conclusion does not follow from the allegations to be found in that pleading. It is true that the property of Indians living in the tribal state, and so recognized by the government, is withdrawn from the operation of state laws, and is exempt from taxation thereunder. The Kansas Indians (Blue Jacket v. Johnson County) 5 Wall. 737, 757, 18 L. ed. 667, 673; United States v. Rickert, 188 U. S. 432, 47 L. ed. 532, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 478. The expression "beneficial use" or "beneficial ownership or interest" in property is quite frequent in the *law, and means, in this connection, such [128] a right to its enjoyment as exists where the legal title is in one person and the right to such beneficial use or interest is in another, and where such right is recognized by law, and can be enforced by the courts, at the suit of such owner or of some one in his behalf. And one is also said to have the beneficial ownership of land who has done everything to entitle him to a patent from the government, and who, therefore, has the legal right to such patent, and all that remains to be done is for the proper officer to issue it. Wisconsin C. R. Co. v. Price County, 133 U. S. 496, 33 L. ed. 687, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 341; Central P. R. Co. v. Nevada, 162 U. S. 512, 40 L. ed. 1057, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 885. In such case the land is taxable to such owner, though he has not the legal title. He is the beneficial owner. If such were the case here, it might then be said that the Indians really owned such property, and that it was therefore exempt from taxation. But, as we have said, there is no such averment in the complaint, and no such inference can be drawn from the facts therein set forth. Taking the complaint as it is, it shows on its face that the Indians have neither any legal nor equitable title to the property, neither have they any legal or equitable right to its beneficial use; and it also appears from the complaint that the property is owned unconditionally and absolutely by the plaintiff. The plaintiff, as the owner of these cattle, may, at any time, abandon its present manner of using them, and may devote them, or any income arising from their ownership, to any other purpose it may choose, and the Indians would have no legal right of complaint. The plaintiff might refuse to spend another dollar upon the Indians upon these reservations, and refuse to further maintain or aid them in any way whatever, and no right of the Indians would be thereby violated, nor could they call upon the courts to enforce the application of the plaintiff's property, or the income thereof, to the same purposes the plaintiff had theretofore applied them. There is nothing in Church of Jesus Christ, L. D. S. v. United States, 136 U. S. 7, 34 L. ed. 480, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 792, which, in the remotest degree, applies to this case. This court has heretofore determined that the Indians' interest [129] in this kind of property, *situated on their reservation, was not sufficient to exempt such property, when owned by private individuals, from taxation. Thomas v. Gay, 169 U. S. 264, 42 L. ed. 740, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 340; Wagoner v. Evans, 170 U. S. 588, 42 L. ed. 1154, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 730. In the first of above-cited cases the right to graze over the reservation was leased by the Indians to the owners of the cattle, and it was alleged that if the cattle were taxed the value of the lands would be reduced, because the owners of the cattle would not pay as much for the right to graze as they would if their cattle were not subjected to taxation, and that therefore the tax was, in effect and substance, upon the land. This court held that the tax put upon the cattle of the lessees was too remote and indirect to be deemed a tax upon the lands or privileges of the Indians, citing New York, L. E. & W. R. Co. v. Pennsylvania, 158 U. S. 431, 39 L. ed. 1043, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 896, and other cases, as authority for the decision. This is reaffirmed in the second case above cited. In this case the Indians have not even given a lease, and the owners are not obliged to pay anything for the privilege of grazing, and may, as we have said, devote the property, or the income thereof, to purposes wholly foreign to the Indians themselves. However meritorious the conduct of the owners of the cattle may be, in devoting the income or any portion of the principal of their property to the charitable work of improving and educating the Indians (and we cordially admit the merit of such conduct), we cannot see that there is, on that account, the least claim for exemption from taxation because of any Federal provision, constitutional or otherwise.

Nor is there any merit in the proposition that the plaintiff is made use of by the government of the United States, and is one of the means used by it to carry out its obligations to the Indians, under the Constitution or laws of the United States, and that therefore the property of the plaintiff which is thus used is not subject to state taxation. No such averment of fact is to be found in the pleading; nor does any such conclusion arise from the facts which appear therein. The government may lease a building from a private owner for the purpose of better carrying on its governmental duties, and yet the building is not *such an instrumentality of government as [130] prevents its taxation by or under state authority. Congress has not constituted this corporation an agency of its own for the purpose of discharging any duties which the government may owe to the Indians. It has, as the complaint avers, made in the past some appropriations from time to time to the corporation to aid it in its own work among the Indians, but that is far from constituting the corporation an agency of its own, to carry into effect its own governmental powers, granted by the Constitution or by law. And even such appropriations ceased years ago.

The case, in short, is one of that class where we have frequently held that the claim of a Federal question must have some foundation of plausibility (St. Joseph & G. I. R. Co. v. Steele, 167 U. S. 659, 42 L. ed. 315, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 925; McCain v. Des Moines, 174 U. S. 168, 43 L. ed. 936, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 644) in order to give jurisdiction. This has none.

The Circuit Court was right in refusing jurisdiction, and its judgment dismissing the complaint on account of the lack thereof is affirmed.

ELEANORA D. SPEER, in Her Own Behalf and by Emory Speer, Her Husband and Next Friend, James Mosher, One of the Substituted Trustees under the Last Will and Testament of Ethelbert Carroll Morgan, Deceased, and Anna M. Mosher, Appts.,

v.

MICHAEL J. COLBERT, One of the Substituted Trustees under the Last Will and Testament of Ethelbert Morgan, Deceased, et al.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 130-147.)

1. Wills—bequest to corporation—misnomer.—The institution incorporated as

---

NOTE.—On devises for charitable uses—see notes to Inglis v. Sailor's Snug Harbor, 7 L. ed. U. S. 617, and Vidal v. Philadelphia, 11 L. ed. U. S. 205.

As to bequests for religious purposes—see notes to Cottman v. Grace, 3 L.R.A. 145, and Bullard v. Chandler, 5 L.R.A. 104.

On bequests for educational purposes—see notes to Bullard v. Chandler, 5 L.R.A. 104, and Penny v. Croul, 5 L.R.A. 858.

As to power of a court of equity to remove a trustee or appoint a new trustee—see note to May v. May, 42 L. ed. U. S. 179.

On uncertainty in bequests—see notes to Cottman v. Grace, 3 L.R.A. 145; Stratton v. Physio-Medical Institute, 5 L.R.A. 33, and Heiskell v. Chickasaw Lodge No. 8, 4 L.R.A. 699.

"The President and Directors of Georgetown College" by the act of Congress of June 10, 1844 (6 Stat. at L. 912, chap. 41), which expressly provides that no misnomer of a corporation shall defeat or annul any donation, is entitled to the property bequeathed to "Georgetown University in the District of Columbia," where there is not, in such District, any such incorporated institution of learning as "Georgetown University," separate from and independent of "Georgetown College."

2. Wills—bequests for religious purposes.—Religious control exercised over incorporated institutions which are not sectarian institutions under their charters does not make them such within the meaning of D. C. Rev. Stat. § 457, and § 34 of the Maryland Bill of Rights, invalidating gifts and devises for religious purposes, unless made at least one month before the death of the donor or testator.

3. Wills—bequest to educational institution for colonial research.—The power conferred upon Georgetown College by the act of June 10, 1844 (6 Stat. at L. 912, chap. 41), to give instruction in the liberal arts and sciences, enables it to take a bequest to be used and held as an endowment for the prosecution of research in the colonial history of Maryland and the territory embraced in the District of Columbia, and the obtaining and preserving of archives and papers relating to that subject.

4. Trusts—death or resignation of trustees—appointment of successors.—The death or resignation of the trustees named in a will, who are directed to pay and see to the application of a bequest to an educational institution, to be held and used as an endowment for the purposes of colonial research, does not cause the trust to fail, but the court may appoint their successors.

5. Wills—uncertainty in bequest.—Uncertainty as to the amount cannot successfully be urged to defeat the bequest of a sum not exceeding $5,000, to be equally divided between two named charitable institutions, which the testator directs to be made in the event of the invalidity of a prior bequest of a sum not exceeding $5,000 for another purpose.

6. Wills—uncertainty in bequest.—A bequest of a sufficient sum, not to exceed $3,000, the income to be applied to maintain a scholarship in a medical college, is not void for any uncertainty as to the amount.

7. Wills—uncertainty in bequest.—The discretion to be exercised by the trustees under a will in selecting the medical college in which a scholarship is to be maintained does not avoid the bequest, where the testator expressed his preference for Georgetown College, if the scholarship could be maintained in that institution, and if not, directed that it be a scholarship in some medical college in the District of Columbia.

[No. 153.]

Argued December 13, 14, 1905. Decided January 2, 1906.

APPEAL from the Court of Appeals of the District of Columbia to review a judgment construing a will, entered by that court upon reversing the judgment of the Supreme Court of that District. Affirmed.

See same case below, 24 App. D. C. 187.

Statement by Mr. Justice Peckham:

One of the appellants, Mrs. Speer, on the 5th of March, 1901, filed this bill in her own behalf and by her husband and next friend, Emory Speer, in the supreme court of the District of Columbia, to obtain a judicial construction of the will of her deceased brother, Ethelbert Carroll Morgan, who died, testate, on May 5, 1891, a resident of the District of Columbia. Answers to the bill were duly filed and the supreme court gave judgment construing the will, which, upon appeal to the court of appeals of the District of Columbia, was reversed, and judgment was entered, construing the will, by the court of appeals. From that judgment Mrs. Speer, together with some of the parties defendant in the suit, appealed, and brought the case here for review.

The will in question was executed on the 22d day of April, 1891, and the testator died May 5, 1891. He was never married, and left as his next of kin and heirs at law two brothers and three sisters, viz.: James D. and Cecil Morgan, and Mrs. Speer, the plaintiff in this suit, and Mrs. Anna M. Mosher and Mrs. Ada M. Hill. He appointed William J. Stephenson and John H. Magruder the executors and trustees of his will, the former of whom subsequently died and the *latter [132] resigned, and Michael J. Colbert and James Mosher were duly appointed by the court as substituted trustees under the will. The estate of the testator was treated by him in his will as consisting of two parts,—that which he had himself accumulated, and that which came to him through the will of his father, who died in June, 1889. His own accumulations amounted to a little over $23,000, while the estate which he received from his father somewhat exceeded $55,000, the total being a trifle over $78,000. The estate of the deceased had been received by the substituted trustees, Colbert and Mosher, when this bill was filed by Mrs. Speer against them, and also against Mrs. Anna M. Mosher, the wife of James Mosher, and a sister of the testator, and also against the two corporations incorporated as St. Vincent's Orphan Asylum and as Trustees of St. Joseph's Male Orphan Asylum, both being in the District of Columbia, who were made parties because, as the plaintiff alleges in her bill, they claim to be the beneficiaries under the clauses of the will of the testator, leaving a legacy to be equally divided between St. Vincent's and

St. Joseph's Catholic Orphan Asylums in the city of Washington, and in order that they might make proof of their identity, if any existed, with the St. Vincent, and also with the St. Joseph, Catholic Orphan Asylums, mentioned in the will, and that they might be bound by the adjudication which might be made by the court in all respects hereafter; and also against John D. Whitney, James P. Fagan, Edward McTammany, James B. Becker, and Edward I. Devitt, who, the plaintiff alleged, claimed to be, by succession, the president and directors of Georgetown College, and who, as such, claimed an interest in the estate of the testator, under the clauses of his will mentioning Georgetown University, in the District of Columbia; and the plaintiff alleged that they were made defendants in order that they might make proof of succession to the original incorporators of Georgetown College, and that their claims to the legacy mentioned in the will [133] might be *adjudicated by the court. The bill alleged that the will of the testator was duly admitted to probate in the proper court in the District of Columbia. After making certain provisions, not here material, the will of the testator is as follows:

"All the rest and residue of my estate real, personal and mixed of which I am now possessed or shall possess at my death (other than my share under my father's will of which I would become possessed at my mother's death) I give bequeath and devise to my trustees hereinafter named and their heirs and assigns with full power to sell convey mortgage and reinvest, in trust nevertheless to apply the income and profits to the use and benefit of my sisters Eleanora Speer wife of Emory Speer and Minnie Mosher wife of James Mosher in equal parts during their lives and at their death to deliver and convey each sister's share to her issue and if either sister die without issue living at her death, to deliver and convey said part to the survivor or her issue if any survive her.

"And if my said two sisters shall both die leaving no issue living at their deaths I direct my said trustees to deliver and convey all the said rest and remainder of my estate (excepting my share aforesaid under my father's will) to Georgetown University in the District of Columbia to be an endowment in equal shares of the literary and medical departments thereof.

. . . . . .

"And I hereby give bequeath and devise any and all the estate real personal and mixed devised to me under my father's will and to which I become entitled to have and possess upon my mother's death to my trustees hereinafter named their heirs and assigns forever with full power to sell convey mortgage encumber and reinvest in trust nevertheless to pay and see to the application of

"First the sum of ten thousand ($10,000) dollars to Georgetown University in the District of Columbia to be used and held as an endowment for the prosecution of research in the colonial history of Maryland and the territory now embraced in the District of Columbia and obtaining and preserving *ar-[134] chives and papers having relation thereto, and known as the James Ethelbert Morgan fund.

"Second a sum not to exceed five thousand ($5,000) dollars to be applied and expended under the personal supervision of my trustees to the purchase and erection of a chime of bells and either a side altar or memorial window or a bell and either a side altar or a memorial window for some one Catholic church . . . said church to be in the District and to—designated by my mother by her last will or otherwise and if she fail so to do I direct my trustees to carry out this trust as a memorial of my mother Nora Morgan and donate the same to some Catholic church . . . giving a preference, if there be one, built by the Jesuits. And in event this clause & gift be void I direct said sum not exceeding $5,000 five thousand dollars shall be equally divided between St. Vincents' and St. Joseph's Catholic orphan asylums in the city of Washington.

"Third. A sufficient sum not to exceed three thousand dollars the income to be applied to maintain a scholarship in the study of medicine preferably in Georgetown University; otherwise in some medical college in the District, to be known as the E. Carroll Morgan scholarship.

"Fourth, the sum of five thousand ($5000) dollars to form a fund known as the E. Carroll Morgan fund or scholarship to be applied as I may hereafter verbally indicate to my trustees or if I fail, as my trustees with the advice of proper persons may decide to the maintenance of a scientific department, or the foundation and the application of the income to a scholarship in the classical department, in the University of Georgetown in the District of Columbia. That the qualifications under both or either of the two last clauses of this will shall be that the applicant be born in the District of Columbia and at the time or within a year a student in a Catholic or a public school of the District of Columbia and most excellent in a competitive examination conducted by the faculty of the University of Georgetown.

"And lastly as to all the rest and residue of my aforesaid *share of my father's estate[135] my said trustees their heirs and assigns shall hold the same for the benefit of my aforesaid sisters Ellenora and Minnie upon the same limitations conditions remainders and powers and in the same manner as the trustees under my father's will, will then hold retain and possess the 'remainder' and bulk of the respective shares of my said two sisters I wish my brother Cecil to have my share of my father's library I nominate and appoint William J. Stephenson and John H. Magruder my executors and trustees of this my last will and testament.

"In witness whereof I have signed and sealed and published and declared this as my will this 22nd day of April, 1891."

The plaintiff alleged that the bequest and devise to Georgetown University, upon the death of the two sisters, without issue living at the time of their death, were void, because, as alleged, there was no such incorporated institution in the District of Columbia as Georgetown University, capable of taking the bequest and devise, and also upon the ground that, assuming there was a simple misnomer, and that Georgetown College was meant instead of Georgetown University, yet, even upon that assumption, Georgetown College was incapable of taking the devise and bequest, because it was under the supervision and control of the Order of Jesuits, and that the college was therefore a sectarian institution. It was also averred that the bequest of $10,000 to Georgetown University in the District of Columbia, to be used and held as an endowment for the prosecution of research in the colonial history of Maryland and the territory now embraced in the District of Columbia, "was void, upon the same ground, and also because there was no charter power or authority in Georgetown College (assuming that institution to be meant) to receive the bequest." Also that the bequest of a sum not to exceed the amount of $5,000, to be applied and expended under the personal supervision of the trustees, for the purchase and erection of a chime of bells, etc., was void as was also the alternative bequest of an amount not to exceed [136] that sum for *the benefit of the two Catholic orphan asylums in the city of Washington, the alternative bequest being void on the ground that those asylums were under the charge and control of persons belonging to religious orders, and therefore incapable of taking the bequest, and on the further ground that the amount of the bequest was uncertain. The bill averred also that the remaining bequest of a sum not to exceed $3,000, and also the bequest of $5,000, for the purpose of maintaining and founding scholarships, etc., were void, because of their uncertainty and the want of clearly defined conditions under which the funds should be applied. The defendants answered the bill and none of them conceded the validity of the claims made therein. Colbert, one of the substituted trustees, and also John D. Whitney and others, for and on behalf of the president and directors of Georgetown College, and also the trustees of St. Joseph's Male Orphan Asylum and of St. Vincent's Orphan Asylum, all claimed the validity of the bequests contained in the will, while the answer of Mosher, the other substituted trustee, simply expressed his willingness that the provisions of the will of the testator should be given effect and carried out only so far as they were legal and valid.

On the trial proof was taken in regard to the name and corporate status of Georgetown College, claiming the devises and bequests made to and on behalf of Georgetown University.

The supreme court, in an elaborate opinion (reported in 31 Wash. L. Rep. 630, 646), held that the devises and bequests to trustees named in the will, of the testator's estate, exclusive of that which came to him under the will of his father, were valid and effectual. The court also held that all the clauses and subclauses in the will of the testator, disposing of property acquired by the testator under his father's will, were void, and that the property therein spoken of became part of the residuum of the estate of the testator, and vested in the beneficiaries entitled to take under the residuary clause of the will. The court of appeals, upon review *of this judgment, held that the clauses of [137] the will were valid, except the bequest of "a sum not to exceed five thousand dollars," to be expended under the personal supervision of the trustees in the purchase and erection of a chime of bells, and the erection of an altar or memorial window, etc.; but the alternative bequest of the sum not to exceed $5,000, to be equally divided between St. Vincent and St. Joseph's Orphan Asylums in the city of Washington, was good. It also held that the clause in the will, providing for the application of $5,000 to form a fund to be known as the E. Carroll Morgan fund or scholarship, to be applied as "I [the testator] may hereafter verbally indicate to my trustees or if I fail, as my trustees with the advice of proper persons may decide, to the maintenance of a scientific department, or the foundation and the application of the income to a scholarship in the classical department in the University of Georgetown in the District of Columbia," was void. No appeal has been taken from this last portion of the judgment of the court of appeals.

Mr. Conway Robinson argued the cause and filed a brief for appellants:

A college is an organized assembly or collection of persons established by law and empowered to co-operate for the performance of some special function, or for the promotion of some given object, which may be educational, political, ecclesiastical, or scientific in its character.

27 Am. & Eng. Enc. Law, p. 682; Black, Law Dict. College, p. 220.

In the most common use of the word, it (college) designates an institution of learning (usually incorporated) which offers instruction in the liberal arts and humanities and in scientific branches, but not in the technical arts, or those studies preparatory to admission to the professions.

Black, Law Dict. College, p. 221.

A university is an institution of higher learning, consisting of an assemblage of colleges united under one corporate organization and government, affording instruction in the arts, sciences, and the learned professions, and conferring degrees.

27 Am. & Eng. Enc. Law, University, p. 682; Black, Law Dict. University, p. 1202.

As an incorporated religious sect, order, or denomination, and as an institution duly empowered and enfranchised as such corporation to teach religion or the gospel, and which, as shown by the record in this cause, actually taught the same, testators' legacies and devises to this institution are in direct contravention of the Declaration of Rights.

Murphy v. Dallam, 1 Bland, Ch. 529; Grove v. Disciples of Jesus Christ, 33 Md. 454; State use of Methodist Episcopal Church v. Warren, 28 Md. 354; Church Extension of M. E. Church v. Smith, 56 Md. 392; Catholic Cathedral Church v. Manning, 72 Md. 116, 19 Atl. 603.

No charter powers constitute the sanction of the legislature contemplated and required by said Declaration of Rights, but such sanction must be expressly given to each particular devise or bequest in order to render it valid.

Catholic Cathedral Church v. Manning, and Church Extension of M. E. Church v. Smith, supra; Orrick v. Boehm, 49 Md. 85.

The terms "literary or scientific college or university" do not embrace a medical college.

People v. Gunn, 96 N. Y. 321.

The corporation of the Roman Catholic Clergymen is unquestionably a mere private corporation, its original endowment, and most of its subsequent endowments, having come from private parties and private sources.

Society for the Propagation of Gospel v. New Haven, 8 Wheat. 464, 487, 5. L. ed. 662, 668; Vincennes University v. Indiana, 14 How. 269, 277, 14 L. ed. 416, 420.

Had the act of June 10, 1844, contained any language purporting to repeal, change, or alter anything in the prior Maryland statute or acts of Congress, it would have been null and void.

Charlotte, C. & A. R. Co. v. Gibbes, 142 U. S. 391, 35 L. ed. 1054, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 255; Minneapolis & St. L. R. Co. v. Beckwith, 129 U. S. 28, 32 L. ed. 586, 9 Sup. Ct. Rep. 207; Pembina Consol. Silver Min. & Mill. Co. v. Pennsylvania, 125 U. S. 189, 31 L. ed. 654, 2 Inters. Com. Rep. 24, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 737; Providence Bank v. Billings, 4 Pet. 514, 562, 7 L. ed. 939, 956; Berlin v. New Britain, 9 Conn. 181; Com. v Pennsylvania Canal Co. 66 Pa. 47, 5 Am. Rep. 329; Pennsylvania College Cases. (Jefferson College v. Washington & J. College) 13 Wall. 212, 214, 20 L. ed. 552, 553; Covington & L. Turnp. Road Co. v. Sandford, 164 U. S. 592, 41 L. ed. 565, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 198.

The act of June 10, 1844, is void and unconstitutional under art. 5 of the Constitution of the United States.

United States v. Lee, 106 U. S. 219, 220, 27 L. ed. 181, 182, 1 Sup. Ct. Rep. 240; Wright v. Wright, 2 Md. 452, 56 Am. Dec. 723; Harness v. Chesapeake & O. Canal Co. 1 Md. Ch. 252; University of Maryland v. Williams, 9 Gill & J. 412, 31 Am. Dec. 72; Grove v. Todd, 41 Md. 641, 20 Am. Rep. 76; 2 Kent, Com. 13; Hagar v. Reclamation Dist. No. 108, 111 U. S. 708, 28 L. ed. 572, 4 Sup. Ct. Rep. 663; Hurtado v. California, 110 U. S. 535, 536, 28 L. ed. 238, 239, 4 Sup. Ct. Rep. 111, 292; Fletcher v. Peck, 6 Cranch, 135–137, 3 L. ed. 177, 178.

There is a fundamental principle of right and justice inherent in the nature and spirit of the social compact, the character and genius of our government, the causes from which they sprang, and the purposes for which they were established, that rises above, and restrains, and sets bounds to the power of legislation, which the legislature cannot pass without exceeding its rightful authority. It is that principle which protects the life, liberty, and property of the citizen from violation in the unjust exercise of legislative power.

University of Maryland v. Williams, 9 Gill & J. 408, 31 Am. Dec. 72; Hagerstown v. Sehner, 37 Md. 191; Calder v. Bull, 3 Dall. 388, 1 L. ed. 649; Fletcher v. Peck, supra; Baltimore v. State, 15 Md. 469, 74 Am. Dec. 572; Harness v. Chesapeake & O. Canal Co. 1 Md. Ch. 251.

In a similar case in Maryland it was held that the later act created a new corporation, and did not destroy the old corporation.

University of Maryland v. Williams, 9 Gill & J. 365, 31 Am. Dec. 72.

In a Georgia case a railroad company first obtained a charter under the general incorporation laws, and afterwards was chartered by special act of the legislature, and the latter was held a separate, independent, and distinct charter.

Snook v. Georgia Improv. Co. 83 Ga. 66, 9 S. E. 1104.

Identity of name, powers, and purposes does not create an identity of origin or existence, any more than any other statutes alike in language, passed by different legislative bodies, can properly be said to owe their existence to both. To each statute, and to the corporation created by it, there can be but one legislative paternity.

Nashua & L. R. Corp. v. Boston & L. R. Corp. 136 U. S. 373, 34 L. ed. 367, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1004.

Mr. Marion Erwin also argued the cause and filed a brief for appellants:

If the bequest for an endowment for the medical department be considered as intended for the corporation claimed in the catalogue of 1889–90 to be a university, chartered and recognized as such by the acts of Congress of 1815 and 1833, the bequest, even to the medical department, would be a gift to, or for the benefit and in ease of, a denomination or religious order, and would therefore fall within the prohibition of the Bill of Rights.

If, on the other hand, there be no charter other than that of 1844 for instruction of youth in the "liberal arts and sciences," the gift for the endowment of the medical department would be a gift to a medical college without a charter, and would therefore be void, or it would be a gift to a literary college not empowered to receive such a gift for such a purpose.

People v. Gunn, 96 N. Y. 317.

The "medical department," the beneficiary, not being an incorporated institution, or, if an incorporated institution, its charter having lapsed and the use not being a charity, the devise must fail.

Stratton v. Physio-Medical College, 149 Mass. 505, 5 L.R.A. 33, 14 Am. St. Rep. 442, 21 N. E. 874; Goodell v. Union Asso. of Children's Home, 29 N. J. Eq. 32; 2 Pom. Eq. Jur. 1019, note; Church Extension of M. E. Church v. Smith, 56 Md. 397; 2 Perry, Tr. §§ 711, 712; James v. Allen, 3 Meriv. 17; Norris v. Thomson, 19 N. J. Eq. 311; Morice v. Bishop of Durham, 9 Ves. Jr. 399, 10 Ves. Jr. 522; Atty. Gen. v. Haberdashers' Co. 1 Myl. & K. 428.

If the bequest be considered as one for the company of the medical department of Georgetown University, and if that be a charity, when the charter lapsed there was a resulting trust in favor of the testator's heirs at law and next of kin.

Easterbrooks v. Tillinghast, 5 Gray, 17.

The bequest is not only indefinite as to its objects and uncertain as to the beneficiary, but the claimants before the court as the beneficiaries are persons claiming to be the successors under a charter which provides for no such use.

Stratton v. Physio-Medical College, supra; People v. Powers, 147 N. Y. 104, 35 L.R.A. 502, 41 N. E. 432.

The power to take and hold property by gift, grant, devise, or otherwise expressed in the charter of a religious corporation, did not extend to relieve it from the provisions of the Bill of Rights.

Church Extension of M. E. Church v. Smith, 56 Md. 363; Catholic Cathedral Church v. Manning, 72 Md. 116, 19 Atl. 603.

The purpose of the act of Congress of 1866, in keeping in force the Bill of Rights, is manifest. It is a remedial statute, and, as such, must be construed liberally to effect the object aimed at, and to prevent the evils (from a public-policy standpoint) which the statute was intended to cure.

Endlich, Interpretation of Statutes, § 111; Doe ex dem. Howson v. Waterton, 3 Barn. & Ald. 151.

The history of statutes similar to the 34th section of the Maryland Bill of Rights, and the liberal construction uniformly given them to effect the object aimed at, is given in—

Price v. Maxwell, 28 Pa. 33.

The courts go behind corporate charter cloaks to determine from the facts whether the gift is for the benefit, or in ease, of a religious order, denomination, or teacher of religion.

Price v. Maxwell, supra; State ex rel. Nevada Orphan Asylum v. Hallock, 16 Nev. 373; Coates v. Campbell, 37 Minn. 501, 35 N. W. 366; Cook County v. Chicago Industrial School for Girls, 125 Ill. 541, 1 L.R.A. 437, 8 Am. St. Rep. 386, 18 N. E. 183; State ex rel. Orr v. New Orleans, 50 La. Ann. 880, 24 So. 666; Boyce v. Christian, 69 Mo. 492.

The stated reading of the Bible in a public school renders it a place of worship within the provision of the Constitution of Wisconsin. The use of the Bible as a text-book, and the stated reading thereof in the public schools without restriction, is sectarian instruction.

State ex rel. Weiss v. District Board, 76 Wis. 177, 7 L.R.A. 330, 20 Am. St. Rep. 41, 44 N. W. 967.

We do not think, however, that this bequest for colonial research is a gift at all to the university as the beneficiary.

Church Extension of M. E. Church v. Smith, 56 Md. 397.

The gift is not a charity.

Kelly v. Nichols, 17 R. I. 306, 18 R. I. 62, 19 L.R.A. 413, 21 Atl. 906, 25 Atl. 840; Craig v. Lilly, 6 Sadler (Pa.) 183, 19 W.

N. C. 375, 9 Atl. 171; Goodell v. Union Asso. of Children's Home, supra; 2 Pom. Eq. Jur. § 1019; Gloucester v. Wood, 3 Hare, 131.

A gift to a specific object of charity that fails, where there is no general charitable intention, cannot be applied cy près, even in those jurisdictions where that doctrine is applicable.

Atty. Gen. v. Bishop of Oxford, 1 Bro. Ch. 444, note; Anonymous, 2 Freem. C. L. Rep. 261; Atty. Gen. v. Whitelcy, 11 Ves. Jr. 251; Cherry v. Mott, 1 Myl. & C. 123; Clark v. Taylor, 1 Drew. 642; Fisk v. Atty. Gen. L. R. 4 Eq. 521; Carter v. Balfour, 19 Ala. 814; Russell v. Kellett, 3 Smale & G. 264; Sinnett v. Herbert, L. R. 7 Ch. 232; Re White, 55 L. J. Ch. N. S. 701; Lechmere v. Curtler, 24 L. J. Ch. N. S. 647; Stratton v. Physio-Medical College, 149 Mass. 505, 5 L.R.A. 33, 14 Am. St. Rep. 442, 21 N. E. 874.

To be a valid trust, there must be persons who can prove to the court their undoubted right to the uses of the trust, or objects named of a tangible nature which can be assisted; otherwise it could not determine who could complain of a breach of the trust, or enter a decree for its performance.

Bishop of Cloyne v. Young, 2 Ves. Sr. 91; Robinson v. Waddelow, 8 Sim. 134; Knight v. Knight, 3 Beav. 148, 174; Williams v. Kershaw, 5 Clark & F. 111; Kendall v. Granger, 5 Beav. 300; Nichols v. Allen, 130 Mass. 211, 39 Am. Rep. 445; Church Extension of M. E. Church v. Smith, 56 Md. 362; Grimes v. Harmon, 35 Ind. 221, 9 Am. Rep. 690; Heiss v. Murphey, 40 Wis. 276; Goddard v. Pomeroy, 36 Barb. 548; Gumble v. Pfluger, 62 How. Pr. 118; Philadelphia Baptist Asso. v. Hart, 4 Wheat. 1, 4 L. ed. 499.

The rule has since been reviewed by the Supreme Court of the United States, and modified only to the extent that gifts strictly to charitable uses are to a certain extent excepted from its operations.

Ould v. Washington Hospital for Foundlings, 95 U. S. 303, 24 L. ed. 450; Russell v. Allen, 107 U. S. 163, 27 L. ed. 397, 2 Sup. Ct. Rep. 327; Jones v. Habersham, 107 U. S. 174, 27 L. ed. 401, 2 Sup. Ct. Rep. 336.

A bequest for the "purchase and distribution of such books as may have a tendency to promote the interest of virtue and religion and happiness of mankind," was held not to be a charity, and void for uncertainty.

2 Perry. Tr. § 713; Brown v. Yeale, 7 Ves. Jr. 50; Briggs v. Hartley, 19 L. J. Ch. N. S. 416.

Courts do not uphold or administer trusts for particular purposes which are not charitable within the meaning of the law, nor trusts expressed in general words which do not come within the legal signification of the word "charity."

2 Perry, Tr. § 709.

No particular church was named as the beneficiary for the chime, altar, or window; and the testator left it to his mother to designate one.

Bristol v. Bristol, 53 Conn. 242, 5 Atl. 687.

But in any event, the mother having died without exercising the power, the bequest lapsed.

Gambell v. Trippe, 75 Md. 252, 15 L.R.A. 235, 32 Am. St. Rep. 388, 23 Atl. 461; Fontain v. Ravenel, 17 How. 382, 15 L. ed. 85.

This is a gift for improvement of a Catholic church.

Baker v. Fales, 16 Mass. 495.

The words used "not to exceed 5,000," were not intended to mean $5,000.

2 Perry, Tr. § 714; Ewen v. Bannerman, 2 Dow & C. 74; Flint v. Warren, 15 Sim. 626; Second Cong. Soc. v. First Cong. Soc. 14 N. H. 315; Russell v. Jackson, 10 Hare, 204; Coxe v. Basset, 3 Ves. Jr. 155; Hartshorne v. Nicholson, 26 Beav. 58.

Where a bequest was to testator's mother, to use whatever portion she pleases on condition that she make a will leaving whatever portion she does not use to certain charitable objects, it was held that the trust in favor of the charitable objects failed for uncertainty of amount donated.

Mills v. Newberry, 112 Ill. 123, 54 Am. Rep. 213, 1 N. E. 156.

To constitute a valid trust, undoubtedly three circumstances must concur: Sufficient words to raise it, a definite subject, and a certain or ascertained object.

Cruwys v. Colman, 9 Ves. Jr. 323.

Charitable trusts are further distinguished from ordinary trusts by the uncertainty of their beneficiaries. Such uncertainty does not cause a charitable trust to fail.

5 Am. & Eng. Enc. Law, p. 905.

This statement is to be understood, however, as referring to the uncertainty of the individuals to which the bequest is made, and not to the uncertainty of a class of individuals from which the beneficiaries shall come.

Ibid.

The trustees named having no longer the power to execute the personal discretion vested in them, one being dead and the other having resigned, the trust is not capable of being executed.

Fontain v. Ravenel, 17 How. 369–382, 15 L. ed. 80–86; Gambell v. Trippe, supra.

Whenever a power is of a kind that indicates a personal confidence, it must prima facie be understood to be confined to the individual to whom it is given, and will not, except by express words, pass to others to whom, by legal transmission, the same character may belong.

Cole v. Wade, 16 Ves. Jr. 27; Alexander v. Alexander, 2 Ves. Sr. 643; Powles v. Jordan, 62 Md. 503; Gambell v. Trippe, supra; Atty. Gen. v. Berryman, 1 Dick. 168; Fontain v. Ravenel, supra.

The view that, while the amount is uncertain, the substituted trustees can, under the direction of the court, make the selection of the medical college; and that, when the selection is made, this will fix the object and render definite the sum which will have to be set aside to create the income to maintain the scholarship,—is directly opposed to that expressed by this court.

Fontain v. Ravenel, 17 How. 369, 15 L. ed. 80. See also Pritchard v. Thompson, 95 N. Y. 76, 47 Am. Rep. 9.

It is merely a bequest falling within the class of gifts designated "benevolence" and "liberality."

Stratton v. Physio-Medical College, 149 Mass. 505, 5 L.R.A. 33, 14 Am. St. Rep. 442, 21 N. E. 874.

The beneficiaries are indefinite, uncertain, not chartered, and not limited to any charitable objects.

2 Pom. Eq. Jur. § 1019, notes; Gloucester v. Wood, 3 Hare, 131; Goodell v. Union Asso. of Children's Home, 29 N. J. Eq. 32; DeCamp v. Dobbins, 29 N. J. Eq. 46; Jones v. Habersham, 107 U. S. 174, 27 L. ed. 401, 2 Sup. Ct. Rep. 336; Atty. Gen. v. Haberdashers' Co. 1 Myl. & K. 428; 2 Perry, Tr. § 712; Kelly v. Nichols, 17 R. I. 306, 18 R. I. 62, 19 L.R.A. 413, 21 Atl. 906, 25 Atl. 840.

It is clear that the first provision, creating a $5,000 "E. Carroll Morgan fund" or "scholarship," to be applied as testator might thereafter indicate, is void. It does not appear that he did verbally so indicate.

Aston v. Wood, L. R. 6 Eq. 419; 2 Perry, Tr. § 705, note.

This alternative provision also avoids the bequest for the following reasons: It was not a bequest to either use definitely; the discretion to apply it to the one purpose or the other was a power and discretion vested in his trustees named personally, to be exercised in conjunction with unnamed persons to be personally selected by them.

Pritchard v. Thompson, supra; People v. Powers, 147 N. Y. 104, 35 L.R.A. 502, 41 N. E. 432; Gambell v. Trippe, 75 Md. 252, 15 L.R.A. 235, 32 Am. St. Rep. 388, 23 Atl. 461; Powles v. Jordan, Cole v. Wade, Atty. Gen. v. Berryman, and Alexander v. Alexander, supra; Bristol v. Bristol, 53 Conn. 242, 5 Atl. 687; Fontain v. Ravenel, supra.

Mr. Joseph R. Lamar also argued the cause and filed a brief for appellants:

A secular charter does not destroy a religious order.

State ex rel. Nevada Orphan Asylum v. Hallock, 16 Nev. 373; Kelley v. Welborn, 110 Ga. 540, 35 S. E. 636; Kerr v. Dougherty, 79 N. Y. 327; Kenrick v. Cole, 61 Mo. 572; Knight's Estate, 159 Pa. 500, 28 Atl. 303. See also cases cited in note to Dakota Synod v. State, 14 L.R.A. 418.

The provision to "see to the application" contemplates that the trustees should themselves devise a scheme. The death of the one and the resignation of the other make it impossible for the trustees to "see to the application," and the gift cannot be effectuated under the cy près power, for it does not exist in the District.

Fontain v. Ravenel, 17 How. 369, 15 L. ed. 80.

The bequest for colonial research not being intended as an absolute gift to Georgetown University, but to it in trust, and the trust failing, the property must descend either to the heir or to the residuary legatee.

Stratton v. Physio-Medical College, 149 Mass. 505, 5 L.R.A. 33, 14 Am. St. Rep. 442, 21 N. E. 874; Maught v. Getzendanner, 65 Md. 527, 57 Am. Rep. 352, 5 Atl. 471.

The colonial endowment fund is not a charity, but rather a benevolence.

2 Underhill, Wills, 1197–1199; World's Columbian Exposition v. United States, 6 C. C. A. 58, 18 U. S. App. 42, 56 Fed. 654, 56 Fed. 630; Kelly v. Nichols, 17 R. I. 306, 18 R. I. 62, 19 L.R.A. 413, 21 Atl. 907, 25 Atl. 840; Mason v. Perry, 22 R. I. 475, 48 Atl. 671.

To give property to an agent to do with it as he pleases is equivalent to a conveyance in fee; but, where the gift is to an agent, and it happens that the agent is to act as a trustee, but the amount of the gift or the object of the trust is not definitely stated, the devise fails.

Maught v. Getzendanner, supra.

A devise under which the object is to be selected or the amount to be fixed by the trustee is void.

Fontain v. Ravenel and Maught v. Getzendanner, supra; Wheeler v. Smith, 9 How. 55, 13 L. ed. 44; Prettyman v. Baker, 91 Md. 539, 46 Atl. 1020; Nichols v. Allen, 130 Mass. 211, 39 Am. Rep. 445; Olliffe v. Wells, 130 Mass. 221.

The devise for the colonial fund, and for the scholarship, is void because it fails to indicate who the beneficiaries are, or how they are to be determined.

Tilden v. Green, 130 N. Y. 29, 14 L.R.A. 33, 27 Am. St. Rep. 487, 28 N. E. 880; Le- page v. McNamara, 5 Iowa, 124; Barnes v. Barnes, 3 Cranch, C. C. 269, Fed. Cas. No. 1,014; Methodist Episcopal Church v. Jackson Square Evangelical Lutheran Church, 84 Md. 173, 35 Atl. 8; Beekman v. Bonsor, 23 N. Y. 298, 80 Am. Dec. 269; White v. Fisk, 22 Conn. 31.

Messrs. Geo. E. Hamilton and M. J. Colbert argued the cause and filed a brief for appellee:

Georgetown College is an edueational institution, and not a sectarian or religious institution.

Bradfield v. Roberts, 175 U. S. 296, 44 L. ed. 169, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 121.

It is never required that all particulars of name or description of person or thing should be preeisely accurate in order to the validity of the provisions of a will. It is always sufficient that the courts, after learning the surrounding facts and circumstances, should be able with reasonable certainty to declare the intent of the testator.

1 Redf. Wills, chap. 10, § 41.

Mr. Justice Peckham, after making the foregoing statement, delivered the opinion of the court:

The opinion of the court of appeals in this ease, delivered by Chief Justiee Alvey (24 App. D. C. 187), is entirely satisfactory to us, and leaves little to be said in addition.

[141] For *the purpose, however, of simply stating the opinion of this court upon the various questions, without discussing them at length, we add what follows.

The appellants insist that the gift of the property to the Georgetown University is void, as having been made to a seetarian institution less than one calendar month prior to the testator's death, and that sueh disposition was therefore in violation of §457 of the Revised Statutes of the District of Columbia. That seetion makes valid and effectual all sales, gifts, and devises prohibited by the 34th section of the Declaration of Rights of the state of Maryland, adopted in 1776, "provided, that in case of gifts and devises, the same shall be made at least one calendar month before the death of the donor or testator." 14 Stat. at L. 232, chap. 237, passed July 25, 1866. The 34th section of the Maryland Bill of Rights makes void:

"Every gift, sale, or devise of lands to any minister, publie teacher, or preacher of the Gospel as such, or to any religious seet, order, or denomination, or to or for the support, use, or benefit of or in trust for any minister, public teaeher, or preaeher of the Gospel as such, or any religious sect, order, or denomination; every gift or sale of goods or ehattels to go in sueeession or take place after the death of the seller or donor, to or for such support, use, or benefit, and also every devise of goods or ehattels to or for support, use, or benefit of any minister, publie teacher, or preacher of the Gospel as such, or any religious sect, order, or denomination, without leave of the legislature."

It is also insisted that there is a misnomer of the eorporation, now elaiming the right to the bequest, inasmuch as such corporation was ineorporated under the name of "The President and Direetors of Georgetown College," while the bequest is to "Georgetown University, in the District of Columbia." It is contended that Georgetown College is a eorporation, incorporated on the 10th of June, 1844, under an act of Congress (6 Stat. at L. 912, ehap. 41), entitled "An Act to Ineorporate Georgetown *College, in the Distriet of Columbia," and [142] that there was and is another institution in Georgetown, sometimes called the University of Georgetown, or Georgetown University, whieh was distinct from the eollege incorporated under the above-mentioned aet of Congress, and not eovered by it, and that the testator knew of this so-ealled university, that he was a professor therein, and that sueh university was, at the time of the testator's death, a seetarian institution within the 34th section of the Maryland Bill of Rights above mentioned. The 4th section of the above aet expressly provides that no misnomer of the eorporation shall defeat or annul any donation, etc., to the corporation. We agree with the supreme eourt and the eourt of appeals of the Distriet of Columbia in the opinion that there was not, at the time of the exeeution of his will by the testator, or at the time of his death, any incorporated institution existing as Georgetown University or University of Georgetown, separate and apart from, or having powers other than, those granted to "The President and Directors of Georgetown College," by the aet of Congress of 1844, above eited. It appears in the evidence that this college was frequently spoken of as Georgetown University, and known as sueh, but the evidence entirely fails to show that there were two ineorporated institutions, the one, "Georgetown University," and the other, "The President and Direetors of Georgetown College." And we have no doubt that the testator meant the eorporation ealled Georgetown College when he used in his will the word "university." He meant to give the property to a eorporation, and to one that could take it, and the evidence shows there was no other eorporation of that kind. Upon this question the court of appeals said: "It is expressly alleged in the bill as a fact that there is no such incorporated institution as Georgetown University, though Georgetown College is frequently referred to and spoken of as Georgetown University, notwithstanding it has never been incorporated as such. It is simply a popular designation applied [143] to the college. It is alleged in the bill *that the defendants Whitney and others, under the name of The President and Directors of Georgetown College, in this District, claim to be the beneficiaries entitled to the legacies mentioned in the will of the testator as for Georgetown University. It is not attempted to be shown that there was, or is, in existence, in this District, any such incorporated institution of learning as 'Georgetown University,' separate from and independent of Georgetown College." It was not to any unincorporated so-called institution that the testator intended to leave the property, but to one that was incorporated and capable of taking a legacy.

Various acts of the legislature of Maryland were referred to on the argument, particularly the act of 1792, chapter 55; that of 1797, chapter 40; the act of 1805, chapter 118; that of 1808, chapter 37; also the act of Congress of March 1, 1815, chapter 70 (6 Stat. at L. 152), entitled "An Act Concerning the College of Georgetown in the District of Columbia;" also that of March 2, 1833 (6 Stat. at L. 538, chap. 86), in which the government grants certain lots in Washington city to the college above referred to. These various statutes were cited for the purpose of showing the validity of the claim that an institution called Georgetown University, as distinct from Georgetown College, was meant in the will of the testator. In regard to these particular acts we think they do not bear upon the case other than, as remarked by the court of appeals, to show the origin and growth of Georgetown College, and to identify the early foundation of the school with the president and directors of Georgetown College, as that institution was fully and completely incorporated by the above-cited act of Congress of June 10, 1844. That act must be resorted to as the measure of the powers and duties, as well as to define the character, of the corporation created thereby. Bradfield v. Roberts, 175 U. S. 291, 44 L. ed. 168, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 121.

Taking the character of the college from the act of Congress, we are of opinion that it is not a sectarian institution or within § 34 of the Maryland Bill of Rights.
[144] The reasoning upon *this subject (as well as that upon the alleged misnomer of the college) set forth in the opinion of the supreme court (31 Wash. L. Rep. 630) and in that of the court of appeals is entirely satisfactory, and we concur therein.

There is, in our judgment, no merit in the contention that the persons claiming as president and directors of the college are not the legal successors of the original incorporation. There is no evidence that the same has been dissolved. The franchise of a corporation is not taken away or surrendered, nor is the corporation dissolved, by the mere failure to elect trustees. We do not think that in this case there was any failure to elect, nor was there any dissolution.

We now come to the consideration of the validity of the disposition made of the testator's property which came to him from the will of his father. The testator gives and bequeaths all of that property to his trustees, thereafter named, in the will, and their heirs and assigns forever, "with full power to sell, convey, mortgage, encumber, and reinvest, in trust nevertheless to pay and see to the application of: First, the sum of ($10,000) ten thousand dollars to Georgetown University in the District of Columbia, to be used and held as an endowment for the prosecution of research in the colonial history of Maryland and the territory now embraced in the District of Columbia, and obtaining and preserving archives and papers having relation thereto, and known as the James Ethelbert Morgan fund."

Aside from the objections to the bequest to Georgetown University already considered, a further objection is made, and the disposition is alleged to be void, because there is no charter power in any institution which could take under this bequest that authorizes it to prosecute such research, and obtain and preserve the archives relating thereto. It is well said, in the opinion of the court of appeals in this case, that the act of incorporation of Georgetown College, in 1844, confers "corporate power upon the institution for the instruction of youth in the liberal arts and sciences, and also clothes the corporation [145] *with power to take any estate whatsoever, in any lands, etc., or goods, chattels, moneys, and other effects, by gift, bequest, devise, etc., and the same to grant convey or assign, and to place out on interest for the use of said college, and to apply the same [thereto]. The cultivation of historical research would seem to be a part of a liberal education, such as should be encouraged by a college intended to confer degrees upon students in acquiring a liberal education in the arts and sciences." In Jones v. Habersham, 107 U. S. 189, 27 L. ed. 407, 2 Sup. Ct. Rep. 336, it is said that "a corporation may hold and execute a trust for charitable objects in accord with or tending to promote the purposes of its creation, although such as it might not, by its charter or by general laws, have authority itself to establish or to spend its corporate funds for. A city, for instance, may take a devise in trust to maintain a college, an orphan school, or an asylum."

Although it is, under the will, the duty of the trustees therein named to exercise supervision over the administration of the fund, nevertheless, the death or resignation of the trustees named in the will cannot, and does not, defeat the bequest. There is not such a personal trust as renders it necessary to have the personal action of the trustee named in the will, and the trust does not fail upon the death or resignation of the named trustee. The court may appoint his successor. Inglis v. Sailors' Snug Harbor, 3 Pet. 99, 7 L. ed. 617.

Both courts below have held the bequest of a sum not to exceed $5,000, to be expended under the personal supervision of the trustees in the purchase and erection of a chime of bells, etc., to be void. We agree with those courts in that respect. We also agree with the views of the court of appeals, holding that the alternative bequest of this same sum, not to exceed $5,000, to be divided equally between the two orphan asylums, is valid. There is no material misnomer in either case, although they are incorporated institutions, one by the name of St. Vincent's Orphan Asylum and the other as St. Joseph's Male Orphan Asylum in the city of Washington, and they are referred to in *the will [146] simply as St. Vincent's Orphan Asylum and St. Joseph's Catholic Orphan Asylum.

Nor does the bequest violate the 34th section of the Maryland Bill of Rights, already referred to. The same reasoning on that point governs this bequest as is applicable to the bequest to the University of Georgetown. Neither of these orphan asylums is a sectarian institution under the acts of incorporation. The other objection made is that the clause directs that a sum, not exceeding $5,000, shall be equally divided between these orphan asylums; and it is said that there is such uncertainty in the amount of the bequest as to render it impossible to execute it, that it might be fulfilled by dividing a dollar between the asylums, or any other sum within the $5,000 named in the bequest. But it seems to us that the intention of the testator is clear to give the full sum of, but not to exceed, $5,000. That is, he gives $5,000 to be equally divided between these two asylums. While the amount is not to exceed $5,000, the direction for an equal division, taken in connection with the other facts, renders it, in our opinion, clear that the intention of the testator was that that sum should be the amount of the bequest. Courts are always reluctant to hold a bequest void for uncertainty, and they only do it when actually compelled to do so by the language used. Inglis v. Sailor's Snug Harbor, 3 Pet. 99, 7 L. ed. 617. If the testator had really intended that any less sum than $5,000 should be disposed of by and equally divided under this clause in his will, he would have said so.

Objection is also made to the bequest of "a sufficient sum, not to exceed three thousand ($3,000) dollars, the income to be applied to maintain a scholarship in the study of medicine, preferably in Georgetown University; otherwise in some medical college in the District, to be known as the E. Carroll Morgan scholarship." The first objection, as to the uncertainty of the amount of the bequest, we do not regard as meritorious. *It is a sum sufficient to found a [147] scholarship, and it shall not exceed, in any event, $3,000. If one can be founded, within the conditions named in the will, for a less sum than $3,000, then that less sum only can be used. The discretion to be exercised by the trustee in selecting the college with which to connect the scholarship does not render the bequest void. The testator has, by this clause in his will, himself expressed his preference for Georgetown College, if the scholarship can be maintained in that institution, but if not, it is to be a scholarship in some medical college of the District. This, we think, is not an improper or uncertain disposition of the bequest, or an illegal placing of a discretion in the trustee under the will. See Atty. Gen. v. Gleg, 1 Atk. 356; Atty. Gen. v. Fletcher, 5 L. J. Ch. N. S. 75; 2 Perry, Tr. 4th ed. § 721.

The last bequest objected to is that of $5,000, to form a fund known as the E. Carroll Morgan fund or scholarship, to be applied as the testator might thereafter indicate to his trustees, etc. This has been declared void by both courts, and no appeal has been taken from the judgment of the court of appeals, adjudging that item to be void. That bequest being adjudicated invalid, the fund provided for therein forms part of the residue of the testator's estate, and passes under the residuary clause of the will.

These views call for an affirmance of the judgment of the court of appeals, with costs to the several parties, to be paid out of the residuary fund, as provided for by the judgment of that court.

Affirmed.

---

*JOSHUA ROBERTS MEAD, Anna Leoca- [148] die Lee, William Wesley Mead, and Stella Baham Meade, Trustees, etc., et al., Plffs. in Err.,

v.

CITY OF PORTLAND et al.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 148–164.)

1. Constitutional law—due process of NOTE.—On the right to erect wharves—see note to Madison v. Mayers, 40 L.R.A. 635.

On injury to abutter's easement by vacating law—taking property without compensation—wharfage rights in city streets.—A reservation of "wharves and wharfing privileges" in a dedication of land for an addition to a city does not include the right to appropriate for wharfage purposes a street or an extension thereof which cannot be taken away or destroyed without compensation without denying the due process of law secured by the 14th Amendment to the Federal Constitution.

2. Constitutional law—impairing contract obligations—wharfage rights in city streets.—No right to use or appropriate for wharfage purposes a city street or an extension thereof, protected by the contract clause of the Federal Constitution from impairment by legislative change of the grade of the street, can be gathered from municipal grants to the owners of property fronting on opposite sides of the street of the right to construct wharves in a river on and in front of such property, reserving to the common council the right to regulate the passageways along the street and any part of the wharves extending therein "as a part of said street and sidewalks."

3. Error to state court—questions reviewable—statutory construction.—The construction of a state statute by the highest court of the state as a legislative change of the grade of a street for its full width is conclusive on the Supreme Court of the United States in determining, on writ of error to the state court, whether such statute impairs the obligation of any contract right of abutting owners to appropriate the street or an extension thereof for wharfage purposes.

4. Public improvements—change of grade—power not exhausted by partial exercise.—The right of a bridge company or its municipal successor to change, under legislative authority, the grade of a street for its full width for an approach to a bridge without making compensation to abutting owners for consequential damages, is not so exhausted by exercising the right as to a portion of the street only as will prevent a subsequent change of grade of the rest of the street by extending the approach to cover an opening left in the center of the street to permit access to the wharves of abutting owners.

[No. 56.]

Argued November 27, 1905. Decided January 2, 1906.

IN ERROR to the Supreme Court of the State of Oregon to review a decree which affirmed a decree of the Circuit Court for the County of Multnomah, in that state, sustaining a demurrer to, and dismissing, the complaint in a suit to enjoin municipal authorities from closing a passageway in the approach of a bridge. Affirmed.

See same case below, 45 Or. 1, 76 Pac. 347.

Statement by Mr. Justice McKenna:

Bill in equity to enjoin defendants from closing a certain passageway in the approach of a bridge called the Morrison street bridge, in the city of Portland, Oregon. The approach leads to plaintiffs' wharves. The bill was demurred to and the demurrer sustained by the trial court, plaintiffs declining to plead further, and a decree was entered dismissing the bill. The decree was affirmed by the supreme court of the state. 45 Or. 1, 76 Pac. 347.

The bill alleges that some of the plaintiffs have been for many years owners of block 76 in the city of Portland, and other plaintiffs have been the owners of block 77. These blocks are bounded on the east by the Willamette river and on the west *by Front[149] street. Morrison street is the north boundary of block 76 and the south boundary of block 77. Attached to the properties are valuable riparian rights and wharf rights and privileges, which entitled the owners to build, maintain, and use the same to the established wharf line of the river, and on them are warehouses, docks, and wharves of great value, which are occupied by tenants. The properties are located within the donation land claimed by one Daniel H. Lownsdale, under whom plaintiffs claim as owners. In the dedication by Lownsdale of the plat of the town of Portland it is, among other things, provided as follows:

"The wharves and wharfing privileges are specially reserved to the owners of the claim, and never (except by deed) subject to any but the laws of the territory of Oregon or ordinances of the town or city corporation, as other town (private) property. . . . "

That the common council of said city of Portland adopted an ordinance, No. 2273, entitled "An Ordinance Authorizing the Construction of a Wharf on the Willamette River in Front and Opposite Lots Numbers street, changing grade, etc.—see note to Selden v. Jacksonville, 14 L.R.A. 370.

As to what constitutes due process of law—see notes to Kuntz v. Sumption, 2 L.R.A. 655; Re Gannon, 5 L.R.A. 359; Ulman v. Baltimore, 11 L.R.A. 224; Gilman v. Tucker, 13 L.R.A. 304; People v. O'Brien, 2 L.R.A. 255; Pearson v. Yewdall, 24 L. ed. U. S. 436; and Wilson v. North Carolina, 42 L. ed. U. S. 865.

As to what laws are void as impairing obligation of contracts—see notes to Franklin County Grammar School v. Bailey, 10 L.R.A. 405; Fletcher v. Peck, 3 L. ed. U. S. 162; McCanna & F. Co. v. Citizens' Trust & Surety Co. 24 C. C. A. 20; and Montana Ore-Purchasing Co. v. Boston & M. Consol. Copper & S. Min. Co. 35 C. C. A. 12.

On what questions the Federal Supreme Court will consider in reviewing the judgments of state courts—see note to Missouri ex rel. Hill v. Dockery, 63 L.R.A. 571.

3 and 4, in Block No. 77," approved September 26, 1878. †

[150] *Also an ordinance, No. 2387, entitled "An Ordinance Authorizing the Construction of a Wharf on the Willamette River in Front of and Opposite Lots Nos. 3 and 4, in Block No. 76," approved February 21, 1879. ‡

[151] *The predecessors in interest of plaintiffs constructed wharves in conformity with the provisions of the ordinances and the grades established therein, the wharf constructed pursuant to ordinance No. 2387 covering the south half of the street, and that constructed pursuant to ordinance No. 2273 covering the north half of the street. The wharves consisted of two floors or stories, with a large warehouse over the second floor. The second floors were built slightly above the level of Front street, with approaches as provided in the ordinances. The lower stories or floors of the wharves were considerably below the level of Front street, and were connected with that street by a roadway running on an incline along Morrison street from Front street down to the portion of the wharves built on Morrison street, which roadway was constructed by the respective owners of the properties. The wharves, docks, and warehouses, and the approach thereto, have been used by plaintiffs and their predecessors for more than twenty years, and have been used as landing places for boats and vessels navigating the river, and by people and teams having business at the docks and wharves, and the docks and wharves and the approach thereto have been used as a street or highway by the public. The grade of Morrison street occupied by the roadway leading from Front street and over that portion of the street upon which the wharves and docks were built has never been established except †Ordinance No. 2273.

"Sec. 1. The owner or owners of lots 3 and 4, in block 77, in the city of Portland, are hereby authorized and permitted to construct a wharf of piles and timber in the Willamette river, on and in front of the lots above mentioned, the easterly line of said wharf to run parallel with the east line of Front street from a point 100 feet north of the north line of Morrison street, the lower floor of said wharf to be as near 10 feet above the base of grades as practicable; provided, that the owner or owners of said above-described property shall construct and maintain, at their own expense, a pontoon suitable for the landing of small boats, with suitable steps leading from the pontoon to the lower floor of the wharf; said pontoon to be constructed at the foot of Morrison street, and to be in accordance with plan on file in the office of the auditor and clerk.

"Sec. 2. The upper story or floor of said wharf shall not extend easterly beyond the lines of the lower wharf or beyond the lines of the block southwardly, except for a passageway, 15 feet in width along and over the north side of Morrison street to within 28 feet of the easterly margin of said wharf, and for said distance of 28 feet said passageway shall not extend southwardly into said street for a greater distance than 6 feet; provided, that the whole of said passageway and all of those portions of said wharf extending over and into the street shall be subject to regulation by the common council as a part of said street and sidewalk; and provided further, that a suitable trap for fire purposes shall be placed in the lower roadway, to be kept clear and in order by the owners of said wharf.

"Sec. 3. The owners of the property described in § 1 of this ordinance are hereby authorized and permitted to erect a one-story warehouse thereon, to be constructed of wood, with the roof covered with tin, anything contained in ordinance No. 1140, entitled 'An Ordinance Providing for the Prevention of Fires and the Protection of Property Endangered Thereby,' and the several amendments thereto, to the contrary notwithstanding.

‡ Ordinance No. 2387.

"Sec. 1. The owners of lots 3 and 4, in block 76, are hereby authorized and permitted to construct a wharf of piles and timber in the Willamette river on and in front of the above-described lots. The easterly side of said wharf to commence at a point 147 feet east of the east line of Front street, and running from the center line of Morrison street extended in a direct course to a point 130 feet south of the center line of Morrison street extended, at a distance of 137½ feet from the east line of Front street.

"The lower floor of said wharf to conform to the grade of Coulter and Church's wharf at its connection therewith; provided, that the owner or owners of the above-described property shall construct and maintain at their own expense a pontoon suitable for the landing of small boats, with suitable steps leading from the pontoon to the lower floor of the wharf, said pontoon to be constructed at the foot of Morrison street, and to be in accordance with plan in auditor's office.

"Sec. 2. The upper story or floor of said wharf shall not extend easterly beyond the lines of the lower wharf or beyond the lines of the block northwardly, except for a passageway, 15 feet in width, along and over the south side of Morrison street to within 28 feet of the easterly margin of said wharf, and for said distance of 28 feet said passageway shall not extend northwardly into said street for a greater distance than 6 feet; provided, that the whole of said passageway, and all those portions of said wharf extending over and into the street, shall be subject to regulation by the common council as a part of said street and sidewalk; and provided further, that a suitable trap for fire purposes shall be placed in the lower roadway, to be kept clear and in order by the owners of said wharf.

"Sec. 3. The owners of property described in § 1 of this ordinance are hereby authorized and permitted to erect a one-story warehouse thereon, to be constructed of wood with the roof covered with tin, anything contained in ordinance No. 1140, entitled 'An Ordinance Providing for the Prevention of Fires and the Protection of Property Endangered Thereby,' and the several amendments thereto, to the contrary notwithstanding."

by said ordinances, and said portions of Morrison street and the roadway have been and are now improved and used, and the same are a public street and highway, and were built and have been maintained "in reliance of the rights and privileges therein [the ordinance] maintained."

In 1878 the legislature of the state of Oregon passed an act authorizing the Port-
[152] land Bridge Company, or its assigns, to *construct and maintain a bridge crossing the Willamette river between Portland and East Portland for all purposes of travel and commerce, "at such point or location on the banks of said river, on and along any of the streets of either of said cities of Portland and East Portland, as may be selected or determined on by said corporation or its assigns, on or above Morrison street of the said city of Portland, and in streets of said city of East Portland; . . . and provided, that the approaches on the Portland side to said bridge shall conform to the present grade of Front street in said city of Portland."

The bridge was constructed in 1886, the west end of which was located at the east end of Morrison street. Between the west end of the bridge and Front street a plank road or approach was constructed over Morrison street, but the approach did not conform to the grade of Front street, but was constructed at an elevation of more than 2 feet above such grade at the west end of the bridge, and thence inclined to Front street, and has always been maintained at such elevation. The bridge did not cover the whole of Morrison street from Front street to the west end of bridge, but was so constructed that a portion of Morrison street, in the center thereof and leading from Front street on an incline to the lower docks and wharves of plaintiffs, was left uncovered and unchanged, the same being about 18 feet wide and extending easterly from Front street about 95 feet. The approaches constructed by the bridge company have been and are sufficient for the passage to and from the bridge for foot passengers, cars, and vehicles using the bridge. The opening was left in the decking of Morrison street to provide access to the lower floors of the wharves, and as a means of ingress and egress from them, and did not materially interfere with or obstruct the use of city roadways and the wharves and docks as they had been theretofore used.

In 1895 the city of Portland purchased, under legislative authority, the Morrison street bridge from the Willamette Iron Bridge Company, the successor in interest to the Portland Bridge Company, and sub-[153] sequently, under the provision of an *act of the legislature, approved February 21, 1895, the county court of Multnomah county assumed and has since had the care and operation of the bridge and its approaches.

In 1886 the Willamette Iron Bridge Company began the construction of the bridge and built two piers in the river to support the western end of the bridge in front of the outer line of plaintiffs' wharves, in such position as to obstruct navigation and to greatly interfere with the access to the wharves, and at the same time began to construct the approach to the bridge over Morrison street in such manner as to interfere with access to the wharves. The owners of the wharves in April, 1887, protested, and a compromise and settlement was effected between the parties, whereby the bridge company agreed to forever leave an opening in the bridge approach substantially as it now is, and in consideration thereof the wharf owners agreed to permit the piers to remain as constructed, and as they have ever since remained, and to waive all objection to the construction of the approach in the manner in which it was constructed, leaving the opening forever open and unobstructed for free ingress and egress to the wharves. The parties acted upon the agreement, and the wharf owners did not begin or prosecute legal proceedings. In 1890, however, the company, notwithstanding the agreement, threatened to close up the opening, whereupon the wharf owners commenced a suit in equity to enjoin the threatened injury, and thereupon, in consideration of the dismissal of the suit, the bridge company entered into another agreement to refrain from the threatened acts, and leave the opening and approach in the condition as the same now is.

It is alleged that the city of Portland acquired the bridge and the approach thereof subject to the said agreement, and the rights vested in the plaintiffs thereby, and that the defendants are proceeding, without tendering or offering compensation therefor, to close said opening, and thereby deprive plaintiffs of their property without due process of law, contrary to the 14th Amendment of the Constitution of the United States.

*And it is alleged that the ordinances of [154]
the city of Portland, hereinbefore set out, constitute a contract between the city and plaintiffs' predecessors, and the acts of the legislature of the state of Oregon which have been mentioned, so far as they undertake to confer upon defendants the power to close the opening of such bridge without payment of compensation, impair the obligation of such contract, and violate § 10, article 1, of the Constitution of the United States. An injunction was prayed.

Mr. Charles H. Carey argued the cause, and, with Messrs. C. E. S. Wood, S. B. Linthicum, J. C. Flanders, and Carey & Mays, filed a brief for plaintiffs in error:

By the settled rule in Oregon, abutting lot owners, by virtue of their ownership of lots facing on a street, own the fee to the middle of the street as a highway.

Banks v. Ogden, 2 Wall. 57, 17 L. ed. 818; Huddleston v. Eugene, 34 Or. 343, 43 L.R.A. 444, 55 Pac. 868; McQuaid v. Portland & V. R. Co. 18 Or. 237, 22 Pac. 899.

The lot owners therefore had the right, not only to wharf out in front of their lots, but in front of Morrison street also.

It is a situation quite different from that shown in cases where there was no reservation of the wharfage right, and where it is therefore held that a wharf built by a city at the terminus of a street is part of the street, free to the public, and not subject to a private use for which wharfage may be taken.

Russell v. The Empire State, Newberry, Adm. 541, Fed. Cas. No. 12,145; The Geneva, 16 Fed. 874; Barney v. Baltimore, 1 Hughes, 118, Fed. Cas. No. 1,029.

It is usually held that the legitimate and proper use of a street terminating at the river is as a landing place, and that the municipal corporation has the right to build wharves at the termini of its streets; but this does not apply where the right of wharfage is reserved.

1 Dill. Mun. Corp. § 109.

Even assuming that the city itself had the right to wharf out at the foot of Morrison street, it delegated the power, as it had the right to do.

Simon v. Northup, 27 Or. 501, 30 L.R.A. 171, 40 Pac. 560; Farnum v. Johnson, 62 Wis. 620, 22 N. W. 751; Portland & W. Valley R. Co. v. Portland, 14 Or. 188, 58 Am. Rep. 299, 12 Pac. 265.

The power to regulate wharves does not include the power to confiscate them.

Chicago, R. I. & P. R. Co. v. Joliet, 79 Ill. 44; 20 Am. & Eng. Enc. Law, p. 723; Langdon v. New York, 93 N. Y. 161; State v. Mott, 61 Md. 297, 48 Am. Rep. 105; Re Hauck, 70 Mich. 396, 38 N. W. 269; McConvill v. Jersey City, 39 N. J. L. 44; Sweet v. Wabash, 41 Ind. 7; Bronson v. Oberlin, 41 Ohio St. 476, 52 Am. Rep. 90; Cantril v. Sainer, 59 Iowa, 26, 12 N. W. 753; People v. Gadway, 61 Mich. 286, 1 Am. St. Rep. 578, 28 N. W. 101.

The owner of land bounded by a navigable river has the right of free access to the navigable part of the stream, and the right to make a landing, wharf, or pier for his own use, or for the use of the public. This right cannot be capriciously destroyed by a municipality by a change of harbor lines.

Yates v. Milwaukee, 10 Wall. 497, 19 L. ed. 984.

The same principle is applied in cases holding that a city must pay for obstructing a riparian owner's access to his wharf, either from the water or from the land side of his property.

Van Dolsen v. New York, 21 Blatchf. 458, 17 Fed. 819; Myers v. St. Louis, 82 Mo. 367; Weber v. State Harbor, 18 Wall. 57, 21 L. ed. 798; Demopolis v. Webb, 87 Ala. 668, 6 So. 408; Langdon v. New York, 93 N. Y. 152.

The action of the city in cutting off access to the wharves by covering Morrison street with an elevated approach to the bridge is, in effect, a taking of plaintiff's property without due process of law. An additional servitude was placed upon the highway.

Willamette Iron Works v. Oregon R. & Nav. Co. 26 Or. 233, 29 L.R.A. 88, 46 Am. St. Rep. 620, 37 Pac. 1016.

The injury to the plaintiffs is not an injury common to the public, for the reason that plaintiffs are entirely cut off from access on the land side of their wharves to the public highway, and the obstruction immediately adjoins and is against the front of plaintiffs' premises, so that, as to them, it is a private nuisance for which an action will lie, or which may be restrained by injunction.

Wilder v. DeCou, 26 Minn. 11, 1 N. W. 48; Schulte v. Northern Pacific Transp. Co. 50 Cal. 592; Parker v. Taylor, 7 Or. 435; Price v. Knott, 8 Or. 438; Penniman v. New York Balance Co. 13 How. Pr. 40; Gould, Waters, 122–124.

The right of wharfage is a property right which can be taken only by the exercise of the right of eminent domain on making compensation to the owner of the wharfage right.

1 Dill. Mun. Corp. § 107; Crocker v. New York, 21 Blatchf. 197, 15 Fed. 405; Classen v. Chesapeake Guano Co. 81 Md. 258, 31 Atl. 808.

Assuming that the ordinances granted rights in the nature of a franchise, the grant was based upon ample consideration to the city, since there was an outlay of money in making the improvements, equivalent to the payment of a valuable consideration for the license, as well as other considerations required by the ordinances; so that, if it is a license, and fully executed, it is now irrevocable.

Garrett v. Bishop, 27 Or. 349, 41 Pac. 10.

Even if the bridge act be deemed to be a legislative change of grade of Morrison street, which we deny, the city has not the right arbitrarily to destroy the wharf rights.

Seattle v. Columbia & P. S. R. Co. 6 Wash. 379, 33 Pac. 1048.

By repeated decisions in Oregon a license, after it has been exercised and expenditures have been made in reliance thereon, is irrevocable, and, if the right to erect wharves at the foot of Morrison street under the ordinances be deemed mere licenses from the city, the right granted cannot be destroyed without compensation.

Curtis v. LaGrande Hydraulic Water Co. 20 Or. 34, 10 L.R.A. 484, 23 Pac. 808, 25 Pac. 378; McBroom v. Thompson, 25 Or. 567, 42 Am. St. Rep. 806, 37 Pac. 57; Garrett v. Bishop, 27 Or. 352, 41 Pac. 10; North Powder Mill Co. v. Coughanour, 34 Or. 21, 54 Pac. 223; Bowman v. Bowman, 35 Or. 281, 57 Pac. 546; Hallock v. Suitor, 37 Or. 13, 60 Pac. 384; Savage v. Salem, 23 Or. 385, 24 L.R.A. 787, 37 Am. St. Rep. 688, 31 Pac. 832.

The defendants cannot close this opening in Morrison street because of an agreement with the bridge company to leave it open, and because of the long acquiescence of the city in the plaintiffs' occupation and use of these wharves.

Having received benefits at the expense of the other contracting party, the city is stopped.

United States v. Willamette Valley & C. M. Wagon-Road Co. 54 Fed. 811; Re Parker, 11 Fed. 397; Com. v. Andre, 3 Pick. 225; Vidal v. Girard, 2 How. 191, 11 L. ed. 231; Enfield v. Permit, 5 N. H. 285, 20 Am. Dec. 580; Pengra v. Munz, 29 Fed. 830; Vermont v. Society for Propagation of Gospel, 2 Paine, 546, Fed. Cas. No. 16,920; Cahn v. Barnes, 7 Sawy. 48, 5 Fed. 326; Com. v. Pejepscut, 10 Mass. 155; People v. Maynard, 15 Mich. 470; Menard v. Massey, 8 How. 313, 314, 12 L. ed. 1093, 1094; State v. Bailey, 19 Ind. 454; St. Louis use of McGrath v. Clemens, 49 Mo. 552; Hitchcock v. Galveston, 96 U. S. 351, 24 L. ed. 662; Chicago & N. W. R. Co. v. People, 91 Ill. 251.

When the bridge was located and the amount of space in Morrison street to be appropriated was determined upon, the election was final, and other portions of the street were excluded.

Van Wyck v. Knevals, 106 U. S. 360, 27 L. ed. 201, 1 Sup. Ct. Rep. 336.

This is merely a statement of a familiar rule of easements.

Jennison v. Walker, 11 Gray, 426; Bannon v. Angier, 2 Allen, 128; Evangelical Lutheran St. J. Orphan Home v. Buffalo Hydraulic Asso. 64 N. Y. 564; Onthank v. Lake Shore & M. S. R. Co. 71 N. Y. 194, 27 Am. Rep. 35; Warner v. Columbus & L. E. R. Co. 39 Ohio St. 72; Willis v. Winona, 59 Minn. 27, 26 L.R.A. 142, 60 N. W. 814. See also Allen v. Monmouth County, 13 N. J. Eq. 68; Moorehead v. Little Miami R. Co. 17 Ohio, 340; Griffen v. House, 18 Johns. 397; Cayuga Bridge Co. v. Magee, 6 Wend. 85; State v. Norwalk & D. Turnp. Co. 10 Conn. 157; Blakemore v. Glamorganshire Canal Navigation, 1 Myl. & K. 154.

Mr. L. A. McNary argued the cause, and, with Messrs. J. P. Kavanaugh and George H. Williams, filed a brief for defendants in error:

The question to be determined by this court in this case is the validity of the statute that is alleged to impair the contract, and not whether it was properly construed by the state court.

Central Land Co. v. Laidley, 159 U. S. 103, 40 L. ed. 91, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 80; Commercial Bank v. Buckingham, 5 How. 317, 12 L. ed. 169.

The ordinances of the city of Portland authorizing the construction of the wharves do not constitute a contract between the said city and plaintiffs' predecessors in interest.

Wabash R. Co. v. Defiance, 167 U. S. 88, 42 L. ed. 87, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 748.

The disclaimer by plaintiffs of any proprietary interest or private ownership in the wharves on Morrison street is fatal to their claim to relief by injunction.

Northern Transp. Co. v. Chicago, 99 U. S. 635, 25 L. ed. 336; Hoboken Land & Improv. Co. v. Hoboken, 36 N. J. L. 540; Thayer v. New Bedford R. Co. 125 Mass. 257.

The closing of the driveway through the approach on Morrison street is not a taking of plaintiffs' property without due process of law. The closing is merely the result of the establishment of the street grade, and that does not constitute a taking of property within the meaning of the Constitution.

2 Dill. Mun. Corp. 4th ed. § 686; Northern Transp. Co. v. Chicago, 99 U. S. 635, 25 L. ed. 336; Selden v. Jacksonville, 28 Fla. 558, 14 L.R.A. 370, 29 Am. St. Rep. 278, 10 So. 457; Willets Mfg. Co. v. Mercer County, 62 N. J. L. 95, 40 Atl. 782.

Mere inconvenience in the access to property is not a sufficient reason to prevent the city from closing the driveway.

Burns v. Gallagher, 62 Md. 462; Mitchell v. Seipel, 53 Md. 251, 36 Am. Rep. 404.

The wharves were not constructed under an irrevocable license. No exclusive right to, or interest in, the wharves was granted to, or claimed by, the owners of the private wharves; and in such case the license is revocable at the pleasure of the licensor.

Parish v. Kaspare, 109 Ind. 586, 10 N. E. 109; St. Louis Nat. Stock Yards v. Wiggins Ferry Co. 112 Ill. 384, 54 Am. Rep. 243; Rayner v. Nugent, 60 Md. 515.

The agreement of the bridge company to leave the driveway open does not bind the city, because, when the approach was built, it became a public highway under the control of the city, and the company had no authority to keep a part of the street surface open.

Pittsburg & W. E. Pass. R. Co. v. Point Bridge Co. 165 Pa. 37, 26 L.R.A. 323, 30 Atl. 511.

Mr. Justice McKenna delivered the opinion of the court:

If we determine what rights plaintiffs had in Morrison street and the river, we shall be able to determine their contentions. Plaintiffs claim a contract with the city based on the ordinances which authorize plaintiffs to construct their wharves, but they also claim rights which they say were attached to the property and reserved to it by Daniel H. Lownsdale, "of the wharves and wharfing privileges." The rights so reserved are made especially dominant. Indeed, the rights obtained from the city are somewhat minimized and depreciated. All [160] the city *could do, it is said, and all the city attempted to do by its ordinances, was to authorize the riparian owners to build their wharves. Why authority from the city was necessary in view of the reservation in the Lownsdale dedication, if it was as extensive as contended, seems to call for explanation, and explanation is given by saying that the ordinance was but the exercise of the authority to regulate the manner in which the wharves were to be built by the riparian proprietors. And plaintiffs, to point their reliance on the reservation in the Lownsdale dedication, say: "Whether the ordinances do or do not purport to grant a privilege or right to use or appropriate the street or an extension thereof for wharfing purposes, the right exists, and it existed because of the reservation in the plat, long before the ordinances; and it exists independent of any action of the city. This right is different in kind from the right of the public to use the street. And it is a valuable right, which cannot be taken away or destroyed without compensation."

Plaintiffs however, in other parts of their argument, claim, by reason of the ordinances, an irrevocable license, and in the pleadings give prominence to nothing else but the rights conferred by the ordinances. On account of this probably neither the trial court nor the supreme court commented on the Lownsdale dedication. But we will not consider plaintiffs precluded by that omission. It is very clear to us that their contention under the Lownsdale dedication is not sound. The purpose of the dedication was an addition to the city. Streets were contemplated and power of the city over them, and this purpose and power is as clear and definite in the dedication as the reservation of rights to lot owners. This was the view of plaintiffs' predecessors when they applied for the ordinances. Therefore the fundamental proposition in the case is the power of the city over its streets, and how far that power was limited or could be limited by the ordinance upon which plaintiffs rely.

It will be observed that the wharves were constructed on Morrison street and "used as, and the same are, a public street and highway." In other words, the bill alleges that the wharves *on Morrison street formed [161] a part of the street, and were open to general and public use.

What power the city of Portland had to grant rights in its streets depends upon its charter; and interpreting the ordinance upon which plaintiffs rely, the supreme court of Oregon decided that neither the plaintiffs nor their predecessors in interest were granted rights or privileges in the street different in kind from that enjoyed by the public.

"The clear purpose of the ordinances," the court said, "was to authorize and regulate the construction of wharves in front of private property. It is so expressly stated in the title, and the granting part of the ordinances provides that the owner or owners of certain described property are authorized and permitted to construct a wharf in the river, 'on and in front of' such property. There is nowhere, in either of the ordinances, a grant of any right or privilege to build a wharf at the terminus of Morrison street. In the ordinance adopted in 1878 there is scarcely an inference that the lower floor of the wharf was to extend into Morrison street, and, as regards the upper floor, the provision is that it should not extend beyond the line of the block, except for passageway of a certain described width and over the north side of the street. The grantee was required to construct and maintain pontoons in the river at the foot of the street for the landing of small boats, with steps leading therefrom to the lower floor of the wharf. It was expressly provided that the whole of the passageways along the street and those portions of the wharf extending over and into the street 'shall be subject to regulation by the common council as a part of said street and sidewalks;' thus manifesting an intention to preserve the public character of the street, and not to vest in the grantee any rights or privileges therein not enjoyed by the general public. The ordinance of 1879, in describing the dimensions of the wharf authorized to be erected, says that it shall extend a certain distance south from 'the center line of Morrison street,' and indicates that the wharf constructed by the property owners on the [162] opposite side of the street extended *to that point. The grant, however, is confined to the construction of a wharf 'on and in front of' private property, there being a provision like the one in the former ordinance requiring the grantees to construct pontoons in the river for the landing of small boats, while the right is reserved to the council to regulate the passageways along the street and any part of the wharves extending therein 'as a part of the street and sidewalk.' The reasonable interpretation of these ordinances is that they were intended to regulate the construction of wharves by the property owners on either side of the street in front of their property, with permission, perhaps, to extend the lower floors of such wharves over and across the foot of Morrison street, for the purpose of affording access from the street to the wharves. There is, however, no grant of any privilege or right to use or appropriate the street or an extension thereof for wharfage purposes. On the contrary, the street and any improvements which may be put there by the abutting property owners were reserved to the use of the entire public, and the grantees had no greater rights under the ordinances than those enjoyed by the general public." And this construction, the court observed, was supported by the averments of the complaint. It was, therefore, decided that plaintiffs acquired no greater rights in the street than the general public, nor a right to compensation for loss or injury caused by a change in the grade any more than a change in the grade would entitle an abutting owner to compensation because he had improved the street in front of his property. And decided also that the ordinances "did not give to the plaintiffs or to their predecessors in interest authority to build a wharf at the foot of the street for commercial purposes, but rather conferred the right to improve the street by extending it into the river, so that they could the more readily reach their own property therefrom, and the fact that their improvements have been rendered valueless on account of the subsequent change in the grade of the street does not entitle them to compensation. Neither are they entitled to [163] any rights under the rule applicable *to an executed parol license. Their occupation of the street and construction of the wharf and landing at the foot thereof were permissive, under ordinances of the city, defining their rights. They could not acquire any interest or easement in the street not conferred by the ordinances, because their use could not, in law, be adverse. Thayer v. New Bedford R. Co. 125 Mass. 253; Washb. Easements, §§ 152, 197."

Against these conclusions plaintiffs cite other Oregon cases. We are, however, not called upon to reconcile the cases. Plaintiffs point to no case decided prior to the construction of the wharves which interprets the ordinance as they now contend for, which might bring the case within the ruling of Muhlker v. New York & H. R. Co. 197 U. S. 544, 49 L. ed. 872, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 522, and Lewis v. Portland, 25 Or. 159, 22 L. R. A. 736, 42 Am. St. Rep. 772, 35 Pac. 256. And if we could say that the construction of the ordinances by the supreme court is not indisputable, yet we are required by the rule expressed in Burgess v. Seligman, 107 U. S. 20, 27 L. ed. 359, 2 Sup. Ct. Rep. 10, and the many cases which have followed it, to incline to an agreement with the state court.

In accordance with the doctrine announced in Brand v. Multnomah County, 38 Or. 79, 50 L. R. A. 389, 84 Am. St. Rep. 772, 60 Pac. 390, 62 Pac. 209, the supreme court decided that a change or alteration of the grade of a street may be made by lawful authority, without liability to abutting property owners for consequential damages, and that the act of October 18, 1878, was a legislative change of the grade of Morrison street for its full width. Plaintiffs do not deny that the legislature has such power. They make, however, two contentions: (a) That the act of 1878 was not intended to change the grade of the street, and did not do so. (b) If it did change the grade at all, it changed it as to those portions of the street only which were actually made use of on the new grade as an approach to the bridge, the remainder not being affected by the act. As to the latter point, it is contended that the power given to the bridge company to build an approach to the bridge on Morrison street to conform to the grade on Front street was exhausted with the exercise of the right, and that the defendants have no power under the act, after a lapse of twenty years, to extend the *approach of the [164] bridge to cover the opening in Morrison street, and change the grade where it was not changed when the approach was built.

The act of 1878 is a local statute, and in its interpretation involves no Federal question, nor does it become such by the circumstances of this case. It expresses the legislative authority, and its interpretation by the supreme court of the state we must accept. And the power to grade was not exhausted by one exercise. Goszler v. Georgetown, 6 Wheat. 593, 597, 5 L. ed. 339, 340; Wabash R. Co. v. Defiance, 167 U. S. 88, 42 L. ed. 87, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 748. It is a phase of the same contention that the bridge company was given the right of election of the manner of constructing the approaches, and, being bound by that election, the city, its successor, is also bound.

Judgment affirmed.

JAMES B. HOWARD, Plff. in Err.,
v.
COMMONWEALTH OF KENTUCKY.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 164-176.)

1. Constitutional law—due process of law—judicial construction of statute.—Errors of a state court in interpreting and applying the laws of that state furnish no basis for the claim that there has been a denial of the due process of law guaranteed by the 14th Amendment to the Federal Constitution.
2. Constitutional law—due process of law—waiver of right to be present at trial.—The accused cannot claim to have been denied the due process of law secured by U. S. Const., 14th Amend., by the action of the state court in holding that he could waive his right to be present at the trial to the extent of consenting, through his counsel, in advance of the swearing of the jury, to a private examination of a juror against whom complaint had been made, which resulted in the discharge of such juror, and the selection of another, not shown to be incompetent, in his place.
3. Constitutional law—equal protection of the laws—statutory construction—discrimination.—The decision of the Kentucky court of appeals that a reversal of a conviction for the error, if any, committed by the trial court in discharging a juror, was precluded by Ky. Crim. Code, § 281, does not deny the accused the equal protection of the laws secured by U. S. Const., 14th Amend., if such was the construction given that section by prior cases, and no discriminating application against him was made.

[No. 77.]

Argued November 10, 13, 1905. Decided January 2, 1906.

IN ERROR to the Court of Appeals of the State of Kentucky to review a judgment affirming a conviction of murder in the Franklin Circuit Court. Affirmed.

See same case below, 25 Ky. L. Rep. 2213, 80 S. W. 211.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Mr. W. M. Smith argued the cause, and, with Messrs. J. A. Violett, J. A. Scott, and Carlo B. Little, filed a brief for plaintiff in error:

A state can repeal any common-law offense, or change the modes of criminal procedure, so long as such change does not violate any absolute and fundamental right of the accused; as to the question here involved, the state of Kentucky has adopted the common law, without modification or change, and the provision of the 14th Amendment to the Constitution of the United States protects the fundamental rights thereby created and recognized.

Ray v. Sweeney, 14 Bush, 9, 29 Am. Rep. 388; Chisholm v. Georgia, 2 Dall. 419, 1 L. ed. 440; Holden v. Hardy, 169 U. S. 366, 42 L. ed. 780, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 383.

The provision of the 14th Amendment to the Constitution of the United States that no state shall deprive any person of life, liberty, or property without due process of law, having brought within the Federal jurisdiction and power the protection against state action, the judicial power of the nation necessarily extends thereto; and it is not requisite for jurisdiction that the right or thing claimed come from the law of the United States; though it come from the state law, it will be protected from unlawful state action. It must not be so construed, however, as to interfere with the state in its enactment and local administration of the criminal law, nor to confine it to any special mode of proceeding, so long as the law, as enforced by the state, affords equal protection to all persons within its jurisdiction similarly situated, and is not violative of the fundamental and inalienable rights that are essential to the protection of life, liberty, and property.

Davidson v. New Orleans, 96 U. S. 99, 24 L. ed. 618; Holden v. Hardy, supra; Lowe v. Kansas, 163 U. S. 85, 41 L. ed. 80, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1031; Civil Rights Cases, 109 U. S. 11, 27 L. ed. 839, 3 Sup. Ct. Rep. 18; United States v. Cruikshank, 92 U. S. 554, 23 L. ed. 592; United States v. Harris, 106 U. S. 629, 27 L. ed. 290, 1 Sup. Ct. Rep. 601; Caldwell v. Texas, 137 U. S. 699, 34 L. ed. 818, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 224; Allen v. Georgia, 166 U. S. 138, 41 L. ed. 949, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 525; Brown v. New Jersey, 175 U. S. 174, 44 L. ed. 120, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 77; Maxwell v. Dow, 176 U. S. 582, 44 L. ed. 597, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 448, 494; Hurtado v. California, 110 U. S. 516, 28 L. ed. 232, 4 Sup. Ct. Rep. 111, 292; Thomp- son v. Utah, 170 U. S. 344, 42 L. ed. 1063, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 620; Ex parte Ulrich, 42 Fed. 501.

NOTE.—As to what constitutes due process of law—see notes to Kuntz v. Sumption, 2 L.R.A. 655; Re Gannon, 5 L.R.A. 359; Ulman v. Baltimore, 11 L.R.A. 224; Gilman v. Tucker, 13 L.R.A. 304; People v. O'Brien, 2 L.R.A. 255; Pearson v. Yewdall, 24 L. ed. U. S. 436; and Wilson v. North Carolina, 42 L. ed. U. S. 865.

On the right of the accused to be present at the trial—see notes to Gore v. State, 5 L.R.A. 832; and Lewis v. United States, 36 L. ed. U. S. 1011.

By the "common law" which has been adopted by the state of Kentucky, and by the Constitution and statutes and the decisions of the courts of such state in the trial of a case when the life or liberty of the accused is in peril, he not only has the right to be present, but must be present during the whole of the trial, at every step, when anything material to his interest is done in his case, from the arraignment to the sentence. His presence is not only an inalienable right, but a jurisdictional fact, and cannot be waived. It is the duty of the trial court to see that this right is not violated; otherwise Federal jurisdiction under the 14th Amendment will attach to protect such right.

2 Story, Const. § 1791; Hale, P. C. p. 33; 3 Bacon, Abr. p. 512; Magna Charta, chap. 29; Brannon, 14th Amend. p. 271; Cooley, Const. Lim. 7th ed. p. 452; Underhill, Crim. Ev. § 232, p. 284; Wharton, Crim. Pl. & Pr. 8th ed. §§ 540, 545; Schwab v. Berggren, 143 U. S. 442, 36 L. ed. 218, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 525; Lewis v. United States, 146 U. S. 370, 36 L. ed. 1011, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 136; Hopt v. Utah, 110 U. S. 574, 28 L. ed. 262, 4 Sup. Ct. Rep. 202; State v. Carman, 63 Iowa, 130, 50 Am. Rep. 741, 18 N. W. 691; Bishop, New Crim. Proc. §§ 269, 271; Dougherty v. Com. 69 Pa. 290; Prine v. Com. 18 Pa. 103; Rolls v. State, 52 Miss. 396; State v. Smith, 90 Mo. 37, 59 Am. Rep. 4, 1 S. W. 753; French v. State, 85 Wis. 400, 21 L.R.A. 405, 39 Am. St. Rep. 855, 55 N. W. 566; Andrews v. State, 2 Sneed, 550; Witt v. State, 5 Coldw. 11; Gladden v. State, 12 Fla. 577; Maurer v. People, 43 N. Y. 1; Hill v. People, 16 Mich. 351; Schick v. United States, 195 U. S. 65, 49 L. ed. 99, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 826; West v. Louisiana, 194 U. S. 258, 48 L. ed. 965, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 650; Temple v. Com. 14 Bush, 769, 29 Am. Rep. 442; Allen v. Com. 86 Ky. 642, 6 S. W. 645; Hite v. Com. 14 Ky. L. Rep. 308, 20 S. W. 217; Meece v. Com. 78 Ky. 586; Rutherford v. Com. 78 Ky. 640; Crowley v. United States, 194 U. S. 461, 48 L. ed. 1075, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 731; Rogers v. Alabama, 192 U. S. 226, 48 L. ed. 417, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 257; Willis v. Com. 85 Ky. 68, 2 S. W. 654; Baltimore & O. R. Co. v. Baugh, 149 U. S. 371, 37 L. ed. 774, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 914; Chicago, B. & Q. R. Co. v. Chicago, 166 U. S. 235, 41 L. ed. 984, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 581; Jacobi v. Alabama, 187 U. S. 135, 47 L. ed. 107, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 48; Johnson v. Com. 9 Bush, 225.

When the absence of the accused during the trial is shown, the law presumes that his substantial rights have been prejudiced; and the holding of the court of appeals, that the record must affirmatively show that such rights were prejudiced, deprived the accused of his liberty without due process of law, and denied him the equal protection of the law.

Meece v. Com.; Rutherford v. Com.; Allen v. Com.; and Crowley v. United States, supra.

The court, in discharging juror J. C. Alexander, after he had been accepted on the jury, without cause therefor, acted beyond its power, and the court of appeals of Kentucky, in holding that, by reason of § 281 of the Criminal Code, it could not reverse on account of such error, deprived the accused of his liberty without due process of law and denied to him the equal protection of the law.

Klinger v. Missouri 80 U. S. 263, 20 L. ed. 637; Munday v. Com. 81 Ky. 233; Wiggins v. Com. 104 Ky. 766, 47 S. W. 1073; Smith v. Com. 20 Ky. L. Rep. 1848, 50 S. W. 241; Colvin v. Com. 22 Ky. L. Rep. 1408, 60 S. W. 701; O'Brian v. Com. 9 Bush, 333, 15 Am. Rep. 715; Shelby v. Com. 91 Ky. 566, 16 S. W. 461; Yick Wo v. Hopkins, 118 U. S. 356, 30 L. ed. 220, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1064.

Mr. N. B. Hays argued the cause, and, with Mr. Charles H. Morris, filed a brief for defendant in error:

It is the court, and not the juryman or the accused, who shall say whether or not the proposed juror is free from bias and prejudice.

Thompson & M. Juries, § 259; Snow v. Weeks, 75 Me. 106.

The essentials under the Constitution and laws of Kentucky, like those at common law, are that the jury in a felony case shall be composed of twelve men, that they shall be impartial, and that their verdict shall be free and unanimous. These are the substantive rights secured by a trial by jury. The procedure and mode of selecting the jury is not such a right unless the right to challenge is equivalent to the right to select.

Cooley, Const. Lim. 8th ed. 445–460.

In Hayden v. Com. 20 Ky. L. Rep. 274, 45 S. W. 886, the trial court discharged two jurors after they had been sworn on their voir dire, and in the absence of the accused from the court room, and the same question as presented here was involved, and the court held there was no error.

There was no error in the discharge of Alexander, the juror. It was no abuse of discretion by the trial court.

Proffatt, Jury Trials, § 194; State v. Adams, 20 Kan. 311.

No objection or exception having been made or taken in the trial court as to alleged error of the trial court in asking said question in the absence of plaintiff in error, and no error having been assigned by plaintiff in error in his motion and reasons for a new trial for the same, there was no error appearing on the record for review by the court of appeals.

Rutherford v. Com. 78 Ky. 639; Kennedy v. Com. 14 Bush, 340; Wilkerson v. Com. 88 Ky. 30, 9 S. W. 836; Merritt v. Com. 11 Ky. L. Rep. 17, 11 S. W. 471; Brown v. Com. 14 Bush, 400; Ellis v. Com. 9 Ky. L. Rep. 824, 7 S. W. 169; Crockett v. Com. 10 Ky. L. Rep. 159, 7 S. W. 907; Redmon v. Com. 82 Ky. 335; Vinegar v. Com. 104 Ky. 110, 46 S. W. 510; Branson v. Com. 92 Ky. 333, 17 S. W. 1019.

The conviction of the plaintiff in error was due process of law; and this question having been neither presented to the trial court, nor passed on adversely to him by it, it was not before the Kentucky court of appeals for review, and, it being without jurisdiction to consider such question, there is no ruling of the trial court or the Kentucky court of appeals, as appears from the record, which presents to this court any question of a Federal nature.

Dreyer v. Illinois, 187 U. S. 83, 47 L. ed. 85, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 28; Jacobi v. Alabama, 187 U. S. 135, 47 L. ed. 107, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 48; Brooks v. Missouri, 124 U. S. 394, 31 L. ed. 454, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 443; Baldwin v. Kansas, 129 U. S. 53, 32 L. ed. 641, 9 Sup. Ct. Rep. 193.

Assuming that the trial court asked the juror Alexander the question it is said to have asked him, in the absence of the plaintiff in error,—the record presents no Federal question. It was by agreement, and no objection or exception was taken thereto. This question was not even presented to the trial court on motion for a new trial. The Kentucky court of appeals, being a court of review, had no original jurisdiction to pass on said question in the absence of an objection and exception in the trial court. Before this court will review any Federal question the plaintiff in error must have presented it in the highest state court, and it must have been decided there adversely to him. Under § 281 of the Criminal Code the trial court is not only the highest court, but the only court, that could pass on said question.

Dreyer v. Illinois, and Jacobi v. Alabama, supra; Layton v. Missouri, 187 U. S. 356, 47 L. ed. 214, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 137; Tarrance v. Florida, 188 U. S. 519, 47 L. ed. 572, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 402.

When the challenge to a juror has been allowed and an impartial juror substituted in his place, the constitutional right of the accused to a fair and impartial jury has not been impaired.

Thompson & M. Juries, § 251, p. 268; Reynolds v. United States, 98 U. S. 156, 25 L. ed. 247; Hopt v. Utah, 120 U. S. 430, 30 L. ed. 708, 7 Sup. Ct. Rep. 614; Hayes v. Missouri, 120 U. S. 71, 30 L. ed. 580, 7 Sup. Ct. Rep. 305; Spies v. Illinois (Ex parte Spies) 123 U. S. 131, 31 L. ed. 80, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 21; United States v. Morris, 1 Curt. C. C. 23, Fed. Cas. No. 15,815.

The right of appeal is neither a constitutional right nor a right under the common law.

4 Cooley's Bl. 3d ed. p. 391; Montee v. Com. 3 J. J. Marsh. 132; Com. v. Mitchell, 3 J. J. Marsh. 630; Com. v. Craig, 15 B. Mon. 536; Comely v. Com. 17 B. Mon. 409; Rutherford v. Com. supra; Cornelius v. Com. 15 B. Mon. 545.

The court of appeals of Kentucky has no jurisdiction to review a decision of the trial court on a challenge to a juror for cause, and the discharge of the juror Alexander upon a challenge for cause by the commonwealth was final, and was subject to neither exception nor review by the appellate court. It would have been not the erroneous exercise of a power, but the usurpation of a power withheld from such court under the law, if the court of appeals had reviewed the decision of the lower court.

Kennedy v. Com. 14 Bush, 344; Morgan v. Com. 14 Bush, 114; Terrell v. Com. 13 Bush, 250.

In order to give the appellate court jurisdiction under the laws of Kentucky there must be an objection and exception to the decision of the trial court at the time such decision is made, and the substantial rights of the accused must be prejudiced thereby.

Branson v. Com. 92 Ky. 330, 17 S. W. 1019; Loving v. Warren County, 14 Bush, 320; Cook v. Com. 13 Ky. L. Rep. 702, 18 S. W. 356; Brooks v. Com. 12 Ky. L. Rep. 403, 14 S. W. 416.

Either ground shown by the affidavit of Hackett on the motion and challenge to the juror Alexander is sufficient, in the exercise of the discretion of the trial court, for the discharge of Alexander.

Klinger v. Missouri, 13 Wall. 257, 20 L. ed. 635.

Under the common law, a trial began when the case was opened for the Crown.

Proffatt, Jury Trial, § 208.

So the Kentucky court of appeals holds that the trial begins when the jury is sworn and charged with the deliverance of the accused.

Collier v. Com. 110 Ky. 518, 62 S. W. 4; Meece v. Com. 78 Ky. 586; Willis v. Com.

85 Ky. 68, 2 S. W. 654; Allen v. Com. 86 Ky. 642, 6 S. W. 645; Yarbrough v. Com. 89 Ky. 155, 25 Am. St. Rep. 524, 12 S. W. 143; Hite v. Com. 14 Ky. L. Rep. 303, 20 S. W. 217; Williams v. Com. 78 Ky. 93; Tye v. Com. 3 Ky. L. Rep. 59; Huff v. Com. 19 Ky. L. Rep. 1066, 42 S. W. 907; Gaskins v. Com. 97 Ky. 496, 30 S. W. 1017.

Section 281 of the Criminal Code gives to the trial court an unreviewable discretion in acting upon motions and grounds for new trials in criminal cases.

Terrell v. Com. 13 Bush, 246; Rutherford v. Com. 13 Bush, 608; Smith v. Com. 100 Ky. 137, 37 S. W. 586; Collier v. Com. 110 Ky. 518, 62 S. W. 4.

The construction of said section by the Kentucky court of appeals is the rule of construction in the Federal courts.

Smiley v. Kansas, 196 U. S. 447, 49 L. ed. 546, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 289.

The Federal courts will follow the interpretation and construction given the state statutes by the highest court of the state as to rights, privileges, and immunities, unless such construction is violative of the Federal laws.

Leeper v. Texas, 139 U. S. 462, 35 L. ed. 225, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 577; Nobles v. Georgia, 168 U. S. 398, 42 L. ed. 515, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 87; Bergemann v. Backer, 157 U. S. 655, 39 L. ed. 845, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 727; Fielden v. Illinois, 143 U. S. 452, 36 L. ed. 224, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 528; Brown v. New Jersey, 175 U. S. 172, 44 L. ed. 119, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 77.

The 14th Amendment gives the Federal government the power to enforce due process of law against arbitrary and unwarranted state actions, and nothing more.

Hurtado v. California, 110 U. S. 516, 28 L. ed. 232, 4 Sup. Ct. Rep. 111, 292; Anderson v. Henry, 45 W. Va. 319, 31 S. E. 998.

Mr. Justice McKenna delivered the opinion of the court:

The plaintiff in error seeks to review the judgment of the court of appeals of the commonwealth of Kentucky affirming a conviction and sentence of murder against him. He was indicted, with others, for killing one William Goebel. The grounds of review by this court are based upon certain rulings of the trial court which, plaintiff in error contends, were repugnant to the due process clause of the 14th Amendment of the Constitution of the United States.

It appears from the record that eleven jurors, including one J. C. Alexander, had been accepted by the parties. The commonwealth had exhausted three of its peremptory challenges, and plaintiff in error eleven of his,—he was given by the statutes fifteen. At this point the commonwealth's attorney suggested that Alexander had formed and expressed an opinion on the merits of the case, and had improperly conversed with a person, not a member of the jury, on a subject connected with the case. The commonwealth's attorney then made a motion to discharge Alexander from the jury, in support of which he filed the following affidavit of one Ben Hackett, who had been excluded as a juror in the case:

The affiant, Ben Hackett, says that after the killing of William Goebel he and Mr. J. C. Alexander, who has been accepted on the jury to try this case, had many conversations and arguments *about the said killing, [171] this affiant expressing and urging the opinion that there had been a conspiracy to murder Goebel, among those who were charged with his murder, and Mr. Alexander expressing and urging the opinion that there had not been a conspiracy at all to murder him. These arguments and conversations occurred at different times and places in Woodford county during the time that has elapsed since the murder of Mr. Goebel, were frequent, and much earnest interest and feeling was expressed by both this affiant and Mr. Alexander therein.

This affiant further says that on yesterday afternoon, late, after Mr. Alexander had been accepted as a juror to try the case, and after this affiant had been excused, after those accepted as jurors had been charged and admonished by the court, immediately after adjournment for supper, and as the jury was being conducted by the sheriff away from the courthouse, affiant by accident met the jury as they were passing out through the courthouse yard, when, in passing, Mr. Alexander said to this affiant: "Hello, Ben, I am glad they cut you off this jury, as I did not want to serve on this jury with you."

Affiant, Ben Hackett, says the foregoing statements are true.

(Signed) Ben F. Hackett.

The following proceedings were then had, as appears from the order of the court, from which we quote:

"It was agreed by counsel on either side that the court might, in the absence of the defendant and counsel, question the said Alexander as to the truth of the said statements, contained in said Hackett's affidavit, that he said to said Hackett while in the custody of the sheriff, 'Hello, Ben, I am glad they cut you off of this jury, as I did not want to serve on this jury with you,' and the said Alexander having admitted the truth of said statement, but claimed the said statement was made in a jocular way, and the court being of the opinion that such conduct on the part of said Alexander was a violation of the admonitions of the court, when he was placed in the custody of the sheriff, it was ordered and adjudged [172] that said Alexander be, and he is *now excused as a juror in this case, and he is now ordered to be discharged; and the court, being thus advised, overruled defendant's objection, and discharged and excused said Alexander, and defendant, by counsel, excepts.

"Thereupon defendant moved the court to discharge the entire panel remaining, which was objected to by the attorney for the commonwealth, and the court being advised, sustained said objection, and refused to discharge said entire panel, to which ruling defendant, by counsel, excepts."

By these rulings, it is contended that plaintiff in error was deprived of due process of law. Error is assigned under the 5th, 6th, and 14th Amendments of the Constitution of the United States.

Plaintiff in error cannot avail himself of the provisions of the 5th and 6th Amendments, for reasons we have so often expressed that it would be the extreme of superfluity to repeat them. It is enough to say that those Amendments do not apply to proceedings in the state courts. The invocation of the 14th Amendment is attempted to be justified on two grounds: (1) That the trial court, in discharging Alexander, acted beyond its power, and that the court of appeals of Kentucky, in holding that, by reason of § 281 of the Criminal Code of the state, it cannot reverse on account of such error, deprives plaintiff in error of his liberty without due process of law. (2) By the common law, which has been adopted by Kentucky, and by the Constitution and statutes of the state, an accused has not only the right to be present, but must be present during the whole of the trial. "His presence is not only an inalienable right, but a jurisdictional fact, and cannot be waived."

The argument of plaintiff in error is very elaborate, but there is scarcely any phase of it which has not been answered adversely to his contention by decisions of this court.

He seems to make an issue with the court of appeals of the state upon the law of the state, and to contend that the court erred in the interpretation and application of that law. This contention encounters the ruling in Re Converse, 137 U. S. 624, 631, 34 L. ed. 796, 799, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 191,
[173] *and other cases, which hold that a "state cannot be deemed guilty of a violation of its obligations under the Constitution of the United States because of a decision, even if erroneous, of its highest court, while acting within its jurisdiction."

We cannot assume error in the decision of the court of appeals. We accept it, as we are bound to do, as a correct exposition of the law of the state,—common, statutory, and constitutional. Our inquiry can only be, Did the state law, as applied, afford plaintiff in error due process, as those words are used in the 14th Amendment? We think it did. It is not necessary to enter into a lengthy discussion of what constitutes due process of law. That has been done in a number of cases and there is nothing in the present case which calls for a repetition and an extension of the discussion. It may be admitted that the words "due process of law," as used in the 14th Amendment, protect fundamental rights. What those are cannot ever be the cause of much dispute. In giving them protection, however, it was not designed, as was observed by the Chief Justice in Re Converse, "to interfere with the power of the state to protect the lives, liberty, and property of its citizens; nor with the exercise of that power in the adjudications of the courts of a state in administering the process provided by the law of the state." These words are apposite in the present case. Of what does plaintiff in error complain? The discharge of a juror before he was sworn, and the absence of the plaintiff in error from the examination of the juror by the presiding judge. But plaintiff in error consented through his counsel to the examination, and there is not an intimation that the juror selected in Alexander's place was not as competent as he. Nor can we say that the discharge of Alexander took from the other jurors who had been chosen their competency to try the case or to give to plaintiff in error the right to a new panel. In Hayes v. Missouri, 120 U. S. 68, 30 L. ed. 578, 7 Sup. Ct. Rep. 350, it was said "the accused cannot complain if he is still tried by an impartial jury. He can demand nothing more. Northern P. R. Co. v. Herbert, 116 U. S. 642, 29 L. ed. 755, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 590. *The right to challenge is [174] the right to reject, not to select, a juror. If, from those who remain, an impartial jury is obtained, the constitutional right of the accused is maintained." Brown v. New Jersey, 175 U. S. 172, 44 L. ed. 119, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 77.

In passing on the action of the trial court in examining Alexander in the absence of plaintiff in error, the court of appeals said that the court had been compelled to relax the rule prescribed by the statute that "the defendant must be present and shall remain in custody during trial," and cited

Hite v. Com. 14 Ky. L. Rep. 308, 20 S. W. 217; Meece v. Com. 78 Ky. 586. In the first case, absence from the court room by the accused for a few minutes at a time, on account of sickness, the trial continuing in his absence, it was held did not prejudice the substantial rights of the accused.

In Meece v. Com., upon the jury coming back to the court room for further instructions, the court made certain alterations in the instructions in absence of the accused, but in the presence of his counsel. It was held not to be error, the court saying:

"While we recognize the fact that the accused, when on trial for a criminal offense, should be present during the entire trial, and that no evidence should be heard or instructions given or amended without his presence either before or after the submission of the cause to the jury, still this court is only authorized to reverse in cases where the substantial rights of the accused have been prejudiced in the court below; and in order to ascertain whether errors have been committed to the prejudice of the accused, the facts as well as the law of the case should be considered. While one charged with a criminal offense has the constitutional right to be tried by a jury, the right of appeal from the verdict and judgment against him does not exist except by reason of the legislation of the state on the subject; and, when permitting an appeal, the lawmaking power has the right to determine for what cause a reversal may be had."

The court of appeals also said, in passing on the contention of plaintiff in error, based on the examination of Alexander:

[175] *"It has also been held by this court that a trial for felony begins when the jury is sworn. Willis v. Com. 85 Ky. 68, 2 S. W. 654. At the time the examination of Alexander took place, and when he was discharged, the jury had not only not been sworn, but it had not been completed.

"There are many rights, some of them guaranteed by the Constitution, which one charged with crime may not waive, and should not be permitted by the courts to waive,—such as the right of trial by jury, the right to be heard by himself and counsel, to demand the nature and cause of the accusation against him; and yet others, the assertion of which may unexpectedly become necessary for his protection during the progress of the trial. But we are unwilling to say that one charged with felony, and being in court, as was the appellant, with counsel at hand ready and competent to advise him of his rights, may not, in advance of the swearing of the jury, and before he is placed in jeopardy, consent to a private examination by the court of a juror against whom complaint had been made, for the purpose of ascertaining whether he was qualified to retain his place as one of the jury to try the case. Nor do we think it is affirmatively shown by the record in this case that any injury resulted to the substantial rights of the appellant by Alexander's dismissal from the jury."

It is manifest, therefore, that it is the law of Kentucky that occasional absence of the accused from the trial, from which no injury results to his substantial rights, is not reversible error. And we think, in applying that rule to the case at bar, plaintiff in error was not deprived of due process of law within the meaning of the 14th Amendment of the Constitution of the United States.

It will be observed that the court of appeals also decided that, even though the exclusion of Alexander had been error, a reversal of the case was forbidden by § 281 of the Criminal Code of the state, and cited Curtis v. Com. 110 Ky. 845, 62 S. W. 886; Turner v. Com. 25 Ky. L. Rep. 981, 76 S. W. 853; Alderson v. Com. 25 Ky. L. Rep. 32, 74 S. W. 679. See also Powers v. Com. [176] 114 Ky. 237, 70 S. W. 644, 1050, 71 S. W. 494, where § 281 was construed the same way. The court, in its construction of § 281, followed the construction established by prior cases, and did not make a discriminating application of that section against plaintiff in error. He was, therefore, not deprived of the equal protection of the laws.

Judgment affirmed.

Mr. Justice Harlan, concurring:

The record does not, in my judgment, show an absence of the due process of law enjoined by the 14th Amendment of the Constitution of the United States, as that Amendment has been interpreted by this court. For that reason, without approving all that is said in the opinion of the court, I concur in the judgment of affirmance.

LOUISVILLE & NASHVILLE RAILROAD COMPANY, Plff. in Err.,

v.

F. E. DEER.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 176–178.)

Judgment—jurisdiction to garnish debt due nonresident.—A state court has jurisdiction to render a valid judgment in garnishment of a debt due by a railway company doing business in the state, and permanently liable there for service and suit, to a nonresi-

NOTE.—On the protection of a nonresident creditor against garnishment—see notes to Illinois C. R. Co. v. Smith, 19 L.R.A. 577; and King v. Cross, 44 L. ed. U. S. 211.

dent who was served by such publication as the statutes of the state prescribe.

[No. 164.]

Submitted December 14, 1905. Decided January 2, 1906.

IN ERROR to the Supreme Court of the State of Alabama to review a judgment affirming a judgment of the City Court of Montgomery, in that state, in favor of plaintiff in an action to recover a debt, in which defendant set up as a defense a judgment of a Florida court in garnishment of such debt due plaintiff, who was a resident of Alabama, and was served by such publication as the Florida statutes prescribe. Reversed.

See same case below, 39 So. 1028.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Mr. George W. Jones submitted the cause for plaintiff in error:

To hold that the situs of a debt is at the domicil of the creditor is palpably untenable. It cannot be in the hands of the creditor until the debt is paid. If the res were in the hands of the creditor, the debt would, of necessity, be discharged.

Chicago, R. I. & P. R. Co. v. Sturm, 174 U. S. 710, 43 L. ed. 1144, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 797; King v. Cross, 175 U. S. 396, 44 L. ed. 211, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 131; Rothschild v. Knight, 184 U. S. 334, 46 L. ed. 573, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 391; Holland v. Mobile & O. R. Co. 16 Lea, 418; Carson v. Memphis & C. R. Co. 88 Tenn. 646, 8 L.R.A. 412, 17 Am. St. Rep. 921, 13 S. W. 588.

The fact that the supreme court of Alabama may have considered that the Florida court was without jurisdiction cannot affect the validity of the Florida judgment pleaded.

Laing v. Rigney, 160 U. S. 531, 40 L. ed. 525, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 366.

The garnishment judgment and its payment in Florida constituted a complete defense to the suit in Alabama.

Chicago, R. I. & P. R. Co. v. Sturm, supra; Pittsburg, C. C. & St. L. R. Co. v. Bartels, 108 Ky. 216, 56 S. W. 152; Burlington & M. River R. Co. v. Thompson, 31 Kan. 194, 47 Am. Rep. 497, 1 Pac. 622; Fithian v. New York & E. R. Co. 31 Pa. 114; Hannibal & St. J. R. Co. v. Crane, 102 Ill. 249, 40 Am. Rep. 581; Plimpton v. Bigelow, 93 N. Y. 601; Chicago, B. & Q. R. Co. v. Moore, 31 Neb. 629, 28 Am. St. Rep. 534, 48 N. W. 475; Singer Mfg. Co. v. Fleming, 39 Neb. 679, 23 L.R.A. 210, 42 Am. St. Rep. 613, 58 N. W. 226; Connor v. Hanover Ins. Co. 28 Fed. 549; Gunn v. Howell, 35 Ala. 144, 73 Am. Dec. 484.

The Florida record was valid on its face.

Maxwell v. Stewart, 21 Wall. 71, 22 L. ed. 564.

Foreign corporations doing business by agents within a state are treated as residents of the state, and debts due from them to nonresidents are garnishable in that state.

Lancashire Ins. Co. v. Corbetts, 165 Ill. 592, 36 L.R.A. 640, 56 Am. St. Rep. 275, 46 N. E. 631; National F. Ins. Co. v. Chambers, 53 N. J. Eq. 468, 32 Atl. 663; Fithian v. New York & E. R. Co. supra; Selma R. & D. R. Co. v. Tyson, 48 Ga. 351; German Bank v. American F. Ins. Co. 83 Iowa, 491, 32 Am. St. Rep. 316, 50 N. W. 53; Cousens v. Lovejoy, 81 Me. 467, 17 Atl. 495; Burlington & M. River R. Co. v. Thompson, supra.

No counsel for defendant in error.

Mr. Justice Holmes delivered the opinion of the court:

This is an action to recover a debt admitted to have been due to the plaintiff, the defendant in error. But it was agreed *in[178] the trial court that a suit was brought by one Brock against the plaintiff in Florida, in which the railroad company, the present plaintiff in error, was summoned as garnishee, judgment was recovered against the latter as such for the sum now in suit, and the sum paid by it into court, all before the present suit was begun. The proceedings in Florida were strictly in accordance with the laws of that state. The railroad company did business there, and was permanently liable to service and suit, and the defendant, the present defendant in error, was notified by such publication as the statutes of Florida prescribed. He was not, however, a resident of the state, but lived in Alabama, and the supreme court of the latter state affirmed a judgment in his favor on the ground that the Florida court had no jurisdiction to render the judgment relied on as a defense. —Ala.—

Whatever doubts may have been felt when this case was decided below are disposed of by the recent decision in Harris v. Balk, 198 U. S. 215, 49 L. ed. 10, 23, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 625. There the garnishee was only temporarily present in Maryland, where the first judgment was rendered, and the defendant in that judgment was absent from the state, and served only as the defendant in error was served in Florida. Yet the Maryland judgment was held valid, and a decision by the supreme court of North Carolina, denying the jurisdiction of the Maryland court, was reversed. In the present case the railroad company was permanently present in the state where it was served. In view of the full and recent discussion in Harris v. Balk, we think it unnecessary to say more.

Judgment reversed.

[179]*CINCINNATI, PORTSMOUTH, BIG SANDY, & POMEROY PACKET COMPANY, Plff. in Err.,

v.

GEORGE W. BAY and William Bay.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 179-186.)

1. Error to state court—Federal question—when raised in time—effect of certificate of state court.—A certificate of the highest court of a state to the effect that it necessarily considered the Federal question relied upon to sustain a writ of error from the Supreme Court of the United States, which the record shows was raised, removes any objection that such question was raised too late under the local procedure.
2. Contracts—unlawful restraints on interstate commerce—incidental restraints.—The interference, if any, with interstate commerce, contemplated by a contract for the sale of certain river craft, which permits a suspension of payment of instalments of the purchase price in case of serious competition in the freight and passenger traffic over a route between two named Ohio ports on the Ohio river, and requires the vendors to withdraw from such competition for five years, is too insignificant to render the contract invalid under the act of July 2, 1890 (26 Stat. at L. 209, chap. 647, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 3200), as imposing a restraint on interstate commerce.
3. Contracts—unlawful restraints on interstate commerce—rights and liabilities of parties.—A purchaser of river craft cannot invoke the antitrust act of July 2, 1890 (26 Stat. at L. 209, chap. 647, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 3200), to relieve him from his obligation to pay the purchase price, because of his covenant to maintain the present traffic rates, which is not declared by the contract to enter into the consideration of the sale,—especially where the rates referred to primarily, if not exclusively, relate to domestic, and not to interstate, business.

[No. 174.]

Argued December 15, 1905. Decided January 2, 1906.

NOTE.—On illegal trusts under modern antitrust laws—see note to Whitwell v. Continental Tobacco Co. 64 L.R.A. 689.

Certificate of state court as showing presence of Federal question.

A certificate of a chief or presiding justice of the highest court of a state cannot relieve the Supreme Court of the United States from determining for itself whether the record shows that the suit really involves any question which will entitle it to review the judgment of the state court. Newport Light Co. v. Newport, 151 U. S. 527, 38 L. ed. 259, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 429; Powell v. Brunswick County, 150 U. S. 433, 37 L. ed. 1134, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 166.

Such a certificate is incompetent to confer jurisdiction not shown on the record (Felix v. Scharnweber, 125 U. S. 54, 31 L. ed. 687, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 759; Mississippi & M. R. Co. v. Rock, 4 Wall. 177, 18 L. ed. 381; Powell v. Brunswick County, supra; Sayward v. Denny, 158 U. S. 180, 39 L. ed. 941, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 777; Henkel v. Cincinnati, 177 U. S. 170, 44 L. ed. 720, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 573; Home for Incurables v. New York, 187 U. S. 155, 47 L. ed. 117, 63 L.R.A. 329, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 84), though it may have the effect of making more certain and specific what is too general and indefinite in the record (Parmelee v. Lawrence, 11 Wall. 36, 20 L. ed. 48; Brown v. Atwell, 92 U. S. 327, 23 L. ed. 511; Yazoo & M. Valley R. Co. v. Adams, 180 U. S. 41, 45 L. ed. 415, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 256; Dibble v. Bellingham Bay Land Co. 163 U. S. 63, 41 L. ed. 72, 16 Sup. St. Rep. 939).

The certificate may induce the Federal court, where the question is a close one, not to construe the pleadings so strictly as to hold that they do not sufficiently present a Federal question. Roby v. Colehour, 146 U. S. 153, 36 L. ed. 922, 13 Sup Ct. Rep. 47.

A certificate of the chief justice of a state court, stating that the validity of state legislation subsequent to the charter of a corporation was drawn in question upon the ground that it impaired the obligation of a contract, and that the decision was in favor of the validity of such legislation, may be resorted to, in the absence of an opinion, to show that a Federal question which was otherwise raised in the record was actually passed upon by the court. Gulf & S. I. R. Co. v. Hewes, 183 U. S. 66, 46 L. ed. 86, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 26.

The certificate of a state court of last resort may serve to remove any doubt whether rights under the Federal bankrupt law were so relied upon and passed upon in affirming, without opinion, a judgment dismissing a suit brought by a trustee in bankruptcy to recover an alleged asset of the bankrupt estate, as to sustain a writ of error from the Federal Supreme Court. Rector v. City Deposit Bank Co. 200 U. S. 405, post, 527, 26 Sup. Ct. Rep. Rep. 289.

And where the record shows that the jurisdictional question may have been involved, a certificate by the presiding judge of a state court, certified by the clerk as part of the record, that one of the questions mentioned in the 25th section of the judiciary act was decided in the manner prescribed by that act, will be presumed to have been made by authority of the court, and the Supreme Court of the United States must take jurisdiction. Armstrong v. Athens County, 16 Pet. 281, 10 L. ed. 965.

A certificate signed by the clerk and certified by the presiding justice of a state court, though entitled to great weight as showing that a Federal question was decided by the court, which gives it in the manner required to give the Supreme Court of the United States jurisdiction, is not conclusive that such a question was raised in the case. Caperton v. Bowyer, 14 Wall. 216, 20 L. ed. 882.

And it certainly cannot be regarded as conclusive when the same judge, in the opinion on file in the case, places the decision entirely on a ground independent of a Federal question. Adams County v. Burlington & M. River R. Co. 112 U. S. 123, 28 L. ed. 678, 5 Sup. Ct. Rep. 77.

A certificate of the presiding judge of a state court is insufficient to show that a

IN ERROR to the Supreme Court of the State of Ohio to review a judgment which affirmed a judgment of the Circuit Court of Lawrence County, in that state, in favor of plaintiffs in an action to recover the purchase price of certain river craft, in which the defendant alleges that the contract of sale was illegal under the Federal antitrust act. Affirmed.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Mr. Ledyard Lincoln argued the cause, and, with Mr. Julius L. Anderson, filed a brief for plaintiff in error:

Repeated attempts have been made to restrict the broad and general language of the Sherman antitrust act, but the Federal courts, and especially this court, have uniformly held that the act means just what it says, and cannot be confined to unreasonable restraints nor such as were condemned by the common law before its passage.

United States v. Trans-Missouri Freight Asso. 166 U. S. 290, 312–341, 41 L. ed. 1007, 1017–1027, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 540; United States v. Joint Traffic Asso. 171 U. S. 505, 573–575, 43 L. ed. 259, 288–290, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 25; United States v. Addyston Pipe & Steel Co. 46 L.R.A. 122, 29 C. C. A. 141, 54 U. S. App. 723, 85 Fed. 271, Affirmed in 175 U. S. 211, 44 L. ed. 136, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 96; Northern Securities Co. v. United States, 193 U. S. 197, 331, 402, 48 L. ed. 679, 697, 726, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 436; Chesapeake & O. Fuel Co. v. United States, 53 C. C. A. 256, 115 Fed. 610.

It cannot be questioned that the transportation of persons and property from one state to another is interstate commerce.

United States v. Trans-Missouri Freight Asso. 166 U. S. 290, 312, 325, 41 L. ed. 1007, 1017, 1022, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 540; Gloucester Ferry Co. v. Pennsylvania, 114 U. S. 196, 29 L. ed. 158, 1 Inters. Com. Rep. 382, 5 Sup. Ct. Rep. 826; Lottery Case (Champion v. Ames) 188 U. S. 321,

---

Federal question was raised and decided, where the recorded opinion of the court shows that the decision was based on a ground that did not involve a Federal question. Dibble v. Bellingham Bay Land Co. 163 U. S. 63, 41 L. ed. 72, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 939.

Where, from the entire record, it appears that the decision of the state court depends upon the construction, and not the constitutionality, of a state statute, the certificate of the state court is unavailing to show that the constitutional question was involved. Lawler v. Walker, 14 How. 149, 14 L. ed. 364; Commercial Bank v. Buckingham, 5 How. 317, 12 L. ed. 169.

Something more definite than a certificate of the highest court of a state that certain statutes, challenged as in violation of the Federal Constitution, were held valid, without naming those statutes, is necessary to satisfy the requirement that the record should show that such a question was involved. Lawler v. Walker, supra.

And see note to Hooker v. Los Angeles, 63 L.R.A. 471, on What the record must show respecting the presentation and decision of a Federal question in order to confer jurisdiction on the Supreme Court of the United States of a writ of error to a state court.

A certificate of the state court that such questions arose and were decided as required by § 25 of the judiciary act to give the Supreme Court jurisdiction to review the decision of the state court is unnecessary, where the record shows on its face that such questions arose, and how they were decided. Ableman v. Booth, 21 How. 506, 16 L. ed. 169.

Home for Incurables v. New York, 187 U. S. 155, 47 L. ed. 117, 63 L.R.A. 329, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 84, lays down the rule that a certificate of the chief justice or presiding officer of the highest state court that a Federal question was involved is not properly a part of the record.

Although the contrary nowhere seems explicitly to have been stated, Mr. Justice Wayne uses some language in Lawler v. Walker, supra, from which it might be inferred that he regarded such a certificate as part of the record. But such a certificate, though it may help out the failure of the record to show beyond all question the presence of a Federal controversy, seems generally to have been regarded as something distinct from the record itself. Newport Light Co. v. Newport, 151 U. S. 527, 38 L. ed. 259, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 429; Powell v. Brunswick County, 150 U. S. 433, 37 L. ed. 1134, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 166; Felix v. Scharnweber, 125 U. S. 54, 31 L. ed. 687, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 759; Mississippi & M. R. Co. v. Rock, 4 Wall. 177; 18 L. ed. 381; Henkel v. Cincinnati, 177 U. S. 170, 44 L. ed. 720, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 573; Parmelee v. Lawrence, 11 Wall. 36, 20 L. ed. 48; Brown v. Atwell, 92 U. S. 327, 23 L. ed. 511; Yazoo & M. Valley R. Co. v. Adams, 180 U. S. 41, 45 L. ed. 415, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 256; Roby v. Colehour, 146 U. S. 153, 36 L. ed. 922, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 47; Armstrong v. Athens County, 16 Pet. 281, 10 L. ed. 965; Dibble v. Bellingham Bay Land Co. 163 U. S. 63, 41 L. ed. 72, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 939; Gulf & S. I. R. Co. v. Hewes, 183 U. S. 66, 46 L. ed. 86, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 26.

And see note to Home for Incurables v. New York, 63 L.R.A. 329, on The record for the purpose of showing jurisdiction in the Supreme Court of the United States of a writ of error to a state court.

Other notes respecting the review of decisions of the state court in the Supreme Court of the United States are: What adjudications of state courts can be brought up for review in the Supreme Court of the United States by writ of error to those courts, Apex Transp. Co. v. Garbade, 62 L.R.A. 513; How and when questions must be raised and decided in a state court in order to make a case for a writ of error from the Supreme Court of the United States, Mutual L. Ins. Co. v. McGrew, 63 L.R.A. 33; What questions the Federal Supreme Court will consider in reviewing the judgments of state courts, State ex rel. Hill v. Dockery, 63 L.R.A. 571; The practice and procedure governing the transfer of causes to the Federal Supreme Court on writ of error or appeal, Wedding v. Meyler, 66 L.R.A. 833.

345–352, 47 L. ed. 492, 496–499, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 321.

The transportation of goods on a through bill of lading from one point in a given state to another in the same state by way of an adjoining state or territory is interstate commerce.

Hanley v. Kansas City Southern R. Co. 187 U. S. 617, 47 L. ed. 333, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 214.

The states of Kentucky and West Virginia extend to low-water mark on the Ohio side, so that even boats plying directly from Syracuse to Cincinnati, without stopping at intermediate points, would necessarily, at ordinary stages of the river, pass through parts of West Virginia and Kentucky.

Indiana v. Kentucky, 136 U. S. 479, 34 L. ed. 329, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1051; Handly v. Anthony, 5 Wheat. 374, 5 L. ed. 113; Booth v. Shepherd, 8 Ohio St. 243; McFall v. Com. 2 Met. (Ky.) 394.

It has been held by this court in a number of cases involving contracts which did not relate directly to interstate commerce, but were local in their nature, that they were not within the prohibition of the Sherman act, although the parties contracting in fact sold commodities or solicited business beyond the state line; but the contract must affect interstate commerce directly, and not remotely or incidentally.

United States v. E. C. Knight Co. 156 U. S. 1, 39 L. ed. 325, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 249; Hopkins v. United States, 171 U. S. 578, 43 L. ed. 290, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 40; Anderson v. United States, 171 U. S. 604, 43 L. ed. 300, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 50.

But in the case of United States v. Trans-Missouri Freight Asso. 166 U. S. 290, 325, 1007, 1022, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 540, the court uses the following language: Transportation of commodities among the several states or with foreign nations falls within the description of the words of the statute with regard to that subject, and there is also included in that language that kind of trade in commodities among the states or with foreign nations which is not confined to their mere transportation. It includes their purchase and sale. Precisely at what point in the course of the trade in or manufacture of commodities the statute may have effect upon them or upon contracts relating to them may be somewhat difficult to determine, but interstate transportation presents no difficulties.

It is not necessary that the restraint upon trade should be entire, or the monopoly aimed at complete.

United States v. E. C. Knight Co. 156 U. S. 16, 39 L. ed. 330, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 249; Addyston Pipe & Steel Co. v. United States, 175 U. S. 211, 244, 245, 44 L. ed. 136, 148, 149, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 96; Northern Securities Co. v. United States, 193 U. S. 407, 48 L. ed. 729, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 436; United States v. Addyston Pipe & Steel Co. 46 L.R.A. 122, 29 C. C. A. 141, 54 U. S. App. 723, 85 Fed. 278; Chesapeake & O. Fuel Co. v. United States, 53 C. C. A. 256, 115 Fed. 619; Lufkin Rule Co. v. Fringeli, 57 Ohio St. 607, 41 L.R.A. 185, 63 Am. St. Rep. 736, 49 N. E. 1030; Harding v. American Glucose Co. 74 Am. St. Rep. 235, note, 182 Ill. 551, 64 L.R.A. 738, 74 Am. St. Rep. 189, 55 N. E. 577.

The provisions of the contract in the case at bar—especially those looking to a suppression of competition by strangers—go far beyond the fair protection of the Big Sandy Company.

Horner v. Graves, 7 Bing. 735; 24 Am. & Eng. Enc. Law, pp. 850, 851; United States v. Addyston Pipe & Steel Co. supra.

In Ohio it is well settled that all restraint of trade is presumptively invalid. That a partial restraint may be enforced only where it appears that it is founded upon a valuable consideration, and is reasonable and not oppressive.

Lange v. Werk, 2 Ohio St. 519; Lufkin Rule Co. v. Fringeli, 57 Ohio St. 596, 41 L.R.A. 185, 63 Am. St. Rep. 736, 49 N. E. 1030.

The supreme court of Ohio and other courts have repeatedly held that contracts in restraint of competition, and tending to monopoly, are against public policy and void.

Central Ohio Salt Co. v. Guthrie, 35 Ohio St. 666; Emery v. Ohio Candle Co. 47 Ohio St. 320, 21 Am. St. Rep. 819, 24 N. E. 660; State ex rel. Watson v. Standard Oil Co. 49 Ohio St. 137, 15 L.R.A. 145, 34 Am. St. Rep. 541, 30 N. E. 279; South Chicago City R. Co. v. Calumet Electric Street R. Co. 171 Ill. 391, 49 N. E. 576; Anderson v. Jett, 89 Ky. 375, 6 L.R.A. 390, 12 S. W. 670; Texas & P. R. Co. v. Southern P. R. Co. 41 La. Ann. 970, 17 Am. St. Rep. 445, 6 So. 888. See note to Harding v. American Glucose Co. 74 Am. St. Rep. 235.

The two packet companies who signed the contract were not engaged in private, but in quasi public business, and therefore any restraint upon such business would be prejudicial to the public interest, and cannot be sustained.

United States v. Trans-Missouri Freight Asso. 166 U. S. 333, 335, 41 L. ed. 1025, 1026, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 540; Gibbs v. Consolidated Gas Co. 130 U. S. 396, 32 L. ed. 979, 9 Sup. Ct. Rep. 553; United States v. Addyston Pipe & Steel Co. 46 L.R.A. 122, 29 C. C. A. 141, 54 U. S. App. 723, 85 Fed. 291.

It is claimed that the illegality of the contract should have been specially pleaded by the defendant. To this there are two answers. First, that the facts bringing the case within the condemnation of the act of Congress and of the common law appear upon the face of the pleadings and are admitted by them. Indeed, the petition is demurrable. Second, we submit it is not the law that illegality must be pleaded, where the plaintiff cannot prove his case without disclosing the illegality; as, for instance, where it appears upon the face of the contract which is the basis of his cause of action.

Lange v. Werk, and Lufkin Rule Co. v. Fringeli, supra; 4 Enc. Pl. & Pr. p. 952; 1 Enc. Pl. & Pr. p. 844; 2 Beach, Modern Law of Contracts, § 1443; Oscanyan v. Winchester Repeating Arms Co. 103 U. S. 261, 26 L. ed. 539; Emery v. Ohio Candle Co. supra; Field Cordage Co. v. National Cordage Co. 6 Ohio C. C. 615.

The covenants in restraint of commerce were not ancillary.

Davis v. A. Booth & Co. 65 C. C. A. 269, 131 Fed. 37; Tuscaloosa Ice Mfg. Co. v. Williams. 127 Ala. 110, 50 L.R.A. 175, 85 Am. St. Rep. 125, 28 So. 669.

The question of the illegality of the contract was presented to the circuit court of Lawrence county.

Weaver v. Columbus, S. & H. Valley R. Co. 55 Ohio St. 491, 45 N. E. 717.

If the Federal or jurisdictional question is raised for the first time in the assignments of errors in the supreme court of the state, the question is presented in time.

Farmers' & M. Ins. Co. v. Dobney, 189 U. S. 301, 47 L. ed. 821, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 565; San José Land & Water Co. v. San José Ranch Co. 189 U. S. 179, 47 L. ed. 766, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 487; Chicago, B. & Q. R. Co. v. Chicago, 166 U. S. 226, 231, 232, 41 L. ed. 979, 982, 983, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 581; Rothschild v. Knight, 184 U. S. 334, 339, 46 L. ed. 573, 579, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 391; Furman v. Nichol (Green v. Nichol) 8 Wall. 44, 56, 19 L. ed. 370, 375.

Mr. Joseph Spencer Graydon argued the cause, and, with Mr. Lawrence Maxwell, Jr., filed a brief for defendants in error:

The contract is valid under the laws of Ohio and at common law.

Lange v. Werk, 2 Ohio St. 520; Thomas v. Miles, 3 Ohio St. 274; Morgan v. Perhamus, 36 Ohio St. 517, 38 Am. Rep. 607; Lufkin Rule Co. v. Fringeli, 57 Ohio St. 596, 41 L.R.A. 185, 63 Am. St. Rep. 736, 49 N. E. 1030; Oregon Steam Nav. Co. v. Winsor, 20 Wall. 64, 22 L. ed. 315; California Steam Nav. Co. v. Wright, 6 Cal. 258, 65 Am. Dec. 511; Dunlop v. Gregory, 10 N. Y. 241, 61 Am. Dec. 746; Fowle v. Park, 131 U. S. 88, 97, 33 L. ed. 67, 74, 9 Sup. Ct. Rep. 658; Harrison v. Glucose Sugar Ref. Co. 58 L.R.A. 915, 53 C. C. A. 484, 116 Fed. 304; Fisheries Co. v. Lennen, 116 Fed. 217; Hursen v. Gavin, 59 Ill. App. 66, Affirmed in 162 Ill. 377, 44 N. E. 735; Hedge v. Lowe, 47 Iowa, 137; Nordenfelt v. Maxim Nordenfelt Guns & A. Co. [1894] A. C. 535; S. Jarvis Adams Co. v. Knapp, 58 C. C. A. 1, 121 Fed. 34; United States v. Addyston Pipe & Steel Co. 46 L.R.A. 122, 29 C. C. A. 141, 54 U. S. App. 723, 85 Fed. 271.

In this case it is immaterial whether the separate covenant of the plaintiff in error to maintain the rates charged by the parties of the first part on business above Portsmouth, Ohio, is legal or illegal. The suit is not on that covenant, but on the covenant to pay $3,600. The other covenant is not mentioned in the pleadings.

Pigot's Case, 11 Coke, 27*b; Bank of Australasia* v. Breillat, 6 Moore, P. C. C. 152; State ex rel. Laskey v. Board of Education, 35 Ohio St. 519; Lange v. Werk, supra; Harriman, Contr. 134; Thomas v. Miles, supra; Oregon Steam Nav. Co. v. Winsor, 20 Wall. 64, 70, 71, 22 L. ed. 315, 319.

The contract is not illegal under the Sherman antitrust act.

United States v. Joint Traffic Asso. 171 U. S. 505, 568, 43 L. ed. 259, 287; Anderson v. United States, 171 U. S. 604, 615, 43 L. ed. 300, 306, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 50; Hopkins v. United States, 171 U. S. 578, 43 L. ed. 290, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 40; Northern Securities Co. v. United States, 193 U. S. 197, 360, 48 L. ed. 679, 709, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 436; E. Bement & Sons v. National Harrow Co. 186 U. S. 70, 46 L. ed. 1058, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 747; Brett v. Ebel, 29 App. Div. 256, 51 N. Y. Supp. 573; Whitwell v. Continental Tobacco Co. 64 L.R.A. 689, 60 C. C. A. 290, 125 Fed. 454; Phillips v. Iola Portland Cement Co. 61 C. C. A. 19, 125 Fed. 593; Davis v. A. Booth & Co. 65 C. C. A. 269, 131 Fed. 31.

On a petition in error in the supreme court of Ohio to reverse the judgment of a circuit court affirming the judgment of the court of common pleas, the court is not required to consider objections to the judgment of the common pleas that were not assigned for error in the circuit court.

Pollock v. Cohen, 32 Ohio St. 514; Union Ins. Co. v. McGookey, 33 Ohio St. 555; Springfield, J. & P. R. Co. v. Western R. Constr. Co. 49 Ohio St. 681, 32 N. E. 961.

The writ of error should be dismissed for want of jurisdiction.

Caro v. Davidson, 197 U. S. 197, 49 L. ed. 723, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 428; Fullerton v.

Texas, 196 U. S. 192, 49 L. ed. 443, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 221; Chicago, I. & L. R. Co. v. McGuire, 196 U. S. 128, 49 L. ed. 413, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 200.

The court will not assume facts to make the contract illegal; on the contrary, the presumption, in the absence of allegation or proof, is in favor of its validity.

Herpolsheimer v. Funke, 1 Neb. (Unof.) 304, 95 N. W. 687; C. F. Jewett Pub. Co. v. Butler, 159 Mass. 517, 22 L.R.A. 253, 34 N. E. 1087; Mills v. Dunham [1891] 1 Ch. 576.

Mr. Justice Holmes delivered the opinion of the court:

This is an action upon a contract, brought by the defendants in error to recover an instalment of money due by its terms. A judgment in their favor was sustained by the supreme court of the state, although the petition in error to that court set up that the contract was illegal under the act of Congress of July 2, 1890, chap. 647. 26 Stat. at L. 209, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 3200. No opinion was delivered, but a certificate that this objection was relied upon, and that it necessarily was considered, was made part of the record by that court. Therefore the present writ of error properly was allowed. The record shows that the question was raised, and the certificate shows that it was not treated as having been raised too late under the local procedure,— a point upon which the state court is the judge. It is enough that the Federal question was raised and necessarily decided by the highest court of the state. Farmers' & M. Ins. Co. v. Dobney, 189 U. S. 301, 47 L. ed. 821, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 565.

The contract was an indenture between the Portsmouth & Pomeroy Packet Company, George W. and William Bay, of the first part, and the Cincinnati, Portsmouth, Big Sandy, & Pomeroy Packet Company, of the second part. By this instrument the parties of the first part sell to the latter two steamers, two deck barges, two coal flats, and $500 in the stock of the Coney Island Wharf Boat Company, for $30,500, to be paid as therein provided. The party of the second part also agrees to pay to the Bays $3,600 annually in advance for five years, provided, however, that in case of opposition to its boats by other boats running from Cincinnati to Portsmouth, Ohio, or to points above Portsmouth, not including points above Syracuse, Ohio, causing it to carry freight and passengers at certain exceedingly low rates, the time of payment of the instalments shall be postponed until [183] the opposition has ceased. It is *further agreed that if the opposition continues for two years without interruption, and no annual payment be made, the Bays may cancel the agreement.

"It is also agreed as a part of the consideration of this agreement" that for five years the parties of the first part, or either of them, shall not be "engaged in running or in operating, or in any way be interested in any freight and passenger packet or business, or either of them, at and from Cincinnati, Ohio, to Portsmouth, Ohio, and intermediate points; nor at and from Portsmouth, Ohio, to Cincinnati, Ohio, and intermediate points; nor at and from Syracuse, Ohio, or points between Syracuse and Portsmouth, Ohio, to or for points below Portsmouth, Ohio," with a qualification as to the towing and barge business, so long as it does not interfere with the other party's freight and passenger business from Portsmouth to Cincinnati. "It is also understood in this agreement that the party of the second part will maintain the rates charged by the parties of the first part on business above Portsmouth, Ohio, said rates, however, never to exceed railroad rates between said points." The last-mentioned covenants, set forth in this paragraph, are especially relied upon as making the contract illegal, as in restraint of trade. The previously mentioned suspension of instalments in case of opposition rising to a certain height also is referred to as a combination to aid the purchaser in getting a monopoly of river trade between Portsmouth and Cincinnati, including, it is said, some Kentucky ports.

It might be enough, perhaps, to answer the whole contention, that it does not appear on the record that the contract necessarily contemplated commerce between the states. It would be an extravagant consequence to draw from Hanley v. Kansas City Southern R. Co. 187 U. S. 617, 47 L. ed. 333, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 214,—a case of a state attempting to fix rates over a railroad route passing outside its limits,—that the contract was within the Sherman act because the boats referred to might sail over soil belonging to Kentucky in passing between two Ohio points. It may be noticed further that Ohio equally has jurisdiction on the river. Wedding v. Meyler, 192 U. S. 573, 48 L. ed. 570, 66 L. R. A. 833, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 322. *A contract is not to be assumed [184] to contemplate unlawful results unless a fair construction requires it upon the established facts. Technically, perhaps, there might be some trouble in saying that the supreme court of Ohio did not decide the case on the ground that the illegality was not made out as matter of fact.

But we do not like to put our decision upon technical reasoning where there is at least a fair surmise that such reasoning does not meet the realities of the case. We will suppose, then, that the contract does not leave commerce among the states untouched. But even on this supposition it is manifest that interference with such commerce is insignificant and incidental, and not the dominant purpose of the contract, if it actually was thought of at all. The route mentioned is between Ohio ports. The contract, in what it especially contemplates, is a domestic contract, and, so far as it is so, is shown to be valid under the local law by the decision of the Ohio court. The chief and visible object of its provisions has nothing to do with commerce among the states. That which suspends payment of instalments in case of very serious opposition is security against a losing bargain, not a combination to gain a monopoly. The withdrawal of the vendors from opposition for five years is the ordinary incident of the sale of a business and good will.

It is argued, to be sure, that the last-mentioned covenant is independent and not connected with the sale of the vessels. The contrary is manifest as a matter of good sense, and is proved even technically by the words "it is also agreed as a part of the consideration of this agreement." By these words the covenant not to do business between Cincinnati and Portsmouth for five years is imported into the sale of the ships, and made one of the conventional inducements of the purchase. The price is paid not for the vessels alone, but for the vessels with the covenant. So, still more clearly, the parallel instalments for five years are paid for the covenant, at least in part. It is said that there is no sale of good will. But the covenant makes the sale. Presum-[185] ably all that there was to sell, beside *certain instruments of competition, was the competition itself, and the purchasers did not want the vendors' names.

This being our view of the covenant in question, whatever differences of opinion there may have been with regard to the scope of the act of July 2, 1890, there has been no intimation from anyone, we believe that such a contract, made as part of the sale of a business, and not as a device to control commerce, would fall within the act. On the contrary, it has been suggested repeatedly that such a contract is not within the letter or spirit of the statute (United States v. Trans-Missouri Freight Asso. 166 U. S. 290, 329, 41 L. ed. 1007, 1023, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 540; United States v. Joint Traffic Asso. 171 U. S. 505, 568, 43 L. ed. 259, 287, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 25), and it was so decided in the case of a patent (E. Bement & Sons v. National Harrow Co. 186 U. S. 70, 92, 46 L. ed. 1058, 1069, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 747). It would accomplish no public purpose, but simply would provide a loophole of escape to persons inclined to elude performance of their undertakings, if the sale of a business and temporary withdrawal of the seller, necessary in order to give the sale effect, were to be declared illegal in every case where a nice scrutiny could discover that the covenant possibly might reach beyond the state line. We are of opinion that the agreement before us is not made illegal by either of the provisions thus far discussed.

It only remains to say a word as to the agreement to maintain rates. This is a covenant by the purchaser, the plaintiff in error. It is not the covenant sued upon. It is not declared to enter into the consideration of the sale. If necessary, we should be astute to avoid allowing a party to escape from his just and substantially legal undertaking on such a ground. The argument on the other side requires us to import a subordinate undertaking of the buyer into the consideration for that which was the consideration of his debt, and, in that roundabout way, to make the debt unlawful. We shall not go into such niceties beyond noticing that they are not encouraged by the cases. Oregon Steam Nav. Co. v. Winsor, 20 Wall. 64, 22 L. ed. 315; Bank of Australasia v. Breillat, 6 Moore, P. C. C. 152, 201; Pigot's Case, 11 Coke, 26*b*, 27*b*. The plaintiff in error did business between *Cincinnati and Syracuse, Ohio, and the [186] rates referred to must be assumed to be rates within those points. If the covenant had any direct bearing on commerce with another state, what we have said sufficiently explains why we deem it insufficient to make the whole agreement void.

Judgment affirmed.

JOHN W. BALLMANN, Appt.,

v.

VIVIAN J. FAGIN, United States Marshal for the Southern District of Ohio. (No. 240.)

JOHN W. BALLMANN, Plff. in Err.,

v.

UNITED STATES. (No. 308.)

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 186–196.)

Witness — privilege — self-incrimination.— The possibility that the cash book whose production was sought by a Federal grand jury engaged in investigating the criminal liability of a national bank employee for a disappearance of cash from the bank vaults might show dealings likely to lead to a charge that its owner, then being proceeded against in the civil courts of the state as party to a NOTE.—On the privilege of witness as to criminating questions—see notes to Cooper v.

"bucket shop," was an abettor of the guilty person, or might disclose a violation of the criminal laws of the state against that form of gambling, justifies his refusal, under the claim of his privilege against self-incrimination, either to produce the book, or to answer questions manifestly intended to prove possession or control as a preliminary to calling for the book.

[Nos. 240, 308.]

No. 240 argued May 8, 1905. Decided January 2, 1906. No. 308 submitted November 27, 1905. Decided January 2, 1906.

APPEAL from the Circuit Court of the United States for the Southern District of Ohio to review a judgment denying a writ of habeas corpus to inquire into a detention under a commitment for a contempt in the District Court for that District. Affirmed. Also

IN ERROR to the District Court of the United States for the Southern District of Ohio to review such commitment. Reversed.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Mr. Lawrence Maxwell, Jr., argued the cause, and, with Messrs. Thomas F. Shay and Miller Outcalt, filed a brief for appellant in No. 240:

If Ballmann was protected by the 5th Amendment from answering the questions, the order committing him for refusing to answer is void, and he is entitled to be released on habeas corpus.

Ex parte Fisk, 113 U. S. 713, 28 L. ed. 1117, 5 Sup. Ct. Rep. 724; Counselman v. Hitchcock, 142 U. S. 547, 35 L. ed. 1110, 3 Inters. Com. Rep. 816, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 195; Re Ayers, 123 U. S. 443, 485, 31 L. ed. 216, 223, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 164.

There was no evidence and there were no circumstances before the district court to justify it in rejecting the sworn statement of the witness that an answer to the questions might criminate him.

People ex rel. Lewisohn v. O'Brien, 176 N. Y. 253, 68 N. E. 353; People ex rel. Taylor v. Forbes, 143 N. Y. 219, 38 N. E. 303; Janvrin v. Scammon, 29 N. H. 280; Counselman v. Hitchcock, 142 U. S. 547, 580, 35 L. ed. 1110, 1120, 3 Inters. Com. Rep. 816, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 195; Re Kanter, 117 Fed. 356; Chamberlain v. Willson, 12 Vt. 491, 36 Am. Dec. 356; Warner v. Lucas, 10 Ohio, 336; Lamson v. Boyden, 160 Ill. 613, 43 N. E. 781.

A witness who claims the privilege of silence is not required to admit that he is guilty. The protection of the Constitution is for the innocent as well as for the guilty, and he may require and claim and be accorded protection from the peril of indictment, although protesting his innocence.

People ex rel. Taylor v. Forbes, supra.

A witness or party in a Federal court is entitled to protect himself against self-crimination under a law of the state in which the court is sitting.

United States v. Saline Bank, 1 Pet. 100, 7 L. ed. 69.

There was no legal evidence to sustain the conviction for contempt for failing to produce a cash book.

Re Watts, 190 U. S. 1, 35, 47 L. ed. 933, 944, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 718.

In order to convict the defendant it was necessary for the government to prove that a book answering the description of the subpœna, containing transactions with A. Smith or A. Johnson, was in existence and under his control on April 7. There was no evidence of this fact or of the existence or possession of any cash book after April 3.

Iasigi v. Brown, 1 Curt. C. C. 401, Fed. Cas. No. 6,993; Langdell, Eq. Pl. § 211; Hall v. Young, 37 N. H. 134; Baggott v. Goodwin, 17 Ohio St. 76.

Since the proceeding in the district court was a criminal case, the government was bound to establish the guilt of the defendant beyond a reasonable doubt.

Bessette v. W. B. Conkey Co. 194 U. S. 324, 48 L. ed. 997, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 665; New Orleans v. New York Mail S. S. Co. 20 Wall. 387, 22 L. ed. 354; Bullock Electric & Mfg. Co. v. Westinghouse Electric & Mfg. Co. 63 C. C. A. 607, 129 Fed. 105.

The presumption of the innocence of the accused has relation to every fact that must be established to prove guilt beyond a reasonable doubt.

Kirby v. United States, 174 U. S. 55, 43 L. ed. 894, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 574.

The presumption is evidence in favor of the accused.

Coffin v. United States, 156 U. S. 432, 39 L. ed. 481, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 394.

The district court and the circuit court have allowed conjecture and suspicion to take the place of proof. Their error is similar to that which was so severely condemned in Chaffee v. United States, 18 Wall. 516, 21 L. ed. 911.

Whenever a witness is excused from giving testimony upon the ground that an answer might criminate him, he cannot be compelled to produce books or papers which would have that effect.

State, 4 L.R.A. 766; Rice v. Rice, 11 L.R.A. 531; and Re Buskett, 14 L.R.A. 407.

On constitutional protection against being forced to furnish evidence to be used against one's self in a civil case—see note to Levy v. Superior Court, 29 L.R.A. 811.

As to sufficiency of a statutory immunity to satisfy the constitutional guaranty against self-incrimination—see notes to United States v. James, 26 L.R.A. 418; and Interstate Commerce Commission v. Baird, 48 L. ed. U. S. 860.

Lamson v. Boyden, supra; Boyle v. Smithman, 146 Pa. 255, 23 Atl. 397; Boyd v. United States, 116 U. S. 616, 29 L. ed. 746, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 524; 3 Wigmore, Ev. § 2264.

Solicitor General Hoyt argued the cause and filed a brief for appellee in No. 240:

Will the judgment in contempt of a court of competent jurisdiction, so far as resting upon the determination of a fact alone, be reviewed at all by this court?

Re Swan, 150 U. S. 637, 37 L. ed. 1207, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 225; Ex parte Davis, 112 Fed. 139; Ex parte Terry, 128 U. S. 289, 305, 32 L. ed. 405, 409, 9 Sup. Ct. Rep. 77.

So far as the contention is addressed to the merits of the case, and not to the jurisdiction of the lower court (O'Neal v. United States, 190 U. S. 38, 47 L. ed. 946, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 776), an erroneous conclusion in that regard can only be reviewed on appeal or error, or in such appropriate way as may be provided.

Louisville Trust Co. v. Comingor, 184 U. S. 18, 26, 46 L. ed. 413, 416, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 293; Ex parte Gordon, 104 U. S. 515, 26 L. ed. 814.

And while proceedings in contempt may be said to be sui generis, the present judgment is, in effect, a judgment in a criminal case, over which this court has no jurisdiction on error.

Re Chetwood, 165 U. S. 443, 462, 41 L. ed. 782, 788, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 385; Tinsley v. Anderson, 171 U. S. 101, 105, 43 L. ed. 91, 96, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 805; Cary Mfg. Co. v. Acme Flexible Clasp Co. 187 U. S. 427, 428, 47 L. ed. 244, 245, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 211.

The danger of extending the principle announced in Counselman v. Hitchcock is that the privilege may be put forward for a sentimental reason or for a purely fanciful protection of the witness against an imaginary danger, and for the real purpose of securing immunity to some third person who is interested in concealing the facts to which he would testify.

Brown v. Walker, 161 U. S. 595, 40 L. ed. 820, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 644. See also 3 Wigmore, Ev. pp. 2967, 2968; Stephen, History of Crim. Law, p. 3102.

It is for the court to determine whether a direct answer may criminate the witness.

Best, Ev., § 128, pp. 175, 180; Greenl. Ev. § 451; United States v. Miller, 2 Cranch, C. C. 247, Fed. Cas. No. 15,772; Sanderson's Case, 3 Cranch, C. C. 638, Fed. Cas. No. 12,297; United States v. McCarthy, 21 Blatchf. 469, 18 Fed. 87; Stevens v. State, 50 Kan. 712, 32 Pac. 350; Ford v. State, 29 Ind. 541, 95 Am. Dec. 658; Minters v. People, 139 Ill. 363, 29 N. E. 45; People v. Mather, 4 Wend. 229, 21 Am. Dec. 122; Com. v. Willard, 22 Pick. 476; Com. v. Kimball, 24 Pick. 366; Ex parte Senior, 37 Fla. 1, 32 L.R.A. 133, 19 So. 652; Richman v. State, 2 G. Greene, 532; Printz v. Cheeney, 11 Iowa, 469; La Fontaine v. Southern Underwriters Asso. 83 N. C. 132; Floyd v. State, 7 Tex. 215; Miskimmins v. Shaver (Ex parte Miskimins) 8 Wyo. 392, 49 L.R.A. 831, 58 Pac. 411; Wyckoff, Seamans, & Benedict v. Wagner Typewriter Co. 99 Fed. 158; Foot v. Buchanan, 113 Fed. 156; Ex parte Irvine, 74 Fed. 954.

In nearly all, if not all, the cases in which the privilege was claimed and allowed, it was apparent from the question asked, as pointed out by Chief Justice Marshall in United States v. Burr, Fed. Cas. No. 14,692*e*, that a direct answer would criminate the witness. These cases contain no discussion of the question whether it is for the court or the witness to determine if an answer would criminate him, but it is apparent that it was regarded as a matter for the court.

King v. Gordon, 2 Dougl. K. B. 593; Paxton v. Douglas, 19 Ves. Jr. 224; Maloney v. Bartley, 3 Campb. 210; Cates v. Hardacre, 3 Taunt. 424; Rex v. Pegler, 5 Car. & P. 521; Fisher v. Ronalds, 16 Eng. L. & Eq. 417; Emery's Case, 107 Mass. 172, 9 Am. Rep. 22; Re Graham, 8 Ben. 419, Fed. Cas. No. 5,659; Bank of Salina v. Henry, 2 Denio, 155; People ex rel. Taylor v. Seaman, 8 Misc. 152, 29 N. Y. Supp. 329; Cullen v. Com. 24 Gratt. 624; Smith v. Smith, 116 N. C. 386, 21 S. E. 196; Lister v. Boker, 6 Blackf. 439; Johnson v. Goss, 2 Yerg. 110; Lea v. Henderson, 1 Coldw. 146; Ex parte Clarke, 103 Cal. 352, 37 Pac. 230.

Messrs. Lawrence Maxwell, Jr., Thomas F. Shay, and Miller Outcalt submitted the cause for plaintiff in error in No. 308:

In a criminal proceeding based on written charges, the inquiry is confined to those charges.

In proceedings in contempt for disobedience of an injunction, the proofs "must be limited to the particular offenses alleged against the defendant."

Parkhurst v. Kinsman, 2 Blatchf. 76, Fed. Cas. No. 10,759.

Ballmann purged the contempt as to the book, under oath.

King v. Sims, 12 Mod. 511; 4 Bl. Com. 286; Rapalje, Contempt, § 119; United States v. Dodge, 2 Gall. 313; Fed. Cas. No. 14,975; Re Pitman, 1 Curt. C. C. 186, Fed. Cas. No. 11,184; Boyd v. Glucklich, 53 C. C. A. 451, 116 Fed. 131.

Solicitor General Hoyt submitted the cause for defendant in error in No. 308:

The findings of fact of the trial court are conclusive.

Davis v. Schwartz, 155 U. S. 636, 637, 39 L. ed. 291, 293, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 237; Grayson v. Lynch, 163 U. S. 472, 473, 41 L. ed. 231, 232, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1064.

Mr. Justice Holmes delivered the opinion of the court:

One of these cases is a writ of error issued by this court to the United States district court upon a judgment committing the plaintiff in error for contempt; the other, an appeal from the circuit court for the same district upon a judgment denying the writ of habeas corpus, which was applied for on the ground that the same commitment was void.

The case, so far as material to our deci-
[193] sion, is as follows: On *April 7, 1905, Ballmann was served with a subpœna to appear before the grand jury, and to bring with him "cash book, ledger, letter-press copy book, and all sheets showing transactions under the name of A. Smith and A. Johnson during the months of December, 1904, and January and February, 1905." He appeared before the grand jury, and on the same day the grand jury reported his failure to produce the books and papers called for by the subpœna. The court entered an order as of that day, April 7, that he should produce all books and papers pertaining to his business. On April 8 the grand jury filed charges of contempt against him, in that "being required by said subpœna to produce a certain cash book in use in his business" he refused to do so, and also that he refused to answer the following questions: (a) "State what, on account No. 140, sheet No. 1, on this big ledger now in use in your business, these figures under the word 'folio,' on the debit side of the account, to wit: No. 349, 349, 349, 349, 349, and 351, refer to." (b) "Do not these figures '349,' in your handwriting, on account No. 140, refer to the folios in your cash book in use in your business in January, 1905?" On the same day, April 8, the court, after hearing evidence, ordered Ballmann to produce the said cash book and to answer the above questions at noon on April 10, or to be committed to jail until compliance or discharge by due process of law.

On April 10 Ballmann appeared and made the following answers: "I have not now, and neither at the time of, nor at any time since, the service of the first subpœna upon me in this matter, have I had in my possession or under my custody or control the book referred to in the order of the court entered on April 8, 1905, or any book showing transactions under the names of A. Smith or A. Johnson, and am unable to produce the same." "I decline to answer the questions contained in said order of April 8, 1905, on the ground that it might tend to criminate me; and in this connection I produce copy of a petition filed against me and others by Emanuel Oppenheimer, in the court of common pleas of Hamilton county, being case No. 126,824, and I state that there are many other actions of the same kind pending *against me." The petition referred to [194] charged Ballmann and others with conducting a scheme of gambling known as a "bucket shop,"—criminal conduct under the laws of Ohio, the state where the case was being tried.

Thereupon, upon the same day, the court, without hearing further evidence, reciting its former order and Ballmann's failure to comply with it, ordered him to be imprisoned in accordance with the same. Afterwards a bill of exceptions was allowed, which set forth the proceedings of April 8. It appears that on that day the foreman of the grand jury testified that Ballmann was inquired of with reference to the cash book, and said that there was no such book. (It is fair to read the statement as meaning the same as his formal answer on the 10th, and no more.) Other witnesses gave evidence tending to prove the existence of a cash book, although not, or at least not except by very remote inference, a cash book showing transactions under the name of A. Smith or A. Johnson. It also appears that Ballmann's counsel said to the court: "As to the book, we say to your honor that we haven't got it;" and also handed the court a paper from Ballmann, reading: "As to the questions asked, I refuse to answer, as they might tend to criminate me."

It appears to us, and it hardly is denied, that the charge of contempt in failing to produce a book is confined, as it was taken by Ballmann's answer to be confined, to a failure to produce a cash book showing transactions under the name of A. Smith or A. Johnson. We assume that the commitment was upon the charge and the order of April 8, not upon the order entered as of April 7. Upon that assumption it might be enough to say that the court was not warranted in finding Ballmann guilty by any evidence which it had before it. There was nothing to show that his answer was not literally true. Re Watts, 190 U. S. 1, 35, 36, 47 L. ed. 933, 944, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 718. But we need not stop there. Suppose that Ballmann had in his possession a book which he was privileged from producing, and which he wished not to produce. Suppose, also, that he were summoned as he was in this case, and that the book did not show [195] the dealings *described,—he could not be criticised very severely for avoiding, if possible, the discrediting claim of privilege, by an answer literally exact. If, then, he should be asked in general terms to produce his cash book, he would not be debarred from pleading his privilege by what he had said before. And without any inclination to enlarge a witness's rights beyond the settled requirements of law, we think that the privilege might extend to any question, the manifest object of which was to prove possession or control as a preliminary to calling for the book.

To determine whether the case which we have supposed is the case at bar we must consider whether we can see reasonable grounds for believing that the book was privileged, or that it was not,—it does not matter for our purposes in which form the question is put. The subject under investigation, according to the government's statement, was the criminal liability of some employee of a national bank from the vaults of which a large amount of cash had disappeared. The book very possibly may have disclosed dealings with the person or persons naturally suspected, and, especially in view of the charges that Ballmann kept a "bucket shop," dealings of a nature likely to lead to a charge that Ballmann was an abettor of the guilty man. If he was, he was guilty of a misdemeanor under Rev. Stat. § 5209, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 3497, and no more bound to produce the book than to give testimony to the facts which it disclosed. Boyd v. United States, 116 U. S. 616, 29 L. ed. 746, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 524: Counselman v. Hitchcock, 142 U. S. 547, 35 L. ed. 1110, 3 Inters. Com. Rep. 816, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 195.

Not impossibly Ballmann took this aspect of the matter for granted, as one which would be perceived by the court without his disagreeably emphasizing his own fears. But he did call attention to another, less likely to be known. As we have said, he set forth that there were many proceedings on foot against him as party to a "bucket shop," and so subject to the criminal law of the state in which the grand jury was sitting. According to United States v. Saline Bank, 1 Pet. 100, 7 L. ed. 69, he was exonerated from disclosures which would have exposed him to the penalties of the state law. See Jack v. Kansas (decided this term), 199 U. S. 372, ante, 234, 26 Sup. Ct. Rep. 73. One way or the other we are of [196] opinion *that Ballmann could not be required to produce his cash book if he set up that it would tend to criminate him.

But it is said that he did not set it up, but, on the contrary, denied the existence of the book. We are not of that opinion. We think that he was giving an answer which, whether too sharp or not, might be true even if he had a cash book within his control. His denial was limited explicitly, and with no disguise in the form of statement, to a cash book showing transactions under the name of A. Smith or A. Johnson. It called attention to the limit by its form. And when thereupon he was asked questions, the manifest meaning of which was to fasten upon him an admission that there was a cash book, he at once declined to answer. Of course it may be that he declined because he knew that further answers would disclose the falsity of his first denial. But the natural explanation of the claim of privilege is that a cash book existed, that Ballmann knew it, and that he believed that if produced it would criminate him in one of the two ways which we have explained. Nothing more need be said about the questions as distinguished from the production of the book. See Counselman v. Hitchcock, 142 U. S. 547, 35 L. ed. 1110, 3 Inters. Com. Rep. 816, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 195.

We are aware that the courts below came to their conclusions upon the assumption that Ballmann denied generally the possession of a cash book, and that he was before the court for disobedience to an order to produce it. It may be that he now escapes liability as much by luck as by desert. But he is entitled to demand a judgment according to the record, and we are of opinion that, on the record, fairly construed, the judgment of the district court should be reversed. This decision makes any other than formal action upon the habeas corpus unnecessary, and therefore the judgment of the circuit court may be affirmed for the purpose of ending the case.

Judgment of the District Court reversed.
Judgment of the Circuit Court affirmed.

Mr. Justice Harlan and Mr. Justice McKenna dissent.

---

[197] *UNITED STATES for the Use and Benefit of DANIEL H. HILL, and Howard H. Hill, Copartners Doing Business under the Firm Name of N. D. Hill & Sons, Plffs. in Err.,

v.

AMERICAN SURETY COMPANY OF NEW YORK.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 197–205.)

Principal and surety—extent of surety's liability—labor and materials used in public work.—Labor and materials used in the prosecution of a public work, whether furnished under the contract directly to the contractor or to a subcontractor, must be deemed within the obligation of a surety company under a bond executed pursuant to the act of August 13, 1894 (28 Stat. at L. 278, chap. 280, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 2523), conditioned for the prompt payment by the contractor to "all persons supplying it labor or materials in the prosecution of the work provided for in said contract," in view of the manifest purpose of that statute to protect those whose labor or material has contributed to the prosecution of the work.

[No. 39.]

Submitted November 3, 1905. Decided January 2, 1906.

IN ERROR to the Superior Court of King County in the State of Washington to review a judgment sustaining a demurrer to, and dismissing, the complaint in an action by persons furnishing labor and materials to a subcontractor on a public work on the bond of a surety company, conditioned for the prompt payment by the contractor to all persons supplying it with labor or materials in the prosecution of such work. Reversed and remanded for further proceedings.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Mr. Albert W. Buddress submitted the cause for plaintiffs in error:

The principals and sureties are liable under similar state statutes for labor and material furnished to subcontractors.

Mullin v. United States, 48 C. C. A. 677, 109 Fed. 817; George v. Washington County R. Co. 93 Me. 134, 44 Atl. 377; Branin v. Connecticut & P. Rivers R. Co. 31 Vt. 214; Kent v. New York C. R. Co. 12 N. Y. 628; Mundt v. Sheboygan & F. Du L. R. Co. 31 Wis. 451; Redmond v. Galena & S. W. R. Co. 39 Wis. 426; Mann v. Corrigan, 28 Kan. 194; Peters v. St. Louis & I. M. R. Co. 24 Mo. 586; Grannahan v. Hannibal & St. J. R. Co. 30 Mo. 546; French v. Powell, 135 Cal. 636, 68 Pac. 92; Gilmore v. Westerman, 13 Wash. 390, 43 Pac. 345; Abbott v. Morrissette, 46 Minn. 10, 48 N. W. 416; Sepp v. McCann, 47 Minn. 364, 20 N. W. 246; Bassett v. Mills, 89 Tex. 162, 34 S. W. 93; Garrison v. Borio, 61 N. J. Eq. 236, 47 Atl. 1060; Ferguson v. Despo, 8 Ind. App. 523, 34 N. E. 575; 23 Am. & Eng. Enc. Law, 2d ed. p. 723.

The rule of strictissimi juris is a stringent one, and is liable at times to work practical injustice. It is one which ought not to be extended to contracts not within the reason of the rule, particularly when the bond is underwritten by a corporation which has undertaken for a profit to insure the obligee against a failure of performance on the part of the principal obligor. Such a contract should be interpreted liberally in favor of the subcontractor, with a view of furthering the beneficent object of the statute.

United States Fidelity & G. Co. v. Golden Pressed & Fire Brick Co. (United States Fidelity & G. Co. v. United States) 191 U. S. 416, 48 L. ed. 242, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 142.

The object of the bond in suit was to indemnify or insure the bank against loss arising from any act of fraud or dishonesty. That object could not be defeated by any narrow interpretation of its provisions, nor by adopting a construction favorable to the company, if there be another construction equally admissible under the terms of the instrument executed for the protection of the bank.

Guarantee Co. of N. A. v. Mechanics' Sav. Bank & T. Co. 183 U. S. 402, 46 L. ed. 253, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 124.

A remedial statute should be liberally construed with reference to the purpose of its enactment.

Bechtel v. United States, 101 U. S. 597, 25 L. ed. 1019.

The intent of the law must prevail over the letter of the statute.

Lionberger v. Rouse, 9 Wall. 468, 19 L. ed. 721; Smythe v. Fiske, 23 Wall. 374, 23 L. ed. 47; Durousseau v. United States, 6 Cranch, 308, 3 L. ed. 232; United States v. Hodson, 10 Wall. 395, 19 L. ed. 937; Baltimore v. Root, 8 Md. 95, 63 Am. Dec. 692; Broom, Legal Maxims, 611; Rutledge v. Crawford, 91 Cal. 526, 13 L.R.A. 761, 25 Am. St. Rep. 212, 27 Pac. 779; United States v. Freeman, 3 How. 556, 11 L. ed. 724; Bell v. New York, 105 N. Y. 139, 11 N. E. 495; Bullock v. Horn, 44 Ohio St. 420, 7 N. E. 737; Tuttle v. Montford, 7 Cal. 358; Barnes v. Thompson, 2 Swan, 313; Sedgw. Stat. & Const. L. 308.

Where doubt exists as to the meaning of a statute, the title may be looked to for aid in its construction.

Patterson v. The Eudora, 190 U. S. 169, 47 L. ed. 1002, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 821; Smythe v. Fiske, Mundt v. Sheboygan & F. Du L. R. Co., and Garrison v. Borio, supra.

The state, when engaged in the construction of public buildings, is chargeable with a moral duty to protect persons furnishing labor and material therefor.

Korsmeyer Plumbing & Heating Co. v. McClay, 43 Neb. 649, 62 N. W. 50; Knapp v. Swaney, 56 Mich. 345, 56 Am. Rep. 397, 23 N. W. 162; Baker v. Bryan, 64 Iowa, 561, 21 N. W. 83; Philadelphia v. Stewart, 195 Pa. 309; 45 Atl. 1056; St. Louis use of Glencoe Lime & Cement Co. v. Von Phul, 133 Mo. 564, 54 Am. St. Rep. 695, 34 S. W. 843.

The true spirit and merit of the statute is lost sight of in the contention that this remedy is a mere substitute for the remedy by lien, and when the latter does not exist the former cannot exist.

Bates v. Santa Barbara, 90 Cal. 543, 27 Pac. 438; Kent v. New York C. R. Co. 12 N. Y. 628; American Surety Co. v. Lawrenceville Cement Co. 110 Fed. 717; Garrison v. Borio, supra.

Subcontractors are the implied agents of the original contractors in procuring labor and material.

Parker v. Bell, 7 Gray, 429; Bates v. Santa Barbara, supra.

Mr. Henry C. Willcox submitted the cause for defendant in error:

Decisions by the lower courts on the subject support the contention that the supplying of labor or materials by a third party to a subcontractor is not supplying labor and materials to the original contractor within the meaning of the latter's bond.

United States v. Simon, 38 C. C. A. 659, 98 Fed. 73; Mullin v. United States, 48 C. C. A. 677, 109 Fed. 817; United States v. Farley, 91 Fed. 474.

Mr. Justice Day delivered the opinion of the court:

This case was decided on demurrer in the court below. It was held that no cause of action was stated by the plaintiffs, and judgment was rendered accordingly. Plaintiffs brought action as partners against the American Surety Company upon a bond given in pursuance of the act of August 13, 1894. 28 Stat. at L. 278, chap. 280, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 2523. The allegations of the petition, so far important as to be noticed here, are: The defendant is a corporation duly authorized to do a general insurance and bonding business. On February 14, 1891, the New Jersey Foundry & Machine
[200] Company *entered into a written contract with the United States, for the construction of four observation towers, for the agreed compensation of $2,575. That, among other things, it was stipulated in the contract "that the said New Jersey Foundry & Machine Company shall be responsible for and pay all liabilities incurred in the prosecution of the work for labor and material," the work to be completed within seven months from date of contract. The United States required of the said New Jersey Foundry & Machine Company a bond, which was executed by the company and the American Surety Company as surety, on the 14th day of February, 1901, in the penal sum of $4,000, to be paid unto the United States of America, which bond contained the condition: "Now, therefore, if the above bounden New Jersey Foundry & Machine Company shall and will in all respects duly and fully observe and perform all and singular the covenants, conditions, and agreements in and by said contract agreed and covenanted by said New Jersey Foundry & Machine Company to be observed and performed, according to the true intent and meaning of said contract, and as well during any period of extension of said contract that may be granted on the part of the United States, as during the original terms of the same, and shall promptly make full payments to all persons supplying it labor or materials in the prosecution of the work provided for in said contract, then the above obligation shall be void and of no effect; otherwise, to remain in full force and virtue." That afterwards the said New Jersey Foundry & Machine Company entered into a contract with the Richard Manufacturing Company for certain portions of the work, and said Richard Manufacturing Company entered upon the performance of the contract, and in the performance thereof between the 3d day of April and the 17th day of May, of the same year, Daniel H. Hill, and Howard H. Hill, the plaintiffs, at the special instance and request of the said Richard Manufacturing Company, scraped and painted the four observation towers, to be constructed under the contract with the said New Jersey Foundry & Machine Company, for which said *Richard Manufactur- [201]
ing Company agreed to pay the said plaintiffs the sum of $246.80, of which there is unpaid the sum of $141.80. That on the 11th day of August, 1903, plaintiffs made the affidavit required by the statute, and procured from the Secretary of War of the United States certified copies of the original contract and bonds; that the said New Jersey Foundry & Machine Company, the Richard Manufacturing Company, and the United States accepted the said scraping and painting so done and performed by the plaintiffs in the necessary prosecution of the work required by the original contract.

The statute under consideration is entitled "An Act for the Protection of Persons Furnishing Materials and Labor for the Construction of Public Works." It provides, in substance, that persons entering into formal contracts with the United States for the construction or repair of public buildings and works shall be required, before performing such work, to execute the usual penal bond with good and sufficient surety, with the additional obligation "that such contractor or contractors shall promptly make payments to all persons supplying him or them labor and materials in the prosecution of the work provided for in such contract." The statute further provides for the furnishing of a copy of the contract and bond to persons furnishing an affidavit that labor and materials for the prosecution of such work have been supplied by him or them, and giving a right of action in the name of the United States for the benefit and use of said person or persons against the contractor and his sureties.

We may remark, before considering the construction to be given this act, that it has been materially amended by the act of February 24, 1905. 33 Stat. at L. 811, chap. 778, U. S. Comp. Stat. Supp. 1905, p. 493. The amended act makes provision for preference in payment in favor of the United States, limits the time in which actions may be brought, provides for bringing all the creditors into one action, and for the prosecution of the same in the name of the United States in the circuit courts of the United States in the district in which the contract was to be performed, and not elsewhere. In respect to the persons entitled to the benefit of the bond, [202] there has been *no material change in the act. While not governing the present action, the amended statute has some bearing in construing the act in question, as it shows the consistent purpose of Congress to protect those who furnish labor or material in the prosecution of public work.

In considering the statute and determining the scope of the bond, divergent views have been urged upon the court. Upon the one hand it is insisted that the bond is to be strictly construed, and a recovery limited to those who have furnished material or labor directly to the contractor, and, upon the other, that a more liberal construction be given, and a recovery permitted to those who have furnished labor and materials which have been used in the prosecution of the work, whether furnished under the contract directly to the contractor, or to a subcontractor.

This statute was before this court in United States Fidelity & G. Co. v. Golden Pressed & Fire Brick Co. 191 U. S. 416, 48 L. ed. 242, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 142, and while the question whether surety companies which are such for compensation are entitled to the same strict construction of their rights and obligations as is accorded to private sureties, who become such without reward or profit, was left open, it was nevertheless said: "The rule of strictissimi juris is a stringent one, and is liable at times to work a practical injustice. It is one which ought not to be extended to contracts not within the reason of the rule, particularly when the bond is underwritten by a corporation which has undertaken for a profit to insure the obligee against a failure of performance on the part of the principal obligor. Such a contract should be interpreted liberally in favor of the subcontractor, with a view of furthering the beneficent object of the statute. Of course, this rule would not extend to cases of fraud or unfair dealing on the part of a subcontractor, as was the case in United States use of Heise v. American Bonding & T. Co. 89 Fed. 921, 925, 32 C. C. A. 420, or to cases not otherwise within the scope of the undertaking."

The courts of this country have generally given to statutes intending to secure to those furnishing labor and supplies for *the [203] construction of buildings a liberal interpretation, with a view of effecting their purpose to require payment to those who have contributed by their labor or material to the erection of buildings to be owned and enjoyed by those who profit by the contribution of such labor or materials. Flagstaff Silver Min. Co. v. Cullins, 104 U. S. 176, 177, 26 L. ed. 704, 705. And the rule which permits a surety to stand upon his strict legal rights, when applicable, does not prevent a construction of the bond with a view to determining the fair scope and meaning of the contract in the light of the language used and the circumstances surrounding the parties. Ulster County Sav. Inst. v. Young, 161 N. Y. 23, 30, 55 N. E. 483.

As against the United States, no lien can be provided upon its public buildings or grounds, and it was the purpose of this act to substitute the obligation of a bond for the security which might otherwise be obtained by attaching a lien to the property of an individual. The purpose of the law is, as its title declares: "For the protection of persons furnishing materials and labor for the construction of public works." If literally construed, the obligation of the bond might be limited to secure only persons supplying labor or materials directly to the contractor, for which he would be personally liable. But we must not overlook, in construing this obligation, the manifest purpose of the statute to require that material and labor actually contributed to the construction of the public building shall be paid for, and to provide a security to that end.

Statutes are not to be so literally construed as to defeat the purpose of the legislature. "A thing which is within the intention of the makers of the statute is as much within the statute as if it were within the letter." United States v. Freeman, 3 How. 556, 11 L. ed. 724. "The spirit as well as the letter of a statute must be respected, and where the whole context of the law demonstrates a particular intent in the legislature to effect a certain object, some degree of implication may be called in to aid that intent." Chief Justice Marshall, in Durousseau v. United States, 6 Cranch, 308, 3 L. ed. 232.

Looking to the terms of this statute in [204]its original form, and *as amended in 1905, we find the same congressional purpose to require payment for material and labor which have been furnished for the construction of public works. The affidavit to be filed with the head of the department under the direction of which the work has been prosecuted requires the affiant to state that labor or materials for the prosecution of such work has been supplied by him, for which payment has not been made, and such persons are given the right of action on the bond in the name of the United States. Language could hardly be plainer to evidence the intention of Congress to protect those whose labor or material has contributed to the prosecution of the work. There is no language in the statute nor in the bond which is therein authorized limiting the right of recovery to those who furnish material or labor directly to the contractor but all persons supplying the contractor with labor or materials in the prosecution of the work provided for in the contract are to be protected. The source of the labor or material is not indicated or circumscribed. It is only required to be "supplied" to the contractor in the prosecution of the work provided for. How supplied is not stated, and could only be known as the work advanced and the labor and material are furnished.

If a construction is given to the bond so limiting the obligation incurred as to permit only those to recover who have contracted directly with the principal, it may happen that the material and labor which have contributed to the structure will not be paid for, owing to the default of subcontractors, and the manifest purpose of the statute to require compensation to those who have supplied such labor or material will be defeated.

We cannot conceive that this construction works any hardship to the surety. The contractor gets the benefit of such work or material. It is distinctly averred in this case that the original contractor received the benefit of the work done, and it was used in part performance of his contract. It is easy for the contractor to see to it that he and his surety are secured against loss by requiring those with whom he deals to give security by bond, or otherwise, for the payment of such persons as furnish [205]*work or labor to go into the structure. In view of the declared purpose of the statute, in the light of which this bond must be read, and considering that the act declares in terms the purpose to protect those who have furnished labor or material in the prosecution of the work, we think it would be giving too narrow a construction to its terms to limit its benefits to those only who supply such labor or materials directly to the contractor. The obligation is "to make full payments to all persons supplying it with labor or materials in the prosecution of the work provided for in said contract." This language, read in the light of the statute, looks to the protection of those who supply the labor or materials provided for in the contract, and not to the particular contract or engagement under which the labor or materials were supplied. If the contractor sees fit to let the work to a subcontractor, who employs labor and buys materials which are used to carry out and fulfil the engagement of the original contract to construct a public building, he is thereby supplied with the materials and labor for the fulfilment of his engagement as effectually as he would have been had he directly hired the labor or bought the materials.

We reach the conclusion that the labor and materials furnished in this case were within the obligation of the surety company on the bond, and in that view the judgment of the Superior Court is reversed and the cause remanded for further proceedings not inconsistent with this opinion.

---

*ALABAMA GREAT SOUTHERN RAIL- [206] WAY COMPANY
v.
H. C. THOMPSON, Administrator of Florence James, Deceased.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 206-220.)

Removal of causes—separable controversy.—A case in which plaintiff, in good faith, has elected to sue jointly in tort a foreign corporation and its servants whose misconduct caused the injury complained of, does not—even though such joinder may be improper—present a separable controversy between plaintiff and the corporation, which,

NOTE.—As to removal of causes in cases of separable controversy—see notes to Robbins v. Ellenbogen, 18 C. C. A. 86; Mecke v. Valleytown Mineral Co. 35 C. C. A. 153; Sloane v. Anderson, 29 L. ed. U. S. 899; Merchants Cotton Press & Storage Co. v. Insurance Co. of N. A. 38 L. ed. U. S. 195; Butler v. National Home for Disabled Volunteer Soldiers, 36 L. ed. U. S. 346; and Torrence v. Shedd, 36 L. ed. U. S. 528.

Joint liability of master and servant for latter's negligence.

Parsons v. Winchell, 5 Cush. 592, 52 Am. Dec. 745, is the leading authority for the proposition that a joint action against master and servant for the servant's negligence cannot be maintained, where the negligent act was not committed at the master's direction, and he was not present, actively co-operating with the servant in the commission of the tort.

On the authority of this decision the liability under the act of March 3, 1875 (18 Stat. at L. 470, chap. 137), as amended by the acts of March 3, 1887 (24 Stat. at L. 553, chap. 373), and August 13, 1888 (1 U. S. Rev. Stat. Supp. 611, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 509), can be removed from a state to a Federal circuit court without regard to the citizenship of the individual defendants.

[No. 58.]

Argued and submitted November 9, 1905. Decided January 2, 1906.

ON A CERTIFICATE from the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Sixth Circuit presenting the question whether master and servant can be joined in actions for negligence, and whether such an action presents a separable controversy which justifies removal from a state to a Federal circuit court. Answered by holding that, for the purpose of determining the right of removal, the cause of action must be deemed to be joint.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Mr. Edward Colston argued the cause, and, with Messrs. Judson Harmon, A. W. Goldsmith, and George Hoadly, filed a brief for the Alabama Great Southern Railway Company:

The decided weight of authority is in favor of the proposition that a joint action will not lie against the master and servant for an injury caused solely by the want of care of the servant in the course of his employment.

Pom. Code Remedies, 4th ed. § 208; Bliss, Code Pl. 3d ed. § 83; 17 Am. & Eng. Enc. Law, p. 602; Parsons v. Winchell, 5 Cush. 592, 52 Am. Dec. 745; Mulchey v. Methodist Religious Soc. 125 Mass. 487; Bailey v. Bussing, 37 Conn. 349; Sellick v. Hall, 47 Conn. 260; Page v. Parker, 40 N. H. 47; Clark v. Fry, 8 Ohio St. 377, 72 Am. Dec. 590; Bennett v. Fifield, 13 R. I. 139, 43 Am. Rep. 17; Cole v. Lippitt, 22 R. I. 31, 46 Atl. 43; Campbell v. Portland Sugar Co. 62 Me. 552, 16 Am Rep. 503; Trowbridge v. Forepaugh, 14 Minn. 133, Gil. 100; Brinkerhoff v. Brown, 6 Johns. Ch. 154; Warax v. Cincinnati, N. O. & T. P. R. Co. of the principal and agent for the latter's negligence was held, in Campbell v. Portland Sugar Co. 62 Me. 552, 16 Am. Rep. 503, not to be joint, but several.

So it is held in Mulchey v. Methodist Religious Soc. 125 Mass. 487, that members of a committee, who, as agents of a religious society, make a contract for the building of staging to be used in painting a church, and accept the staging, which afterwards falls and causes injury to a workman engaged in painting the church for another contractor, if liable for negligence, cannot be sued jointly with the society for which they acted.

A recovery cannot be had in a joint action against a railroad company and its engineer for the wilful and reckless trespass of the latter in running his train past a danger signal and recklessly dashing into another train on the track, injuring its occupants. Gustafson v. Chicago, R. I. & P. R. Co. 128 Fed. 85.

A master cannot be joined as defendant in an action against his servant for negligence, where the master is not personally concerned in such negligence, either by his presence or express direction. Warax v. Cincinnati, N. O. & T. P. R. Co. 72 Fed. 637; Hukill v. Maysville & B. S. R. Co. 72 Fed. 745.

Where the master's liability arises solely from the negligence of a servant, he cannot be sued jointly with such servant. Landers v. Felton, 73 Fed. 311; Gableman v. Peoria, D. & E. R. Co. 82 Fed. 790; Doremus v. Root, 94 Fed. 760; Herman Bergnoff Brewing Co. v. Przbylski, 82 Ill. App. 361 (Overruling Johnson v. Magnuson, 68 Ill. App. 448); McNemar v. Cohn, 115 Ill. App. 31.

And this is especially true where the liability of the master could not exist except for the statutory abrogation of the fellow servant rule. Helms v. Northern P. R. Co. 120 Fed. 389.

To constitute a joint liability of master and servant there must be actual negligence, as contradistinguished from imputed negligence. of the master, concurring with the act negligently committed by the servant. Shaffer v. Union Brick Co. 128 Fed. 97; McIntyre v. Southern R. Co. 131 Fed. 985.

Where the negligent act of the servant was committed at the master's direction, a joint action may be maintained. Michael v. Alestree 2 Lev. 172, 3 Keble, 650.

One who gratuitously superintended the work of opening the walls of a sewer, and replaced the earth around it so loosely that water escaped to the damage of the neighboring proprietor, was held in Hawkesworth v. Thompson, 98 Mass. 77, 93 Am. Dec. 137, to be jointly liable with the owner of the premises for whom the work was done, and who participated in doing it, on the ground that both were negligent in respect to directing the workmen.

So a joint action may be brought against a railroad company and two of its employees for their concurrent negligence in killing a person at a railroad crossing. Chesapeake & O. R. Co. v. Dixon, 179 U. S. 131, 45 L. ed. 121, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 67. The court said that the petition did not set forth the specific act of negligence complained of. It was stated that the negligence of the corporate defendant was done by and through its servants then and there in its employment, and that such negligence was the joint negligence of all the defendants. Assuming this averment to b inconsistent with the charge of direct action by the company, it might, nevertheless, said the court, be held to amount to a charge of concurrent action when coupled with the previous averment that the decedent was killed while crossing the track at a turnpike crossing by the negligence of the company and other defendants in charge of the train. The court added that the negligence may have consisted in that the train was run at too great speed and that proper signals of its approach were not given, and that if the speed was permitted by the company's rules, or not forbidden, 72 Fed. 637; Beuttel v. Chicago, M. & St. P. R. Co. 26 Fed. 50; Fergason v. Chicago, M. & St. P. R. Co. 63 Fed. 177; Hartshorn v. Atchison, T. & S. F. R. Co. 77 Fed. 9; Doremus v. Root, 94 Fed. 760; Helms v. Northern P. R. Co. 120 Fed. 389; Davenport v. Southern R. Co. 124 Fed. 983; Gustafson v. Chicago, R. I. & P. R. Co. 128 Fed. 87; Shaffer v. Union Brick Co. 128 Fed. 99; McIntyre v. Southern R. Co. 131 Fed. 985.

Where the injury is caused by mere neglect or omission of the servant the master alone is liable. By the rule respondeat superior the act of the servant, in cases of mere negligence, is absorbed in the master's liability.

Lane v. Cotton, 12 Mod. 472; Wharton, Agency & Agents, §§ 535, 536; Cameron v. Reynolds, 1 Cowp. 403; Williams v. Cranston, 2 Starkie, 82; 1 Bl. Com. *431; 1 Shearm. & Redf. Neg. 5th ed. § 243; 20 Am. & Eng. Enc. Law, 2d ed. p. 52; Story, Agency, 9th ed. § 308, p. 378; Denny v. Manhattan Co. 2 Denio, 115; Colvin v. Holbrook, 2 N. Y. 129; Murray v. Usher, 117 N. Y. 546, 23 N. E. 564; Van Antwerp v. Linton, 89 Hun, 417, 35 N. Y. Supp. 318; Feltus v. Swan, 62 Miss. 415; Steinhauser v. Spraul, 127 Mo. 541, 27 L.R.A. 441, 28 S. W. 626, 30 S. W. 102; Delaney v. Rochereau, 34 La. Ann. 1128, 44 Am. Rep. 456; Henshaw v. Noble, 7 Ohio St. 226; Kelly v. Chicago & A. R. Co. 122 Fed. 289; Davenport v. Southern R. Co. 124 Fed. 984.

Joint liability is the test of a separable controversy.

Nelson v. Hennessey, 33 Fed. 113; Collins v. Wellington, 31 Fed. 244; Gableman v. Peoria, D. & E. R. Co. 179 U. S. 337, 45 L. ed. 221, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 171; Chesapeake & O. R. Co. v. Dixon, 179 U. S. 131, 45 L. ed. 121, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 67.

In tort the action is not joint merely because the plaintiff chooses to name a number of persons defendants. To have that effect it is necessary that the pleading show a right to make them defendants.

Powers v. Chesapeake & O. R. Co. 169 U. S. 96, 42 L. ed. 674, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 264.

Messrs. Edmund F. Trabue and Edward

---

though dangerous, the negligence in that particular and in the omission of signals would be concurrent.

Other cases hold the liability of the master and servant to be joint, even if the master's liability arises solely out of his relation to the servant, who alone was guilty of the actual negligent act.

Thus, for negligence in conducting a railroad train the engineer and fireman who were negligent are held liable with the railroad company for an injury thereby caused, such as the killing of a cow on the track. Suydam v. Moore, 8 Barb. 358.

So, in Martin v. Louisville & N. R. Co. 95 Ky. 612, 26 S. W. 801, a negligent railroad engineer and the company which employed him were held liable for his negligence, in the same action.

So, the owner of a team of horses which his son was driving in his father's employment is jointly liable with the son for the latter's negligent driving, whereby he ran over and injured another person. Phelps v. Wait, 30 N. Y. 78.

The liability of master and servant to a joint action for the servant's negligence is also sustained in Montford v. Hughes, 3 E. D. Smith, 591, in which it is said that the masters were not present nor in any wise concerned in the injury complained of except in virtue of the responsibility for his negligence.

And a superintendent in charge of the work of building a bridge for a contractor is liable for his negligence in the construction of a scaffolding, whereby a laborer, subject to his direction and control, is injured, and in such a case an action will lie against the superintendent or master, or both jointly. Fort v. Whipple, 11 Hun, 593.

In Wright v. Wilcox, 19 Wend. 343, 32 Am. Dec. 507, while the liability of the owner of a team for the wilful act of the driver, injuring a third person, is denied, the court says: "In a case of strict negligence by the servant while employed in the service of his master, I see no reason why an action will not lie against both jointly."

So, it was held in Wright v. Compton, 53 Ind. 337, that a servant as well as his master is liable for his own carelessness and neglect, and in an action therefor both master and servant may be joined.

Such joint liability is also upheld in case of a corporation and one of two officers whose negligence created the liability, in Greenberg v. Whitcomb Lumber Co. 90 Wis. 225, 28 L. R.A. 439, 48 Am. St. Rep. 911, 63 N. W. 93.

A master and servant are jointly liable for the wilful tort or the negligence of the servant while acting for the master within the scope of the agency. Schumpert v. Southern R. Co. 65 S. C. 332, 95 Am. St. Rep. 802, 43 S. E. 813; Gardner v. Southern R. Co. 65 S. C. 341, 43 S. E. 816.

A joint action may be brought to recover damages for a death caused by the negligence of an agent of a railroad company, under a statute providing that whenever death shall result from an injury inflicted by negligence, damages may be recovered from the corporation or corporations, their agents or servants causing the same. Winston v. Illinois C. R. Co. 111 Ky. 954, 55 L.R.A. 603, 65 S. W. 13; Cincinnati, N. O. & T. P. R. Co. v. Cook, 113 Ky. 161, 67 S. W. 383.

The abolition by statute of the distinction between case and trespass was held, in Johnson v. Magnuson, 68 Ill. App. 448, to remove the technical objection to joining master and servant in an action for the latter's negligence.

But this case was overruled and the contrary doctrine declared in Herman Berghoff Brewing Co. v. Przbyiski, 82 Ill. App. 361.

And see note to Mayer v. Thompson-Hutchison Bldg. Co. 28 L.R.A. 433, on Liability of an agent or servant to third person for his own negligence or nonfeasance.

Colston also filed a brief for the Alabama Great Southern Railroad Company:

A controversy between two persons, citizens of different states, may exist in any suit, and be separable from the rest of the suit, and determinable between those two persons of diverse citizenship, and in so determining no account whatever is taken of whether, in the state court, such controversy would be regarded as separable from the rest of the suit, or as determinable between the petitioner for removal and his adversary in the controversy alone.

Removal Cases, 100 U. S. 457, 468, 25 L. ed. 593, 598; Blake v. McKim, 103 U. S. 336, 337, 26 L. ed. 563, 564; Evers v. Watson, 156 U. S. 527, 39 L. ed. 520, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 430; Barney v. Latham, 103 U. S. 205, 26 L. ed. 514.

Federal jurisdiction cannot be abridged or modified by any state statute.

Hyde v. Stone, 20 How. 173, 15 L. ed. 875; Smyth v. Ames, 169 U. S. 466, 42 L. ed. 819, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 418.

The right of removal is as immune from regulation by state statute as is the right of resort to Federal equity jurisdiction.

Wabash Western R. Co. v. Brow, 164 U. S. 271, 41 L. ed. 431, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 126.

Mr. E. S. Daniels submitted the cause for Thompson, Administrator. Messrs. J. V. Williams and John O. Benson were on the brief:

Under the practice and laws of Tennessee, the supreme court of such state recognizes the right to jointly sue the master and servants under like circumstances as those existing in this case, and this being true, the Federal courts in most, if not all, the cases in which the question of the state law and practice were involved, have unreservedly held that they will follow the practice and adjudications of the state court on such questions.

Connell v. Utica, U. & E. R. Co. 13 Fed. 241; Charman v. Lake Erie & W. R. Co. 105 Fed. 449; Chesapeake & O. R. Co. v. Dixon, 179 U. S. 131, 45 L. ed. 121, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 67; Southern R. Co. v. Carson, 194 U. S. 136, 48 L. ed. 907, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 609; Swain v. Tennessee Copper Co. 111 Tenn. 433, 78 S. W. 93; Jones v. Ducktown Sulphur, Copper, & I. Co. 109 Tenn. 375, 71 S. W. 821.

While the authorities are in conflict as to the right of joinder under the facts certified in this case, still, we believe the authorities, both in numbers and reasoning, largely preponderate in favor of the right of joinder.

Charman v. Lake Erie & W. R. Co. supra; Riser v. Southern R. Co. 116 Fed. 215; Chesapeake & O. R. Co. v. Dixon, and Southern R. Co. v. Carson, supra; Wright v. Compton, 53 Ind. 337; Schumpert v. Southern R. Co. 65 S. C. 335, 95 Am. St. Rep. 802, 43 S. E. 813; Wright v. Wileox, 19 Wend. 343, 32 Am. Dec. 507; Phelps v. Wait, 30 N. Y. 78; Cincinnati, N. O. & T. P. R. Co. v. Cook, 113 Ky. 161, 67 S. W. 383; Winston v. Illinois C. R. Co. 111 Ky. 954, 55 L.R.A. 603, 65 S. W. 13; Schaefer v. Osterbrink, 67 Wis. 495, 58 Am. Rep. 875, 30 N. W. 922; Newman v. Fowler, 37 N. J. L. 89; 1 Shearm. & Redf. Neg. 5th ed. § 248; Cooley, Torts, 1st ed. 142; Wood, Mast. & S. 2d ed. § 325; 1 Estee, Pl. § 1834; 15 Enc. Pl. & Pr. p. 560.

The rule that there can be no contribution between joint tort feasors has no application in cases where the master is held liable for the negligence of the servant under the rule of respondeat superior.

Gray v. Boston Gaslight Co. 114 Mass. 149, 19 Am. Rep. 324; Story, Partn. § 220; Betts v. Gibbins, 2 Ad. & El. 57; Wooley v. Batte, 2 Car. & P. 417; Bailey v. Bussing, 28 Conn. 455; 7 Am. & Eng. Enc. Law, pp. 364–366.

When the removal is based upon the allegation of a separable controversy, the whole suit goes to the Federal court.

Barney v. Latham, 103 U. S. 205, 26 L. ed. 514.

There must exist, therefore, as shown by the pleading, two or more distinct controversies, or there must exist in the suit a separate and distinct cause of action, or the case must be one capable of separation into parts.

Geer v. Mathieson Alkali Works, 190 U. S. 428, 432, 47 L. ed. 1122, 1124, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 807.

Mr. Justice Day delivered the opinion of the court:

This case is here on a certificate from the United States circuit court of appeals for the sixth circuit. The certificate states the facts and propounds the questions as follows:

"This was an action in tort, brought by the administrator of Florence James for the negligent killing of the intestate by the defendant railroad company.

"The suit was started in a circuit court of the state of Tennessee, and a declaration was there filed.

"The plaintiff was a citizen of Tennessee.

"The defendants were the Alabama Great Southern Railway Company, a corporation organized under the laws of Alabama, and William H. Mills and Edgar Fuller, both citizens of the state of Tennessee.

"The case was then removed into the court below upon petition of the railroad company alone, upon the ground that a separable controversy, involving more than $2,000, exclusive of interest and costs, existed between the petitioner and the plaintiff, as to whom diversity of citizenship existed, which could be tried out without the presence of either of the individual codefendants of petitioner.

[212] *"A motion to remand to the state court because no removable separable controversy appeared was overruled.

"Thereupon an issue was made and the case heard by court and jury, and a judgment rendered in favor of the plaintiff, and against the railroad company alone.

"From this judgment the railroad company sued out this writ of error.

"Upon the hearing in this court, the court raised the question as to whether the court below had rightfully acquired jurisdiction by the removal proceedings referred to, the removal being grounded only upon the question of separable controversy appearing upon the face of the declaration of the plaintiff at the time of the application for removal.

"That declaration substantially averred that the intestate of the plaintiff had been negligently, wrongfully, and carelessly run over while upon the track of the railroad company, in the exercise of due care, by an engine and train of cars owned and operated by the railroad company, which said train was, at the time, under the management and control of the individual defendants, William H. Mills, as conductor, and Edgar Fuller, as engineer.

"Entertaining grave doubt as to whether a joint right of action was stated against the railroad company and the two individual defendants, who were servants of the railroad company, it is ordered that the foregoing statement be certified to the Supreme Court, and that the instruction of that court be requested for the proper decision of the following questions which arise upon the record:

"1. May a railroad corporation be jointly sued with two of its servants, one the conductor and the other the engineer of one of its trains, when it is sought to make the corporation liable only by reason of the negligent act of its said conductor and engineer in the operation of a train under their management and control, and solely upon the ground of the responsibility of a principal for the act of his servant, though not per-[213] sonally *present or directing, and not charged with any concurrent act of negligence?

"2 Is such a suit removable by the corporation, as a separable controversy, when the amount involved exceeds $2,000, exclusive of interest and costs, and the requisite diversity of citizenship exists between the said company and the plaintiff, the citizenship of the individual defendants sued with the company as joint tort-feasors being identical with that of the plaintiff?"

A question certified must be one the answer to which is to aid the court in determining a case before it. Columbus Watch Co. v. Robbins, 148 U. S. 266, 37 L. ed. 445, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 594. And it is evident that the matter to be determined in the case pending, desiring which the opinion of this court is asked, is the removability of the case brought in the state court against the railroad company and the individual defendants. We shall answer the questions in that view.

The right to remove the controversy is founded upon § 2 of the act of March 3, 1887 [24 Stat. at L. 553, chap. 373], as corrected August 13, 1888 (1 U. S. Rev. Stat. Supp. 611, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 509). It is therein provided, among other things, "and when, in any suit mentioned in this section, there shall be a controversy which is wholly between citizens of different states, and which can be fully determined as between them, then either one or more of the defendants actually interested in such controversy may remove said suit into the circuit court of the United States for the proper district."

The case was removed upon the theory that it contains a separable controversy between the nonresident railroad company and the plaintiff. The removal act of 1875 [18 Stat. at L. 470, chap. 137], as amended in 1887–88, in the part quoted above as to separable controversies, has been the subject of frequent adjudication in this court. Independent of statute, there is much conflict in the authorities as to whether a corporation whose liability does not arise from an act of concurrence or direction on its part, but solely as a result of the relation of master and servant, may be jointly sued with the servant whose negligent conduct directly *caused the injury. In a leading [214] case in this court (Chesapeake & O. R. Co. v. Dixon, 179 U. S. 131, 45 L. ed. 121, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 67), many of the cases were reviewed by the chief justice who delivered the opinion, and it was shown that in a number of English and American cases it has been held that, as to third persons, the master is responsible for the negligence of his servant in a joint action against both, to recover damages for an injury. In the case of Warax v. Cincinnati, N. O. & T. P. R. Co. 72 Fed. 637, a case which has been much cited and sometimes followed in the Federal courts, it was held that a joint action could not be sustained against master and servant for acts done without the master's concurrence or direction, when his responsibility arises wholly from the policy of the law, which requires that he shall be held liable for the acts of those he employs in the prosecution of his business. And it was held that the petition against the engineer and the company presented a case of misjoinder, and could be removed on the application of the nonresident company.

In the case of Powers v. Chesapeake & O. R. Co. 169 U. S. 92, 42 L. ed. 673, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 264, 265, suit was brought against a railroad company and several of its servants for an injury alleged to have been caused by the joint negligence of all. Mr. Justice Gray, delivering the opinion of the court, said:

"It is well settled that an action of tort, which might have been brought against many persons or against any one or more of them, and which is brought in a state court against all jointly, contains no separate controversy which will authorize its removal by some of the defendants into the circuit court of the United States, even if they file separate answers and set up different defenses from the other defendants, and allege that they are not jointly liable with them, and that their own controversy with the plaintiff is a separate one; for, as this court has often said, 'a defendant has no right to say that an action shall be several which the plaintiff seeks to make joint. A separate defense may defeat a joint recovery, but it cannot deprive a plaintiff of his right to prosecute his suit to final decision [215]*in his own way. The cause of action is the subject-matter of the controversy, and that is, for all the purposes of the suit, whatever the plaintiff declares it to be in his pleadings.' Pirie v. Tvedt, 115 U. S. 41, 43, 29 L. ed. 331, 332, 5 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1034, 1161; Sloane v. Anderson, 117 U. S. 275, 29 L. ed. 899, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 730; Little v. Giles, 118 U. S. 596, 600, 601, 30 L. ed. 269–271, 7 Sup. Ct. Rep. 32; Louisville & N. R. Co. v. Wangelin, 132 U. S. 599, 33 L. ed. 474, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 203; Torrence v. Shedd, 144 U. S. 527, 530, 36 L. ed. 528, 531, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 726; Connell v. Smiley, 156 U. S. 335, 340, 39 L. ed. 443, 444, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 353."

After thus stating the rule, the justice commented on the Warax Case, 72 Fed. 637, as a departure from the former ruling of the circuit court. And while the Powers Case was decided on the ground of the right to remove after the local defendants had been dismissed from the action by the plaintiff, it is patent from the language just quoted from the opinion that, conceding the misjoinder of causes of action appeared on the face of the petition, that fact was not decisive of the right of the nonresident defendant to remove the action to the Federal court.

And in Louisville & N. R. Co. v. Wangelin, 132 U. S. 599, 600, 33 L. ed. 474, 475, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 203, the same eminent judge, speaking for the court, said:

"It often has been decided that an action brought in a state court against two jointly for a tort cannot be removed by either of them into the circuit court of the United States, under the act of March 3, 1875, chap. 137, § 2, upon the ground of a separable controversy between the plaintiff and himself, although the defendants have pleaded severally, and the plaintiff might have brought the action against either alone. 18 Stat. at L. 471, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 508; Pirie v. Tvedt, 115 U. S. 41, 29 L. ed. 331, 5 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1034, 1161; Sloane v. Anderson, 117 U. S. 275, 29 L. ed. 899, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 730; Plymouth Consol. Gold Min. Co. v. Amador & S. Canal Co. 118 U. S. 264, 30 L. ed. 232, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1034; Thorn Wire Hedge Co. v. Fuller, 122 U. S. 535, 30 L. ed. 1235, 7 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1265.

"It is equally well settled that in any case the question whether there is a separable controversy which will warrant a removal is to be determined by the condition of the record in the state court at the time of the filing of the petition for removal, independently of the allegations in that petition, or in the affidavit of the petitioner, unless the petitioner both alleges and proves that the defendants were wrongfully made *joint defendants for the purpose of pre- [216] venting a removal into the Federal court."

The language quoted by Mr. Justice Gray in the Powers Case was used by Chief Justice Waite in delivering the opinion of the court in Louisville & N. R. Co. v. Ide, 114 U. S. 52, 29 L. ed. 63, 5 Sup. Ct. Rep. 735. The Chief Justice said: "A defendant has no right to say that an action shall be several which a plaintiff elects to make joint. Smith v. Rines, 2 Sumn. 348, Fed. Cas. No. 13,100. A separate defense may defeat a joint recovery, but it cannot deprive a plaintiff of his right to prosecute his own suit to final determination in his own way." It is true, as suggested by counsel, that Mr. Justice Gray used the word "seeks" instead of "elects;" but we do not perceive that this change deprives the doctrine announced of its force and effect.

The language is used of a action begun in the state court, and it is recognized that the plaintiff may select his own manner of bringing his action, and must stand or fall by his election. If he has improperly joined causes of action, he may fail in his suit; the question may be raised by answer, and the right of the defendant adjudicated. But the question of removability depends upon the state of the pleadings and the record at the time of the application for removal (Wilson v. Oswego Twp. 151 U. S. 56, 66, 38 L. ed. 70, 75, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 259), and it has been too frequently decided to be now questioned that the plaintiff may elect his own method of attack, and the case which he makes in his declaration, bill, or complaint, that being the only pleading in the case, is to determine the separable character of the controversy for the purpose of deciding the right of removal. Louisville & N. R. Co. v. Ide, 114 U. S. 52, 29 L. ed. 63, 5 Sup. Ct. Rep. 735; Graves v. Corbin, 132 U. S. 571, 33 L. ed. 462, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 196; Little v. Giles, 118 U. S. 596, 30 L. ed. 269, 7 Sup. Ct. Rep. 32; East Tennessee, V. & G. R. Co. v. Grayson, 119 U. S. 240, 30 L. ed. 382, 7 Sup. Ct. Rep. 190; Torrence v. Shedd, 144 U. S. 527, 36 L. ed. 528, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 726; Chesapeake & O. R. Co. v. Dixon, 179 U. S. 131, 45 L. ed. 121, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 67; Southern R. Co. v. Carson, 194 U. S. 136, 48 L. ed. 907, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 609.

In Whitcomb v. Smithson, 175 U. S. 635, 44 L. ed. 303, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 248, an action was brought by Smithson in a state court of Minnesota against the Chicago Great Western Railway Company and Whitcomb [217] and Morris, receivers of the Wisconsin Central Company, to recover for personal injuries while serving the Chicago Great Western Railway Company as a fireman, as the result of a collision between the locomotive upon which he was at work and one operated by the receivers, who were officers of the Federal court. The railway company answered, and the receivers filed a petition for removal to the United States circuit court. The case was thereafter remanded by the Federal court, that court holding there was no separable controversy, and that the joinder was in good faith. Upon the trial in the state court a verdict was directed by the court in favor of the railway company. Thereupon the receivers asked permission to file a supplemental petition for removal, and upon proffer of a petition and bond the application was denied, and a verdict was returned against the receivers only. Of this feature of the case the Chief Justice, delivering the opinion of the court, said:

"The contention here is that when the trial court determined to direct a verdict in favor of the Chicago Great Western Railway Company, the result was that the case stood as if the receivers had been sole defendants, and that they then acquired a right of removal which was not concluded by the previous action of the circuit court. This might have been so if, when the cause was called for trial in the state court, plaintiff had discontinued his action against the railway company, and thereby elected to prosecute it against the receivers solely, instead of prosecuting it on the joint cause of action set up in the complaint against all the defendants. Powers v. Chesapeake & O. R. Co. 169 U. S. 92, 42 L. ed. 673, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 264. But that is not this case. The joint liability was insisted on here to the close of the trial, and the nonliability of the railway company was ruled in invitum."

In other words, the right to remove depended upon the case made in the complaint against both defendants jointly, and that right, in the absence of a showing of fraudulent joinder, did not arise from the failure of the complainant to establish a joint cause of action.

